1519 ROOM 508, CUSTOM HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY,
Thursday, January 7, 1909—3 p. m.

Present at the above time and place, the Special Examiner, Hon. Sylvester G. Williams, and Mr. G. E. Husted, of counsel for the complainant.

Mr. HUSTED. If your Honor please, counsel have been engaged in reaching a stipulation as to the admission of certain testimony, and are now at work upon that matter. Mr. Kellogg and Mr. Severance asked to be excused on that account, and it is asked by all the counsel that an adjournment be taken until to-morrow morning at 10.30.

The EXAMINER. Very well. Just enter an order to that effect. We will adjourn until to-morrow morning at 10.30.

(An adjournment was accordingly taken until the morning of Friday, January 8, 1909, at 10.30 o'clock.)

ROOM 508, CUSTOM HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY,
Friday, January 8, 1909—10.30 a. m.

The hearing was resumed before the Special Examiner, Hon. Sylvester G. Williams, at the above time and place.

Present on behalf of the complainant, Mr. C. A. Severance, and Mr. G. E. Husted. On behalf of the defendant, Mr. R. S. Lovett.

1520 GEORGE T. SMITH,

being duly sworn on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Smith, where do you reside?—A. In Jersey City.

Q. Until recently what has been your business?—A. General agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Q. At what place?—A. 2 Beaver street, New York.

Q. For how many years?—A. Seven and a half.

Q. Previous to that time what was your business?—A. Commercial agent of the same company, on Broadway, New York.

Q. For how many years?—A. I should say ten.

Q. What is your business now?—A. Banker.

Q. Where?—A. Jersey City.

Q. How long ago did you leave the railroad service?—A. The first of January last.

Q. Of this year?—A. Yes.

Q. The other day?—A. The first of January, this year.

Q. Are you familiar with the competition existing in New York for transcontinental business while you were railroading?—A. Not of late; I mean not of the immediate past.

Q. Prior to 1901?—A. Yes.

Q. What roads were competing for transcontinental business? I mean by that what transcontinental lines were competing for it?

The lines west of the Missouri River are commonly called the transcontinental lines, aren't they?—A. Do you refer to the Pacific coast as a whole?

1521 Q. Well, referring to California points.—A. Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Santa Fe.

Q. You remember when Mr. Hawley was the general agent of the Southern Pacific here?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were you, at the same time that he was representing them, acquainted with the representatives of the Union Pacific here?—A. Yes.

Q. And were those two lines in competition for business to the coast?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you learn at that time the way Mr. Hawley was routing his business to the coast—by what line, whether by the Sunset or by Ogden?—A. By the Sunset.

Q. Mr. Smith, how did freight prior to 1901 move from New York to Portland, Oregon? Over what transcontinental lines?—A. Oregon Short Line, Northern Pacific, Great Northern.

Q. And the Southern Pacific?—A. At one time.

Q. Well, I didn't mean continuously.—A. Well, I mean to say I have a memory, a recollection, of the Southern Pacific competing for Portland business.

Q. That is what I mean.—A. I don't know how much they did of it.

Q. Mr. Smith, did you ever know of business moving to San Francisco by rail to Portland, and thence by boat to San Francisco?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long ago?—A. I should say twenty years ago.

Q. Do you remember how that happened?—A. In general terms, the effort of the Northern Pacific to overcome the influence of 1522 Southern Pacific in using boats from San Francisco up; it was a competitive effort.

Q. And you knew that the O., R. & N. which is part of the Pacific system, had a boat line there, did you not?—A. That the O., R. & N. had.

Q. A boat line from San Francisco.—A. I am not sure as to the ownership of that boat line.

Q. No, but you knew that traffic moved that way via the boat line from Portland?—A. Yes.

Q. What do you know about the way that traffic moved to Colorado common points from this region during the years prior to 1901?—A. I am not clear when the rail movement was largely decreased by the movement via the Gulf, so when you ask me about a specific year I can not answer.

Q. Well, I am endeavoring to bring out the situation after the Gulf route was opened.—A. Yes.

Q. Now, how did business move to Colorado common points after the Gulf route was opened?—A. To a large proportion by the all-rail line, which is also true of the Gulf route.

Q. That is, by the Gulf line you mean the boats to what place?—A. Boats to Gulf ports, and rail.

Q. Now, did the Pennsylvania lines participate in that movement?—A. Which movement?

Q. To Colorado common points, all rail.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were you also interested in the transcontinental business? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were you also interested in the transcontinental business?—ness?

A. To Chicago or the Mississippi River and St. Louis.

1523 Q. What was the nature of the competition that existed prior to 1901 between these transcontinental lines for transcontinental business?

A. Very active.

Q. I asked you a moment ago with reference to the movement of traffic to Colorado common points; do you know anything of the movement of traffic to Utah common points?

A. The same rule applies.

Q. Was that traffic to Colorado and Utah common points trifling in amount, or was it considerable in amount?

A. Why, I never knew the figures, but it must have been important.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. In answer to questions from counsel for complainant you named only the Southern Pacific, the Santa Fe, and the Union Pacific as the transcontinental lines engaged in competing for transcontinental traffic?

A. No, sir, I answered that for San Francisco traffic.

Q. California traffic?

A. San Francisco traffic, as I recollect the question.

Q. Then do you mean to say that those were the only lines engaged in competition for San Francisco traffic, Mr. Smith?

A. They were the only terminal lines.

Q. Is the Union Pacific a terminal line?

A. In connection with their Central Pacific extension or connection, that is all.

Q. Whose Central Pacific connection?

A. Well, at the present time the Southern Pacific.

1524 Q. How long has the Southern Pacific controlled the Central Pacific, do you know?

A. I don't know.

Q. Did the Union Pacific ever control it?

A. I don't believe that they did financially.

Q. Or in any other way? What is the answer to the last question?

A. No; you asked me if they ever controlled it as far as I know, and I say, no.

Q. Where are the Union Pacific lines located, do you know?

A. For transcontinental business?

Q. Yes.

A. From Omaha to Ogden.

Q. About how far is that?

A. I couldn't tell you the miles.

Q. You don't know?

A. Not sufficiently, no, sir. I could not answer and give you the mileage.

Q. What do you understand it to be? Have you any information on the subject at all?

A. I would say a thousand miles.

Q. Ogden is the western terminus, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. How far is that from San Francisco, do you know?

A. I should say 500 miles.

Q. Isn't it more than that?

A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. You don't know?

A. That is my guess.

Q. Then, as a matter of fact, the Union Pacific was not a terminal line for California business, was it?

A. Not a terminal line, no, sir.

Q. Didn't the Burlington also engage in transcontinental business?

A. As a connection.

Q. In the same way that the Union Pacific did?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't it get a longer haul out of that business than the 1525 Union Pacific would if it were going from Chicago to Denver?

A. Yes, sir, of recent years; I mean comparatively recent years.

Q. What do you mean by comparatively recent years?

A. Well, probably the last fifteen years.

Q. For at least fifteen years the Burlington has had its own line from Chicago to Denver, hasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is engaged actively with the other lines in transcontinental business?

A. Yes.

Q. How about the Rock Island?

A. They have a line to Denver, also from Chicago.

Q. How long has that line been operated?

A. I should say comparatively fifteen years.

Q. Hasn't it a line also from Chicago to El Paso?

A. Yes.

Q. Hasn't it during that period been engaged in transcontinental business over those lines?

A. I should say yes, although I never participated in any such work.

Mr. SEVERANCE. May I ask what that question was?

Mr. LOVETT. If the Rock Island didn't engage in the transcontinental business over its line from Chicago to Denver and from Chicago to El Paso.

Q. Didn't you ever do any business with the Rock Island of that kind?

A. Not by El Paso, that I know of.

Q. By Denver?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How about the Missouri Pacific?

A. They have a line to Denver.

Q. From where?

A. From St. Louis.

Q. Then there were other lines that were engaged in trans-
1526 continental business, in addition to the three that you first named, Mr. Smith?

A. There were a great many other lines; the Pennsylvania, for instance. If I conveyed the impression that you indicate I did not understand the question.

Q. Well, I did not think you did, Mr. Smith; I didn't think you meant to say that.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I think he understood the question. I asked him about that transcontinental business, but I didn't ask that question the way you did.

Mr. LOVETT. Mr. Stenographer, will you turn to the question asked on direct examination, the early part of the direct examination where he mentioned the lines engaged in competing for transcontinental business, and where he named them.

The reporter read as follows:

"Q. What roads were competing for transcontinental business? I mean by that what transcontinental lines were competing for it? The lines west of the Missouri River are commonly called the transcontinental lines, aren't they? A. Do you refer to the Pacific Coast as a whole? Q. Well, referring to California points. A. Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Santa Fe."

Mr. SEVERANCE. When you mentioned the lines I understood the question to be as to routes.

Q. You didn't mean to say that those were the only three companies that were engaged in transcontinental business west of the Missouri River?

A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. The Denver & Rio Grande also engages in transcontinental business?

A. Yes.

Q. And has during the period that you mentioned?

A. Yes.

1527 Q. Now will you please name the lines east of the Missouri River that during the same period were engaging in competition for the transcontinental business in connection with either of the other lines that have been mentioned?

A. Practically every east and west line.

Q. Will you name the principal ones?

A. Yes, sir; New York Central, Erie, Pennsylvania, Baltimore &

Ohio, the Lehigh Valley, Chesapeake & Ohio, Norfolk & Western; all the lines that we consider of any importance in the east.

Q. Engaged in that transcontinental business?

A. Yes.

Q. In connection with the lines west?

A. Yes.

Q. Take the Pennsylvania, for example, a great deal of transcontinental business originated on its lines, didn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And that business generally moved which way?

A. If it were controlled by the Pennsylvania employee, it moved the longest haul to St. Louis.

Q. To St. Louis?

A. Or Chicago.

Q. About the distance from the eastern terminus of the Pennsylvania to St. Louis, about how far is that by the Pennsylvania line?

A. In round figures I should say a thousand miles.

Q. And Chicago a little less than that?

A. Practically the same. Chicago a little less than a thousand, and St. Louis a little more.

Q. Practically a thousand miles?

A. Yes.

Q. And about the same distance by all the principal trunk lines?

A. Practically, yes.

Q. And then between Chicago and St. Louis there were 1528 several lines, I presume?

A. Yes.

Q. Engaged in the same business?

A. Yes.

Q. The North-Western, the St. Paul, the Illinois Central, in addition to those that have been previously named?

A. Those lines on the north were commonly known as the Iowa lines; the same way between St. Louis and Kansas City.

Q. The Short Line?

A. The Iowa lines, we used to call them.

Q. You said that wherever it was controlled by the Pennsylvania agents it moved the long haul, that is, by way of St. Louis or Chicago?

A. Chicago, yes.

Q. St. Louis and Chicago, or Chicago. And then west of the Missouri River which way would it go, ordinarily? Over which lines?

A. By one of the Iowa lines before mentioned.

Q. By what?

A. One of the Iowa lines before mentioned—the St. Paul, the North-Western, the Burlington.

Q. And west of the Missouri River do you know how it usually moved?

A. The bulk of it possibly moved by the northern line.

Q. What do you mean by the northern line?

A. The Union Pacific, or the D. & R. G., as against the Southern Pacific.

Q. The Union Pacific or the Denver & R. G.?

A. Yes.

Q. Did not the great bulk of your transcontinental business go to Chicago rather than to St. Louis, Mr. Smith?

A. Yes.

Q. It moves ordinarily, I suppose, on joint rates agreed to by the various connecting lines?

A. Generally.

Q. If it went over the Union Pacific or the Denver & R. G., what line took the business west of that terminus?

A. West of the Union Pacific?

1529 Q. Yes.

A. The Central Pacific.

Q. West of the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. The Central Pacific.

Q. That was the only way, wasn't it? The only outlet for those lines?

A. Yes.

Q. And it moved under joint rates established by each company owning any part of the transcontinental line?

A. Through rates participated in by each line.

Q. The competition to which you referred as between the Southern Pacific, the Sunset Route of the Southern Pacific, and the Union Pacific was competition existing on the one hand by the Sunset Route, that is, by steamer from New York to Galveston, or to New Orleans, and thence by rail to California, and, on the other hand, by the all-rail lines of which the Central Pacific constituted a part?

A. Yes.

Q. Has not the Central Pacific been operated by the Southern Pacific ever since you have known it, Mr. Smith?

A. I could not answer that question. That is a question of memory, and I am uncertain.

Q. As far back as you recollect (if you have any definite recollection) it was operated by the Southern Pacific, wasn't it?

A. It has been operated by the Southern Pacific for a great many years.

Q. At least fifteen years, hasn't it?

A. I should think easily.

Q. And the Southern Pacific Company was a party to these joint rates via these all-rail lines that were competing with the Sunset Route, wasn't it?

A. Undoubtedly.

Q. You could send your traffic, I presume, to California by 1530 way of the Atchison from Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or you could send it by the other lines you have mentioned; and I suppose when you got west of Chicago you were largely indifferent, weren't you, as to which way it went?

A. Usually it was a freight solicitor's matter. We didn't care, as a corporation. One freight solicitor paid his debts to another.

Q. The solicitation of the Union Pacific and Denver & Rio Grande was really against the Atchison route, wasn't it, Mr. Smith?

A. Really against the Atchison?

Q. Yes.

A. It was against the Southern Pacific.

Q. Against the Sunset Route of the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. But was not the co-operation between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, after the Sunset Route was passed, against the Atchison—I mean as against——

A. I never saw that distinction drawn.

Q. You never knew of any Southern Pacific agent attempting to work business by way of the Ogden Route when he found he couldn't get it by the Sunset Route? In other words, didn't you understand that he acted on the same principle that you acted in soliciting freight—sending the freight the way he would get the longest haul?

A. I never knew a Southern Pacific solicitor to let go.

Q. They generally held on, did they? But you don't know what his interest would be if he had let go on any occasion? You don't know which way it would go?

A. Why, naturally he would have gone where his company was interested.

Q. So, if any Southern Pacific solicitor had ever let go,
1531 naturally, if he was actuated by the considerations that ordinarily control a solicitor, his next effort would have been in the interest of the line where he was interested?

A. The line west of Ogden——

Mr. SEVERANCE. That is merely speculative—if he did let go.

Q. I want an answer, if it is speculative; what is your answer to that?

A. The line west of Ogden.

Q. The Sunset Route of the Southern Pacific has always sought to control for the Morgan line and the Sunset Route business originating on the Pennsylvania east of Pittsburg, hasn't it, as well as in other territory east of Pittsburg and Buffalo?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They were working against your solicitation in respect of that business, too, weren't they?

A. To a certain extent.

Q. Naturally you would prefer to send it to Chicago or St. Louis than to New York, because you would get the longer haul?

A. That would depend upon the point of origin.

Q. I mean east of Pittsburg.

A. Generally, yes.

Q. You were asked about some movement of traffic, I think you said about twenty years ago, by way of Portland to San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you any distinct recollection as to that, as to when it was?

A. As to when it was?

Q. Yes.

A. I should say twenty years ago.

Q. And the movement was by the Union Pacific or Northern Pacific?

A. Northern Pacific.

1532 Q. Wasn't that really from Puget Sound rather than Portland? Wasn't it by the boat-line from Puget Sound?

A. I don't recollect the Pacific Coast port. My recollection was distinctly in connection with the Northern Pacific, which I assume was Portland.

Q. Then the Northern Pacific has to go by way of Tacoma——

A. Yes.

Q.—in order to reach Portland, doesn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And it would reach the Puget Sound before it would get to Portland?

A. Naturally.

Q. And wasn't its effort in connection with the Pacific Coast Steamship Company from Puget Sound points rather than from Portland?

A. The accepted terminal of the Northern Pacific was Tacoma, but I don't recollect that there was any established line between Tacoma and San Francisco. I carry in my mind that the steamship line was from Portland to San Francisco.

Q. How about Seattle?

A. I don't recall that either.

Q. Don't you know that the Pacific Coast Steamship vessels touch at all of those ports as far north as British Columbia?

A. No, I couldn't testify to that.

Q. You never heard of any movement by way of the Union Pacific and Portland to San Francisco, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know anything about the volume of traffic that moved from this territory to Colorado and Utah common points, Mr. Smith?

A. No.

Q. You don't know anything about the volume of it, whether it was large or small?

A. No, there were never any figures compiled here by the trunk lines that I know of.

1533 Q. And you don't know whether it was large or small?

A. No.

Q. The Atchison system has been a very active competitor for California business, hasn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. Its line extending as far east as Chicago from the Pacific coast, and working in connection with lines east of the Missouri River?

A. Yes.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Smith, Judge Lovett was asking you about traffic moving from east of Pittsburg to the seaboard and then around by the Morgan line; did you ever know of traffic moving that way from points west of Pittsburg?

A. I think not.

Q. You never did?

A. I think not.

Q. When traffic moved that way, the Pennsylvania rate, or whatever road brought it to the coast, was absorbed by the Morgan line, wasn't it?

A. It was supposed to be.

Mr. LOVETT. You mean the Atlantic coast?

Mr. SEVERANCE. Yes, I mean the seaboard.

WITNESS. Allow me to qualify that; supposed to be, with limitations. They probably fixed their arbitraries.

Q. Well, whatever the advantage was whether it was the local rate, or an arbitrary, or however it was arrived at, that was absorbed, was it not, from the interior to New York?

A. At least some part of it. They didn't always absorb it all.

Q. Oh, they didn't?

A. No.

Q. How was it paid, if they didn't absorb it all?

A. The amount they did not absorb was added to the freight bill at destination, paid by the consignee.

1534 Q. Yes, but it appears from the testimony of Mr. Hawley and others, and from the tariffs that have been introduced, that the business moves to the Coast from here, including New York common points, which go out as far west as Pittsburg, at the same rate they go all-rail. Now, if the Southern Pacific took it clear through from New York, wasn't it necessary for them to absorb the entire local?

A. Your previous question was whether I knew of any business originating west of Pittsburg?

Q. Yes, but I thought you said you didn't know of any.

A. No, I don't; of my own personal knowledge I don't know of any specific shipments.

Q. Oh, I see; we misunderstood each other.

A. Yes.

Q. I am speaking now of the business originating east of Pittsburg.

A. Then it is absorbed.

Q. It is all absorbed, that is what I thought; did you ever know of the movement of traffic to California points all-rail by way of the Northern Pacific or Great Northern from the east here?

A. Northern Pacific or Great Northern?

Q. Yes; to California points; I don't mean by boat now from Puget Sound, but by all-rail.

A. I understand, by all-rail. I don't think that I do.

Q. Did you know of the movement of traffic to Portland by those lines?

A. All-rail?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Also lake and rail?

A. Yes, sir.

Recross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. What other lines were participating in this movement of 1535 Colorado and Utah business from the Atlantic seaboard, Mr. Smith, do you know?

A. I am afraid I don't understand that question.

Q. What lines besides the Southern Pacific, that is the Morgan line, participated in this Utah and Colorado business from this territory, moving by the Gulf?

A. What other water line?

Q. And rail lines?

A. The Savannah line from here; the Mallory line.

Q. And by their rail connections at Savannah and Galveston?

A. Yes. I have already mentioned Chesapeake & Ohio and Norfolk & Western, which is the Old Dominion Line.

Q. They also engaged in it?

A. Yes.

Q. There has been no change in that condition in recent years, has there, Mr. Smith?

A. No, sir.

Q. Hasn't that competition gone on since 1901 as well as before?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has not the solicitation of business by agents of the Union Pacific and by the Southern Pacific for California points and Pacific points continued without interruption, as far as you know?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They both actively solicit business, don't they, in this territory?

A. Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE. They are still competing lines?

WITNESS. Yes.

Q. You mean by competing lines that the Union Pacific is a part of the rail lines that engaged in competition for that business against the Sunset Route?

A. Yes.

1536 Mr. SEVERANCE. So that Mr. Stubbs will understand thoroughly just what you mean to testify to, when I asked you as to their being competing lines you meant to testify, didn't you, that the agents of the Union Pacific were endeavoring to route traffic over their line and thence to the coast, and the agents of the Southern Pacific were endeavoring to route it by the Sunset Route?

WITNESS. That is exactly what I mean.

1537 HARRY C. BLYE, recalled on behalf of the Complainant, testified:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Paper marked Complainant's Exhibit 98 (Blye).

Q. Mr. Blye, I show you Complainant's Exhibit 98; is that the table that you made up pursuant to the request made of you the day before yesterday?

A. It is.

Q. Now, this, I infer from the notes upon it, covers all traffic destined to Pacific coast points?

A. Yes.

Q. Not simply California points, but to the North Pacific coast points.

A. It includes everything going to the territory mentioned there.

Q. Well, the note at the bottom is, "Under California is included all traffic destined to—British Columbia—California—Idaho west of and including Kuna—Nevada—Oregon—Washington and all Trans-Pacific Traffic."

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, does that include the business that reaches the coast over the Canadian Pacific?

A. No, I don't think it does.

Q. Well, you speak of British Columbia, and Vancouver is the port?

A. I understand, but it includes—let me see how I can get that to you right—California traffic in our office, for our statistics, includes all the traffic that goes to the points mentioned, whichever route it goes. If any trunk line out of New York carried California traffic, or what we call California traffic, to Chicago, or if it carried a shipment consigned to a connection with the Canadian Pacific at Minneapolis, and that was destined to Vancouver, it would go into 1538 our report just the same as if it took a shipment for the Empire of Japan or for China or for Australia or for Honolulu; that would be California traffic.

Q. And this includes, then, all the traffic moving out of New York over the trunk lines going across the Pacific Ocean, whether it goes in Canadian Pacific ships or American ships?

A. It doesn't make any difference where it goes.

Q. And it may move to the coast, as you say, by way of the Soo and the Canadian Pacific as well as by the American lines?

A. Yes.

Q. It merely leaves New York by trunk line?

A. That is all.

Q. I notice, in looking over your testimony given the other day, that you didn't mention the Erie; isn't that one of your lines?

A. Well, I forgot it. I used to work for it years ago, and I forgot all about it.

Q. I didn't notice any other omission.

A. I suppose something happened to take it out of my mind for the moment. Of course it includes every trunk line out of New York.

Q. Yes, that is what I supposed.

A. What is called a trunk line. Now, Mr. Severance, you will understand that paper better, perhaps, if I tell you that the object of those statistics in the first place was to show how much the rail lines carried of California traffic in distinction to what the Southern Pacific and the Cromwell and the Mallory line got out of New York. It was simply a distinction between those lines.

Q. Now, this begins in 1883 and runs down to March, 1902?

A. Yes.

1539 Q. Is that the last date that you are able to furnish?

A. That is when Mr. Spence, or I think Mr. Hawley, wasn't it, stopped reporting, that is all.

Q. That is, when the Morgan line stopped reporting.

A. They stopped reporting. You will notice down at the bottom there is a little foot-note that says that up to a certain date, waybills; after that date, statements only. Now, up to that date where it says waybills, the Southern Pacific office here in New York furnished us a tissue copy of the waybills of traffic that they carried, with a statement that this was all the lading on that ship going to the Pacific coast points. We work it over and take it out of the waybill. After a while, for some reason of their own, they quit that, and they simply sent us a statement of the tonnage.

Q. This includes business only originating in New York?

A. New York City only.

Q. Now you say here in the foot-note, "Morgan Line Data Received, from June 18th, 1883, to November 17th, 1893—waybills."

A. That consisted of copies of their waybills. That is the way they made their report.

Q. Then you have, "From November 18th, 1893, to March 31st, 1902—statements only."

A. They sent us a statement of how much tonnage they had carried.

Q. Now, how do you get your trunk line information?

A. From the waybills.

Q. You still get the waybills just the same?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. This is a true statement from the records in your office?

A. It is intended to be, yes.

1540 Mr. Severance. I offer in evidence Complainant's Exhibit 98 (Blye).

Mr. Lovett. Defendants will object to Complainant's Exhibit No. 98 as being mere hearsay.

Mr. Severance. I will examine a little further in regard to the exhibit, and re-offer it.

Q. Now, Mr. Blye, this information, you say, is furnished you by the trunk lines, by impression copies of the waybills?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the organization of your office? How many men do you employ?

A. Oh, I suppose there are 50 or 60 there. I think there are forty clerks working in that department where those reports are made up.

Q. Now, when the waybills come in from the railroads, or in the old days when they came in from the Morgan line, what was done with them.

A. They were all analyzed, the traffic picked out from them and recorded in different books.

Q. What do you mean by analyzed and traffic picked out from them?

A. Well, we picked out all the Chicago traffic, for instance, by one particular route, and found out how much traffic the Erie road, for instance, took to Chicago; how much of the traffic of each day's business was going to Chicago, how much was going to Buffalo, how much was going to Cincinnati, how much of it was consigned to Indianapolis, and several other points that we kept tabs on.

Q. And how much was——

A. Going to California.

Q. And how much was for Pacific Coast points?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, that was done by a force of about how many clerks?

1541 A. In the early part of the figures there, along in 1883 and 1884 and 1885, I think there were about 300 clerks in the office.

Q. About 300 doing that work of dissecting waybills and determining the destination of traffic?

A. Not determining it, but finding it.

Q. Well, finding it, that is what I mean?

A. Yes.

Q. From the original waybills or impression copies of them?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that right?

A. Yes. The general machinery of the office was on the same plan as the ordinary auditor's office in any concern, classifying the business that was done.

Q. Well, now, having picked out from these waybills the destination of the tonnage, what was done with the figures thus obtained?

A. They were recorded in books of record; made up into reports at the end of each month or each week or each day, and issued to all the parties in interest.

Q. Were copies of those reports sent to the Morgan Line people, the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes.

Q. How often did you say they were sent to them?

A. Oh, some of the reports went out daily, some of them went out weekly, and some of them went out monthly, and then there were some reports made annually.

Q. How often did you furnish, for instance, to the Morgan Line a statement of the tonnage that had gone out over the trunk lines?

A. Oh, I think at least once a week.

Q. During all the years that they were parties to this arrangement?

A. All the time that they reported.

1542 Q. During all the time that was covered by this document?

A. All the time that they reported.

Q. And did you likewise furnish to the trunk lines reports as to the amount moving over each one?

A. Yes.

Q. And also the amount moving over the Morgan Line?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, from what sources of information was this table made up?

A. From those reports; from the copies of reports that are on file in my office.

Q. That is, the same reports that were furnished the Morgan Line and the railroads from time to time?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, would it be feasible to bring into court here for examination all of these books and data, or does it consist of hundreds and hundreds of volumes and documents?

A. No, I suppose I could bring you in a few of the yearly reports—that is only one sheet of paper—showing the movement for the year.

Q. Would it be feasible to bring in the waybills, for instance?

A. No, sir, it would not.

Q. Or the books into which the waybills were entered?

A. No, I guess those were destroyed.

Q. They are destroyed?

A. They are no good after I get through with them, once I issue my reports. My reports are issued under the Edison method of stencil reports. A stencil is cut, and the form is filled up, and then there is a sheet of paper put over, and there is a stencil made over it, and from that stencil the report is printed and after I have got the report out I don't care very much about the waybills or anything else.

1543 I generally keep the waybills on hand for about a year, in case we want to go digging out some other information that we haven't got.

Q. But the way-bills for the years 1883 up to 1902, are any of them in your hands now?

A. No.

Q. They have all been destroyed?

A. Yes, I haven't got any way-bills behind 1907. I don't think I have got anything later than 1908, the first part of 1908.

Q. Was the same system of arriving at those figures from the waybills and reports pursued during the whole of the time covered by this exhibit?

A. Just exactly, yes.

Q. And it was always under your direction?

A. Under my direction and my supervision; yes, sir. These way-bills come into the office from the different stations, and they have with them a certificate of the agent. They are entered up on abstracts, and the agent certifies that this bunch of papers includes all the way-bills covering all the traffic destined to and beyond the western termini of the trunk lines for the day or the period mentioned. That is his certificate, and we accept it just the same as the auditor of the road accepts his statement that those are the copies of all the way-bills he has made. When the Morgan Line sent their reports in we took their word that that was all they had to report, the same as we took any other agent's.

1544 Q. Did the Morgan Line, during the time that they reported to you, contribute to the expense of maintaining your office?

A. No, I don't think they did.

Q. They did not?

A. No; not that I recall.

Q. Was this exhibit made up under your direction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated the other day that when you had to put your name to a thing you wanted time to examine it—when I asked you how long it would take to make this.

A. I generally do. That was a mere pleasantry. I said if I went digging around among those papers I would have to go and ask half a dozen people where they were. I could start a clerk or two who knew where they were and who would go and make it up.

Q. You examined this statement sufficiently so that you are satisfied of its correctness?

A. I believe it to be correct. When I went back to the office I sent for my chief clerk and told him what I wanted, and suggested the kind of reports that he go for to get, and I asked him if he had them handy as far back as that, and told him to make them up. I blocked out the form that I wanted them put in, and he brought me those figures. I looked at them and did not see anything in them that struck me as being remarkably strange, and I take it for granted that they are right.

Q. What is the name of your chief clerk?

A. Mr. Porcher.

Q. He made up this statement from the books, did he?

A. I don't know whether he did or not. He may have put on some clerk who made it. I reckon he did not put those figures in;

1545 when you come right down to that, the typewriter made it. It was made on the type machine.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I will call Mr. Porcher and find out from him who did do it, if Judge Lovett will not waive that part of the objection.

Q. Mr. Porcher had charge of the work of physically making it up, didn't he?

A. Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I will re-offer Complainant's Exhibit 98 (Blye) in evidence.

Mr. LOVETT. The defendants object to Complainant's Exhibit 98, not on the ground that it is not a correct record of the figures as reported to Mr. Blye by the railroads and steamship companies, but otherwise they object to it as hearsay.

Complainant's Exhibit 98 (Blye) is as follows:

COMPLAINANT'S EXHIBIT 98. (Blye.)

Morgan Line data received: From June 18th, 1883, to November 7th, 1893—waybills. From November 18th, 1893, to March 31st, 1902—statements only.

1547 Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Mr. Blye, did all of the railroad companies, that is, the trunk lines, as you described them the other day, send you copies of waybills from which these statements were compiled, or did they give you information in some other form?

A. No, they sent me copies of the way-bills.

Q. Of course you had no means of knowing and did not attempt to verify the question as to whether they sent you all?

A. Except their certificate that these included all.

Q. Whose certificate?

A. The agent's certificate, the agent who made up the record.

Q. He certified that it included all?

A. He certified that this was a correct list of the way-bills made at his station during the preceding twenty-four hours for this traffic.

Q. How did the Mallory Line make its reports? Did it send you a copy of its way-bills or manifests, or did it simply send it in a letter or otherwise?

A. I don't really know. The Mallory Line was such a small thing that I did not pay any attention to it.

Q. How did the Morgan Line do it?

A. The Morgan Line up to the date I mentioned there sent us tissue copies of the way-bills. These are tissue copies, impression copies, of the way-bills; they are not pen way-bills. They are impression copies of the way-bills.

Q. I thought you said that they simply reported to you how much they had sent?

A. Who?

Q. The Morgan Company.

1548 A. Up to the date mentioned there they sent us the copies of the way-bills; after that they sent us a letter stating their tonnage, and that letter generally came in over Mr. Hawley's signature.

Q. To what date was that done?

A. It is down there at the bottom, Judge. From June, 1883, to November 17, 1893, we received from the Morgan Line tissue copies of the way-bills, covering their traffic out of New York for Pacific Coast, what we called California traffic.

Q. After that date, what?

A. After that date we had a report signed by the general eastern agent of the Morgan Line, giving us the number of tons that his line had carried for a stated period.

Q. But not furnishing copies of the way-bills?

A. Not furnishing copies of the way-bills. Those things came in generally over Mr. Hawley's personal signature, to my recollection.

Q. You had no copies of the Morgan Line way-bills, then, after November 17, 1893?

A. No, sir.

Q. I think you stated on your examination two days ago that your statistics for the trunk lines included traffic originating in Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, and Boston.

A. Yes.

Q. In Complainant's Exhibit 98 you have included only that originating in New York?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Handled by the trunk lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For the Morgan Line you have included in this Exhibit 98 all traffic handled by that line out of New York to the Pacific Coast as reported in the manner that you have stated?

A. Yes.

Q. During that period didn't the Morgan Line secure a great
1549 deal of traffic in the territory east of Pittsburg and north of Norfolk on which it absorbed the local charges into New York and shipped it out from New York to California points—that New York traffic?

A. Yes, I guess they did.

Q. You did not exclude that traffic from this statement?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you do that, Mr. Blye?

A. I did not enter it in my records.

Q. Beg pardon?

A. I did not enter it in my record. I cut it out if they reported it.

Q. How did you identify it?

A. By the fact that it had back charges on it, and from the further fact that, to the very best of my recollection, Mr. Hawley insisted it should not go in.

Q. After they stopped furnishing you way-bills in 1893, you could not tell where the traffic originated, could you, Mr. Blye?

A. No, except that Mr. Hawley stated to us in the letter that it would not include anything except New York City traffic.

Q. Have you that letter?

A. There is a reference to it somewhere in the office, but I do not find the letter. That was written years ago.

Q. When you say New York City, do you mean within lighterage limits?

A. Oh, yes; what is called the port of New York.

Q. Is that for all lines, rail lines?

A. That includes Brooklyn and Staten Island and Jersey City and Hoboken and all the railroad terminals around New York. That is New York, so far as we are concerned.

Mr. SEVERANCE. That is both boat and rail shipments, is it?
1550 WITNESS. Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE. As shown in this table?

WITNESS. Yes. It includes what we know as New York city traffic. When I was on the stand before I think I said it was meant to include shipments delivered to the lines by shippers in New York.

Mr. LOVETT. I haven't finished, brother Severance.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I just asked a question to be sure that I understood what he meant by his answer.

WITNESS. Lighterage limits covers it.

Q. Some of the witnesses have testified here, Mr. Blye, that on the traffic originating east of Pittsburg the Morgan line would absorb the charges from the point of origin to the New York port; that is to say, that that local charge was included in the rate of the Southern Pacific; the Southern Pacific bore that itself, did not charge it against the shipper. Now, how could you tell from advance charges where the freight originated? There were no advance charges, were there, in cases of that sort, where the company absorbed it?

A. Well, Judge, most of those things came in, the great bulk of them—for instance, if a man wanted to make a shipment from Harrisburg or from Syracuse: he consigned that to John Smith, San Francisco, care of E. Hawley, New York, and that was marked right on the box.

Q. But you did not see the box.

A. And when the Morgan line billed it out, it came in that way for identification. When the Morgan line billed it out it came that way; came to us on the way-bills that way.

Q. Well, of course you didn't see the box, and you had to go
1551 by the way-bill?

A. Sure.

Mr. SEVERANCE. He had to believe your company.

WITNESS. We didn't see any of it; we didn't see any of the tonnage that went out.

Q. I didn't suppose you did. The way-bill that you saw, however, was a Morgan line way-bill?

A. Yes.

Q. Originating in New York?

A. Yes.

Q. That way-bill would not show any advance charges where the company absorbed the rate from Syracuse to New York, would it?

A. Not always; no, it didn't need to.

Q. How could you identify it, then?

A. When I spoke about advance charges I was not speaking to be mathematically correct about it. I could pick up a way-bill and read it and see whether it was one of those outside shipments, and probably more than that. It was not the intention that those outside shipments should go in. Mr. Hawley was very particularly insistent that they should not go in. He made the arrangement about the reporting, and the report was made first to show the relative amount of tonnage that the Morgan line and the trunk lines out of New York competed for, and the trunk lines did not compete for any tonnage out of Harrisburg—that is, all of the trunk lines.

Q. Didn't they compete for tonnage out of Philadelphia?

A. Yes, some of them did; the Pennsylvania and the Reading and the Lehigh Valley did.

Q. Well, didn't the trunk lines or some of them——

A. But that hadn't anything to do with New York. There would not anybody ship business from Philadelphia over to New York 1552 and leave it open for all the trunk lines to come in and try to get it from the line that brought it here, and when the Southern Pacific Company brought traffic in from the interior they did not go and try to shop it off around among the trunk lines to see which one would make the best trade on it—they got it themselves.

Q. So your statement then is that you would select from the way-bills sent in by the Southern Pacific Company and exclude those covering traffic originating outside of the port of New York?

A. Yes. We were careful to do to the best of our ability, to keep out of our accounts any traffic that there was any question about as to whether it originated in New York, whether we had any right to do anything with it or not.

Q. I think your statistics, according to your statement the other day, included Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and Boston?

A. No, not in these statistics. We make statistics for all shipments from Philadelphia, and we make statistics of shipments from Baltimore, but they haven't anything to do with New York.

Q. And you would not include in your statistics of Philadelphia the traffic shipped by the Southern Pacific from that point?

A. I couldn't; they wouldn't report it to me. They did not report to me any traffic out of Philadelphia that was destined or consigned to any point east of Pittsburg.

Q. I see that your statement shows that from and including the year 1886 until and including the year 1897 the Mallory did not handle a pound of freight out of New York to the Pacific coast?

A. That is what they reported. Either they didn't report it or else they reported there wasn't anything to report.

1553 Q. Now this traffic handled by the trunk lines out of New York and included in this statement, Mr. Blye, would be carried by the trunk lines as far west, I presume, as their lines extended or as they could control the traffic, and then move to the Pacific coast over their connections. Now what lines of transportation were there during this period over which the trunk lines could get this traffic to the Pacific coast?

A. A shipment might leave New York—we will take one road for illustration. If a shipment went out for San Francisco and had to go by the New York Central road, the New York Central road would probably carry it to Chicago. At Chicago it might give it to the Atchison, or the Rock Island, or the Burlington, or the North-Western, or the Milwaukee & St. Paul. If it was going to the Northern Pacific coast it could be sent up to Minneapolis or St. Paul to go over the Great Northern or the Northern Pacific, or it could be sent to Omaha and given to the Union Pacific to take it over the Oregon Short Line. If it was going to San Francisco it would probably have been consigned by some line to Omaha and given to the Union Pacific and delivered to the Central Pacific and taken into San Francisco because that was the most direct route and the ordinary route. Somebody, for experiment, if he felt like it, might give it to the Illinois Central to carry it down to New Orleans and give it to the Southern Pacific—he might do that if he was reasonably crazy, but he wouldn't try it very often.

Q. Any all-rail shipments by these trunk lines for any point on the Pacific coast south of Portland had to go either by the Atchison or the Southern Pacific to destination, hadn't they?

A. The rail lines? Yes.

1554 Q. They were the only rail lines west of——

A. Had to go to the Southern Pacific. Well, there couldn't anybody get into California with any traffic anyhow unless the Southern Pacific got some of the money, no matter how they sent it.

Q. Or the Atchison?

A. Well, even in those days—even then I think the Atchison had to go into San Francisco over the Southern Pacific rails.

Q. Yes, that is correct.

Mr. STUBBS. Not Southern California?

WITNESS. Not Southern California, no.

Mr. STUBBS. Then you qualify it; you don't mean the whole of California?

WITNESS. I don't mean the whole of California.

Q. All of these trunk lines whose reports were made to you and whose tonnage is included in this statement, so far as reported, were connections of the Southern Pacific, that is, the Southern Pacific operating the line west of Ogden, as well as of the Atchison, weren't they? That is to say they, either directly or through their connections, all connected and worked with the Southern Pacific line between Ogden and the Pacific Ocean?

A. They had to, necessarily.

Q. How far is it from New York to the Missouri by the routes over which this traffic ordinarily moved that way, that is, the trunk lines and their connections?

A. I suppose somewhere between 1,300 and 1,500 miles, according to the route which you took.

Q. About 1,400 or 1,500 miles?

1555 A. About 1,450 miles. The distance from New York to Chicago ordinarily is taken to be 1,000 miles (it is not quite 1,000, but that is as near as you can guess), and it is about 500 miles to Omaha; it is about 1,000 miles from Omaha to Ogden, and it is pretty close to 800 miles from Ogden to San Francisco, as near as I can remember. That figures up about 3,300 miles. I think the post office distance is 3,200 miles.

Q. The distance from New York to Omaha, then, or to the Missouri River, where most of the lines cross, is approximately 1,500 miles?

A. Approximately, yes.

Q. Now, the Union Pacific lines lie entirely west of the Missouri River, do they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the distance from Omaha to Ogden, I believe you said, is about 1,000 miles?

A. About 1,000 miles.

Q. And the Union Pacific has no line west of Ogden?

A. Not to California.

Q. Its line west of Ogden extends up to Portland?

A. The Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company.

Q. The Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company and the Oregon Short Line?

A. Yes. When they get to Portland they are about as far away from San Francisco as they were at Ogden.

Q. A little farther, aren't they?

A. About the same distance.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Not quite so far.

Mr. LOVETT. Not quite.

Q. And Ogden, you say, is about 800 or 850 miles from San Francisco?

A. About that, yes; 800 and some odd miles. It is about 800 miles.

1556 Q. Then, according to your statement of the situation, Mr. Blye, the Union Pacific is merely an intermediate line, an intermediate carrier, having a length of about 1,000 miles in the all-rail routes to San Francisco?

A. That is all it ever was, in my judgment.

Q. A link of about 1,000 miles in the transcontinental system made up of various lines of about 3,300 miles in length?

Mr. SEVERANCE. I object to this examination as not being cross-examination.

Q. And the Union Pacific had no means of moving its traffic all-rail to California except in connection with the Southern Pacific operating the Central Pacific line west of Ogden?

Mr. SEVERANCE. May my objection stand to all testimony of this character?

Mr. LOVETT. Yes, that is understood.

Q. Will you answer the question, Mr. Blye?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. You are pretty familiar with the railroad systems of the country, aren't you?

A. Somewhat.

Q. How long have you been in the business?

A. 32 or 33 years.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Counsel was examining you a moment ago with reference to the position of the Union Pacific as to transcontinental business. You remember when Mr. Hawley was the agent of the Southern Pacific, prior to 1901, for many years?

A. Yes.

Q. You remember that at that time the Union Pacific had a general eastern agent and still have?

A. Yes, sir.

1557 Q. And before 1901, both Mr. Hawley and the Union Pacific eastern agent had a force of solicitors, hadn't they?

A. Yes.

Q. Soliciting traffic? That is true, isn't it?

A. I guess so, yes.

Q. And isn't it a fact that Mr. Hawley and his solicitors were soliciting business by way of New Orleans, the Morgan line of steamers, for the coast?

A. Yes.

Q. And were not the solicitors of the Union Pacific soliciting business over their line in competition with Mr. Hawley and his subordinates?

A. Yes.

Q. The Union Pacific was endeavoring to route everything it could over its line, wasn't it?

A. The same as all the other trunk lines.

Q. The same as all the other lines, certainly. So that the Southern Pacific agents here were endeavoring to send everything they could by New Orleans or Galveston?

A. Yes.

Q. And the Union Pacific everything they could by Kansas City or Omaha? Isn't that true?

A. Yes.

Q. You know that the Union Pacific has a line from Kansas City west, don't you?

A. Yes.

Q. And that reaches their main line where?

A. I don't know what junction.

Q. Cheyenne?

A. No, I don't think it is Cheyenne.

Q. Doesn't it go to Denver and thence north to Cheyenne?

A. No; I am not familiar; I have forgotten that junction point. I think there is a junction that used to be called the old Central branch.

Q. Well, you know they have a line from Kansas City to 1558 Denver, don't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Then you know they have a line from Denver north to a connection with the main line from Omaha to Ogden?

A. They run from Denver to Cheyenne.

Q. What is that?

A. They run from Denver to Cheyenne and then go east out of Denver.

Q. I am not speaking of east; I am speaking of west.

A. Yes.

Q. Traffic to the Pacific coast from Kansas City over the Union Pacific would move first to Denver, would it not?

A. If it started from Kansas City?

Q. Yes, if it started from Kansas City.

A. Oh, it could, yes.

Q. Well, wouldn't it naturally?

A. I don't think it would naturally.

Q. How would it go—from Omaha to Kansas City?

A. No, to the junction this side of Omaha. On the same through rate it would pay the Union Pacific better to get it from Omaha and carry it out over their main line. I never knew much about that.

Q. That is not what I am asking you. Judge Lovett has been examining you as an expert on those western lines.

A. Only out of New York, I understood.

Q. No, he was asking you about the Union Pacific, and you gave your views as to what the Union Pacific was, and so on?

A. All right.

Q. I want to find out something about that Union Pacific system, as long as you know about it. Have they got a line from Kansas City to Denver?

A. I think they have.

Q. Have they got a line from Kansas City to Omaha and 1559 west of Omaha?

A. No, I don't know that they have. I guess I got——

Q. How did they take traffic from Kansas City to the west?

A. Well, I guess my geography was off a little bit there, Mr. Severance; I will take that back. That was a little break. What I was thinking about was the western end, carrying it through Denver and then carrying it up to their line, and then carrying it west from Cheyenne. I was mixed on that, I will admit that.

Q. It would go from Kansas City out to Denver, up to Cheyenne, and out to Ogden?

A. It could.

Q. That is, if it was delivered to them at Kansas City?

A. Yes.

Q. If it was delivered to them at Omaha, it would go directly west to Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, the Pennsylvania road makes its western terminus where?

A. The Pennsylvania Railroad proper?

Q. The Pennsylvania lines.

A. You mean the Pennsylvania system?

Q. Yes.

A. St. Louis and Chicago. I should think the Pennsylvania Railroad system would call their line a line to Chicago.

Q. They run to St. Louis, don't they?

A. They do. They have got a connection from St. Louis. I don't know whether that is their system or not.

Q. They run through trains from St. Louis to New York?

A. Oh, yes; everybody runs through trains everywhere, but that don't mean they own the road.

Q. Oh, they do?

A. Lots of them.

Q. Run through trains over any line, wherever they please?
1560 A. By agreement, yes. The Pennsylvania line runs over the Southern Pacific, but they don't own it.
Q. The Pennsylvania Railroad operates a line from New York to St. Louis, don't they?
A. Yes.
Q. A freight line and a passenger line?
A. Yes.
Q. Do they take transcontinental traffic that way?
A. To St. Louis?
Q. Yes.
A. Well now, I can't tell you about that.
Q. You don't know?
A. The best of my recollection is that the Pennsylvania's transcontinental traffic is routed to Chicago.
Q. It probably is.
A. I could dig that out and tell you.
Q. If they take transcontinental traffic to St. Louis it could move westerly over the Union Pacific, couldn't it, by way of Kansas City, going to Kansas City from St. Louis over a connection?
A. Yes.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Mr. Severance asked you about the soliciting agents of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific. Has the Chicago & Northwestern soliciting agents in New York?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. For this transcontinental traffic?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. It is not a competitor of the Union Pacific for that traffic, is it? It is a connection, isn't it?
A. A connection, yes.
Q. So with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And the Burlington?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The Burlington is a competitor of the Union Pacific for some of that traffic, isn't it?
A. Denver business—a very lively one, I guess.
Q. Yes. From Denver and in connection with the Denver &
1561 Rio Grande?
A. Yes.
Q. Traffic might move over the Burlington to Ogden without touching the Union Pacific at all?
A. Yes.
Q. As a matter of fact much of it does move that way?
A. Yes.
Q. The same is true of the Rock Island, isn't it?

A. I am not so familiar with the Rock Island and connections west, but I think so.

Q. It has a line to Denver, hasn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. They all have soliciting agents here, haven't they?

A. Yes.

Q. And so with the Missouri Pacific?

A. Why, every railroad between Chicago and the Missouri River, I imagine, is in New York trying to get business for transcontinental traffic to go over their line.

A. And all of those lines would have to send that business to California points either by the Atchison or the Southern Pacific company, wouldn't they, ultimately, in order to get it in there?

A. The Atchison road is in here for business, soliciting, to go straight over their line.

Q. But you did not quite answer the question. I said that all of the roads we have mentioned, the St. Paul, the Northwestern, the Burlington, the Rock Island, the Missouri Pacific—all of those roads might carry business as against the Union Pacific transcontinental business, and yet would have to deliver it, in order to get it to or from California, either to the Atchison or the Southern Pacific?

A. Undoubtedly.

Q. And might do that without touching the Union Pacific at all?

A. Yes.

1562 Q. Well, the Union Pacific would have to meet that competition by solicitation or rely on the Southern Pacific as a traffic connection, wouldn't it? In other words, suppose that the Southern Pacific was indifferent, the Union Pacific would have to solicit this business in competition with the other lines west of the Missouri River, wouldn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. Unless it was traffic by the Southern Pacific, and the Southern Pacific itself solicited for it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Severance asked you about your knowledge of these rates. Isn't much of this freight that moves on way-bills that comes into your office handled on through way-bills?

A. You mean all the way through to the coast?

Q. Yes.

A. No.

Q. How far does through billing extend?

A. It is billed to Chicago or St. Louis; it is billed to the end of our billing rate.

Q. There isn't much of it billed to the Missouri River crossings?

A. I don't remember. I haven't looked at any way-bills for a long time, but when I was handling way-bills I never saw anything billed west of the Mississippi River.

Q. West of the Mississippi River?

A. West of the Mississippi River. I don't mean bills of lading, you know; I mean way-bills. The way-bill generally shows the traffic up to Chicago or the Mississippi River and shows how much the road east of there wants, and how much there is for the road west to get.

Q. And shows the final destination?

A. And shows the final destination, of course.

Q. In case of through billing it does not show the rate beyond the terminus of the billing, does it? or does it sometimes?

1563 A. Sometimes it shows. The way-bill generally shows exactly what is on the shipping receipt, and the shipping receipt shows how the package is marked, in fact it has got on it all sorts of hieroglyphics and pictures and instructions, that will show on the way-bill; care of so-and-so, notify somebody, and the whole thing that is on the package is on the shipping receipt, and that will be on the way-bill, and the way-bill is made up from that—more for identification than anything else.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Just one other question. Judge Lovett interrogated you again in reference to the Union Pacific. The Sunset Route from New York to the Coast is known as a hundred per cent route, isn't it, and is commonly spoken of that way in railroad parlance, because they get the full rate from here to the Coast?

A. I never heard that term mentioned in connection with the Sunset.

Q. You never did?

A. No.

Q. In connection with the Sunset?

A. No, or any other road.

Q. If the Morgan line of steamers takes traffic from New York city for San Francisco, the Morgan line being owned by the Southern Pacific Company, that company gets one hundred per cent of the whole rate, doesn't it?

A. It gets all of it, yes.

Q. That would be one hundred per cent, wouldn't it?

A. Yes, I guess so.

Q. Now, if the traffic, instead of moving by the Southern Pacific to San Francisco by the Sunset Route, goes over the 1564 trunk lines, and then over the lines from Chicago to the Missouri River, and from the Missouri River, Omaha to Ogden, over the Union Pacific, the Union Pacific gets a part of that 100 per cent of the through rate?

A. Surely.

Q. And it is to get that business, to get the traffic to move over their line in competition with the Sunset, that they maintain these soliciting agents here; isn't that true?

A. Who maintains them?

Q. The Union Pacific.

A. Yes.

Mr. LOVETT. The Southern Pacific also gets parts of it that goes that way, doesn't it?

A. Surely.

The EXAMINER. Gentlemen, at this time I would like to have your suggestions with reference to the signing of this testimony by the witnesses, if you have any to make. Under the rule it is necessary for witnesses to sign their testimony, and they are being dismissed now without any reference to that.

Mr. SEVERANCE. We will waive the signing of the testimony except in cases where Judge Lovett and myself find something that seems to us to be a typographical error or mistake, and then if we cannot agree on the correction, we will ask to have the witness look it over.

1565 The EXAMINER. We will assume, then, that the testimony as taken by the reporter is correctly transcribed, unless some objection be made by counsel on either side or attention is called to some discrepancy.

Mr. SEVERANCE. That is right.

Mr. LOVETT. That is true.

The EXAMINER. That is the understanding?

Mr. LOVETT. Yes.

1566 S. FREDERICK TAYLOR.

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Taylor, what is your business?

A. I am vice-president of Borden's Condensed Milk Company.

Q. And what was your position before you became vice-president?

A. Secretary.

Q. What did you have to do with routing traffic before you were vice-president? Was that in your charge?

A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been vice-president?

A. Since 1902.

Q. And prior to that time for how long did you have charge of the traffic?

A. Since 1887.

Q. And from 1887, when you took charge of the traffic of the Borden Company, did you have transcontinental and Oriental shipments?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In considerable volume?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What companies were soliciting that business, competing for that business? Eliminate the Oriental business and take only the Pacific Coast business.

A. Why, all companies.

Q. Please name them.

A. The Santa Fe, the Southern Pacific, the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern, the Canadian Pacific, and all their eastern connections.

Q. The Union Pacific?

A. The Union Pacific.

Q. You didn't name the Union Pacific?

A. I call that an eastern connection, more or less.

Q. Did you ever ship by the Sunset Route?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you solicited to do so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you solicited by agents of the Union Pacific for 1567 their route?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you ship that way?

A. The Union Pacific?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT. To what point is that?

Mr. SEVERANCE. He shipped by the Union Pacific. He said he did not ship by the Southern Pacific.

Mr. LOVETT. To what place?

Mr. SEVERANCE. To the Coast, I mean.

WITNESS. You are speaking of California points?

Mr. SEVERANCE. California points, yes.

Mr. LOVETT. California points or Pacific Coast points?

WITNESS. California points I intended to answer for only.

Mr. SEVERANCE. That is right.

Q. Mr. Taylor, do you remember one time prior to 1901, when you sent out a special train-load shipment?

A. I can't fix the date.

Q. Do you remember of that train going out?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. You don't remember when it was?

A. No, I can't remember the year.

Q. Was it while you had charge of the traffic?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the object of that special train?

A. Advertising.

Q. Was it a full train?

A. A full train, yes, sir.

Q. What solicitation did you have for that train?

A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. Do you remember what lines solicited it?

A. No.
Q. You don't remember that?
A. I don't remember anything about that detail.
Q. How did that move?
1568 A. The Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, as all Frisco business had been doing for some time.
Q. You sent all your Frisco business that way?
A. Yes, sir. Our traffic was divided according to territory.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You say your traffic was divided according to territory. What territories? I am speaking now of Pacific Coast traffic.
A. I mean it was an established custom of ours for years to divide our business according to the terminal territory and the route reaching there more directly. Southern California business went by Santa Fe, with rare exceptions. Frisco business went almost entirely Union Pacific-Southern Pacific. Portland business by Oregon Short Line. Seattle, Great Northern. Tacoma, Northern Pacific. And British Columbia by Canadian Pacific. Now and then there might have been exceptions, but they were rare.
Q. By your statement in your direct examination that you shipped to San Francisco by the Union Pacific, you meant the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific west of Ogden?
A. Certainly.
Q. The line thus formed?
A. Yes, sir, through line.
Q. You never shipped to California by way of Portland, did you?
A. No, sir.
Q. Where did most of your shipments for the Pacific Coast originate?
A. Illinois and Wisconsin.
Q. Isn't it true that the Southern Pacific actively solicited that business by way of Ogden?
A. The Southern Pacific?
Q. Yes?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The Southern Pacific and Union Pacific both solicited?
A. Yes, sir.
1569 Q. Mr. Severance asked by whom you were solicited for that special trainload of milk, and you were unable to answer. Generally, weren't you solicited for shipments by all lines in that territory, whether they reached the Pacific Coast or not?
A. Oh, yes.
Q. The Northwestern and the St. Paul ——
A. So much so that I paid very little attention to solicitation because we had our schedules made out as to how we were going to ship our goods.
Q. For California business you were actively solicited by the Northwestern, the St. Paul ——

A. All the lines.

Q. —— the Burlington, the Rock Island, the Missouri Pacific, and all of those lines having any share in that character of traffic?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. How did your Oriental business move?

A. It moved via the Suez up to, I think, 1889, and then the first trans-Pacific arrangement was made with the Canadian Pacific in that year. The American lines carried none of that business until along in 1892.

Q. What lines carry it now?

A. It is divided.

Q. Between what lines?

A. It is mostly going Canadian Pacific now on account of the through rate being withdrawn on the American lines; but prior to that it was divided according to convenient sailings and facilities offered.

Q. Between what lines was it divided?

A. Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, and Union Pacific, Great Northern, and Canadian Pacific.

1570 Q. Is that business solicited by the various companies or their representatives?

A. I don't know anything about it now; I don't pay any attention to it.

Q. Was it in your day, when you were running the traffic?

A. Yes, sir.

A recess was here taken until 2 o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I offer in evidence Complainant's Exhibits 99, 100, 101, 102, and 103. Any objection, Mr. Lovett?

Mr. LOVETT. No.

Mr. SEVERANCE. You do not object on the ground that we do not bring the books in?

Mr. LOVETT. No.

Mr. SEVERANCE. In fact, at this time you do not make any objection?

Mr. LOVETT. No.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Then I suppose they will be received?

COMPLAINANT'S EXHIBIT 102.

This is to certify that at a meeting of the Board of Directors of The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company held on December 5, 1906, a quorum being present and voting, the following action was taken as appears from the records of said meeting:

Whereas it is desirable to vest in one corporation the lines of railways and properties of the California Northwestern Railway Company, the San Francisco and North Pacific Railway Company, the Eureka and Klamath River Railway Company, the North Shore Railroad Company, the San Francisco and Northwestern Railway Company and the Fort Bragg and Southeastern Railway Company, and to cause to be constructed a line of railway connecting the railways of the California Northwestern Railway Company and of the San Francisco and North Pacific Railway Company with the railway of the San Francisco and Northwestern Railway Company, and a line of railway connecting the railway of the Fort Bragg and Southeastern Railway Company with the railway of the San Francisco and North Pacific Railway Company, and other extensions and branch lines in Mendocino and Humboldt Counties, California, and to provide for the future construction of a branch line into Lake County, to the end that the said counties may be furnished with better railway transportation facilities and that their natural resources may be further developed; but on account of the great cost of construction of such extensions and branches and the necessity of 1580 operating said lines of railway together as one property, it is believed that such new construction cannot be undertaken profitably and advantageously except with the co-operation of this Company and of the Southern Pacific Company.

Resolved, That this Company will co-operate with the Southern Pacific Company to accomplish said objects and to that end the President of this Company is authorized to execute under the corporate seal of the Company, the following agreements:

An agreement between the Southern Pacific Company and The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company relating to said various railways in northwestern California and substantially of the tenor of the draft agreement herewith submitted and here referred to as "Exhibit A;"

An agreement between the Southern Pacific Company, The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company and the Northwestern Pacific Railway Company for the sale to the last mentioned Company of various stocks, bonds and indebtedness of the aforesaid California corporations, and for other purposes, such agreement to be substantially of the tenor of the draft agreement herewith submitted and here referred to as "Exhibit B;"

An agreement between the Southern Pacific Company, The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company and the Consolidated Corporation to be hereafter formed, as provided in said two agreements last mentioned, which shall give to the Southern Pacific Company and to this Company the right to prevent defaults by said consolidated corporation under any of the mortgages upon any part of its properties, such agreement to be substantially of the tenor of 1581 the draft agreement herewith submitted and here referred to as "Exhibit C;"

An agreement between the Southern Pacific Company, The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company and The Farmers Loan and Trust Company, providing for the deposit with the last mentioned Company of the shares of Capital Stock of said consolidated corporation upon the terms therein set forth, such agreement to be substantially of the tenor of the draft agreement herewith submitted and here referred to as "Exhibit D." All such agreements to be subject to the approval of the General Counsel as to form.

Resolved further, That the President of this Company is hereby authorized to do any and all things necessary to carry out the plan set forth in said agreements.

THE ATCHISON, TOPEKA AND SANTA FE RAILWAY COMPANY

and

SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY.

AGREEMENT

with respect to sale of Phoenix and Eastern Railway and joint trackage agreements. Dated December 7, 1906.

Agreement, Made this seventh day of December, 1906, between The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company (herein called the "Atchison Company"), a corporation of the State of Kansas, party of the first part; and Southern Pacific Company (herein called the "Southern Company"), a corporation of the State of Kentucky, party of the second part.

Whereas, The Atchison Company owns or controls all the shares of the capital stock and all indebtedness of the Phoenix and Eastern Railroad Company (herein called the "Phoenix Company"), a corporation of the Territory of Arizona, which has constructed a line of railroad extending from Phoenix to Dudleyville in said Territory.

It has been agreed between the Atchison Company and the Southern Company that the Atchison Company shall sell to the Southern Company, and that the Southern Company shall purchase 1586 from the Atchison Company, all said capital stock and indebtedness, at and for a sum equal to the exact cost of the construction and acquisition of the railroad and properties of the Phoenix Company, including in such cost expenses of organization and management of the Phoenix Company, with interest on all expenditures from the dates thereof, at the rate of four and one-half per cent. per annum to the first day of July, 1905, and at the rate of four per cent. per annum thereafter, it being understood that any deficit in the operation of said railroad and properties shall be charged and any net income shall be credited to such cost.

The Atchison Company has furnished to the Southern Company a detailed statement showing such cost to have been two million three hundred and twenty thousand five hundred and sixty-two dollars and fourteen cents ($2,320,562.14) on September 30, 1906, and the interest thereon up to December 1, 1906, to be one hundred and twenty-eight thousand three hundred and ninety-four dollars and twelve cents ($128,394.12) making the aggregate sum of two million four hundred and forty-eight thousand nine hundred and fifty-six dollars and twenty-six cents (2,448,956.26).

The Southern Company has agreed to cause to be constructed and established the low-grade line of railway between Phoenix and Deming, hereinafter described, and to cause the companies owning said line to grant to the Atchison Company the right to run its through trains thereon, on the terms and conditions hereinafter set forth.

The Atchison Company has agreed to cause to be constructed
1587 and established the low-grade line of railway between Phoenix and Mojave, hereinafter described, and to cause the companies owning said line to grant to the Southern Company the right to run its through trains thereon, on the terms and conditions hereinafter set forth.

Now, therefore, the parties hereto do hereby mutually agree with each other as follows:

ARTICLE I.

The Atchison Company agrees to sell to the Southern Company, and the Southern Company agrees to buy from the Atchison Company, all the shares of the capital stock and all indebtedness of the Phoenix Company, at and for the aggregate sum of Two million four hundred and forty-eight thousand nine hundred and fifty-six dollars and twenty-six cents ($2,448,956.26), with interest at the rate of four per cent. per annum from and including December 1, 1906, on so much of said sum as constituted principal September 30, 1906, to-wit, Two million three hundred and twenty thousand five hundred and sixty-two dollars and fourteen cents ($2,320,562.14) to the date of payment. Such sale shall be completed simultaneously with the execution of a certain trust agreement between the Southern Company, the Atchison Company and The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, a corporation of the State of New York, which trust agreement shall be substantially in the form of the draft of agreement hereto attached and marked "Exhibit A."

If after the completion of the sale it shall be ascertained that there were any errors or omissions in such statement furnished by the Atchison Company, each party shall make such payment to 1588 the other as may be necessary to adjust such errors or omissions; and the Southern Company shall, upon demand, at or after the completion of such sale, pay to the Atchison Company any additional sums that shall have been paid after September 30, 1906, for the construction or acquisition of such railroad and properties of the Phoenix Company or in the operation thereof if in excess of the income of the Phoenix Company, with interest on such sums at the rate of four per cent. per annum to the date of payment.

ARTICLE II.

The Southern Company will cause a line of railroad to be constructed or put in operation from a point of connection with the present line of railway of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company between Lordsburg and Bowie, in the Territory of New Mexico, to a point of connection with the railroad of the Phoenix Company, and will connect the Railroad of the Phoenix Company by some existing line or by a newly constructed line with the present line of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company at some point south or west of Phoenix. The grade of the line so to be constructed shall be as low and the curvature as light as the contour of the country will reasonably admit. Such line, including the railroad of the Phoenix Company, shall be made first-class in every particular, and, in conjunction with the line of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company from Deming to such point of connection between Lordsburg and Bowie, shall be made suitable for use as a low-grade transcontinental line so that the portion thereof between Phoenix and Deming may be used jointly by the Southern Company and the Atchison Company in case of the execution of the trackage contract marked "Exhibit B," hereto attached.

1589 The Southern Company agrees, subject to the conditions hereinafter expressed, to cause the company or companies owning such line between Phoenix and Deming, within ninety days after delivery of the instrument specified in condition (a) hereinafter in this Article set forth, to execute an agreement, substantially of the tenor of Exhibit B, hereto attached, and by such agreement to grant to the Atchison Company on the terms and conditions in said Exhibit B set forth, the right for the term of fifteen years to run its through trains upon such line between Phoenix and Deming, as in said exhibit set forth. It is understood that the recitals in said Exhibit B shall be revised and amended and the blanks shall be filled in accordance with the facts as they shall exist at the time of the execution of such agreement. Such agreement shall be dated on the first day of the month next succeeding the day of the actual execution thereof, and shall be subject to existing mortgages upon any of said lines and to a first mortgage, to be executed upon the line of the Phoenix Company and to a first mortgage to be executed upon the portion of such line yet to be constructed or put in operation between Phoenix and Deming, to secure an issue of mortgage bonds.

The Joint Line to be described in said trackage contract (Exhibit B) shall not include any terminals or terminal properties at Phoenix or at Deming. In case there is any property appurtenant to or connected with said line between Phoenix and Deming, but not required for the maintenance or operation thereof, which the Atchison Company shall not desire to use, it shall, within thirty days after

For the purpose of fixing the agreed value of the Joint Line to be specified in such trackage contract (Exhibit B), the portion of such entire line yet to be constructed, including the Phoenix and Eastern Railroad from Phoenix to Dudleyville, shall be deemed of a value equal to the actual cash cost of construction (which cost shall include interest at four and one-half per cent per annum for the period of eighteen months), together with the cost of additions and betterments; and upon the request of the Atchison Company, the Southern Company will furnish to the Atchison Company a detailed statement showing the actual cash cost of such construction. The portions of such entire line heretofore constructed shall be deemed of a value equal to the cost of construcing a new line of like character, when the execution of such trackage contract shall be requested; and such cost of duplication, unless agreed to by the parties, shall be fixed by an engineer to be selected by both the parties hereto. Such agreement of the Southern Company to cause such trackage contract (Exhibit B) to be executed is, however, subject to the following conditions precedent, viz:

(a) That at a date not later than two years after the completion of such low-grade line between Phoenix and Deming, the Atchison Company shall deliver to the Southern Company an instrument, signed by the President and authorized by the Board of Directors of the Atchison Company, requesting the Southern Company
1591 to cause such trackage contract (Exhibit B) to be executed, and agreeing to cause the same to be executed by the Atchison Company.

(b) That the Atchison Company shall have caused the line between Phoenix and Mojave, described in Article III hereof, to be completed.

(c) That the sale of the stock and indebtedness of the Phoenix Company under Article I hereof shall have been completed; and

(d) That the Atchison Company shall have performed all its other agreements herein contained.

The Southern Company further agree that it will cause such line between Phoenix and Deming to be completed within three years after delivery to it of an instrument signed by the President and authorized by the Board of Directors of the Atchison Company, requesting the Southern Company to cause such line to be completed, and to execute such trackage contract (Exhibit B), and agreeing that the Atchison Company will execute such trackage contract if said line between Phoenix and Deming shall be completed within three years after delivery of such request.

Such low-grade line shall be deemed completed whenever the Southern Company shall have commenced to run through freight trains thereon between California and Texas.

Article III.

The Atchison Company will cause the Arizona and California Railway Company to construct a line of railroad from a point of connection with the line of the Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix

Railway Company at or near Wickenburg, and thence in a 1592 westerly direction across the Colorado River, to a point of connection with the railroad operated by the Atchison Company at or near Bengal, County of San Bernardino, California.

The Atchison Company agrees, subject to the conditions hereinafter expressed, that it will execute, and cause the Arizona and California Railway Company and the Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix Railway Company (or their respective successors or assigns), within ninety days after delivery of the instrument specified in condition (a) below set forth, to execute an agreement substantially of the tenor of Exhibit C, hereto attached, and by such agreement to grant to the Southern Company, on the terms and conditions in said Exhibit C set forth, the right during the term of fifteen years to run its through trains upon such line between Phoenix and Mojave, as in said Exhibit C set forth. It is understood that the recitals in said Exhibit C shall be revised and amended, and the blanks shall be filled in accordance with the facts as they shall exist at the time of the execution of such agreement. Such agreement shall be dated on the first day of the month next succeeding the date of the execution thereof, and shall be subject to existing mortgages upon any of said lines and to a first mortgage, to be executed upon the line of the Arizona and California Railway Company to secure an issue of first mortgage bonds.

The Joint Line to be described in said trackage contract (Exhibit C) shall not include any terminals or terminal properties at Phoenix or at Mojave. In case there is any property, appurtenant to or connected with said line between Phoenix and Mojave but not re-1593 quired for the maintenance or operation thereof, which the Southern Company shall not desire to use, it shall, within thirty days after making the written request specified in condition (a) hereinafter in this Article set forth, specify such property which it shall not desire to use, and the property so specified shall be excluded from the Joint Line to be described in said trackage contract (Exhibit C). For the purpose of fixing the agreed value of such line to be specified in such trackage contract (Exhibit C), the line of the Arizona and California Railway Company shall be deemed of a value equal to the actual cash cost of construction, which cost shall include interest at the rate of four and one-half per cent. per annum for the period of eighteen months, together with the cost of additions and betterments; and upon the request of the Southern Company, the Atchison Company will furnish to the Southern Company a detailed statement showing the actual cash cost of such construction. The portions of such entire line between Phoenix and the point of junction at or near Wickenburg and between Mojave and the point of junction at or near Bengal with the line of the Arizona and California Railway Company shall be deemed of a value equal to the cost of constructing a new line of like character, when the execution of such trackage contract shall be requested; and such cost of duplication, unless agreed to by the parties, shall be fixed by an engineer to be selected by both the parties hereto. Such agreement of the Atchison Company to cause such trackage contract (Exhibit C) to be executed is, however, subject to the following conditions precedent, viz:

(a) That at a date not later than two years after the completion of such line between Wickenburg and Bengal, the Southern Company shall deliver to the Atchison Company an instru-
1594 ment, signed by the President and authorized by the Board of Directors of the Southern Company, requesting the Atchison Company to cause such trackage contract (Exhibit C) to be executed and agreeing to cause the same to be executed by the Southern Company.

(b) That the Southern Company shall have caused the line between Phoenix and Deming, described in Article II hereof, to be completed.

(c) That the sale of the stock and indebtedness of the Phoenix Company under Article II hereof shall have been completed; and

(d) That the Southern Company shall have performed all its other agreement herein contained.

The Atchison Company further agrees that it will cause such line between Phoenix and Mojave to be completed within three years after delivery to it of an instrument signed by the President and authorized by the Board of Directors of the Southern Company, requesting the Atchison Company to cause such line to be completed and to execute such trackage contract (Exhibit C), and agreeing that the Southern Company will execute such trackage contract, if said line between Phoenix and Mojave shall be completed within three years after delivery of such request.

Such line shall be deemed completed whenever the Atchison Company shall have commenced to run through freight trains thereon between Phoenix and Mojave.

In witness whereof, each of the parties hereto has caused these presents to be signed by its President or a Vice-President, and its corporate seal to be hereto affixed and attested by its 1595 Secretary or an Assistant Secretary the day and year first above written.

and

THE ATCHISON, TOPEKA AND SANTA FE RAILWAY COMPANY, granting to

TRACKAGE RIGHT

Between Phoenix and Deming.

An agreement made this first day of by and between Southern Pacific Railroad Company (hereinafter called "California Company"), a corporation of the State of California and of the Territories of Arizona and New Mexico, party of the first part,

The Phoenix and Eastern Railroad Company (hereinafter called "Phoenix Company"), a corporation of the Territory of Arizona, party of the second part,

Southern Pacific Company (hereinafter called "Southern Company"), a corporation of the State of Kentucky, party of the third part, and 1597 The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company (hereinafter called "Atchison Company"), a corporation of the State of Kansas, party of the fourth part.

Whereas, The Phoenix Company owns and operates a line of railway in the Territory of Arizona, extending from a connection at a point located (here describe precise point of connection) in the City of Phoenix, in the Territory of Arizona, with the line of railway of the Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix Railway Company, to Dudleyville, a distance of about miles. Said line of railway of the Phoenix Company, hereinafter more particularly described, is hereinafter called "Section A" of the Joint Line hereinafter mentioned.

The Southern Company owns a line of railway extending from a point of connection with said "Section A" of the Joint Line at or near Dudleyville, to a point of connection with the line of railway of the California Company at a point (here describe precise point of connection) between Lordsburg, in the Territory of New Mexico, and Bowie, in the Territory of Arizona, a distance of about miles. Said line of railway of the Southern Company, hereinafter more particularly described, is hereinafter called "Section B" of the Joint Line.

The California Company owns a system of railways in the State of California, and also a line of railway extending across the eastern boundary of the State of California, at or near Yuma, Arizona, through the Territory of Arizona and the Territory of New Mexico in an easterly direction via Bowie, Arizona, and Lordsburg, New Mexico, to a connection with the railway of the Atchison 1598 Company at Deming, New Mexico, and thence to the Rio Grande River, near El Paso, Texas. The Southern Company owns a large majority of the shares of the capital stock of the California Company and holds and operates as lessee all the lines of railway owned by the California Company, except that portion of its line extending from Mojave to Needles, in the State of California, heretofore leased to the Atchison Company. The portion hereinafter more particularly described of the line of railway of the California Company, commencing at the point of connection with said "Section B" of the Joint Line between Lordsburg and Bowie and extending thence to a connection at a point located (here describe precise point of connection) in the Town of Deming, in the Territory of New Mexico, a distance of about miles, is hereinafter called "Section C" of the Joint Line.

Said Sections A, B and C together constitute a continuous line of about miles in length for the passage of railway trains between said point of connections at Phoenix, with the line of the Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix Railway Company and said point of connection at Deming with the line of the Atchison Company.

Each of said Sections, when hereinafter referred to, shall be deemed to include the turntables, passing tracks, sidings, stations, water and telegraph service and other facilities, additions, appurtenances and improvements now existing or hereafter acquired upon or along such Section, except as hereinafter expressly provided; and said Sections A, B and C taken together, are herein called the "Joint Line."

1599 The portion of the main line of the Atchison Company, commencing at a point of connection with the tracks of the California Company at or near Mojave Junction Station in the State of California and extending thence in an easterly direction through the station of Bengal to the town of Needles is held and operated by the Atchison Company under an indenture of lease and contract, dated July 15, 1898, by and between the California Company, of the first part, the New Mexico and Arizona Railroad Company, of the second part, and Sonora Railway Company, Limited, of the third part, the Atchison Company, of the fourth part, and the Southern Company of the fifth part, to which indenture of lease and contract reference is hereby made.

Said Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix Railway Company owns and operates a line of railway in the Territory of Arizona extending from Ash Fork through Wickenburg to said point of connection at Phoenix with said "Section A" of the Joint Line; and the Atchison Company owns a large majority of the shares of the capital stock of the Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix Railway Company.

A contract dated the 7th day of December, 1906, has been executed between the Atchison Company of the first part and the Southern Company of the second part, in and by which contract the Atchison Company, among other things has agreed upon certain specified conditions to cause the Arizona and California Railway Company, a large majority of whose capital stock is owned by the Atchison Company, to construct a line of railroad from a point of connection with said line of the Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix
1600 Railway Company at or near Wickenburg, and thence in a westerly direction across the Colorado River to a point of connection with said railroad operated by the Atchison Company at or near Bengal, County of San Bernardino, California, such newly constructed line to be suitable for use as part of a low-grade transcontinental line as more particularly set forth in said contract; and the Atchison Company in and by said contract has further agreed to execute and cause the Arizona and California Railway Company and the Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix Railway Company (or their respective successors or assigns) to execute an agreement granting and leasing to the Southern Company the right to use said line of railway between Phoenix and Mojave for the continuous through passage of its trains, engines and cars, for the term of fifteen years, as more fully set forth in said contract, to which reference is hereby made, with the same effect as if such contract were herein set forth at length.

The Atchison Company desires to acquire the right to use said Sections A, B and C, constituting the Joint Line herein mentioned for the continuous passage of its trains, engines and cars from said point of connection with the railway of the Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix Railway Company at Phoenix, to said point of connection with the Railway of the Atchison Company at Deming.

The Southern Company owns a large majority of the shares of capital stock of the California Company and of the Phoenix Company respectively.

The Southern Company, the California Company and the Phoenix Company, collectively, are hereinafter called the "Grantors."

The term "Grantor" when used in this agreement shall be 1601 deemed to mean the Grantor or the successors, lessees and assigns of the Grantor for the time being in possession of and operating such Grantor's Section of the Joint Line.

Now, therefore, it is mutually agreed by and between the parties hereto as follows, viz:

ARTICLE I.

The Grantors grant and lease to the Atchison Company the right during the continuance of the term hereinafter mentioned and upon the terms and conditions and subject to the limitations hereinafter expressed, to use, equally with the Grantors, the Joint Line hereinafter more particularly described, an aggregate distance of about miles, for the operation of the trains, engines and cars of the Atchison Company from said point of connection with the railroad of the said Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix Railway Company in the City of Phoenix, in the Territory of Arizona, to said point of connection with the main line of railroad of the Atchison Company in the town of Deming in the territory of New Mexico.

Sections A, B and C of the Joint Line are described as follows:

SECTION A.

SECTION B.

SECTION C.

Including the turntables, passing tracks, sidings, stations, water and telegraph service and other facilities, additions, appurtenances and improvements now existing or hereafter acquired upon or 1602 along said joint line, suitable for the operation of such trains, engines and cars of the Atchison Company.

Such right of use is granted to the Atchison Company for the sole purpose of enabling Atchison Company to operate over the Joint Line its through trains, engines and cars from said point of connection at Phoenix to said point of connection at Deming, and to transport in such trains and cars passengers and freight in one continuous passage the entire distance between said points of connection; and the Atchison Company shall not have the right to transport over any part of the Joint Line any passengers, freight or other property received upon or to be discharged from such trains or cars at any point upon the Joint Line.

It is understood and agreed that the grant and lease of the Joint Line shall be deemed and construed as a several grant by each of the grantors of the section of the Joint Line operated by it as owner or lessee, viz: Section A by the Phoenix Company, as owner, Section B by the Southern Company, as owner, and Section C by the California Company, as owner, and by the Southern Company, as lessee. It is further understood and agreed that each covenant and agreement herein contained shall be deemed and construed as a several covenant and agreement by each grantor with respect to its section of the Joint Line.

The term during which the right to use the Joint Line is hereby granted as aforesaid shall commence on the day of the date hereof, and shall continue fifteen years from and after that date, unless sooner terminated as hereinafter provided.

1603 ARTICLE II.

SECTION 1. For the purposes of this agreement the present value of the several sections of the Joint Line shall be deemed to be as follows:

Section A, $

Section B, $

Section C, $

SECTION 2. The Atchison Company hereby covenants and agrees that it will pay, at the times and in the manner hereinafter provided, during the said term of fifteen years, as rental for the use of the Joint Line, the following sums, viz:

(A) To each Grantor for each of the fifteen consecutive years constituting the term a sum equal to a share proportionate to car mileage as hereinafter provided of interest for such year at the rate of four and one-half per cent per annum on the present value of such Grantor's Section of the Joint Line, and upon the cost of any additions or betterments that shall have been added to such section of the Joint Line, as provided in Section 3 of Article III hereof. The share so payable by the Atchison Company under this clause (A) in respect of interest on the value of each Section of the Joint Line for each year shall be a sum bearing the same ratio to the whole of such interest as the number of miles traveled by the cars of the Atchison Company on such Section shall bear to the total number of miles traveled by all cars thereon during such year; it being understood that each engine shall be rated as three cars and that 1604 neither the switching of cars within actual yard limits, nor the movement of work trains engaged in work upon the Joint Line shall be counted.

Provided, nevertheless, that

(a) If such car mileage of the Atchison Company during any one of the five consecutive years from and after the expiration of five years after the date hereof, should be less than one-fourth of the total car mileage upon such section during such year, then the share so payable by the Atchison Company under this clause (A) in respect of such year shall nevertheless be a sum equal to one-fourth of the whole of such interest for one year;

(b) If such car mileage of the Atchison Company during any one of the five consecutive years from and after the expiration of ten years after the date hereof should be less than one-third of such total car mileage during such year, then the share so payable by the Atchison Company under this clause (A) in respect of such year shall nevertheless be a sum equal to one-third of the whole of such interest for one year; and

(c) The Atchison Company shall not be required under this clause (A) to pay for any one of the fifteen consecutive years of the term a sum in excess of one-half of the whole of such interest for that year.

Such payment by the Atchison Company under this clause (A) shall be made as follows:

Within thirty days after rendition of a bill therefor upon the expiration of each calendar month during the first period of 1605 five years of the term, the Atchison Company shall pay to each Grantor a sum equal to a share of interest for such month proportionate to such car mileage, upon the Section of such Grantor during such month.

Within thirty days after rendition of a bill therefor upon the expiration of each calendar month during the second period of five years of the term, the Atchison Company shall pay to each Grantor a sum equal to one-fourth of such interest for one month.

Within thirty days after rendition of a bill therefor upon the expiration of each calendar month during the third period of five years of the term, the Atchison Company shall pay to each Grantor a sum equal to one-third of such interest for one month.

The foregoing payments shall be deemed merely payments on account of the sums to become due under this clause (A) for each entire year, and shall be subject to readjustment as follows: Within thirty days after the expiration of each year of the term, each Grantor shall furnish to the Atchison Company a statement showing the car mileage as aforesaid for such year upon the Section of such Grantor and the sum payable by the Atchison Company to such Grantor for such year under this clause (A). If the aggregate monthly payments made by the Atchison Company to any Grantor under the foregoing provisions shall exceed the sum payable by the Atchison Company for such entire year, then such Grantor, within thirty days after the expiration of such year, shall repay the excess to the Atchison Company; but if the aggregate monthly payments made by 1606 the Atchison Company to any Grantor shall be less than the sum payable by the Atchison Company for such entire year, then the Atchison Company, within thirty days after the rendition of such statement for the entire year, shall pay to such grantor the deficiency.

(B) To each Grantor, from time to time, a share, to be fixed according to car mileage as hereinafter provided, of all taxes, assessments and other governmental charges which, during such term shall accrue upon or in respect of all or any part of such Grantor's Section of the Joint Line. Any taxes, assessments or governmental charges for any year, of which any part is included in said term shall be apportioned, and the Atchison Company shall pay a part thereof proportionate to the part of such year included in the term. So long as any section or part of the Joint Line shall not be taxed or assessed separately, but shall be taxed or assessed together with or as part of any other railroad or property, it is understood and agreed that the taxes, assessments and other governmental charges accruing upon such Section or part of Section shall be deemed and taken to be such part of the taxes, assessments, and governmental charges upon the entire railroad or property so taxed or assessed together or as an entirety, as shall bear to the whole of such taxes, assessments and charges thereon the same ratio as that which the mileage of such Section shall bear to the mileage of the whole of the railroad so taxed or assessed together or as an entirety.

The share so payable by the Atchison Company under this clause (B) in respect of taxes, assessments and governmental 1607 charges upon each Section of the Joint Line shall be a sum bearing the same ratio to the whole of such taxes, assessments and governmental charges as the number of miles traveled by the cars of the Atchison Company upon such Section shall bear to the number of miles traveled by all cars thereon during the period of the term in which such taxes, assessments, or charges accrued; it being understood that each engine shall be rated as three cars, and that neither the switching of cars within actual yard limits nor the movement of work trains engaged in work upon the Joint Line shall be counted.

Provided, nevertheless, that

(a) If such car mileage of the Atchison Company during any such period included in the five years beginning at the expiration of five years after the date hereof and ending ten years after the date hereof, should be less than one-fourth of the total car mileage upon such Section during such period, then the share so payable by the Atchison Company under this clause (B) in respect of such period shall, nevertheless, be a sum equal to one-fourth of such taxes, assessments or charges for such period;

(b) If such car mileage of the Atchison Company during any such period included in the five years beginning at the expiration of ten years after the date hereof and ending with the term fifteen years after the date hereof, should be less than one-third of the total car mileage upon such Section during such period, then the share so payable by the Atchison Company under this clause (B) in respect of such period shall, nevertheless, be a sum equal to 1608 one-third of such taxes, assessments and charges for such period: and

(c) If such car mileage of the Atchison Company during any such period included in the term shall be one-half or more than one-half of the total car mileage upon such Section during such period, then the share so payable by the Atchison Company under this clause (B) in respect of such period shall be one-half of such taxes, assessments and charges for such period.

Each sum payable under this subdivision (B) in respect of any taxes, assessments or governmental charges shall be payable by the Atchison Company within thirty days after such tax, assessment or governmental charge shall have been paid and the Grantor or the Southern Company shall have caused a written statement thereof to be furnished to the Atchison Company.

ing or structure jointly used. Such cost and expense shall include all wages of trackmen, gatemen, towermen, signalmen, switchmen, watchmen, train dispatchers, telegraph operators and such other station and yard employes as shall have supervision and charge of or be required to perform service in respect to the maintenance or repair and operation of such Section or the movement of through trains thereon, and all other expenses connected with the use and operation of such Section as a through line, but general expenses of the Grantor and salaries of employes who are not employed 1609 upon or connected with the maintenance, repair or operation of such Section or in the movement of through trains thereon, shall not be included.

The share so payable by the Atchison Company under this clause (C) in respect of each Section of the Joint Line shall be a sum bearing the same ratio to the total cost and expense of maintaining, repairing and operating such Section during such calendar month, as the number of miles traveled by the cars of the Atchison Company on such Section shall bear to the total number of miles traveled by all cars thereon during such month, it being understood that each engine shall be rated as three cars, and that neither the switching of cars, within actual yard limits, nor the movement of work trains engaged in work upon the Joint Line shall be counted.

The cost and expense of maintaining, repairing and operating the Joint Line in respect of which the Atchison Company shall contribute as aforesaid under this Article, shall, except when otherwise specially provided for herein, include freight charges upon all materials used for such maintenance, repair or operation at the rate of one-half a cent per ton per mile for the haul of such materials upon the railway lines operated by the Grantors or any of them, unless such charge shall exceed the published tariffs, in which case tariff rates shall apply. In fixing the amount of such cost and expense for each month, any item to be included therein which cannot be definitely determined for each month shall be estimated, and the estimated amount included in the monthly bills, subject to correction by the Grantors when subsequent bills are rendered: and ex-
1610 penses, like insurance, covering more than one month shall be apportioned and the ratable estimated share applicable to each month shall be included in the bills rendered by the Grantors for such month, subject to correction when subsequent bills are rendered.

The sums payable by the Atchison Company under this clause (C) shall be payable monthly within thirty days after a written bill therefor shall have been rendered to the Atchison Company by the Southern Company or by the Grantor to whom such sum shall be payable; but every such bill and every such payment shall be subject to correction for errors or omissions, and for the purpose of enabling the Atchison Company to verify the correctness of such bills the Grantors shall give to the Atchison Company, upon its request, reasonable information as to the charges and expenditures embraced in any such bill, and shall permit the Atchison Company to examine the books, accounts and vouchers relating thereto, as provided in Section 4 of Article III hereof.

Article III.

Section 1. The supervision, management and operation of each Section of the Joint Line, the furnishing of water, and the movement of trains, engines and cars upon such Section, shall be under the exclusive direction and control of the Grantor of such Section; but all time-cards, rules, regulations or orders for the movement of engines, trains and cars upon such Section shall be reasonable, just and fair and without preference or discrimination in favor of 1611 either party. All passenger trains shall be given preference over other trains, and the trains of all parties shall be given equal despatch according to their class.

Section 2. Each Grantor at all times during the continuance of the term, at the written request of the General Manager of the Atchison Company, for reasonable cause shown, shall remove from service upon the Joint Line any employe of any Grantor who may not be satisfactory to the Atchison Company; and the Atchison Company, on its part, upon the written request of the General Manager of any Grantor, for reasonable cause shown, shall remove from service on its engines, trains or cars operated on or over the Section of such Grantor, any employe who may not be satisfactory to such Grantor.

Section 3. Each Grantor shall be entitled, from time to time, to make such additions and betterments to the Section of such Grantor as in its judgment shall be necessary or desirable. The actual cost of such additions and betterments shall be added to the present value of such Section for the purpose of ascertaining the amount payable by the Atchison Company as rental under clause (A) of section 2 of Article II hereof; but if the Atchison Company shall deem any such addition or betterment to be unnecessary or undesirable, then, upon its written request, the question as to the necessity or desirability of any such addition or betterment (except when the same shall be made in pursuance of any law or municipal ordinance or regulation) shall be submitted to arbitration in the manner hereinafter provided, and the cost thereof shall not be added 1612 to such value if it shall be determined by such arbitration that such addition or betterment was not necessary or desirable.

In determining whether expenditures upon the Joint Line or any part thereof are for additions or betterments or for maintaining, repairing or operating the Joint Line, such expenditures as according to the then prevailing railroad usage are chargeable to cost of property or "capital account" shall be deemed expenditures for additions or betterments in respect of which the Atchison Company shall be liable to pay the equivalent of interest under said clause (A) of section 2 of Article II hereof, and expenditures which according to such usage would be included in "operating expenses" shall be deemed expenses of maintaining, repairing and operating the Joint Line in respect of which the Atchison Company shall contribute as provided in clause (C) of section 2 of Article II hereof.

SECTION 4. So much of the books, accounts and vouchers of each Grantor as relate to the construction or acquisition of additions or betterments or to the maintenance, repair or operation of the Joint Line or any part thereof, shall at all reasonable times be open to inspection by the proper officers and agents of the Atchison Company, who shall, if they so desire, be permitted to make copies of such part of such books, accounts and vouchers or extracts therefrom.

SECTION 5. Each Grantor reserves the right at all times to grant to other railway companies the right to use such Grantor's Section of the Joint Line or any part thereof in common with itself and 1613 the Atchison Company and such other company or companies as may at the time have the right to use the same; provided that such admission of any other railway company to the right to use such Section or any part thereof shall not materially obstruct or interfere with the Atchison Company in the fair and reasonable enjoyment of the rights herein granted or leased to it.

SECTION 6. All engines, trains and cars operated by the Atchison Company shall be regarded for all purposes of this agreement as the engines, trains and cars of the Atchison Company. All engines, trains and cars operated by any Grantor, or the successors, assigns or lessees of any Grantor for the time being in possession or control of the Section of such Grantor, shall be regarded for all purposes of this agreement as the engines, trains and cars of such Grantor.

SECTION 7. The Grantors shall furnish all water required for the operation of engines and trains upon the Joint Line, and the cost and expense of furnishing such water, including a charge of one-half cent per ton of two thousands pounds for each mile that such water shall be hauled, shall be included in the cost and expense of maintaining and operating the Joint Line, in respect of which the Atchison Company shall contribute a share, as provided in clause (C) of section 2 of Article II hereof.

SECTION 8. Each of the parties shall furnish its own fuel oil or coal for the operation of its engines upon the Joint Line. The 1614 Atchison Company shall be entitled to establish, maintain and operate its own fuel oil tanks or coal bunkers at points upon the Joint Line to be designated by the respective Grantors for supplying its engines operated on the Joint Line with fuel oil or coal necessary for the operation thereof, but in case the Atchison Company so establishes, maintains and operates its own fuel oil tanks or coal bunkers it shall not be required to pay interest, taxes, rental or a share of the cost of maintaining or operating the fuel oil tanks or coal bunkers of the Grantors.

SECTION 9. A proportion of the cost and expense of maintaining and operating the telegraph lines upon the Joint Line, bearing the same ratio to the total cost and expense of maintaining and operating the telegraph lines upon the Joint Line as the number of wires used in the joint service bears to the total number of wires strung on the telegraph poles, shall be included in the cost and expense of maintaining and operating the Joint Line; and the Atchison Company shall be entitled to the use and benefit of such telegraph service in the operation of its trains, engines and cars upon the Joint Line.

SECTION 10. Each party shall be entitled to operate upon the Joint Line such helper-engines as shall be required for the operation of the trains of such party upon any portion of the Joint Line.

ARTICLE IV.

SECTION 1. All rentals or other sums payable under any of the provisions of this agreement by the Atchison Company to 1615 any of the Grantors shall be payable at the office of the Southern Company, in the City of San Francisco, California. In case any rental or other sum payable hereunder shall not be duly paid on or before the date when the same shall be payable, as herein provided, such sum shall bear interest at the rate of five per cent per annum from the date when the same became payable until the same shall be duly paid, whether or not the party to whom such sum was payable shall exercise its right and privilege under Article V hereof to terminate this agreement.

SECTION 2. The California Company and the Phoenix Company hereby severally and respectively authorize and direct the Atchison Company to pay to the Southern Company all rentals and other sums which under the terms of this agreement shall be payable to them or either of them, and agree that the receipt of the Southern Company for any sum so paid to it by the Atchison Company shall bind them respectively as a full acquittance and discharge in respect of the sum so paid; but every such authority and direction may be revoked by the California Company or the Phoenix Company by giving notice in writing of such revocation to the Atchison Company or by executing an assignment or lease of its Section of the Joint Line, vesting in the assignee or lessee the right to receive such rentals or other sums and by causing notice in writing of the execution of such assignment or lease to be given to the Atchison Company. The Southern Company hereby agrees with the California Company and the Phoenix Company to account to them respectively for any and all 1616 sums paid by the Atchison Company hereunder for account of the California Company and the Phoenix Company, or either of them; but the Atchison Company shall not be responsible for any failure of the Southern Company so to account for any sum paid to it by the Atchison Company.

SECTION 3. The Atchison Company may serve upon the Southern Company all notices and demands which under this agreement are required or authorized to be served upon the Grantors or any of them, and such service upon the Southern Company shall in all respects bind the Grantors and each of them, with the same effect as if served upon each of the Grantors; and the Southern Company shall have authority and power on behalf of the Grantors and each of them to serve upon the Atchison Company all notices and demands which under this agreement are required or authorized to be served by the Grantors or any of them upon the Atchison Company. Nevertheless, any Grantor may revoke such authority as to it by giving notice in writing of such revocation to Atchison Company and thereafter such notices and demands shall be served upon and be served by such Grantor directly. All notices and demands herein authorized or required to be given to any party shall be given by serving the same upon the President or a Vice-President or General Manager of such party.

SECTION 4. If and so long as any one of the Grantors shall operate more than one of said Sections of the Joint Line then all such Sections so operated by one Grantor shall be treated together as one combined Section. Such combined Section shall be deemed to be of a 1617 value equal to the aggregate of the separate values of the several sections combined and the charges in respect of the rental, taxes and cost and expenses of repairing, maintaining and operating the combined Section shall be fixed according to the car mileage upon such combined Section taken together.

ARTICLE V.

SECTION 1. If the Atchison Company shall fail to perform or to comply with any of the covenants or conditions to be performed or complied with by it under this agreement and such failure shall continue for a period of thirty days after written demand for performance or compliance shall have been made upon the Atchison Company by the Grantors, or either or any of them, coupled with notice in writing that the parties or party giving such notice elect to put an end to the term hereby granted on account of such failure of the Atchison Company to perform or comply with such covenant or condition, then the term hereby created and all rights of the Atchison Company shall forthwith cease and terminate, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding; but no such termination shall deprive any of the parties hereto of the right to enforce any liability of any other of the parties hereto that shall have accrued prior to such termination of the term. Provided, however, that if the Atchison Company, within thirty days after the receipt of any statement rendered to it hereunder by any Grantor shall give notice in writing to such Grantor that it contests the correctness of any specified item or items in such statement and shall pay 1618 to such Grantor all sums due to it other than the item or items so specified and also shall pay on account of such specified item or items such part thereof as shall not be contested and further shall furnish such Grantor (if demanded by it) reasonable security for the payment of the item or items or parts of items contested, then so long as the Atchison Company in good faith shall contest the correctness of such item or items or parts of items specified in such notice, the term hereunder and the rights of the Atchison Company shall not be terminated under this Section 1 of Article V by reason of the failure of the Atchison Company to pay or allow in full such item or items so contested.

SECTION 2. If for any cause other than its own failure to perform or comply with the terms and conditions of this agreement the Atchison Company should be deprived of or lose the right to operate its trains, engines or cars under this agreement upon any Section of the Joint Line, then and in that event the term hereby created shall forthwith cease and terminate as to the entire Joint Line, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

SECTION 3. If the Atchison Company should fail to perform and comply with any of the covenants or conditions of said contract, bearing date the seventh day of December, 1906, between the Atchison Company and the Southern Company, and such failure should continue for the period of sixty days after the Southern Company shall have served upon the Atchison Company written demand to perform or comply with such covenant or condition, then and in that event, at the election of the Southern Company, to be expressed in a 1619 written notice of such election served by the Southern Company upon the Atchison Company, the term hereby created and all rights of the Atchison Company hereunder shall forthwith cease and terminate, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

SECTION 4. In case after the execution of the trackage contract referred to as "Schedule C" in the said contract dated the seventh day of December, 1906, the said trackage contract between the Atchison Company and the Southern Company, should be terminated by the Southern Company, its successors or assigns, by reason of any default or failure of any of the parties to such trackage contract to perform or comply with the terms and conditions thereof, or in case the Southern Company, its successors or assigns, for any cause other than its or their default or failure to perform and comply with the terms and conditions of said trackage contract, should be deprived of or lose the right to operate its or their trains, engines and cars upon the terms and conditions of said contract upon said line extending from a point of connection with Section A of the Joint Line, herein mentioned, to a point of connection with the main line of the California Company at Mojave then and in any such event, at the election of the Southern Company, to be expressed in a written notice of such election to be given by the Southern Company to the Atchison Company, the term hereby created and all rights of the Atchison Company to use the Joint Line shall forthwith cease and terminate, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

1620 ARTICLE VI.

SECTION 1. The grantors shall be bound to use only reasonable and customary care, skill and diligence in maintaining and repairing the roadway, tracks, structures and appliances of and pertaining to the joint line.

The Atchison Company shall not, by reason of any defect in any such roadway, track, structure or appliances, or by reason of the failure or neglect of the grantors to repair such defect, have or make against the grantors any claim or demand for any loss, damage, or injury whatsoever arising from such defect, neglect or failure; but in case the grantors shall fail to repair any such defect as aforesaid within a reasonable time after the Atchison Company shall have given to the grantors written notice specifying the defect and requesting that it be repaired, then the Atchison Company shall have the right to make the necessary repairs at once, and the grantors shall and will pay the cost thereof, which shall thereupon be apportioned between the parties as hereinbefore provided.

SECTION 2. Except enginemen and trainmen in revenue train service, all employes of the grantors in anywise engaged in maintaining, repairing or operating the joint line shall, as between the parties hereto, be deemed joint employes of both parties; but while performing any service for or on behalf of said grantors or the Atchison Company upon such section shall be regarded and held for the time being the employes solely of the party for whom or in whose behalf such service is performed.

SECTION 3. The Atchison Company hereby assumes all risks
1621 of all loss, damage or injury which shall in any manner occur in and upon any track, building or premises, the use whereof is herein granted, whether to property of the Atchison Company, or to property in its custody, or to its passengers or to its employes, or which third persons or the property of third persons shall suffer by reason of the movement of any engine, car or train of the Atchison Company in all respects as if the Atchison Company had then been in the exclusive use and control of such track, building or premises, excepting only such loss, damage or injury as shall be caused by the negligence of the employes solely of the grantors; and, excepting only as aforesaid, the Atchison Company hereby agrees to save the grantors harmless from all such loss, damage and injury, from all liability and claim therefor and from all consequent costs and expenses.

SECTION 4. Each party hereto hereby agrees to save the other party harmless from all loss, damage and injury caused by the negligence of its own sole employes, from all liability and claim therefor and from all consequent costs and expenses.

SECTION 5. The parties hereto expressly covenant and agree that in case of a collision between their respective engines, cars or trains while on any of the premises aforesaid, the party whose employes are alone in fault shall be solely responsible for, and shall settle and pay for, the entire loss and damage caused thereby, and shall so save the other party harmless therefrom; and that in case any such collision is caused by the fault of the employes of both parties 1622 or by the fault of any joint employe or employes, or in case the cause of the collision is so concealed that it cannot be determined whose employe or employes are at fault, each party shall bear and pay all the loss, damage and injury which its own property or property in its custody, or its employes or passengers may have suffered in consequence thereof.

SECTION 6. All liability for damages to persons or property accruing in connection with the maintenance or operation of the joint line from any cause except as herein otherwise provided, shall be apportioned and paid by the parties in the same proportions as the cost and expense of operating the Section of the Joint Line upon which the accident or damage occurred during or for the month during which such accident or damage happened.

SECTION 7. In case any of the Atchison Company's trains shall be wrecked while running on the joint line such wreck may be picked up and removed by the grantors, and the cost of such service shall, except as herein otherwise expressly provided, be borne and paid by the Atchison Company.

SECTION 8. Each of the parties hereto who under the terms and provisions of this agreement is to be liable for or is to bear any liability, loss, damage, cost, charge or expense, or by reason of whose acts or omissions any penalty may be imposed upon any other party, shall and will indemnify and save harmless the other parties from and against such loss, damage, cost, charge, expense or penalties and from all liability therefor.

1623 If a judgment shall be recovered against any of the parties hereto on account of any liability which either of the other parties under the provisions of this agreement should bear or satisfy in whole or in part, then such last-mentioned party shall on demand of the party against whom such judgment was recovered, promptly repay to it any moneys which it may have paid or have been required to pay on account of such liability, together with the costs, fees and other expenses incurred in defending such suit or a proportionate share of such costs, fees and other expenses if such liability is to be divided between them.

No party hereto shall be concluded by any judgment or decree at law or in equity against any other party hereto unless it had reasonable notice from such other party requiring it to appear in the suit in which such judgment or decree was rendered and to make defence thereto for its own account, or jointly with the party against which such judgment or decree was rendered. If such notice shall have been given and the party receiving the same shall have failed to appear and make defence it shall be concluded by the judgment or decree in such suit.

SECTION 9. Each Grantor may make settlement of claims for deaths or injuries to persons and for loss of or damage to property to which such grantor and the Atchison Company are to be jointly liable hereunder; except that in case the Atchison Company shall give notice in writing to any Grantor of objection to such settlement by the Grantor of any claim, or class of claims, then such Grantor shall not 1624 voluntarily pay or settle any such claim so objected to, at a cost in excess of $500 for each claim paid or settled, without first obtaining the written consent of the Atchison Company. Upon making a voluntary settlement, as aforesaid, each Grantor shall procure from the claimant a release to the Atchison Company from liability on account of such claim.

SECTION 10. If traffic over or upon any Section of the Joint Line or any business thereon shall at any time be interrupted or delayed for any cause other than the willful act of such Grantor or of the Atchison Company, then and in such case neither of the parties shall have any claim against the other for loss or damage of any kind caused by or resulting from such interruption or delay.

ARTICLE VII.

The Atchison Company agrees that, unless compelled by law to do so, it will not carry on its trains, engines or cars upon the Joint Line any passengers or other persons, freight or other property, except freight and passengers carried in one continuous passage upon the same train the entire distance between Phoenix, Arizona, and said point of connection at Deming with the railroad of the Atchison Company.

In case at any time during the term hereof the Atchison Company shall carry on any of its trains, engines or cars, any passengers or other persons, freight or other property other than freight and passengers carried in one continuous passage upon the same
1625 train the entire distance between Phoenix and said point of connection at Deming, the Atchison Company shall, on or before the 15th day of the following calendar month, render to the Grantors a statement in writing specifying the number of passengers or other persons, and the freight or other property so carried and the place upon the Joint Line where received and the place where discharged from such engines, trains or cars, and shall at the same time pay to each Grantor seventy (70) percent of its then existing local tariff rates for similar transportation upon its Section. If such business be the carrying of mail, the Atchison Company shall pay to the respective Grantors seventy (70) percent of all revenue received from the carrying of such mail upon the portion of the Joint Line upon which it shall have been carried by the Atchison Company, and, if such business be the carrying of express matter, it shall pay to the respective Grantors seventy (70) percent of the then existing local tariff rates of the Company at the time doing express business upon the Joint Line for similar transportation of such express matter. However, the foregoing provision and the receipt by the respective Grantors of compensation for any such business originating at or destined to points upon the Joint Line shall not deprive the Grantors or any of them of any rights they may have against the Atchison Company by reason of any such transportation in violation of the terms of this agreement.

Nothing in this Article contained shall be construed as prohibiting the Atchison Company from receiving or discharging at points upon the Joint Line its own employes, and property to be employed 1626 or used solely in the operation of its trains, engines or cars upon the Joint Line, or from setting out and thereafter picking up freight cars to regulate tonnage of trains or to effect repairs, but such transportation of employes and property shall be permitted to the Atchison Company, and it shall not be required to make any payment to the Grantors therefor under this Article VII.

ARTICLE VIII.

In case any disagreement shall arise between the Atchison Company and the Grantors, or any of them, as to any matter arising under this agreement, then, upon the request of either the Atchison Company, or such Grantors or Grantor with whom such disagreement shall have arisen, the matter in difference shall be submitted to three arbitrators, one of whom shall be appointed by the Atchison Company, one by such Grantors or Grantor, and the third by the two so appointed. The decision of such arbitrators or any two of them, given after a hearing of which the parties to such agreement shall have been duly notified, and at which they shall have been given an opportunity to be heard, shall be final and binding upon the parties as to the matter or matters submitted for arbitration; and each of said parties agrees that forthwith, upon the rendering of such decision or award, it will perform and comply with the requirements thereof.

ARTICLE IX.

This agreement shall enure in favor of and shall be binding
1627 upon the successors, assigns and lessees of each Grantor for the time being in possession of and operating such Grantor's Section of the Joint Line; but the Atchison Company shall not have power to assign, transfer or sublet this agreement or any rights thereunder.

In witness whereof, each of the parties hereto has caused this instrument to be executed in four uniform originals by its President or Vice-president and its corporate seal to be hereunto affixed and attested by its Secretary or Assistant Secretary the day and year first above written.

D. 1898, by and between the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, of the first part, the New Mexico and Arizona R. R. Co., of the second part, the the Sonora Railway Company Limited, of the third part, the Atchison Company, of the fourth part, and the Southern Company, of the fifth part, to which indenture of lease and contract reference is hereby made. The portion hereinafter more particularly described of said main line of the Atchison Company commencing at said point of connection at or near Mojave Junction Station and extending thence to a point of connection with the railroad of the Arizona Company at or near Bengal, in the State of California, a distance of about miles, is hereinafter called "Section A" of the Joint Line, hereinafter mentioned.

The Arizona Company owns a line of railway extending from a point of connection with said Section A of the Joint Line, at or near Bengal, to a point of connection with the line of railway of the Prescott Company at a point about five miles north of Wickenburg, in the Territory of Arizona, a distance of about 195 miles.

1630 Said line of railway of the Arizona Company, hereinafter more particularly described, is hereinafter called "Section B" of the Joint Line.

The Prescott Company owns and operates a line of railway, of which a portion, about miles in length, extends from said point of connection with said Section B of the Joint Line, about five miles north of Wickenburg, in a southerly direction, to a connection at a point located [here describe precise point of connection] in the City of Phoenix in the Territory of Arizona, with the line of railway of the Phoenix and Eastern Railway Company. The portion hereinafter more particularly described of the line of railway of the Prescott Company is hereinafter called "Section C" of the Joint Line.

The Atchison Company at the time of the execution of these presents has sold to the Southern Company all the shares of the capital stock and obligations of the said Phoenix and Eastern Railway Company.

Said Sections A, B and C together constitute a continuous line, about miles in length, for the passage of railway trains between said point of connection at Mojave and said point of connection at Phoenix with the line of said Phoenix and Eastern Railway Company.

Each of said Sections, when hereinafter referred to, shall be deemed to include the turntables, passing tracks, sidings, stations, water and telegraph service and other facilities, additions, appurtenances and improvements now existing or hereafter acquired upon or along such section, except as hereinafter expressly provided; and said Sections A, B and C taken together, are herein called the "Joint Line."

The Southern Pacific Railroad Company owns a system of 1631 railways in the State of California and also a line of railway extending across the Eastern boundary of the State of California at or near Yuma, through the Territory of Arizona and the Territory of New Mexico, in an Easterly direction, to a connection with the railway of the Atchison Company at Deming, and thence to the Rio Grande River near El Paso, Texas.

The Southern Company holds, as lessee, and operates the lines of railway owned by said Southern Pacific Railroad Company, except said portion of its line leased to the Atchison Company.

All the shares of the capital stock of the Phoenix and Eastern Railway Company were heretofore sold by the Atchison Company to the Southern Company.

A contract, dated the seventh day of December, 1906, has been executed between the Atchison Company, of the first part, and the Southern Company, of the second part, in and by which contract the Southern Company, among other things, has agreed upon certain specified conditions to cause a line of railway to be completed from a point of connection with the line of the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company between Lordsburg, in the Territory of New Mexico, and Bowie, in the Territory of Arizona, and thence by the most practicable route to a point of connection with the Phoenix and Eastern Railway Company, in Arizona, and to cause said Phoenix and Eastern Railway Company to be connected by some existing line or by a newly constructed line with the present line of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company at some point south or west of Phoenix, such newly constructed line to be suitable for use as part of a low-grade trans-continental line, as more particularly set forth in said
1632 contract; and the Southern Company in and by said contract has further agreed to cause the several companies owning such line of railroad from a point of connection with Section C of the Joint Line to a point of connection with the main line of the Atchison Company at Deming, in the Territory of New Mexico, to grant and lease to the Atchison Company the right to use the same for the continuous through passage of its trains, engines and cars, for the term of fifteen years, as more fully set forth in said contract, to which reference is hereby made with the same effect as if such contract were herein set forth at length.

The Southern Company desires to acquire the right to use said Sections A, B and C, constituting the Joint Line herein mentioned, for the continuous passage of its trains, engines and cars from said point of connection at Mojave, in the State of California, to said point of connection with the railway of the Phoenix and Eastern Railway Company at Phoenix.

The Atchison Company owns a large majority of the shares of capital stock of the Arizona Company and of the Prescott Company, respectively.

The Atchison Company, the Arizona Company and the Prescott Company, collectively, are hereinafter called the "Grantors."

The term "Grantor," when used in this agreement, shall be deemed to mean the Grantor or the successors, lessees and assigns of the Grantor for the time being in possession of and operating such Grantor's Section of the Joint Line.

Now, therefore, it is mutually agreed by and between the parties hereto as follows, viz:

ARTICLE I.

The Grantors grant and lease to the Southern Company the right during the continuance of the term hereinafter mentioned and upon the terms and conditions and subject to the limitations hereinafter expressed, to use, equally with the Grantors, the Joint Line hereinafter more particularly described, an aggregate distance of about miles, for the operation of the trains, engines and cars of the Southern Company from said point of connection with the railroad of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company at or near Mojave, in the State of California, to said point of connection with the railroad of the Phoenix and Eastern Railway Company at Phoenix, in the Territory of Arizona. Sections A, B and C of the Joint Line are described as follows:

SECTION A.

SECTION B.

SECTION C.

Including the turntables, passing tracks, sidings, stations, water and telegraph service and other facilities, additions, appurtenances and improvements now existing or hereafter acquired upon or along said Joint Line suitable for the operation of such trains, engines and cars of the Southern Company.

Such right of use is granted to the Southern Company for the sole purpose of enabling the Southern Company to operate over the Joint Line its through trains, engines and cars from said point of connection at Mojave to said point of connection at Phoenix,

1634 and to transport in such trains and cars passengers and freight in one continuous passage the entire distance between said points of connection; and the Southern Company shall not have the right to transport over any part of the Joint Line any passengers, freight or other property received upon or to be discharged from such trains or cars at any point upon the Joint Line.

It is understood and agreed that the grant and lease of the Joint Line shall be deemed and construed as a several grant by each of the grantors of the section of the Joint Line operated by it as owner or lessee, viz: Section A by the Atchison Company, as lessee under said indenture dated July 15, 1898, Section B by the Arizona Company, as owner, and Section C by the Prescott Company, as owner. It is further understood and agreed that each covenant and agreement herein contained shall be deemed and construed as a several covenant and agreement by each grantor with respect to its section of the Joint Line.

The term during which the right to use the Joint Line is hereby granted as aforesaid shall commence on the day of the date hereof, and shall continue fifteen years from and after that date, unless sooner terminated as hereinafter provided.

ARTICLE II.

SECTION 1. For the purposes of this agreement the present value of the several sections of the Joint Line shall be deemed to be as follows:

Section A, $

Section B, $

Section C, $

1635 SECTION 2. The Southern Company hereby covenants and agrees that it will pay, at the times and in the manner hereinafter provided, during the said term of fifteen years, as rental for the use of the Joint Line, the following sums, viz:

(A) To each Grantor, for each of the fifteen consecutive years, constituting the term a sum equal to a share proportionate to car mileage as hereinafter provided, of interest for such year at the rate of four and one-half per cent, per annum on the present value of such Grantor's Section of the Joint Line, and upon the cost of any additions or betterments that shall have been added to such section of the Joint Line, as provided in Section 3 of Article III. hereof. The share so payable by the Southern Company under this clause (A) in respect of interest on the value of each Section of the Joint Line for each year shall be a sum bearing the same ratio to the whole of such interest as the number of miles traveled by the cars of the Southern Company on such Section shall bear to the total number of miles traveled by all cars thereon during such year; it being understood that each engine shall be rated as three cars and that neither the switching of cars within actual yard limits, nor the movement of work trains engaged in work upon the Joint Line shall be counted.

Provided, nevertheless, that

(a) If such car mileage of the Southern Company during any one of the five consecutive years from and after the expiration of five years after the date hereof should be less than one-fourth of the total car mileage upon such Section during such year then the share
1636 so payable by the Southern Company under this clause (A) in respect of such year shall nevertheless be a sum equal to one-fourth of the whole of such interest for one year;

(b) If such car mileage of the Southern Company during any one of the five consecutive years from and after the expiration of ten years after the date hereof should be less than one-third of such total car mileage during such year, then the share so payable by the Southern Company under this clause (A) in respect of such year shall nevertheless be a sum equal to one-third of the whole of such interest for one year; and

(c) The Southern Company shall not be required under this clause (A) to pay for any one of the fifteen consecutive years of the term a sum in excess of one-half of the whole of such interest for that year.

Such payment by the Southern Company under this clause (A) shall be made as follows:

Within thirty days after rendition of a bill therefor upon the expiration of each calendar month during the first period of five years of the term, the Southern Company shall pay to each Grantor a sum equal to a share of interest for such month proportionate to such car mileage, upon the section of such Grantor during such month.

Within thirty days after rendition of a bill therefor upon the expiration of each calendar month during the second period of five years of the term, the Southern Company shall pay to each Grantor a sum equal to one-fourth of such interest for one month.

Within thirty days after rendition of a bill therefor upon 1637 the expiration of each calendar month during the third period of five years of the term, the Southern Company shall pay to each Grantor a sum equal to one-third of such interest for one month.

The foregoing payments shall be deemed merely payments on account of the sums to become due under this clause (A) for each entire year and shall be subject to readjustment as follows: Within thirty days after the expiration of each year of the term, each Grantor shall furnish to the Southern Company a statement showing the car mileage as aforesaid for such year upon the Section of such Grantor and the sum payable by the Southern Company to such Grantor for such year under this clause (A). If the aggregate monthly payments made by the Southern Company to any Grantor under the foregoing provisions shall exceed the sum payable by the Southern Company for such entire year, then such Grantor, within thirty days after the expiration of such year, shall repay the excess to the Southern Company; but if the aggregate monthly payments made by the Southern Company to any Grantor shall be less than the sum payable by the Southern Company for such entire year, then the Southern Company, within thirty days after the rendition of such statement for the entire year, shall pay to such Grantor the deficiency.

(B) To each Grantor, from time to time, a share, to be fixed according to car mileage as hereinafter provided, of all taxes, assessments and other governmental charges which, during such term shall accrue upon or in respect of all or any part of such Grantor's Section of the Joint Line. Any taxes, assessments or governmental charges for any year, of which any part is included in said term shall 1638 be apportioned, and the Southern Company shall pay a part thereof proportionate to the part of such year included in the term. So long as any section or part of the Joint Line shall not be taxed or assessed separately, but shall be taxed or assessed together with or as part of any other railroad or property, it is understood and agreed that the taxes, assessments and other governmental charges accruing upon such Section or part of Section shall be deemed and taken to be such part of the taxes, assessments or governmental charges upon the entire railroad or property so taxed or assessed together or as an entirety, as shall bear to the whole of such taxes, assessments and charges thereon the same ratio as that which the mileage of such Section shall bear to the mileage of the whole of the railroad so taxed or assessed together or as an entirety.

The share so payable by the Southern Company under this clause (B) in respect of taxes, assessments and governmental charges upon each Section of the Joint Line shall be a sum bearing the same ratio to the whole of such taxes, assessments and governmental charges as the number of miles traveled by the cars of the Southern Company upon such Section shall bear to the number of miles traveled by all cars thereon during the period of the term in which such taxes, assessments or charges accrued, it being understood that each engine shall be rated as three cars, and that neither the switching of cars within actual yard limits, nor the movement of work trains engaged in work upon the Joint Line shall be counted.

(a) If such car mileage of the Southern Company during
1639 any such period included in the five years beginning at the expiration of five years after the date hereof and ending ten years after the date hereof, should be less than one-fourth of the total car mileage upon such Section during such period, then the share so payable by the Southern Company under this clause (B) in respect of such period shall, nevertheless, be a sum equal to one-fourth of such taxes, assessments or charges for such period;

(b) If such car mileage of the Southern Company during any such period included in the five years beginning at the expiration of ten years after the date hereof and ending with the term fifteen years after the date hereof, should be less than one-third of the total car mileage upon such Section during such period, then the share so payable by the Southern Company under this clause (B) in respect of such period shall, nevertheless, be a sum equal to one-third of such taxes, assessments and charges for such period; and

(c) If such car mileage of the Southern Company during any such period included in the term shall be one-half or more than one-half of the total car mileage upon such Section during such period, then the shares so payable by the Southern Company under this clause (B) in respect of such period shall be one-half of such taxes, assessments and charges for such period.

Each sum payable under this subdivision (B) in respect of any taxes, assessments or governmental charges shall be payable by the Southern Company within thirty days after such tax, assessment or governmental charge shall have been paid and the Grantor or the Atchison Company shall have caused a written statement thereof to be furnished to the Southern Company.

(C) To each Grantor, each calendar month of said term, a share, to be fixed according to car mileage as hereinafter provided, of the cost and expense of maintaining, repairing and operating such Grantor's Section during such month, including also insurance premiums and expenses paid during said term for insuring any building or structure jointly used. Such cost and expense shall include all wages of trackmen, gatemen, towermen, signalmen, switch-
1640 men, watchmen, train dispatchers, telegraph operators and such other station and yard employes as shall have supervision and charge of or be required to perform service in respect to the maintenance or repair and operation of such Section or the movement of through trains thereon, and all other expenses connected with the use and operation of such Section as a through line, but general expenses of the Grantor and salaries of employes who are not employed upon or connected with the maintenance, repair or operation of such Section or in the movement of through trains thereon shall not be included.

The share so payable by the Southern Company under this clause (C) in respect of each Section of the Joint Line shall be a sum bearing the same ratio to the total cost and expense of maintaining, repairing and operating such Section during such calendar month, as the number of miles traveled by the cars of the Southern Company on such Section shall bear to the total number of miles traveled by all cars thereon during such month, it being understood that each engine shall be rated as three cars, and that neither the switching of cars within actual yard limits, nor the movement of work trains engaged in work upon the Joint Line shall be counted.

The cost and expense of maintaining, repairing and operating the Joint Line in respect of which the Southern Company shall contribute as aforesaid under this Article, shall, except when otherwise specially provided for herein, include freight charges upon all materials used for such maintenance, repair or operation at the rate of one-half a cent per ton per mile for the haul of such materials upon the railway lines operated by the Grantors or any of them, unless such charge shall exceed the published tariffs, in which case tariff 1641 rates shall apply. In fixing the amount of such cost and expense for each month, any item to be included therein which cannot be definitely determined for each month shall be estimated, and the estimated amount included in the monthly bills, subject to correction by the Grantors when subsequent bills are rendered; and expenses, like insurance, covering more than one month shall be apportioned and the ratable estimated share applicable to each month shall be included in the bills rendered by the Grantors for such month, subject to correction when subsequent bills are rendered.

The sums payable by the Southern Company under this clause (C) shall be payable monthly within thirty days after a written bill therefor shall have been rendered to the Southern Company by the Atchison Company or by the Grantor to whom such sum shall be payable; but every such bill and every such payment shall be subject to correction for errors or omissions, and for the purpose of enabling the Southern Company to verify the correctness of such bills the Grantors shall give to the Southern Company, upon its request, reasonable information as to the charges and expenditures embraced in any such bill, and shall permit the Southern Company to examine the books, accounts and vouchers relating thereto, as provided in Section 4 of Article III. hereof.

Article III.

Section 1. The supervision, management and operation of each Section of the Joint Line, the furnishing of water, and the move-
1642 ment of trains, engines and cars upon such Section, shall be under the exclusive direction and control of the Grantor of such Section; but all time-cards, rules, regulations or orders for the movement of engines, trains and cars upon such Section shall be reasonable, just and fair and without preference or discrimination in favor of either party. All passenger trains shall be given preference over other trains, and the trains of all parties shall be given equal despatch according to their class.

Section 2. Each Grantor at all times during the continuance of the term, at the written request of the General Manager of the Southern Company, for reasonable cause shown, shall remove from service upon the Joint Line any employe of any Grantor who may not be satisfactory to the Southern Company, and the Southern Company, on its part, upon the written request of the General Manager of any Grantor, for reasonable cause shown, shall remove from service on its engines, trains or cars operated on or over the Section of such Grantor, any employe who may not be satisfactory to such Grantor.

Section 3. Each Grantor shall be entitled, from time to time, to make such additions and betterments to the Section of such Grantor as in its judgment shall be necessary or desirable. The actual cost of such additions and betterments shall be added to the present value of such Section for the purpose of ascertaining the amount payable by the Southern Company as rental under clause (A) of Section 2 of Article II. hereof; but if the Southern Company shall deem any such addition or betterment to be unnecessary or undesirable, then, upon its written request, the question as to the necessity or 1643 desirability of any such addition or betterment (except when the same shall be made in pursuance of any law or municipal ordinance or regulation) shall be submitted to arbitration in the manner hereinafter provided, and the cost thereof shall not be added to such value if it shall be determined by such arbitration that such addition or betterment was not necessary or desirable.

In determining whether expenditures upon the Joint Line or any part thereof are for additions or betterments or for maintaining, repairing or operating the Joint Line, such expenditures as according to the then prevailing railroad usage are chargeable to cost of property or "capital account" shall be deemed expenditures for additions or betterments in respect of which the Southern Company shall be liable to pay the equivalent of interest under said clause (A) of Section 2 of Article II. hereof, and expenditures which according to such usage would be included in "operating expenses" shall be deemed expenses of maintaining, repairing and operating the Joint Line in respect of which the Southern Company shall contribute as provided in clause (C) of Section 2 of Article II hereof.

SECTION 4. So much of the books, accounts and vouchers of each Grantor as relate to the construction or acquisition of additions or betterments or to the maintenance, repair or operation of the Joint Line or any part thereof, shall at all reasonable times be open to inspection by the proper officers and agents of the Southern Company, who shall, if they so desire, be permitted to make copies of such part of such books, accounts and vouchers or extracts therefrom.

SECTION 5. Each Grantor reserves the right at all times to grant to other railway companies the right to use such Grantor's Section of the Joint Line or any part thereof in common with itself and the Southern Company and such other company or companies as may at the time have the right to use the same; provided that such admission of any other railway company to the right to use such Section or any part thereof shall not materially obstruct or interfere with the Southern Company in the fair and reasonable enjoyment of the rights herein granted or leased to it.

SECTION 6. All engines, trains and cars operated by the Southern Company shall be regarded for all purposes of this agreement as the engines, trains and cars of the Southern Company. All engines, trains and cars operated by any Grantor, or the successors, assigns or lessees of any Grantor for the time being in possession or control of the Section of such Grantor, shall be regarded for all purposes of this agreement as the engines, trains and cars of such Grantor.

SECTION 7. The Grantors shall furnish all water required for the operation of engines and trains upon the Joint Line, and the cost and expense of furnishing such water, including a charge of one-half cent per ton of two thousand pounds for each mile that such water shall be hauled, shall be included in the cost and expense of maintaining and operating the Joint Line, in respect of which the Southern Company shall contribute a share, as provided in clause (C) of Section 2 of Article II. hereof.

SECTION 8. Each of the parties shall furnish its own fuel oil or coal for the operation of its engines upon the Joint Line. The Southern Company shall be entitled to establish, maintain 1645 and operate its own fuel oil tanks or coal bunkers at points upon the Joint Line to be designated by the respective Grantors for supplying its engines operated on the Joint Line with fuel oil or coal necessary for the operation thereof; but in case the Southern Company so establishes, maintains and operates its own fuel oil tanks or coal bunkers, it shall not be required to pay interest, taxes, rental or a share of the cost of maintaining or operating the fuel oil tanks or coal bunkers of the Grantors.

SECTION 9. A proportion of the cost and expense of maintaining and operating the telegraph lines upon the Joint Line, bearing the same ratio to the total cost and expense of maintaining and operating the telegraph lines upon the Joint Line as the number of wires used in joint service bears to the total number of wires strung on the telegraph poles, shall be included in the cost and expense of maintaining and operating the Joint Line, and the Southern Company shall be entitled to the use and benefit of such telegraph service in the operation of its trains, engines and cars upon the Joint Line.

SECTION 10. Each party shall be entitled to operate upon the Joint Line such helper-engines as shall be required for the operation of the trains of such party upon any portion of the Joint Line.

ARTICLE IV.

SECTION 1. All rentals or other sums payable under any of the provisions of this agreement by the Southern Company to any of the Grantors shall be payable at the office of the Atchison 1646 Company, in the City of Los Angeles, California. In case any rental or other sum payable hereunder shall not be duly paid on or before the date when the same shall be payable, as herein provided, such sum shall bear interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum from the date when the same became payable until the same shall be duly paid, whether or not the party to whom such sum was payable shall exercise its right and privilege under Article V. hereof to terminate this agreement.

SECTION 2. The Arizona Company and the Prescott Company hereby severally and respectively authorize and direct the Southern Company to pay to the Atchison Company all rentals and other sums which under the terms of this agreement shall be payable to them or either of them, and agree that the receipt of the Atchison Company for any sum so paid to it by the Southern Company shall bind them respectively as a full acquittance and discharge in respect of the sum so paid; but every such authority and direction may be revoked by the Arizona Company or the Prescott Company by giving notice in writing of such revocation to the Southern Company or by executing an assignment or lease of its Section of the Joint Line, vesting in the assignee or lessee the right to receive such rentals or other sums and by causing notice in writing of the execution of such assignment or lease to be given to the Southern Company. The Atchison Company hereby agrees with the Arizona Company and the Prescott Company to account to them respectively for any and all sums paid by the Southern Company hereunder for account of the Arizona Company and the Prescott Company, or either of them; but the Southern Company shall not be responsible for any 1647 failure of the Atchison Company so to account for any sum paid to it by the Southern Company.

SECTION 3. The Southern Company may serve upon the Atchison Company all notices and demands which under this agreement are required or authorized to be served upon the Grantors or any of them, and such service upon the Atchison Company shall in all respects bind the Grantors and each of them, with the same effect as if served upon each of the Grantors; and the Atchison Company shall have authority and power on behalf of the Grantors and each of them to serve upon the Southern Company all notices and demands which under this agreement are required or authorized to be served by the Grantors or any of them upon the Southern Company. Nevertheless, any Grantor may revoke such authority as to it by giving notice in writing of such revocation to Southern Company and thereafter such notices and demands shall be served upon and be served by such Grantor directly. All notices and demands herein authorized or required to be given to any party shall be given by serving the same upon the President or a Vice-President or General Manager of such party.

SECTION 4. If and so long as any one of the Grantors shall operate more than one of said Sections of the Joint Line then all such Sections so operated by one Grantor shall be treated together as one combined Section. Such combined Section shall be deemed to be of a value equal to the aggregate of the separate values of the several sections combined and the charges in respect of the rental, taxes and cost and expenses of repairing, maintaining and operating the combined section shall be fixed according to the car mileage upon 1648 such combined section taken together.

ARTICLE V.

SECTION 1. If the Southern Company shall fail to perform or to comply with any of the covenants or conditions to be performed or complied with by it under this agreement and such failure shall continue for a period of thirty days after written demand for performance or compliance shall have been made upon the Southern Company by the Grantors, or either or any of them, coupled with notice in writing that the parties or party giving such notice elect to put an end to the term hereby granted on account of such failure of the Southern Company to perform or comply with such covenant or condition, then the term hereby created and all rights of the Southern Company shall forthwith cease and terminate, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding; but no such termination shall deprive any of the parties hereto of the right to enforce any liability of any other of the parties hereto that shall have accrued prior to such termination of the term. Provided, however, that if the Southern Company, within thirty days after the receipt of any statement rendered to it hereunder by any Grantor shall give notice in writing to such Grantor that it contests the correctness of any specified item or items in such statement and shall pay to such Grantor all sums due to it other than the item or items so specified and also shall pay on account of such specified item or items such part thereof as shall not be contested and further shall furnish such Grantor (if demanded by it) reasonable security for the payment of the item or items or parts of items contested, then so long as the Southern Company in good faith shall contest the correctness 1649 of such item or items or parts of items specified in such notice, the term hereunder and the rights of the Southern Company shall not be terminated under this Section 1 of Article V. by reason of the failure of the Southern Company to pay or allow in full such item or items so contested.

SECTION 2. If for any cause other than its own failure to perform or comply with the terms and conditions of this agreement the Southern Company should be deprived of or lose the right to operate its trains, engines or cars under this agreement upon any Section of the Joint Line, then and in that event the term hereby created shall forthwith cease and terminate as to the entire Joint Line, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

SECTION 3. If the Southern Company should fail to perform and comply with any of the covenants or conditions of said contract, bearing date the tenth day of December, 1906, between the Atchison Company and the Southern Company, and such failure should continue for the period of sixty days after the Atchison Company shall have served upon the Southern Company written demand to perform or comply with such covenant or condition, then and in that event, at the election of the Atchison Company, to be expressed in a written notice of such election served by the Atchison Company upon the Southern Company, the term hereby created and all rights of the Southern Company hereunder shall forthwith cease and terminate, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

SECTION 4. In case after the execution of the trackage contract referred to as Schedule C in the said contract dated the 1650 seventh day of December, 1906, the said trackage contract between the Southern Company and the Atchison Company, should be terminated by the Atchison Company, its successors or assigns, by reason of any default or failure of any of the parties to such trackage contract to perform or comply with the terms and conditions thereof, or in case the Atchison Company, its successors or assigns, for any cause other than its or their default or failure to perform and comply with the terms and conditions of said trackage contract, should be deprived of or lose the right to operate its or their trains, engines and cars upon the terms and conditions of said contract upon said line extending from a point of connection with Section C of the Joint Line, herein mentioned, to a point of connection with the main line of the Atchison Company at Deming then and in any such event, at the election of the Atchison Company, to be expressed in a written notice of such election to be given by the Atchison Company to the Southern Company, the term hereby created and all rights of the Southern Company to use the Joint Line shall forthwith cease and terminate, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

Article VI.

Section 1. The Grantors shall be bound to use only reasonable and customary care, skill and diligence in maintaining and repairing the roadway, tracks, structures and appliances of and pertaining to the Joint Line.

The Southern Company shall not, by reason of any defect in any such roadway, track, structure or appliances, or by 1651 reason of the failure or neglect of the Grantors to repair such defect, have or make against the Grantors any claim or demand for any loss, damage, or injury whatsoever arising from such defect, neglect or failure; but in case the Grantors shall fail to repair any such defect as aforesaid within a reasonable time after the Southern Company shall have given to the Grantors written notice specifying the defect and requesting that it be repaired, then the Southern Company shall have the right to make the necessary repairs at once, and the Grantors shall and will pay the cost thereof, which shall thereupon be apportioned between the parties as hereinbefore provided.

Section 2. Except enginemen and trainmen in revenue train service, all employes of the Grantors in any wise engaged in maintaining, repairing or operating the Joint Line shall, as between the parties hereto, be deemed joint employes of both parties; but while performing any service for or on behalf of said Grantors or the Southern Company upon such section shall be regarded and held for the time being the employes solely of the party for whom or in whose behalf such service is performed.

Section 3. The Southern Company hereby assumes all risks of all loss, damage or injury which shall in any manner occur in and upon any track, building or premises, the use whereof is herein granted, whether to property of the Southern Company or to property in its custody, or to its passengers or to its employes, or which third persons or the property of third persons shall suffer by reason of the movement of any engine, car or train of the Southern Company in all respects as if the Southern Company had then been in exclusive use and control of such track, building, or premises, excepting only 1652 such loss, damage or injury as shall be caused by the negligence of the employes solely of the Grantors; and, excepting only as aforesaid, the Southern Company hereby agrees to save the Grantors harmless from all such loss, damage and injury, from all liability and claim therefor and from all consequent costs and expenses.

SECTION 4. Each party hereto hereby agrees to save the other party harmless from all loss, damage and injury caused by the negligence of its own sole employes, from all liability and claim therefor, and from all consequent cost and expenses.

SECTION 5. The parties hereto expressly covenant and agree that in case of a collision between their respective engines, cars or trains while on any of the premises aforesaid, the party whose employes are alone in fault shall be solely responsible for, and shall settle and pay for, the entire loss and damage caused thereby, and shall so save the other party harmless therefrom; and that in case any such collision is caused by the fault of the employes of both parties or by the fault of any joint employe or employes, or in case the cause of the collision is so concealed that it cannot be determined whose employe or employes are at fault, each party shall bear and pay all the loss, damage and injury which its own property or property in its custody, or its employes or passengers may have suffered in consequence thereof.

SECTION 6. All liability for damages to persons or property accruing in connection with the maintenance or operation of the joint line from any cause except as herein otherwise provided, shall be 1653 apportioned and paid by the parties in the same proportions
as the cost and expense of operating the section of the joint line upon which the accident or damage occurred during or for the month during which such accident or damage happened.

SECTION 7. In case any of the Southern Company's trains shall be wrecked while running on the joint line such wreck may be picked up and removed by the grantors, and the cost of such service shall, except as herein otherwise expressly provided, be borne and paid by the Southern Company.

SECTION 8. Each of the parties hereto who under the terms and provisions of this agreement is to be liable for or is to bear any liability, loss, damage, cost, charge or expense, or by reason of whose acts or omissions any penalty may be imposed upon any other party, shall and will indemnify and save harmless the other parties from and against such loss, damage, cost, charge, expense or penalties and from all liability therefor.

If a judgment shall be recovered against any of the parties hereto on account of any liability which either of the other parties under the provisions of this agreement should bear or satisfy in whole or in part, then such last-mentioned party shall on demand of the party against whom such judgment was recovered, promptly repay to it any moneys which it may have paid or have been required to pay, on account of such liability, together with the costs, fees and other expenses occurred in defending such suit, or a proportionate share of such costs, fees and other expenses if such liability is to be divided between them.

No party hereto shall be concluded by any judgment or de-1654 cree at law or in equity against any other party hereto unless it had reasonable notice from such other party requiring it to appear in the suit in which such judgment or decree was rendered and to make defence thereto for its own account, or jointly with the party against which such judgment or decree was rendered. If such notice shall have been given and the party receiving the same shall have failed to appear and make defence it shall be concluded by the judgment or decree in such suit.

SECTION 9. Each Grantor may make settlement of claims for deaths or injuries to persons and for loss of or damage to property to which such Grantor and the Southern Company are to be jointly liable hereunder, except that in case the Southern Company shall give notice in writing to any Grantor of objection to such settlement by the Grantor of any claim, or class of claims, then such Grantor shall not voluntarily pay or settle any such claim so objected to, at a cost in excess of $500 for each claim paid or settled, without first obtaining the written consent of the Southern Company. Upon making a voluntary settlement, as aforesaid, each Grantor shall procure from the claimant a release to the Southern Company from liability on account of such claim.

SECTION 10. If traffic over or upon any Section of the Joint Line or any business thereon shall at any time be interrupted or delayed for any cause other than the willful act of such Grantor or of the Southern Company, then and in such case neither of the parties shall have any claim against the other for loss or damage of any kind caused by or resulting from such interruption or delay.

ARTICLE VII.

The Southern Company agrees that, unless compelled by 1655 law to do so, it will not carry on its trains, engines or cars upon the Joint Line any passengers or other persons, freight or other property, except freight and passengers carried in one continuous passage upon the same train the entire distance between Phoenix, Arizona, and said point of connection at Mojave with the railroad of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company.

In case at any time during the term hereof the Southern Company shall carry on any of its trains, engines or cars any passengers or other persons, freight or other property other than freight and passengers carried in one continuous passage upon the same train the entire distance between Phoenix and said point of connection at Mojave, the Southern Company shall, on or before the 15th day of the following calendar month, render to the Grantors a statement in writing specifying the number of passengers or other persons, and the freight or other property so carried and the place upon the Joint Line where received and the place where discharged from such engines, trains or cars, and shall at the same time pay to each Grantor seventy (70) per cent. of its then existing local tariff rates for similar transportation upon its Section. If such business be the carrying of mail, the Southern Company shall pay to the respective Grantors seventy (70) per cent. of all revenue received from the carrying of such mail upon the portion of the Joint Line upon which it shall have been carried by the Southern Company, and, if such business be the carrying of express matter, it shall pay to the respective Grantors seventy (70) per cent. of the then existing local tariff rates of the Company at the time doing express business upon 1656 the Joint Line for similar transportation of such express matter. However, the foregoing provision and the receipt by the respective Grantors of compensation for any such business originating at or destined to points upon the Joint Line shall not deprive the Grantors or any of them of any rights they may have against the Southern Company by reason of any such transportation in violation of the terms of this agreement.

Nothing in this Article contained shall be construed as prohibiting the Southern Company from receiving or discharging at points upon the Joint Line its own employees, and property to be employed or used solely in the operation of its trains, engines or cars upon the Joint Line, or from setting out and thereafter picking up freight-cars to regulate tonnage of trains or to effect repairs, but such transportation of employees and property shall be permitted to the Southern Company, and it shall not be required to make any payment to the Grantors therefor under this Article VII.

Article VIII.

In case any disagreement shall arise between the Southern Company and the Grantors, or any of them, as to any matter arising under this agreement, then, upon the request of either the Southern Company, or such Grantors or Grantor with whom such disagreement shall have arisen, the matter in difference shall be submitted to three arbitrators, one of whom shall be appointed by the Southern Company, one by such Grantors or Grantor, and the third by the two so appointed. The decision of such arbitrators or any two of 1657 them, given after a hearing of which the parties to such agreement shall have been duly notified, and at which they shall have been given an opportunity to be heard, shall be final and binding upon the parties as to the matter or matters submitted for arbitration; and each of said parties agrees that forthwith, upon the rendering of such decision or award, it will perform and comply with the requirements thereof.

Article IX.

This agreement shall enure in favor of and shall be binding upon the successors, assigns and lessees of each Grantor for the time being in possession of and operating such Grantor's Section of the Joint Line; but the Southern Company shall not have power to assign, transfer or sublet this agreement or any rights thereunder.

In witness whereof, each of the parties hereto has caused this instrument to be executed in four uniform originals by its President or

Vice-President and its corporate seal to be hereunto affixed and attested by its Secretary or Assistant Secretary the day and year first above written.

1658 FRANK M. MURPHY,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Map of Union Pacific and Southern Pacific systems, 1908, marked Complainant's Exhibit 107 (Murphy).

Mr. SEVERANCE. Complainant's Exhibit 107, being a map produced by defendants, may be used by agreement——

Mr. LOVETT. No, I don't want that to go in.

Mr. SEVERANCE. What do you want?

Mr. LOVETT. You may introduce the map and I will not make any objection to it, but I do not want to agree to it at this time. I do not object to it and I do not agree to it. I don't want to make any agreement about it at this time. If you want me to testify, I will testify about it. I will not do anything beyond that.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Very well, I think you had better, Judge. I want to use this map. I will call you as a witness but you need not be sworn. Mr. Lovett, what is Complainant's Exhibit 107?

Mr. LOVETT. It is a copy of a map published by the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific Railroad companies in connection with their annual report for the year ending June 30, 1908. I do not know anything about its accuracy. That is all I know about the map.

Mr. SEVERANCE. And it purports to show the railroad lines that appear thereon, but you do not know whether they are 1659 absolutely correct or not?

Mr. LOVETT. It speaks for itself as to what it purports to show. It is distributed as part of the annual report of each of these companies.

Complainant's Exhibit 107 was introduced in evidence by Mr. Severance, and faces this page.

Mr. MURPHY was then examined as follows:

Q. Mr. Murphy, where do you live?

A. Prescott, Arizona.

Q. How long have you lived in Prescott, Arizona?

A. 30 years.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am interested in a number of enterprises in a small way, in railroading, mining, merchandizing, and a few other things.

Q. How many years have you been engaged in railroading?

A. I think it was about 1893, somewhere along there, that I was elected president of the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix road.

Q. The Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix road runs from what point to what point?

A. Ash Fork on the line of the Santa Fe Pacific to Phoenix, Arizona.

Q. The Santa Fe Pacific is a part of the main transcontinental line of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, isn't it?

A. Not part of the main line; it is part of the Santa Fe system, but it is not in the main line, the through road.

Q. I do not mean your road. I say the Santa Fe Pacific.

A. Oh! Yes, sir.

Q. The main transcontinental line of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe starts from Chicago, doesn't it?

A. So I understand, yes, sir.

Q. And goes through to what point?

A. Los Angeles and San Francisco, I believe.

1660 Q. And San Diego?

A. And San Diego.

Q. And the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix is a line of road starting at Ash Fork, a station on the transcontinental line, running in a southerly direction through Prescott to Phoenix; that is right, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. Who built that line?

A. Well, I was president of it during most of its construction.

Q. And you are still president of that line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What company owns the stock of the line?

A. The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe own it now.

Q. How many years have they owned it?

A. Since 1901, I think.

Q. Is it operated in connection with the trains of the Santa Fe?

A. Yes, sir, but as a separate company.

Q. As a separate organization?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are still the president?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But controlled by the Santa Fe through stock ownership?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the length of that line?

A. About 190 miles since we have made some alterations; somewhere in the neighborhood of 195 or 196 miles.

Q. What lines of railroad other than the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix reach Phoenix, Arizona?

A. The Southern Pacific, the Maricopa & Phoenix, I believe it is called.

Q. Is that a branch of the Southern Pacific?

A. That is a branch of the Southern Pacific.

Q. Owned by the Southern Pacific.

A. As I understand it.

1661 Q. That is not on the main line of the Southern Pacific, then?

A. No, sir.

Q. How far is it down to Maricopa, a station on the main line of the Southern Pacific?

A. I think 34 miles.

Q. Are through trains run from Phoenix to Los Angeles?

A. No, sir.

Q. Through sleepers?

A. No, sir, not that I know of, unless they just put on a sleeper.

Q. Is freight from the East and from the West handled by the Southern Pacific into Phoenix over this little line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are there any other railroads in Phoenix with the exception of the road of which you are president, which you say is a branch of the Santa Fe and this branch of the Southern Pacific?

A. The Phoenix & Eastern runs in there now or runs out of there.

Q. Where does the Phoenix & Eastern run from and to what point does it reach?

A. It runs from Phoenix to a point on the Gila River, known as Dudleyville or Winkleman, a junction of the San Pedro River, where the San Pedro River enters into the Gila.

Q. Who caused the incorporation of the Phoenix and Eastern?

A. I did.

Q. How long ago?

A. 1901.

Q. When was the construction started upon that line?

A. Do you mean the surveys or when it was actually constructed?

Q. Yes, when were the first surveys made?

1662 A. Early in 1901 I had the first preliminary survey made.

Q. To what point?

A. From Phoenix to Benson; by the way of Tempe and Mesa and Florence and San Pedro River to Benson.

Q. Where is Benson? On what railroad or railroads is it situated?

A. Southern Pacific.

Q. What other railroad, if any?

A. The Sonora Railroad runs from Benson to Guaymas. I don't know as Sonora Railroad is the full title of that road.

Q. That is what it is called.

A. I think there is something more to it, but I am not familiar with it.

Q. Is that a Southern Pacific line to Guaymas?

A. Yes, sir, I believe so now.

Q. When was that purchased by the Southern Pacific?

A. Oh, I don't know exactly, but I should think somewhere about 1896; somewhere along there, as nearly as I can remember.

Q. What other road is there at Benson except the main line of the Southern Pacific and this road to Guaymas?

A. The El Paso & Southwestern terminates there.

Q. Between what points does that road run?

A. Benson to El Paso, and into New Mexico. I don't know just how much road they have, I am sure. They have a road also down into Mexico.

Q. Is that a Southern Pacific road?

A. I think not.

Q. Who are the controlling people in the El Paso and South-Western?

A. Phelps Dodge Mining interests, I think, Copper Queen interests.

Q. Where is the Copper Queen mine located?

A. At Bisbee.

Q. At Bisbee, Arizona?

A. Bisbee, Arizona.

1663 Q. Does the El Paso & Southwestern reach Bisbee?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there any other road to Bisbee?

A. No, sir.

Q. Where are the Copper Queen smelters?

A. At Douglas.

Q. How far is that from Bisbee?

A. I should think 20 or 25 miles, something like that; I am not quite sure.

Q. What road is that on?

A. On the El Paso & Southwestern road.

Q. Are there other mines at Bisbee than the Copper Queen?

A. Yes, a good many.

Q. How large a town is Bisbee?

A. I think they claim about 17,000 people.

Q. That is a mining town?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are there other smelters at Douglas aside from the Copper Queen?

A. Yes, Calumet & Arizona.

Q. At El Paso what lines does the El Paso & Southwestern connect with?

A. Well, a number of roads running in there; the Santa Fe, and the Southern Pacific, and the Texas Pacific, and the Rock Island. I guess that is all the eastern roads.

Q. That is what I mean—the eastern roads.

A. Yes.

Q. Then, this road runs from Benson, Arizona, through Mexico?

A. To El Paso.

Q. To El Paso, Texas?

A. To El Paso, Texas, and up into New Mexico. They have their own lines up to their coal mines, you know.

Q. And at El Paso connects with the lines to the east, that you have mentioned?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With what lines does it connect to the west from Benson?

A. The Southern Pacific.

1664 Q. Any other?

A. No, there is not any other.

Q. Now, you say you had the Phoenix & Eastern surveyed from Phoenix out by Winkleman and the San Pedro Valley to Benson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much of that line was ever constructed?

A. About 96 miles.

Q. After you projected that line did you continue to control it or did you sell that out to someone else?

A. Well, I built that 96 miles finally in the interests of the Santa Fe.

Q. Of the Santa Fe?

A. Yes. First the company was incorporated and organized by myself independent of the Santa Fe, but the road was constructed in the interests of the Santa Fe—96 miles.

Q. And owned by them?

A. Yes, sir, through their stock interests in the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix, and the contract arrangements that the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix had with the Phoenix & Eastern.

Q. There was introduced in evidence here a few minutes ago an agreement, which was marked Complainant's Exhibit 104, between the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Company and the Southern Pacific, under which agreement it appears this Phoenix & Eastern was sold to the Southern Pacific.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Atchison owned it up to that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was dated December 7, 1906?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Murphy, in addition to building this 96 miles of road toward Benson, what was done toward acquiring rights of way, or other work of that character, down to Benson?

1665 A. I think we had the right of way secured for the entire distance to Benson.

Q. How did you get it?

A. Some of it was given to us and portions of it were purchased.

Q. What is the distance from the terminus of the line as constructed to Benson?

A. I think about 85 or 88 miles, something like that: I am not quite clear about that.

Q. What, if anything, did the Phoenix & Eastern do toward securing terminals in Benson?

A. We got the citizens there to buy some ground that gave us the right to get through providing we experienced difficulties in making satisfactory arrangements in crossing the Southern Pacific and in making our connections with the El Paso & Southwestern.

Q. Was any arrangement entered into between the Phoenix & Eastern and the El Paso & Southwestern with reference to business?

A. When I first incorporated the company I had an understanding with the El Paso & Southwestern. That was before the Santa Fe had anything to do with it.

Q. What kind of an understanding?

A. As to an exchange of traffic and a concession in favor of the Short Line that was on a mileage basis. I disremember the details of the understanding, but it was a favorable arrangement to encourage the construction of the road. They wanted the western outlet.

Q. Was that agreement in writing?

A. It was in the shape of a letter, or memorandum and correspondence.

Q. Do you know where that correspondence is?

1666 A. I think possibly I might find it. I don't know just where to look for it. It is probably among my papers in Arizona.

Q. You keep an office here in New York, don't you?

A. Yes; not a railroad office, though.

Mr. LOVETT. The defendants object to all the testimony of this witness about the understanding with the El Paso & Southwestern and himself respecting the interchange of traffic at Benson, because it appears that whatever understanding existed is evidenced in writing, and the writing is the best evidence.

Q. Mr. Murphy, in addition to surveying your line, securing right of way into Benson and building the road that you did build, did you make any surveys for any other line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To what point?

A. To Lordsburg and practically to Deming.

Q. Where is Lordsburg? What territory or state?

A. It is in New Mexico. It is just over the line out of Arizona. It is on the Southern Pacific line, about 60 miles west of Deming.

Q. 60 miles from Deming?

A. Yes. About 60 miles from Deming; in open country there.

Q. That is an open country?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you surveyed into Deming?

A. Well, only in the shape of a reconnaissance, because it was an open country, and our idea was that we would utilize Southern Pacific tracks there instead of running right alongside of them if we built to that point.

1667 Q. Lordsburg is how far from the present terminus of the Phoenix & Eastern?

A. About 180 or 185 miles.

Q. That would be, then, about 240 miles from Deming?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT. What is?

Mr. SEVERANCE. The present terminus.

Mr. LOVETT. Dudleyville?

Q. The terminus of the Phoenix & Eastern is what?

A. Winkelman, I believe it is called, or the town of Dudleyville. Where the San Pedro enters the Gila is called Dudleyville, and the town of the terminus of the railroad, I think, is called Winkelman.

Q. When did you commence construction of the Phoenix & Eastern—actual construction work?

A. The first grading was done, I think, in February, 1902.

Q. When was the line completed to its present terminus?

A. I think in 1904.

Q. Do you remember what time of the year?

A. Along in the fall.

Q. In the fall of 1904?

A. Yes, sir, as I remember it.

Q. What kind of country is there between Winkelman or Dudleyville (whichever you may call it) and Benson, to build a railroad through?

A. In the western territory we call it very easy country to build a railroad into.

Q. Did you have estimates made as to the cost of concluding that line down to Benson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much would it cost a mile?

A. The kind of a road that we were going to build I think 1668 about $20,000 a mile.

Q. What kind of country did you have to build through in getting east to Deming?

A. Very rough country, very canyony country, a portion of it. A portion of it was very good, but there was some very heavy work.

Q. You have in there, haven't you, what is called the Gila canyon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long is it?

A. I should think that heavy work covered in the neighborhood of 12 or 15 miles. I am not quite sure as to that from memory.

Q. Is there any road through the Gila canyon?

A. Railroad?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir.

Q. I find in these contracts a reference to a line running west from the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where does that line start and to what point has it been constructed?

A. That leaves the main line of the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix at a point about 6 miles north of the town of Wickenburg.

Q. Wickenburg is which way from Prescott?

A. South.

Q. And north of Phoenix?

A. And north of Phoenix.

Q. What has been done toward the construction of that line west from Wickenburg?

A. We completed about 110 miles of it, built our bridge across the Colorado River.

Q. How large a bridge is that?

A. It is quite a large bridge. I don't quite call to mind the exact length of it. It cost us, I know, $600,000 or $700,000. I don't remember just the dimensions of the bridge.

1669 Q. What is the prospective terminus of that road on the west?

A. Bengal, as surveyed.

Q. On what line of road is Bengal?

A. The Santa Fe.

Q. On the main line?

A. On the main line of the Santa Fe.

Q. Is that road now under construction?

A. No, sir, not at this moment. We are doing more or less work. We kind of slowed down during last year.

Q. On account of the hard times? [The witness laughs.]

Q. When did you finish your bridge?

A. We got across the bridge last June, I think.

Q. That is, 1908?

A. Yes.

Q. You haven't abandoned the construction of it?

A. Oh, not at all. I look to see the road completed at a reasonably early day.

Q. What is the nature of that road as to being low-grade or difficult of operation—steep grades, and all that?

A. Well, of course, that was one of the attractive features of it. There are really no grades on the line of more than $\frac{6}{10}$ of one per cent other than a few miles about half way between the point it leaves the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix and the Colorado River, and there is a little double maximum there for a very short distance. We figure on having a $\frac{6}{10}$ of one per cent grade all the way through.

Q. How is the grade of the Phoenix & Eastern?

A. That is a water grade line. That would average not to exceed $\frac{6}{10}$ of one per cent.

Q. How about the proposed line from the present terminus of the Phoenix & Eastern through to Deming?

1670 A. To Deming would be about $\frac{6}{10}$ of one per cent.

Q. All the way from Phoenix to Deming?

A. Yes, all the way through.

Q. How is it from Phoenix to a point on the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix, where this new line to the west leaves the——

A. There is a very little strip in there in which we would have to make some changes to bring it down to probably $\frac{3}{4}$ of one per cent, but that only covers a few miles. That whole line was laid out on the basis of getting a $\frac{6}{10}$ of one per cent line practically clear through to connection with the Santa Fe.

Q. Now, you stated that the Santa Fe is into Deming?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where does it go from Deming?

A. They have a line to El Paso, then up the Rio Grande River to Albuquerque and on east over the Glorieta Mountains, and so on; and now they have through Trinidad, and they now have their Belen cut-off that comes in some 30 miles south of Albuquerque, I believe. I am not quite sure about the distance in there.

Q. Mr. Murphy, the present main line of the Santa Fe road runs from Chicago to Kansas City, from there westerly through Kansas and southwestern Colorado, thence over the Raton Pass and the Glorieta Pass, on through Albuquerque, and so on through Arizona, and crosses the Colorado River at the Needles, doesn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there a good deal of mountain climbing on that road?

A. Yes, sir; two mountain divides to go over.

Q. You go over the Raton Pass, the Glorieta Pass, and then 1671 you also go over what is called the Continental Divide, don't you?

A. Yes, sir; that is west of Albuquerque.

Q. And then isn't there a lot of climbing down around Flagstaff?

A. Yes, there is a good deal of adverse grade in there.

Q. In looking at their folder I see that they show altitudes on the map.

A. Yes.

Q. How about this cut-off you speak of? That, you say, leaves the Santa Fe line running south from Albuquerque, about 30 miles south of there?

A. About 30 miles I should think it is. I would not be quite sure of the distance.

Q. At what place does it leave the line south of Albuquerque?

A. That cut takes off from the road that runs to Deming. The main line goes through Albuquerque, and the line to Deming runs from Albuquerque down the Rio Grande to El Paso, and to Deming, and about 30 miles south of there is where this Belen cut-off comes in from out in Kansas and crosses this Rio Grande road division, and picks up the Santa Fe again at a certain distance out in New Mexico; leaves out Albuquerque altogether.

Q. It goes west of Albuquerque?

A. Yes—south of Albuquerque.

Q. South of Albuquerque. By west, I mean toward California, on the main line?

A. Yes, where it connects up with the Santa Fe line. I don't know the distance exactly.

Q. What is the grade or the character of the line of this Belen cut-off? Is that a high-grade or a low-grade road?

A. That was constructed for a low-grade line, and is a low-grade line. I don't know the details of it, but I do not think they have anything on there to exceed one per cent, and I don't know as 1672 they have anything that is one per cent grade. The Santa Fe people can give you that information better than I can.

Q. How does that line compare with the line over the Raton Pass?

A. Oh, it is entirely different. It is a low-grade line. It was built for them to avoid those heavy mountain climbs.

Q. That line leaves the main line of the Santa Fe where, on the east?

A. Somewhere in Kansas: I don't remember the point.

Q. What is the fact as to this Santa Fe line from Chicago to Deming? Is that a low-grade line all the way?

A. Yes, sir; so considered now since they have got their Belen cut-off in.

Q. That is what I mean, since the Belen cut-off was built?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT. That is from Chicago to Deming?

WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Q. All the way from Chicago to Deming the Santa Fe does not have to climb over a mountain, does it?

A. No, sir; not what we call mountains.

Q. What is the distance from the Needles to Bengal, where it is proposed to connect up this line that is under consideration?

A. 90 miles, I think.

Q. 90 miles west of Needles?

A. 90 miles west of Parker, where it crosses the river.

Q. West of Parker?

A. Yes.

Q. How far is that from Needles?

A. I should imagine it is possibly a hundred miles or such a matter. From Needles they climb out of the river-bottom and go over a divide, which we avoid by going from Parker.

Q. That is what I want to get at. Then, Mr. Murphy, if this 1673 Phoenix & Eastern had been constructed on up to Deming, on the line that you surveyed, what would have been the character of the Santa Fe's line to California from Chicago by way of the Belen cut-off and Deming, from Phoenix, Parker, and Bengal?

A. They would have had a low-grade line all the way through with the exception of their little drop-off in California, down to San Bernardino, that they could not overcome.

Q. They strike the present through line east of that, don't they?

A. Yes, sir; some distance east of Barstow.

Q. But the Santa Fe line through that way, instead of climbing over mountains, as it does in the present route, would be low-grade line all the way to California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was or was it not contemplated at the time you were constructing the Phoenix & Eastern that you would build up through the gap there to Deming?

A. Yes, sir, we did intend to do it.

Q. Now, what would be the distance from Chicago to California by that low-grade line as compared with the present main line of the Santa Fe? What would be the difference?

Mr. LOVETT. From Chicago to where?

Mr. SEVERANCE. To California, to the junction at Bengal. What would be the difference?

A. As compared with the new cut-off or their main line, I suppose anywhere from 125 to 150 miles longer, probably; something like that. I haven't the exact figures. I would have to look them up.

Q. The low grade line around by the Belen cut-off and Deming and around that way would be perhaps 125 to 150 miles longer 1674 than the present line?

A. Something like that, I should think.

Q. How would it compare with the present line, taking into account both the grades and the distance, as a line over which to move through traffic?

A. There is no comparison, in my judgment.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. I mean that the low-grade lines we are talking about would be far superior.

Q. In spite of the distance?

A. Yes, it would be by far the best low grade line, in my judgment, to the Pacific coast.

Q. To the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir; in my judgment.

Q. And in that comparison do you include the Southern and the Union Pacific and the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Murphy, after you got to work constructing that line toward the east from Phoenix, did you have any difficulty of any sort?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Outside of the natural difficulties of constructing a railroad?

A. We had a good deal of difficulty.

Q. What was the nature of it?

A. Well, there was contention for the country.

Q. Contention with whom for the country?

A. I think we were interrupted or interfered with by an organization known as the Arizona Eastern Railroad Company.

Q. Who owned that?

A. I believe the Southern Pacific.

Q. How did that interrupt you or interfere with you? Just state in general how it was done.

A. Well, we built about 80 miles of road there uninterruptedly, and about the time we completed the survey through the can-
1675 yon to Deming it seems the Arizona Eastern was incorporated; and one day, very much to our surprise, we found a whole lot of graders had been shipped in across the country in some way, that were put up on the side of the mountain above us, and blasted rocks down on our work, taking possession of our right of way.

Q. What happened then?

A. We enjoined them, and then we had it rough-and-tumble from that time until——.

Q. What was the result of the injunction suit?

A. The grand wind-up was that our rights were sustained in the supreme court of the territory and we were left in quiet and peaceful possession of the road as far as Dudleyville. In the meantime other parties had appropriated the canyon above and did a lot of work up in there, and while we were occupying that position the understanding referred to in this agreement was reached and the road was turned over to the Southern Pacific.

Q. How long did that litigation last?

A. Oh, I should judge a good portion of a year.

Q. Why was that road turned over to the Southern Pacific, if you know?

A. That I don't know of my own knowledge. I don't know whether the Santa Fe got tired of fighting or not.

Mr. LOVETT. The defendants object (as the witness says he does not know of his own knowledge) to any guesses on the proposition.

Q. Where was that deal made by which this road that you were constructing through there was turned over to the Southern Pacific?

A. In New York, I believe.

1676 Q. Who made it?

A. The Santa Fe officials here.

Q. Who? Do you know what individuals?

A. I think probably their Executive Committee in connection with it. I imagine, Mr. Morawetz, at that time the chairman of the board, or the general counsel. I don't remember, but I suppose he——

Q. Now, weren't you on here in New York frequently during those negotiations?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much of your time do you spend in New York?

A. I spend now about pretty near half of my time here, coming and going. I am not here continuously half the time.

Q. During the progress of those negotiations weren't you consulted about them?

A. Not very much. Occasionally I got a little inkling of what was going on, but I was not a party to the negotiations at all.

Q. You, yourself, never had any conversation with any Southern Pacific people about it?

A. No, sir; no, not in connection with the contract arrangement at all.

Q. Well, in connection with the construction of that road did you ever have any conversation with any of the Southern Pacific people?

A. Oh, I presume likely I have had some time or other. Yes, I know I have, because I sent the chief engineer down—you mean here in New York?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I did not, unless I might happen to have met some of the officials or management, but not in any way pertaining to these negotiations.

Q. Now, the Southern Pacific had its own entrance into Phoenix before they bought this line, hadn't they?

A. Yes, sir.

1677 Q. They had that little short line of 30 miles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What advantage is there to the Southern Pacific in possessing that Phoenix & Eastern running out 80 miles or so east of Phoenix, outside of preventing its construction down to Benson or to Deming?

A. Well, there is a good deal of advantage. Of course they control very large, valuable territory, that is full of very important and growing traffic.

Q. That is what I wanted to bring out. The Santa Fe are presumably out for business in that country, aren't they?

A. Well, we are working pretty hard for it.

Q. What is the nature of the country through which the Prescott & Eastern runs?

A. As far as it goes?

Q. As far as it goes, yes; just take it as far as it goes.

A. Well, a person unacquainted with the country would not think it a very inviting country from a business or traffic standpoint or any other point.

Q. But you are acquainted with the country?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, what do you say about it?

A. I say beyond question it is one of the most important sections of Arizona.

Q. For what purposes?

A. Agriculturally speaking and for the minerals. I think they have what will eventually make their larger copper-producing mines in Arizona.

Q. What about those towns that you speak of, that it runs through?

A. Tempe is an agricultural town, about 9 miles from Phoenix, and Mesa is another one—a very growing point. It is from that point that the road leaves to go out to the Roosevelt dam.

1678 Q. When was the Roosevelt dam projected?

A. About three years ago. The first conception of the scheme was ten or twelve years ago, by outsiders, but I think the Government took hold of it three years ago, or something like that—three or four years ago.

Q. The Government had taken hold of that prior to December, 1906, hadn't it?

A. Oh, yes, sir; it was well along with the work.

Q. How far from Mesa is the Roosevelt dam?

A. About 60 miles. I think it is about 60 miles.

Q. And what stream is to be dammed up by the Roosevelt dam?

A. It is at the junction of Tonto Creek with the Salt River, I believe; about the juncture of Tonto Creek and Salt River, as I remember.

Q. The Salt River is the stream that flows through Phoenix, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How is the agriculture of that country? Is it by natural rainfall or irrigation?

A. Principally irrigation.

Q. In a general way what is the extent of the development that is proposed by the Roosevelt dam?

A. I think they expect to bring under the irrigating system there something like 250 or 300 thousand acres of land, including what they will serve by the electric power they are generating out in the valley.

Mr. LOVETT. I object to all the testimony of this witness about the purposes and policy of the Government and to all his guesses and speculation about the results of the Roosevelt dam, in Arizona and California.

1679 Mr. SEVERANCE. You ought to be glad that your lines will benefit from it.

Mr. LOVETT. Yes.

Q. In view of Judge Lovett's objection I will examine you a little more in detail about that matter. The Roosevelt dam is being constructed in a canyon just below the junction of these streams you mention, isn't it?

A. Yes, I believe so.

Q. You have been there?

A. Yes, sir, I have been there.

Q. So have I.

Mr. LOVETT. I object to the leading of the witness.

Q. Now, you spoke of the development of horsepower. How much horsepower is going to be developed there, for electric lighting, etc.?

A. I would not like to say that. I could not speak definitely about it.

Q. Can you tell generally about how much?

A. I think ten or fifteen hundred thousand horse power, to hear them talk about it, but then I don't know.

Mr. LOVETT. I object to that, because the witness says he does not know.

Q. Have you paid some attention to the question of the construction of the Roosevelt dam?

A. In a general way, yes, sir.

Q. Is that something that interests you in a business way?

A. Very much.

Q. Why?

A. It means the filling up of that country with a very large population.

Q. What kind of country is that? What can be raised in this valley that it is proposed to irrigate?

A. Everything that you can raise in a semi-tropical country. They grow oranges in Salt River Valley, and they are supposed to be superior, I think, to any that are grown anywhere in the country; and from that they go into everything.

Q. What other kinds of fruit?

A. Olives, figs, dates.

Q. And pears?

A. Oh, yes, pears and peaches.

Q. What about alfalfa?

A. It is very desirable country for stock raising purposes and stock growing. Alfalfa is a great product in the valley, four or five crops a year. I am not much of a farmer.

1680 Q. Do you know where the diversion dam is being built along the Salt River below the Roosevelt dam?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far below the Roosevelt dam is that?

A. Oh, that must be about fifty miles, I should judge.

Q. What kind of a channel do they use to carry the water from where it is stored behind the Roosevelt dam down to the diversion dam?

A. They let it into the river, with the exception of what they take out for their power, as I understand it.

Q. They use the Salt River valley down to the diversion dam?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far is the diversion dam from Phoenix?

A. It is about eighteen miles: I don't know but twenty miles; I don't know.

Q. Is that diversion dam completed?

A. Yes, practically; I think it is completed, yes, and used.

Q. How is water distributed in an irrigation project of that kind?

A. Well, through their main and lateral canals.

Q. And those canals leave the river behind the diversion dam?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how much land did you say was going to be put under water by that scheme?

A. By power and all, I think between two hundred thousand and three hundred thousand acres.

Q. You say partly by power. What do you mean by that?

A. Why, they generate power and they carry it out into the valleys where they cannot reach it with their irrigating ditches, and pump the water. The water is sufficiently near the surface for them to reach it by getting cheap power.

Q. And they are putting in a big electric plant at the dam, 1681 aren't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To generate power?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, is this land that is to be reclaimed in this way by the Roosevelt dam tributary to this Phoenix & Eastern road?

A. A good portion of it; quite a good deal of it.

Q. Aside from the agricultural productions tributary to that line, what other traffic is there, or would there have been for it if it had been carried through to Benson?

A. Principally mineral—that is, the traffic that follows the development of a mining country, is created by it. There is a good deal of money—when we started to build the road there was a very large amount of money started in there, and a very large amount of development.

Q. Development in what way?

A. Opening up of their mines, prospecting, and getting ready for large operations.

Q. Along your projected line?

A. Yes, sir. There is a good deal of it going on now.

Q. Well, was that done along the line that you built, or beyond?

A. Well, some of it along the line that we built.

Q. Any beyond?

A. Yes; there is some in advance of the road, where the road is built.

Q. What is the shortest route into southern Arizona from Los Angeles at present?

A. Over the Southern Pacific.

Q. What is the great wholesaling town for that region?

A. Phoenix.

Q. I don't mean locally, but on the business that comes from some larger place.

A. Well, Los Angeles, largely.

1682 Q. Los Angeles.

A. Arizona does a great deal of business with the East, with Chicago, New York, Kansas City and St. Louis.

Q. How will the new line, the Santa Fe, when you get it completed up to Bengal, compare in length into Phoenix with the Southern Pacific?

A. There will be very little difference in the length of the line. It would afford the most direct route.

Q. The most direct route?

A. I think so, yes, sir.

Q. How would the distance into Benson, and thence to Bisbee and Douglas, and these places, by the Santa Fe line, if it had been continued down to Benson, compare with the Southern Pacific?

A. Well, it would have been considerably longer.

Q. How would it have been as to grades?

A. Well, barring one point in and about Benson, I would think probably the Southern Pacific might have the better grade. But, take that situation into account and it is possible to get a more uniform, better alignment and better grade that way into El Paso than the present line that the Southern Pacific is using, but it would be longer.

Q. That is, the Santa Fe going on in connection with the Phelps-Dodge road?

A. In connection with the El Paso and Southwestern, yes, sir.

Q. A better line?

A. Yes; considerably longer of course to get back up into the Santa Fe's territory. I do not think the Santa Fe would ever use that as a through line, around that way. I do not think the Santa Fe ever would.

Mr. LOVETT. Where is that? A through line where? Where was that through line?

1683 Mr. SEVERANCE. The line by Parker and then running on down through to Benson.

Mr. LOVETT. The line by where?

Mr. SEVERANCE. Where it crosses the Colorado at Parker and Bengal, then down by Phoenix and the line through Benson on to El Paso.

Q. Through line to where?

A. Through line to the East.

Q. That is, they would not run down and take their line back to El Paso?

A. At El Paso, and come back up north to the Belen cut-off.

Q. I see.

A. They would use the Deming line.

Q. If your line had been continued?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Murphy, you have been railroading how many years?

A. Well, in a small way since about 1890.

Q. And you are still the president of the Ash Fork line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your opinion, as a railroad man, as to whether that Phoenix and Eastern was a valuable line for the Santa Fe to have retained.

Mr. LOVETT. I object, because it has not been shown that he is competent as a railroad expert to testify as to an expert opinion.

Q. Go ahead and answer.

A. Well, I think it one of the most important connections the Santa Fe could possibly have. I have always claimed it, and believe I am right.

Q. Were you ever told by any Santa Fe officials—if so, by whom—the reason why that line was sold to the Southern Pacific?

1684 Mr. LOVETT. The defendants object to that as hearsay, and not showing that the Santa Fe official making the statement had any authority to speak for the company.

A. Why, I could not very well particularize. I understood, and it was claimed, that it was penetrating Southern Pacific territory, and that it was something that they had better give up—something to that effect. I do not know whether I am right about it or not.

Mr. LOVETT. I object to that answer because it does not even specify who said that or how he heard it.

Q. Judge Lovett objects that you have not stated who said that to you, in effect. Can you state who in substance stated that, among the Santa Fe officials?

Mr. LOVETT. I make the same objection as before.

Q. I will just add something to my question. In your answer, Mr. Murphy, you said that you had been led to understand, by some of the Santa Fe officials, that it was claimed that it was penetrating the territory of the Southern Pacific. What do you mean? Claimed by the Southern Pacific that they were penetrating their territory?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT. I object to the question and answer as hearsay.

Q. And who among the Santa Fe officials made that statement, if you remember?

A. To answer that I would have to associate with it, if I did at all, the fact that there were a good many features entering into the thing, and that that was probably one of them.

Q. What were the others?

1685 A. Well, the general relationship between the companies; and my impressions in regard to that matter were formed largely from talk I had with Mr. Morawetz.

Q. He was then chairman of the board?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or of the Executive Committee, I mean?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT. I object to what his impressions were and to all conclusions of the witness.

Q. Mr. Murphy, was that the substance of what Mr. Morawetz said to you—without repeating his words?

Mr. LOVETT. I object to that upon the same ground. It calls for the opinion of the witness.

A. In connection with the other elements that went into it, yes, sir.

Q. What other elements?

A. Well, there were some unsettled questions in Northern California that I think are referred to in this agreement, were there not? Quite a number of matters that entered into this final adjustment of this business in the turning over of the road to the Southern Pacific.

Q. In Northern California, you mean the amalgamation of the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific lines up there, do you not?

A. I think that that refers to it—that agreement. I think the agreement covers that. That would be the best evidence that I could—I would have to go there for my information.

Mr. LOVETT. I object to the answers of the witness to the last two preceding questions, because he is not purporting to state what anybody said to him, but his own inferences and conclusions from an unstated source.

1686 Q. Mr. Murphy, you were speaking a moment ago with reference to certain California lines. You mean the line by Parker to California, from Prescott; is that what you mean?

A. No, sir; I meant the roads up in Northern California.

Q. I don't see that referred to in the agreement.

A. I don't know as it is.

Q. What you mean is, they were under consideration at the same time?

A. I supposed they were. I am not very familiar with those documents; in fact I don't know that I ever read them.

Q. I think I see what you mean. There is a statement here in Article 1 of complainant's exhibit 104, referring to the sale of this company to the Southern Pacific: "Such sale shall be completed simultaneously with the execution of a certain trust agreement between the Southern Pacific, the Atchison Company and the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company, a corporation, of the State of New York," which refers to the Northern California matter.

A. These were all features, I think, that entered into that.

Q. Now, the Rock Island at present run trains through to California, do they?

A. I think so.

Q. How do they get into California, over what line?

A. Over the Southern Pacific, I think.

Q. From what point?

A. From Chicago, I believe.

Q. I know; but where do they strike the Southern Pacific?

A. At El Paso, as I understand it.

Q. Does the Texas & Pacific get to California now?

A. I don't think they run any through trains to California.

Q. But they go to El Paso?

A. I believe so.

1687 Q. If the Santa Fe had retained the Phoenix and Eastern and built the little link of 80 miles down to Benson, these lines from El Paso would have had another route through to California by trackage arrangements, wouldn't they?

A. If they cared to make it, yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT. From where? From Benson? How would they get to Benson?

Mr. SEVERANCE. Get to Benson by the El Paso and Southwestern.

Mr. LOVETT. I understood your question to be if the Atchison had kept the Phoenix and Eastern and then built it to Benson——

Mr. SEVERANCE. That is right.

Mr. LOVETT.——that it could have gotten these trains. How could it get them to Benson?

Mr. SEVERANCE. By the El Paso & Southwestern——

Mr. LOVETT. Oh, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE. ——for which he says they had a traffic arrangement made with them.

Q. Judge Lovett did not seem to quite understand what I was getting at there. As I understand, the Rock Island by going over the El Paso & Southwestern to Benson——

A. No, they go——

Q. I understand. I am speaking about what could be done if you retained that and built your little 80 miles of low grade line to Benson, the present terminus of the Phoenix & Eastern; that would have made an outlet for the Rock Island independent of the Southern Pacific over the El Paso and Southwestern to Benson, over the Santa Fe through to the coast?

1688 A. Yes, sir.

Q. The same with the M., K. & T.?

A. Yes, sir; anything that connected up with the El Paso and Southwestern at El Paso would have had that opportunity.

Q. I didn't mean the M., K. & T.; I meant the Texas & Pacific.

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Murphy, under the present railroad situation, what access has Phoenix and that region in there to the Gulf ports?

A. Well, they go out over the Southern Pacific to Maricopa and then over the Southern Pacific to Galveston.

Q. Have they any other access to Gulf ports?

A. No, sir, not unless they come up over the Santa Fe and work down through.

Q. Unless they go up to the main line of the Santa Fe and then come back over the——

A. Yes, sir.

Q. ——Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is a very roundabout route, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What access could they have had to Gulf ports independent of the Southern Pacific, if the Santa Fe had retained that line, the Phoenix & Eastern, and built the connection down to Benson?

A. They would have had connection at El Paso with all of those eastern roads, aside from their own connections.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You didn't mean, did you, Mr. Murphy, that the Rock Island system runs its own trains through to California? You mean that they run a train to El Paso and there it is turned over to the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, I imagine that is the way it is done. It is called 1689 the Rock Island train, I suppose. I wasn't pretending to answer that technically.

Q. And you don't pretend to say that they have any running rights over the Southern Pacific?

A. Oh, no.

Q. Where does the Rock Island to El Paso last cross the Atchison, or any Atchison line?

A. I don't think it has any connection. I don't think it crosses. I am not quite sure.

Q. Doesn't it north of El Paso, in New Mexico?

A. Oh, I think it does, yes. There is a point in there. I am not familiar with the Santa Fe line west of El Paso. I would not pretend to speak authoritatively about it.

Q. You say you are not familiar with the Santa Fe line west of El Paso?

A. East of El Paso.

Q. You do know, don't you, that the Rock Island, in reaching El Paso, crosses the Santa Fe line north of El Paso 100 or 200 miles?

A. I think it does.

Q. Well, if the Rock Island wanted to run its trains over the Santa Fe rather than the Southern Pacific it could do it from that junction, couldn't it?

A. Yes, sir, if they wanted to climb over the mountains—over the Santa Fe's present road grade.

Q. They would have the short line that way, wouldn't they?

A. I think very likely they would.

Q. Mr. Murphy, I will ask you to mark on complainant's exhibit No. 107 what you said would have been a low-grade line between Chicago and California if the Atchison system had extended by construction to Benson—that is, had extended the Phoenix & Eastern to Benson and from Benson to Deming.

Mr. SEVERANCE. He didn't state it was from Benson to 1690 Deming. I object to that statement as not a correct statement of the witness' testimony. He said they projected one line down to Benson and another line on east.

Q. I will ask you to mark on that map what you described as the low-grade line between Chicago and California, as against the present line of the Atchison, whatever may have been its route. Mark it in red ink and put crosses on the red ink line, that is unconstructed. You needn't mark any constructed line.

A. I have already marked part of it.

Q. I want you to mark in red ink the unconstructed portions, and then describe the other afterwards.

A. You will have to give me a map that shows the Santa Fe road here if you want me to mark what you want, or else you will have to show me where it is and then I will connect it up for you.

Q. I don't know just what——

A. Well, if you haven't got it there it is pretty hard for me to determine. Can you pick out the Santa Fe lines here in New Mexico?

Mr. SEVERANCE. I cannot on that map, no.

WITNESS. Neither can I. Here is Belen, right there. It goes to here, and then they have got no more railroad. Now, I am not sufficiently well acquainted with that territory to lay it out.

Q. Can't you lay it out approximately in New Mexico?

A. Well, not further than it shows on the Belen cut-off here. I can get you up that far. Now, if you will give me a map that shows the Santa Fe line east of there I will put that connection in.

Q. Mr. Murphy, in your direct examination you testified that if the Atchison had retained the Phoenix & Eastern and had 1691 constructed certain unconstructed lines, that it would have had a low-grade line from Chicago to where?

A. From Chicago to——

Q. To California?

A. To California—not taking into account their getting down off of the mountain east of San Bernardino.

Q. They would have had a good low-grade line from Chicago to say Bengal, California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That would have been about 125 miles longer?

A. Well, 125 to 150, as near as I could call it to mind.

Q. Will you describe, commencing at Chicago, the route of that low-grade line, or what would have been a low-grade line, going from Chicago to the first point where any construction was to be done, by the principal cities?

A. I could only refer you to the Santa Fe railroad, that is all. I could not give you any better description than that. They would utilize the Santa Fe railroad.

Q. Leaving Chicago, where would you go by the Santa Fe? To Kansas City first?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Thence the next principal junction point?

A. Why, to the point where they leave their main line to take this new Belen cut-off.

Q. Where is that?

A. I think about Hutchinson: I am not quite sure.

Q. About Hutchinson, Kansas?

A. Yes. I am not quite sure about that.

Q. Then they would construct from about Hutchinson, Kansas, to where?

A. Oh, no; it is already constructed.

Q. From Hutchinson it is already constructed clear to where?

1692 A. It is constructed clear to Belen.

Q. Clear to Belen?

A. Yes, sir, now—or wherever they leave their main line in Kansas. I am not sure that it is Hutchinson. The maps would show that.

Q. When was the Belen cut-off completed?

A. Only recently. I was over it in a special train in June.

Q. Now, to describe that line, don't you know where the easterly terminus of the Belen cut-off is?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Do you know the length of the Belen cut-off?

A. Not exactly, no; not definitely. I think I could get those figures, though, very readily for you.

Q. Can't you approximate the length of the Belen cut-off?

A. Well, I suppose I ought to be able to, but I can't.

Q. From the Belen cut-off where is the next point of constructed road?

A. The next that is constructed or unconstructed?

Q. Constructed.

A. Why, it is constructed to Deming.

Q. And from Deming?

A. From Deming it is unconstructed now. Since the Southern Pacific has acquired the Phoenix & Eastern, why, of course, it is unconstructed clear to Phoenix; but before the Southern Pacific acquired the Phoenix & Eastern there was a gap in there of about 240 miles.

Q. Don't you know as a matter of fact, Mr. Murphy, that the Santa Fe Company never contemplated the use of that line that way as a transcontinental line?

A. I know quite the contrary.

Q. You do, eh?

A. Unless they misrepresented the facts to me.

Q. Who?

A. The Santa Fe officials. I don't know why they would 1693 let me spend several millions of their money toward building a railroad unless they intended to use it.

Q. For their transcontinental business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You considered, then, that you were building the Phoenix & Eastern and this other line as a part of the transcontinental line?

A. Yes, sir, after they got started with it. I first started the building of the railroad to Benson, on my own account, irrespective of the Santa Fe, and then the Santa Fe took it over, and they concluded to build a low grade transcontinental line. The low grade features of it east of El Paso, or east from Deming, I have accepted in a general way from the Santa Fe's engineers.

Q. Do you know the length of that line from Belen to Deming?

A. Belen to Deming? Not exactly. Approximately.

Q. What is it approximately?

A. I would rather prefer to refer to the maps. You have got a map there that has a scale on it and shows the distances there, and you can see exactly. I cannot carry in mind those distances.

Q. You wouldn't like to undertake to state those distances?

A. Well, no, I wouldn't. You have got the positive evidence of it there. It is better than anything I could say.

Q. I thought you knew and that you might state it in a few words without the necessity of calculating it on the map.

A. I would if I did know exactly.

Q. How far is it by the lines that you located from Deming to the Eastern terminus of the Phoenix & Eastern?

A. About 240 miles.

Q. You say that was a low grade line?

A. Yes, sir. Practically a water grade line all the way.

1694 Q. No rough work between the present terminus at—what is the name of that place?

Mr. SEVERANCE. Dudleyville, or Winkelman?

Q. No rough work between Dudleyville and——

A. A great deal. Very heavy work. Very rough work.

Q. But it was practical to get low grades in there, was it?

A. Yes, sir, could get low grades easier than you could get high grades.

Q. Of what other line does this Belen cut-off form a part?

A. The Santa Fe.

Q. Is it used for that transcontinental business?

A. They are beginning to use it, I believe.

Q. Where does it go after it reaches Belen? Which way does it go in moving west?

A. I think it picks up with the main line at a point somewhere near Rio Puerco; I don't know just how many miles west of Belen. It picks up with the main line there.

Q. By the main line you mean the line by way of Albuquerque?

A. No, west of Albuquerque; Santa Fe Pacific; leaves Albuquerque out.

Q. Why was the Belen cut-off constructed, do you know, Mr. Murphy?

A. I understood that it was to avoid the Trinidad mountains at Raton and the Glorieta Divide.

Q. It was constructed in the interest of the present main line, Santa Fe main line, to California, was it not?

A. I think so; but at the time that that was being constructed, and at the same time it was being considered, we were considering this other line too and building it.

1695 Q. But don't you know that the Belen cut-off—the construction of that—was not prompted at all by the line you mentioned?

A. I don't think it was, particularly. I think that that was one feature that made the low-grade line that I am talking about especially attractive, since they were going to go to the expense to put in that other line.

Q. Wasn't it intended to extend the Belen cut-off eastwardly to the connection with the line running up through Texas?

A. I am not familiar with that feature of the Santa Fe's plans.

Q. The Pecos Valley line?

A. I say I am not familiar with that feature of the Santa Fe's plans, but that was my understanding in a general way.

Q. That is, it was your understanding that it was constructed with a view to extending it across to the Pecos Valley line?

A. Why, that Pecos Valley is called the Panhandle line, is it?

Q. It runs through what is called the Panhandle of Texas.

A. I think it is that line. They evidently intended to have their connection through there.

Q. The object of that was to avoid the high grades—that is, of Colorado and the Glorieta Pass?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By extending that Belen cut-off and connecting with the Pecos valley line of the Atchison system?

A. I think so, yes, sir.

Q. And it occurred to you that the Belen cut-off might be used in connection with the other low grade line down by way of Deming?

A. Yes, sir; it not only occurred to me, but it was a matter we discussed a good deal with the Santa Fe officials.

Q. Which Santa Fe officials?

A. All of them—Mr. Ripley and Mr. Morawetz and several other directors.

1696 Q. You were suggesting it to them, were you?

A. Yes, sir, if necessary.

Q. Do you know whether they ever seriously considered it?

A. Well, I think they did to the extent of letting me spend, as I say, three or four millions of dollars of their money in that direction.

Q. Your idea is that the extension of the Phoenix & Eastern would have been wasteful without the use of the Belen cut-off as a transcontinental line?

A. No, sir; quite the contrary. I think it would have been extremely valuable.

Q. Wouldn't they let you spend that money for them without reference to the Belen cut-off?

A. No; because they thought that we would get the benefit of the low-grade line that that was going to afford them.

Q. Aren't you a little inconsistent in saying that they must have intended that you should use the Belen cut-off, otherwise they wouldn't let you spend the money in building the Phoenix & Eastern?

A. No, not at all. It would not have been attractive to them to have gone down into that country there. They were always confronted, as they represented to me, with the fact that they were being charged with trespassing on Southern Pacific's territory in going down there; but in building the low-grade transcontinental line they were protecting their own interests and enhancing the value of their own property.

Q. Will you be good enough to say which you wish us to understand—that they were building the Phoenix & Eastern for the local business, or were building it because of the Belen cut-off and that it would have been a waste of their money to build the 1697 Phoenix & Eastern unless it was intended to use it in connection with the Belen cut-off?

A. It would not have been a waste of their money to have built it for either purpose. I think it would have been to their advantage to have built it exclusively for the low-grade line service of their transcontinental business, if they hadn't the local business; and I believe that there will be sufficient business developed along that line to justify its construction, without any transcontinental business.

Q. You think it would have been a good proposition for both purposes?

A. Yes sir, I do; I don't think there is any doubt about it.

Q. Are you familiar with the contracts under which the Phoenix & Eastern was sold, Mr. Murphy?

A. Yes, sir—well, in a way. I don't know that I am in detail.

Q. Do you know that the Atchison reserved trackage rights over it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that the Southern Pacific agreed to give it trackage right over the Southern Pacific from Benson, or Lordsburg, or some point in that locality, to Deming?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Do you mean Benson? You said Benson. You mean Deming.

Q. I mean from the present terminus of the Phoenix & Eastern to a connection with the Southern Pacific Railroad——

A. Yes, sir.

Q. ——at Benson or Lordsburg, or somewhere in the locality of Lordsburg.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Thence over the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE. You don't mean Benson?

WITNESS. Deming; to Deming.

1698 Mr. SEVERANCE. Benson is down south, the other connection.

Q. I meant Bowie, instead of Benson—from Bowie or Lordsburg.

A. Yes, sir, I think that did refer to the connection in there instead of the other.

Q. And that the agreements embraced contracts by which the Atchison is entitled to trackage from Phoenix over the Phoenix & Eastern?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And any extension of the Phoenix & Eastern to a connection with the Southern Pacific Railroad at or in the vicinity of Lordsburg?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And thence over the Southern Pacific Railroad to Deming?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that the Southern Pacific, on the other hand, is entitled to trackage over the Atchison lines from Mojave, by way of Bengal and the new line that is under construction from Bengal to Wickenburg?

A. Yes.

Q. About what is the length of the line under construction from Bengal to Wickenburg by the Atchison system?

A. About 200 miles.

Q. About what is the distance via the Atchison from Mojave to Bengal?

A. I would have to refer to the maps.

Q. You cannot give those figures?

A. No, I cannot give you that distance.

Q. Isn't it true that if the Southern Pacific should use trackage over the Atchison under the agreements in evidence here, from Mojave to Phoenix and from Phoenix over the Phoenix & Eastern extension to a connection with the Southern Pacific Railroad
1699 at or in the vicinity of Lordsburg, that the Southern Pacific line from Mojave to El Paso would be very much shortened, and that very much better grades could be had than on the existing line?

A. I don't think there is any doubt about it.

Q. About what would the difference be in distance? Two or three hundred miles?

A. No, sir. I don't think as much as that. Are you talking now about San Francisco or are you talking about Los Angeles?

Q. I am talking about the Mojave junction.

A. Oh, the junction at Mojave. No. I don't think it would be that much. I do not suppose it would be over 75 miles; something like that. The map there would show that clearer than anything I could give you.

Q. You would have to approximate it. These agreements for trackage, made in connection with the sale of the Phoenix & Eastern stock, reserve the right of the Atchison system for a through line, and probably as good a through line as you would have built by way of Phoenix to Deming, do they not?

A. I think they do.

Q. And also provide for a through short line for the Southern Pacific from Mojave to El Paso?

A. I think they do—if it is ever built.

Q. The Atchison has the right, under the terms of the agreement, to acquire the line extending from Phoenix to the connection with the Southern Pacific Railroad east of Phoenix, has it not?

A. Yes, sir. I think so.

Q. When was the construction of the Phoenix & Eastern commenced?

A. Early in 1902, I think, actual grading was commenced.

Q. And how rapidly was it constructed?

1700 A. Well, I think they completed it along in 1904.

Q. That is, so much as was constructed was completed——

A. Yes, 96 miles. We had a good deal of heavy work getting into different points, and we were obstructed by washouts. Before we got our main bridges in we had a good deal of trouble.

Q. And how much remains to be completed did you say from Phoenix—from the present eastern terminus to the connection with where you cross the Southern Pacific?

A. The Santa Fe at Deming?

Q. No; where you cross the Southern Pacific.

A. Where we cross the Southern Pacific at Bowie, or where?

Q. Where it would intersect the Southern Pacific at Bowie or Lordsburg.

A. Well, it would intersect the Southern Pacific, as your line is operated now, to Globe, very materially. You have a line running up from Bowie to Globe. That is only a very short distance through the canyon there to connect with your Bowie line, comparatively speaking.

Q. That is, the Southern Pacific interests own a line extending northwesterly from Bowie?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, you come within a very few miles of the eastern terminus?

A. I should say probably 30 or 40 miles through there. I don't know as it is quite that much.

Q. From the——

A. From the terminus of the Phoenix & Eastern road.

Q. To a connection with the Globe line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, suppose it were extended on to Lordsburg, how much would be constructed to carry the present eastern terminus to a connection with the Southern Pacific railway?

A. About 185 miles from its present terminus, I think, from 1701 Winkelman to Lordsburg.

Q. And about how far east of Lordsburg is Deming, do you happen to remember?

A. I think about 60 miles. I am rather more familiar with that territory in there than I am with the territory east of that.

Q. You testified about some obstruction encountered in the Gila canyon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. There was a good deal of obstructing done by both parties to that controversy, wasn't there?

A. Yes; but then we built about 80 odd miles of heavy railroad before we first encountered any difficulties in the way of obstruction; and the other parties hadn't built any.

Q. They had located right of way, hadn't they?

A. No.

Q. Had not located right of way?

A. No, not until—the first we knew about their locating right of way, or anything else, was that they appeared on the scene with a lot of men interrupting us. That is the first we knew anything about it.

Q. You are something of a railroad man. It is not unusual for railroads to——

A. It was very unusual; very.

Q. That was unusual?

A. It was very unusual. We all thought so.

Q. For railroads to obstruct each other in their efforts to occupy strategic positions?

A. Well, I don't know as that is unusual; but I don't think they often do it in quite as highhanded a way as that appeared to me.

Q. You haven't heard what they say about you in that connection, have you Mr. Murphy?

A. Yes, sir, I have heard a good deal said about it.

Q. Did you commence the construction of that line in be-
1702 half of the Atchison, or on your own account?

A. No, sir; my first plans were individual.

Q. When did you sell to the Atchison?

A. Oh, I simply turned over, I think—if you would like the story I can give it to you right from start to finish.

Q. I probably would like all of it——

A. Then I would be very glad to give it to you.

Q. ——but the only question I ask now is when you sold to the Atchison.

A. Well, I sold it to them twice.

Q. Well, when did you sell it first?

A. For some reason or other they gave it back to me after they had gotten started. They seemed to be afraid that it was going to get them into trouble with somebody and they gave it back to me, and I started in——

Q. When was this?

A. That was early in 1902.

Q. You say the construction commenced in 1902?

A. Yes.

Q. And you sold it to them in 1902?

A. Well, there wasn't very much to sell. It was just the plan, more particularly, and the surveys and the right-of-way and the concessions that I had been able to get.

Q. So they bought from you in 1902?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then when did they give it back to you?

A. Oh, I think only a very short time, a few weeks, after the first understanding.

Q. And when did they buy the second time?

A. A very few weeks after they turned it over to me, when they found out we were going to build the railroad irrespective of them.

At least I tried to make them understand it, and I was awfully in earnest about it.

1703 Q. So, within the course of a few weeks, the Atchison bought it from you, gave it back to you, and then bought it a second time?

A. Yes, sir, and then sold it to you.

Q. How long afterward?

A. After we had built 80 or 90 miles– about 96 miles.

Q. Did you build the other line—what is the name of it?

A. Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix.

Q. Did you build that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you commence the construction of that line, Mr. Murphy?

A. About 1890.

Q. About 1890?

A. Yes, sir; I think somewhere along there.

Q. From where?

A. From Ash Fork.

Q. Where is Ash Fork? On the main line of the Santa Fe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when was that completed through to Phoenix?

A. About 1895; in the spring of 1895.

Q. About what is the length of that line?

A. About 200 miles—196 miles.

Q. What previous experience did you have in the railroad business, Mr. Murphy?

A. Never had any.

Q. Your only experience in railroad construction and operation was with those two lines?

A. Oh, yes. I have been doing a little of something since. I built several branches for the Santa Fe. But I do not pretend to know very much about railroading.

Q. You do not pretend to know very much about railroading?

A. No, not very much about it.

1704 Q. Well, in your opinion, Mr. Morawetz and Mr. Ripley and the directors of the Atchison made a very great mistake in throwing away this low grade line from Chicago to California, didn't they?

A. Yes, sir. And I am not saying that as putting my judgment against Mr. Ripley's as a railroad man, either; but I am saying it because I know more about the country and the business of the country than Mr. Ripley did.

Q. You put it on that ground, do you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That you think you know more about the Arizona situation?

A. Yes, sir, very much.

Q. Do you think you know more about operating a transcontinental line and appreciating the value of a low grade line than Mr. Ripley?

A. No, sir.

Q. If you meant in answer to direct questions to say that Mr. Morawetz told you that one of the reasons why the Phoenix & Eastern stock was sold to the Southern Pacific was that the Southern Pacific, or anybody for the Southern Pacific, claimed that it was Southern Pacific territory—or whatever you said—will you please state when Mr. Morawetz told you that, and where?

A. It was in New York; and it was at some time when we were discussing the difficulties that we were having down there in Arizona when the Southern Pacific people were trying to prevent us from building that road.

Q. But the sale wasn't made until some time after you were left in peaceable possession of this canyon?

A. Well, the actual sale wasn't made, but the general understanding was had long before.

Q. When was it?

A. Not so very long before. It was under process of consummation: at least that was my understanding.

Q. Understanding from whom?

1705 A. Well, from Mr. Morawetz, if you please.

Q. Where was that? In New York?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you say about when?

A. Well, not to give exact dates, no. I think you took the road over in 1907. I think your contract was closed somewhere along in May, 1907, and I think covering a period of several months prior to the papers being signed up it was generally understood that some kind of an agreement had been arrived at.

Q. A period of several months. About how many?

A. Oh, two or three months, may be; may be more. I wasn't in a position to know of all the——

Q. How long had you then been in peaceable possession of the canyon?

A. We have never been in peaceable possession of the canyon; never got into the canyon.

Q. Well, of the line that you were contending for.

A. Well, we were not even then in peaceable possession. Our interests were in jeopardy then.

Q. I thought you testified, in answer to direct interrogatories, that as a result of that litigation the Supreme Court of the territory recognized your right and you were left in peaceable possession?

A. I did, and I will explain that.

Q. When did that happen?

A. I will explain what I have reference to. We had some very heavy floods, and some of our embankments were washed away, and the Eastern Arizona had some grading men working up in the canyon, doing a small amount of work, and before we could get down there they moved down and jumped onto some ground we had to move our track on to, so that we were not in a position to locate our 1706 line where we should have located it, and we would have incurred a great deal of expense in putting it back where it was; so we entered into a little temporary arrangement with the Southern Pacific people who had gotten onto that piece of ground that we needed, and we were using their tracks: but the litigation that was in court, as I understand it, had already been settled. But that question remained there—that little bit of a gap that we had to use over their piece of track we were using.

Q. When did that happen, that you began to use that little piece of track?

A. Oh, that was in the spring of, I think, 1906. I don't know but that it was 1907—the winter of 1907.

Q. Wasn't it earlier than that?

A. Well, I would have to refer to the notes, or the records somewhere, to see it. It is very easily ascertained.

Q. I think you said the line was completed to its present terminus in 1904?

A. Yes. I didn't mean 1907. Well, it was completed—yes, it might have been 1907. It might have been, before you took it over, the latter part of 1906, in the winter.

Q. The contract was given December, 1906.

A. This was a washout, that is all. It had nothing to do with the completion of the line.

Q. When did hostilities on the ground and on the field cease?

A. Well, when we got our road completed to Winkelman.

Q. I want to fix the date that you mention as the date when you secured peaceable possession.

A. Well, I think it was in 1906 that the Land Office finally rejected your maps and accepted ours.

Q. The thing was in litigation, then, from 1904 to 1906?

1707 A. I think so, yes, sir.

Q. How far is the Southern Pacific Railroad from the Roosevelt dam about which you testified?

A. The main line?

Q. Yes.

A. The nearest point is about 60 miles, I guess. Their branch that runs up to Mesa I think is the nearest point that they have reached.

Q. Which way is the flow there from the Roosevelt dam: what is the general direction?

A. Well, in a southwesterly direction.

Q. Towards the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does the Phoenix & Eastern run south or north of the Roosevelt dam?

A. South.

Q. How far down does that irrigable section extend?

A. Oh, that land is susceptible of irrigation practically for 50 or 60 miles, clear to the City of Florence and past the City of Florence on the Gila. There is a very slight—well, you wouldn't notice when you crossed the divide between the Gila and the Salt; you would in fact think you were going over level country.

Q. How far is Florence from the Southern Pacific?

A. I think about 25 miles, something like that; I don't know but more; 30, may be. I am not quite sure about that.

Q. North?

A. North, yes, sir.

Q. What is the nearest branch of the Southern Pacific to Florence?

A. The main line.

Q. There is no branch nearer Florence?

A. No. Well, now you have the Phoenix & Eastern: it goes right practically through it, or crosses on the opposite side of the river.

Q. Well, the Maricopa & Phoenix?

A. That doesn't go anywhere near Florence.

1708 Q. Lies west of Florence, does it?

A. Yes, sir; about 50 miles, something like that; 40 or 50 miles.

Q. You stated in your direct-examination that the right-of-way of the Phoenix & Eastern had been obtained to what point?

A. Practically from Phoenix to Benson.

Q. From Phoenix to Benson?

A. Practically, yes, sir.

Q. You mean the right-of-way over the government land?

A. And private land as well.

Q. So that while you incorporated the company and started the construction, practically all the work was done after the Atchison acquired the stock; is that true?

A. Yes, sir.

An adjournment was then taken until Monday, January 11, 1909, at 10:30 o'clock A. M.

1709 ROOM 508, CUSTOM HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY,
Monday, January 11, 1909, 10:30 A. M.

The hearing was resumed before the Special Examiner, Hon. Sylvester G. Williams, at the above time and place.

Present: On behalf of the Complainant: Mr. C. A. Severance. On behalf of the Defendants: Mr. R. S. Lovett, Mr. Walter D. Hines and Mr. John C. Spooner.

FRANK M. MURPHY,

recalled, and his cross-examination resumed, as follows:

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Mr. Murphy, have you since recess refreshed your memory so as to be able now to name the junction, the easterly junction, of the Belen cut-off with the Atchison line?

A. I think it is Newton.

Q. It is what?

A. Newton, Kansas, I think.

Q. Isn't it Texico, just on the border of New Mexico?

A. I don't know whether you mean the Santa Fe main line; the Santa Fe main line does not run to Texico.

Q. The easterly junction of the Belen cut-off?

A. I think very likely. I think very likely it is. If I might refer to this map. I think it is, yes, sir.

Q. At Texico?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And just on the border of New Mexico and Texas?

A. I think so, yes, sir.

Q. What passes on the Atchison transcontinental line are avoided by using the Belen cut-off?

A. What passes?

1710 Q. Yes, what mountain passes?

A. Why, they avoid the Trinidad Mountains, the Glorieta Divide.

Q. That is, they avoid the Raton pass?

A. Yes, very largely.

Q. Don't they avoid it altogether?

A. I am not familiar exactly with that survey, but I think immediately south of there, at that point somewhere, they have rather heavier grades than the other parts of that particular line.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I don't think he understands the question.

WITNESS. I don't think they avoid that elevation altogether. I am not quite sure. I am not quite clear about that territory in there.

Q. I don't think you understand the question: the question was whether, by using the Belen cut-off, and the line with which it connects at Texico, the Atchison does not avoid, altogether, in its transcontinental line, the Raton pass and the Glorieta pass?

A. Yes, they don't use it at all.

Mr. LOVETT. I have no further questions.

Re-direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Map of Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway system, 1908, marked Complainant's Exhibit 108 (Murphy).

Mr. SEVERANCE. Mr. Hines, this Exhibit 108 is the Santa Fe map that you furnished me, is it not, from the annual report?

Mr. HINES. It is a map from the annual report for the year ending June 30, 1908.

Mr. SEVERANCE. And it is supposed to show the lines of the Santa Fe?

Mr. HINES. Well, it shows what it purports to show.

1711 Of course, I can't vouch for it.

Mr. SEVERANCE. You mean for its absolute accuracy, I understand, but in a general way it shows the points between which the lines of the Santa Fe run.

Mr. HINES. Yes, that indicates that it shows the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway system.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I will offer in evidence Complainant's Exhibit 108 (Murphy).

Complainant's Exhibit 108 faces this page.

Q. Mr. Murphy, I will ask you to take a pen and mark on this map the proposed line that you mentioned—the proposed line from Dudleyville to Deming.

A. Approximately, I suppose?

Q. Yes, as near as you can.

A. I don't remember whether we go on the south side of the Gila at this point here or at the north point.

Q. Well, mark it in a general way. I ask the witness to put crosses over this red ink line that he has just drawn.

A. If this line had gone direct to Deming, it probably might not have gone quite directly to Lordsburg.

Q. Now, is the black line, showing a line of railroad from Phoenix to Dudleyville, the line built by the Phoenix & Eastern that you testified about?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, illustrate, so that it will go in the record, giving the termini of the various portions, where this low-grade transcontinental line that you have testified concerning would have run if the Santa Fe had kept the Phoenix & Eastern and had built the ex-
1712 tension to Deming. Where would it start on the east, that is, where would it join the present main line on the east?

A. I think at Newton, though I am not so familiar with the geography of that country in Kansas as I am with the country west. I am not really familiar with it at all.

Q. At Newton, Kansas, you mean, do you?

A. Yes.

Q. Then, coming toward the southwest, near the south line of Kansas, where would that line come?

A. It would come here to Texico.

Q. Texico, New Mexico?

A. According to this map, and that would be my best guide.

Q. From thence, where?

A. To Belen.

Q. It crosses Oklahoma and the northern end of Texas, doesn't it, connecting there——

A. Yes.

Q. —— to Texas?

A. Yes.

Q. Thence westerly to Belen?

A. Yes.

Q. Thence where?

A. Thence down the Rio Grande River to Rincon, and from there to Deming.

Q. Then over the line you have marked, and the Phoenix & Eastern, to Phoenix?

MAPS

FILMING

A. Yes. They have a branch line here to New Mexico, you observe.

Q. Now, from Phoenix, where would it run?

A. Well, it would take up with the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix at Phoenix and run to a point about six miles north of Wickenburg, and thence almost due west to a crossing of the Colorado River at Parker, and thence to a point on the Santa Fe line at Bengal.

Q. On the present main line?

A. On the present main line at Bengal.

1713 Is that line from Wickenburg to Bengal the one that is now under construction, that you testified about?

A. Yes. We are not doing anything towards constructing the line west of the Colorado River just now.

Q. You have built that far?

A. We have built that far, and finished our bridge.

Q. Now, have you, since you were on the stand the other day, investigated as to the comparative length of this line and the present main line of the Santa Fe?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the difference?

A. I find, as near as I can work it out from the Guide, about 150 miles in difference.

Mr. LOVETT. Between what points?

WITNESS. Between Chicago and Los Angeles, using this line here [indicating].

Q. And that new line, the proposed new line, is 150 miles longer, is it?

A. Yes, practically.

Q. Do you remember the mileage, the total mileage?

A. Well, I have a memorandum taken in reference to that. As near as I can get at it from the schedule.

Mr. LOVETT. I think he had not better testify from the memorandum.

Mr. SEVERANCE. You have no objection if he has looked it up?

Mr. LOVETT. If he has got it from one of those folders. You might ask him where he got it from.

Q. Where did the figures come from, Mr. Murphy?

1714 A. From the Official Guide—the Railway Guide—as near as I could get at it. I didn't remember those distances, didn't know them.

Q. Well, what are the figures?

A. What figures do you want now, sir?

Q. I want the figures of the present main line of the Santa Fe from Chicago to Los Angeles.

A. As I made them up it was 2,267 miles by the way of Ash-Fork, practically.

Q. That is, the present main line?

A. Yes.

Q. And how long would this line be that you have sketched out on the map, Exhibit 108?

A. 2,417 miles.

Q. That is exactly 150 miles longer.

A. That is the way it figures out.

Mr. MORAWETZ. 160.

WITNESS. I am not pretending that these are absolutely correct distances. There might be a few miles either one way or the other.

Q. It has been suggested that it is 160 miles instead of 150; you wouldn't doubt that might be so?

A. No, not at all.

Q. Now, Mr. Murphy, at the time the Phoenix & Eastern was sold to the Southern Pacific, did the Southern Pacific have any line of road running along parallel with the Phoenix & Eastern out of Phoenix?

A. Out of Phoenix?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far?

A. Well, it had a line, their Maricopa line, running to Tempe, and then they had a little spur-line up to Mesa.

Q. How far is Mesa from Phoenix?

A. I think 17 miles.

1715 Q. Tempe is the crossing of the Salt River, isn't it, south of Phoenix?

A. Yes, at the crossing.

Q. Did the Southern Pacific, the Maricopa line, you say, cross the river there and go through Tempe?

A. Yes.

Q. Where is the next town of any consequence after leaving Mesa?

A. Florence.

Q. What was the kind of railroad the Santa Fe built when constructing the Phoenix & Eastern? Was it a light road for local use, or was it a standard road?

A. Well, all the latter construction was for heavy engines.

Q. What do you mean by the latter construction?

A. Well, the last work we did; the bridges we put across the Gila, our main bridges that we put in, were put in as Santa Fe standard, to carry their heavy engines.

Q. How about the line from Wickenburg west—how was that constructed?

A. We used a lighter rail than we would for through transcontinental business, but the bridge is constructed for the handling of the heaviest engines, for through transcontinental business.

Q. How heavy rails did you use?

A. Well, we used second-hand rails, relaying rails, 62 lbs., I think, or 65.

Q. Now, Mr. Murphy, I neglected to ask you on Friday with reference to the Gila Valley Railroad Company; what was that?

A. Gila Valley Railroad Company? I don't know. I don't know any Gila Valley; there is the Gila Valley, Globe & Northern that is owned by the Southern Pacific.

Q. No, I am speaking about the line incorporated by you, according to memoranda I have, called the Gila Valley Railroad Company, from Winkelman to Lordsburg; do you know anything 1716 about that?

A. The Gila River Railroad?

Q. The Gila River Railroad. Then I have the wrong name. The Gila River Railroad Company, was it?

A. Yes. What about it?

Q. I asked you if you remember of incorporating another company to continue the line from Winkelman to Lordsburg.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was that called?

A. I think it was the Gila Valley. The Gila River, I think; I am not sure.

Q. Do you remember when that was incorporated?

A. It was sometime in 1893. I couldn't give dates.

Q. You don't remember the dates?

A. Not exactly.

Q. Now, you spoke the other day of having some correspondence with officials of the El Paso and Southwestern concerning a traffic agreement between that company and your proposed line to Benson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Judge Lovett objected to your testifying about that because the correspondence was not produced. With whom was that correspondence?

A. I had some correspondence with Professor James Douglas, and other correspondence with Mr. Hutchinson, the second vice-president of that company.

Q. Where does Mr. Douglas live?

A. I think here in New York.

Q. Where does Mr. Hutchinson live?

A. I don't know where he lives now.

Q. Does the El Paso and Southwestern connect with any Mexican Railroad at El Paso?

A. The Mexican Central comes in there.

Q. Where does the Mexican Central run?

A. To the City of Mexico, I believe.

Q. If the Santa Fe had extended its line through to Dem-
1717 ing, through the Gila canyon, how far would it have had to build to get into the mining district around Globe?

A. Oh, 25 miles, probably. I don't know exactly, but probably not more than that.

Q. What kind of a mining district is it around Globe?

A. Very prosperous mining country, mining district; one of the largest we have in the territory.

Q. What kind of mines?

A. Copper mines, principally.

Q. Do you know whether any mining developments and expenditures of money were made between Dudleyville and Benson upon the faith of that road being extended down there?

A. Well, I don't know in particular. I know there was considerable activity started in through there as a result of the anticipated road. I had a great deal of correspondence with mine operators and owners of mines at the time I was building.

Q. Are there any mines in there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is their outlet at present?

A. Well, either by wagon to Dudleyville or by wagon to Benson.

Q. Are there any mines between Dudleyville and Phoenix on the Phoenix & Eastern?

A. A great many.

Q. What kind of mines?

A. Gold, silver, copper and lead; principally copper there; the principal mines are copper.

Q. Where are the ores from those mines smelted?

A. Well, I don't know as there is very much going out of there right now.

Q. Where have they been when they were in operation?

A. Well, before they closed the Humboldt smelter, before we sold the road to the Southern Pacific, they came to us on the 1718 Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix and went up to Prescott, and went out to the Humboldt smelter, and were smelted there.

Q. Where is the Humboldt smelter?

A. It is on a branch of the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix road, north of Prescott.

Q. What smelters are there, if you know, along the line of the El Paso & Southwestern?

A. Well, the principal smelters are the smelters of the Copper Queen Company at Douglas, and then the Calumet & Arizona have their smelting plant there also.

Q. Are there any smelters at El Paso?

A. Yes, some very large smelters there; the American Smelting & Refining Company.

Q. How did you get the right of way that you testified you secured from Dudleyville to Benson?

A. We purchased considerable, and we had a good deal of it given to us.

Q. By whom?

A. By the residents and owners along the line.

Q. Did you have any other aid given you along the line of the Phoenix & Eastern except this right of way between Dudleyville & Benson?

A. Yes, we had some right of way given us, more or less, all the way from Phoenix.

Q. How about along through Mesa and Tempe?

A. Well, we had right of way given us there. We bought some and some was given to us.

Q. The Southern Pacific already had a line to Mesa?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who gave you the right of way for this competing line?
A. The citizens, owners of land.
Q. Was that right of way used in building the road?
A. Yes.
Q. Still used by the Southern Pacific?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You testified, both on direct and cross-examination, with reference to litigation between the Phoenix & Eastern and 1719 the Southern Pacific line, terminating in your being left in peace, as you put it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. In possession of your road. How long after you were left in peaceable possession of your road was it that the Southern Pacific took over the line?
A. Well, our final maps were not accepted in Washington till 1906. We completed our road to Winkelman, as near as I remember, in 1904. I think it was in the spring of 1907 that the line was turned over to the Southern Pacific.
Q. Your maps were finally accepted, you say, in 1906?
A. Our final maps were accepted.
Q. That was at the conclusion of the litigation in the Land Office?
A. Yes, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE. That is all.

Recross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You were asked about a line of the Southern Pacific, or controlled by the Southern Pacific, extending from Maricopa to Phoenix?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Or paralleling the Phoenix & Eastern. Please state about the distance where these lines paralleled.
A. About nine miles.
Q. About nine miles?
A. Yes.
Q. Out of Phoenix?
A. Out of Phoenix, yes, sir; and then a branch line that went up to Mesa added about as much more.
Q. Added about as much more paralleling, you mean?
A. Yes, paralleling this new Phoenix & Eastern road.
Q. The branch line to Mesa does not parallel the Phoenix & Eastern, does it?
1720 A. Yes, they use the same line out of Phoenix to Tempe, and then their line to Mesa branches off from Tempe and goes up to Mesa, practically right alongside of the Phoenix & Eastern line.
Q. What is the general direction of Maricopa from Phoenix?
A. Southeast practically: it is a little east of south.
Q. A little east of south?
A. Yes, as near as I remember it.

Q. What is the general direction followed by the Phoenix & Eastern?

A. Well, practically east, almost.

Q. Is not the general course of the Southern Pacific line from Maricopa to Phoenix practically at right angles with the general course of the Phoenix & Eastern?

A. After you leave Tempe.

Q. Tempe is about how far——

A. About nine miles.

Q. The Gila River Railroad Company, about which you were asked, never constructed any railroad, did it?

A. No, sir.

Q. That was incorporated by you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About 1893?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT. That is all.

By Mr. HINES:

Q. Mr. Murphy, you have referred to the difference in mileage between the existing line and the line that would have existed if the Phoenix & Eastern had not been sold to the Southern Pacific, and if a line had been constructed in the interest of the Santa Fe from Dudleyville to Deming?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, if that line which you suggest had been constructed, the route from Chicago to the Pacific coast would have been over the existing lines of the Santa Fe as far as Belen?

A. I think so, yes, sir.

1721 Q. Just the same?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if you sent a train from Chicago to the Pacific coast by way of the line which the Santa Fe now has, and a train by way of the line which the Santa Fe would have had, if the line had been established between Phoenix and Deming, as you suggest, those two trains would go over the same tracks between Chicago and Belen?

A. I think so, yes, sir.

Q. Then the divergence would be at Belen?

A. Yes, sir, unless you saw fit to make some changes out there at the other end, which you might possibly have done to good advantage.

Q. Well, I am speaking of your theory of the difference in mileage?

A. Yes.

Q. Then your proposition is that between Belen in New Mexico and Bengal in the southeastern part of California, there would have been a difference in mileage in favor of the existing line as against the line you suggest, of 150 or probably 160 miles?

A. I should judge so. There is a difference in there somewhere.

Q. Now, you have referred to the shipment of copper ores from points on the Phoenix & Eastern to the smelter at Humboldt on the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During what period were those shipments made?

A. Up until we turned the road over to the Southern Pacific.

Q. In the spring of 1907?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And for what period back of that date?

A. Oh, they just started to ship. They had been shipping quite a little quantity of ore there, running over a period of eight 1722 or nine months, probably. They just commenced to operate.

Q. Eight or nine months?

A. I should judge so.

Q. How many carloads were shipped in that period?

A. I would have to look at the records. I couldn't tell; quite a good many, though.

Q. Well, can you approximate that?

A. No, I could not. I wouldn't undertake to. There were a good many carloads, and there were a good many more carloads that wanted to come up there that couldn't come owing to the change of the ownership, because the rates were changed.

Q. Would you be willing to say that the average during those eight or nine months was as much as ten carloads a month?

A. Oh, I don't know of the eight or nine months; I wouldn't undertake to give the exact figures. I could get you the exact figures, the exact tonnage—would be very glad to.

Mr. HINES. Mr. Severance, would you object to Mr. Murphy supplementing his statement by the exact figures of the tonnage?

Mr. SEVERANCE. No, certainly not.

WITNESS. I would be very glad to.

Mr. HINES. That is all.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Murphy, in answer to Mr. Hines just now you said a good deal more copper ore would have gone up there except for the change in rates. What do you mean by that?

A. Well, at the time we turned over the road they were operating in there, they were operating those mines, and they localized the proposition, and naturally were disposed to take the 1723 ores from there to El Paso instead of letting them come up into Santa Fe territory, and the rates were changed. We were not in a position to give a through rate from that territory such as we had been giving before the road was taken over by the Southern Pacific.

Q. Now, that word "localized" is a technical railroad expression, I suppose. Do you mean this, that before the road was taken over you had a certain rate to the smelter on the Santa Fe line up by Prescott?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that after the Phoenix & Eastern was taken over, that rate was taken out?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was necessary to pay the two locals?

A. Yes, practically.

Q. That is, the local into Phoenix over the Southern Pacific, and the local from there up over the Santa Fe?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you say about carrying the stuff around to El Paso?

A. Well, it was naturally more to the advantage of the main line, the Southern Pacific, that owned the line to El Paso, to get the long haul on the traffic.

Q. So that the Santa Fe sacrificed whatever there was in that traffic?

A. In order that the importance of my judgment about that country in there may be understood, I feel that any testimony that I may give, based upon the existing conditions in there, does not in any sense portray the situation from a railroad standpoint.

Q. Explain what you mean by that, Mr. Murphy.

A. Well, I mean that we were building a piece of road and 1724 the people were laying their plans for the development of that section of the country, and were making their calculations upon the direct outlet, and there was a good deal of hesitation, and a large part of the work was preliminary, and they were holding in reserve a lot of important development and work, and waiting for the better opportunity that was going to be afforded when they got their outlet.

Q. Outlet which way?

A. Outlet to the east and to the south.

Q. Well, via Benson and Deming?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What kind of development work was held up until those outlets, or either of them, were finished?

A. Why, the erection of smelting plants, and the operation of smelting plants, and the large expenditure in the way of development.

Q. Development of mines?

A. Yes, sir. If I were in a position to produce my correspondence I could show you a very large amount of it—the mine owners appealing to me for transportation facilities, and wanting to know when they were going to get it, and they were ready to do thus and so when I could give them positive assurances; and of course I had to commence hedging and cutting out when I found that I was not going to be able to go ahead with the road; consequently everybody became more or less discouraged or disappointed, and that section of country in there is not developed at all as it would have been had I been able to go ahead with the construction of that road, and I don't think that it is fair to pass upon it as a railroad enterprise based upon the record that it made up to the time that we turned it over.

1725 Q. So that you mean that the record of those shipments that Mr. Hines asked you to produce, would not be an index as to what the line was worth?

A. No, sir; not at all.

Q. Do you know how soon the Salt River Valley, which is to be irrigated by the Roosevelt Dam, will be put under water?

A. Well, a very large part of it is under water now.

Q. From that development?

A. Yes, sir. Well, it has been under water. They have had a couple of hundred thousand acres or more under water for a good many years, but it was not safely so. It is now practically beyond the point of danger. Their permanent supply would seem to be secure now, by the construction that has already taken place.

Mr. SEVERANCE. That is all.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I believe you testified that prior to the sale of the stock of the Phoenix & Eastern to the Southern Pacific, through rates were in force between the smelter on the Phoenix & Eastern via Atchison—not from the smelter, from the mines, and the Phoenix & Eastern?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By the Atchison to the smelters at where? At Hutchinson?

A. No, at Humboldt in northern Arizona; smelters that were on a branch of our Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix line.

Q. About what was the distance?

A. About 250 miles, something like that.

Q. And after the sale to the Southern Pacific those rates were cancelled?

A. Yes, sir.

1726 Q. During the same period the Santa Fe had in no rates with the Southern Pacific from those lines to the smelters at El Paso or Douglas, had it?

A. No, it had no occasion to have it in.

Q. Why?

A. Because they are giving them better rates up to the Humboldt smelter than they could get by taking it around the other way.

Q. Well, that is the point; the fact is that the Atchison would not put in through rates with the Southern Pacific from this local enterprise on its line to El Paso, would it?

A. I am very sure that it would not do it. I don't think that the Santa Fe is any better than the Southern Pacific in that particular.

Q. In other words, the condition was simply reversed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When the Southern Pacific got control they established through rates from the point of origin to the smelters at El Paso and Douglas?

A. Exactly, sir, but they were not as favorable as they were before.
Q. You mean not as low?
A. No.
Q. What was the difference?
A. Oh, I would have to refer to the record. That is my recollection, that they were not as low, because they complained to us about it very severely.
Q. You are really not positive, are you, that there was any increase in the rates from those points of origin to the smelters at Douglas?
A. There was a very decided increase in the point to Humboldt as compared with that, and where these people had a market, because they didn't ship—they were shipping to Humboldt, and they didn't continue to ship to El Paso.

1727 Q. There was an increase from the point of origin to Humboldt?

A. Yes.
Q. But you can not say whether the rates from the points of origin to Douglas or El Paso were any higher, can you?
A. Well, it was my understanding that the net result to them was very materially against them; at any rate, they didn't ship.
Q. I am not speaking about the net results. I am asking about the rates now.
A. That is what controls now—the shipments.
Q. Do you know about the rates?
A. No, I couldn't speak positively about the exact rates, sir.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. What do you mean by the net results, Mr. Murphy?
A. Why, the smelting charges and net returns that a man would get from shipping his ore. The ores that they are wanting to ship up to Humboldt, they were badly in need of; they wanted them. They were giving them exceptionally favorable rates for smelting, and smelting companies, under such conditions, will offer inducements; and a straight smelting charge to a smelting company that is not particularly in need of a certain character of ore, or kind of ore, why, they make an arbitrary charge that is not as favorable as under other conditions.
Q. Well, this was simply part of the traffic that the Santa Fe gave away when they sold the road to the Southern Pacific, was it?

Mr. LOVETT. What is that?

1728 Mr. SEVERANCE. Part of the traffic the Santa Fe gave away when they sold the road to the Southern Pacific.

A. They got good pay for the traffic that they gave up.
Q. How is that?
A. They got good pay for the traffic that existed at the time they gave it up.
Q. The Santa Fe did?
A. Yes, for what had been developed.
Q. That is, you mean that the business was not heavy at that time?

A. No, sir; it was all in a stage of development.
Mr. SEVERANCE. That is all.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Just one other word. There was a very substantial change in the net results generally in the smelting business between 1906 and 1907 and 1908, wasn't there?
A. I think so.

1729 GEORGE M. HUGHES,

called as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Hughes, where do you live?
A. Brooklyn.
Q. Where is your business?
A. 100 William Street.
Q. And what is your business?
A. Railroading.
Q. With what railroad company?
A. New Jersey, Indiana and Illinois.
Q. Where does that line run?
A. From South Bend, south to connection with the Wabash.
Q. What is your relation to that road?
A. President.
Q. And what other railroads have you been connected with?
A. The Erie, Milwaukee & St. Paul, the Southern of Georgia.
Q. When were you connected with the Erie?
A. From 1863 to 1884.
Q. And with the Milwaukee & St. Paul?
A. 1884 to 1894.
Q. In what capacity were you connected with the Milwaukee & St. Paul?
A. Contracting agent in New York.
Q. Were you acquainted with Mr. Hawley?
A. I was, slightly.
Q. Do you remember when he was the Southern Pacific agent here?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you remember whether at that time there was any competition between the transcontinental lines for Pacific coast business?
A. Yes, sir, there was.
Q. What lines were active in that competition—I mean transcontinental lines west of the Missouri River?
1730 A. The Union Pacific; we worked more especially with them because we couldn't work with the Southern Pacific, because we went to Omaha at that time, on the Milwaukee road.

Q. And what other lines were competing with Mr. Hawley besides the Union Pacific?

A. Well, the Northern Pacific, I presume, and the Canadian Pacific later.

Q. The Santa Fe?

A. The Santa Fe, yes, but I think that was a little later, when they finished their line; I don't think they were much of a factor at that time.

Q. Mr. Hughes, you say that you, as representing the Milwaukee & St. Paul, worked with the Union Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. Did your line go at that time to Kansas City, or only to Omaha?

A. Only to Omaha at that time—Omaha and St. Paul.

Q. By your line I mean the Milwaukee & St. Paul?

A. Yes, the Milwaukee & St. Paul.

Q. Not your present line. Was that competition active, or otherwise?

A. Active, sir, as far as I knew.

Q. Have you any other business except your connection with this road in Indiana now, Mr. Hughes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is it?

A. Forwarder for the Singer Manufacturing Company.

Q. You mean the Singer Sewing Machine?

A. The Singer Manufacturing Company.

Q. What do they manufacture?

A. Sewing machines.

Q. What do you mean by forwarder, Mr. Hughes? What does that signify?

A. I route their freight.

Q. How long have you been routing their freights?

A. Since about 1900.

1731 Q. How do their transcontinental freights move at the present time?

A. At the present time by the American-Hawaiian line.

Q. That goes by Tehuantepec, Mexico?

A. Yes, sir, at present.

Q. Do you remember when that line was established?

A. I don't know. I think I commenced routing business about a year or more ago. They were not much of a line until they went across by Coatcacoalcos. I believe they call it Puerto, Mexico, now.

Q. How did their rates compare with the all-rail lines?

A. Very much lower.

Q. Now, previous to the time the American-Hawaiian line was established, what way did you ship your sewing machines?

A. Southern Pacific.

Q. The Morgan line steamers?

A. The Morgan line, yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. The American-Hawaiian line is made up how, Mr. Hughes?
A. Steamers to Puerto, Mexico.
Q. That is, from New York?
A. That is from New York.
Q. To the port of Mexico?
A. Yes, sir, across the country to Salina Cruz, and then steamers from Salina Cruz to the coast again.
Q. To San Francisco?
A. To San Francisco, yes.
Q. And you ship by that line now?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you happen to know the length of the rail line in that route?
A. No, I do not. I never had occasion to refer to it.
1732 Q. The steamers in that line go up to Portland, Oregon, also, do they not?
A. Yes, sir; Portland, and Seattle, I think, as well.
Q. To Portland and to Seattle?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When you speak of shipping by the Southern Pacific route you mean the steamer line?
A. The Morgan line.
Q. To New Orleans and Galveston and thence by what is known as the Sunset route?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did I understand you to say that you had ever shipped any by the Union Pacific to Pacific coast points?
A. Well, possibly one or two cars, and possibly one or two by the Santa Fe, but it was not the service we were after.
Q. You were after the rates?
A. No; not the rates. The rates were the same. The service.
Q. Oh, it was the service?
A. It may look strange, but there was more damage by all-rail shipments than there was where they were transferred.
Q. By steamer to rail?
A. Yes.
Q. So your shipments by the all-rail route to the Pacific coast were practically nominal, I presume?
A. Very few; in fact the last three or four years I don't think any.
Q. But you were solicited both by the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific?
A. Oh, yes.
Q. Has there been any change in that? Has the solicitation continued as active?
A. Well, no.
Q. Ever since you——
A. Yes; the Union Pacific comes in and wants to know if 1733 there is any change, and wants to know if they can get any business. Well, I say, Not at present, anyhow, under the rates. We prefer the Southern Pacific on account of the carload shipments; they seem to be handled better.

Q. What railroad did you say you were connected with now, Mr. Hughes?

A. The New Jersey, Indiana & Illinois.

Q. Between what points does that operate?

A. Between South Bend, Indiana, and a connection with the Wabash at Pine, Indiana.

Q. About what length is the line?

A. 12 miles.

Q. 12 miles?

A. A long name, but a short mileage.

Q. Are any shipments moved from that plant to the Pacific coast?

A. From the Singer plant to the Pacific coast?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir.

Q. You supply your Pacific Coast trade from your New Jersey plant?

A. The Singer people ship all their Pacific coast trade from Elizabethport.

Q. Do you understand that when shipments move to California points by the Union Pacific, that they also go, as a part of the Union Pacific route, over the Central Pacific from Ogden to the Pacific coast?

A. Do I understand they do?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir; that is my understanding.

Q. When you spoke of competition between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific, you meant competition of the Sunset Route, on the one hand, and competition made up of the all-rail lines, including the Union Pacific from Omaha to Ogden and the Southern Pacific from Ogden to the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. That is the business for which the Union Pacific organ-
1734 ization, on the one hand, was soliciting as against the Sunset Route on the other?

A. Yes.

Q. And where you spoke, in answer to Judge Lovett, of traffic moving over the Central Pacific on to the Pacific Coast, you meant to California points?

A. Yes.

Q. Not the north coast?

A. Oh, no, sir.

Recross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul solicited that business, too, didn't they?

A. Certainly.

Q. And the Chicago & Northwestern?

A. The Northwestern, the Burlington.

Q. And the New York Central lines?

A. Yes; in fact, all the roads or all the lines out of here and Chicago would naturally solicit for their different organizations.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. They worked to help the Union Pacific to get it as against the Sunset?

A. Yes, sir; we did, because the Sunset was no use to us at that time.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Don't they work in order to get it themselves?

A. Why, certainly.

1735 W. J. L. BANHAM,

being duly sworn on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Banham, what is your business?

A. I am in the elevator business.

Q. What elevator company?

A. Otis Elevator Company.

Q. How long have you been with them?

A. About four years.

Q. And what is your position with that company?

A. Traffic manager.

Q. As traffic manager what do you do, what are your duties?

A. It is my business to take care of their output from various plants, to give routing directions as to freight, look after freight claims, and such matters.

Q. Previous to going with the Otis Elevator Company what was your business?

A. I was with the International Steam Pump Company.

Q. What is the business of the International Steam Pump Company—manufacturing pumps?

A. Pumps, yes, sir.

Q. What was your position with the International Pump Company?

A. I was in charge of shipping; later as the assistant traffic manager.

Q. How many years were you with them?

A. Between five and six years.

Q. Now take the case of the Elevator Company. How do their shipments move to the Pacific Coast? Take the California terminals.

A. They would move all rail. It just depends on what line we used, that we shipped from. They would move from Omaha or Kansas City.

1736 Q. What transcontinental line do they go from Missouri River points? What line do they take, as a rule, to California terminals?

A. It would be about even; they would ship about half on the Santa Fe and half on the Union Pacific.

Q. What is the important question that determines the movement of commodities when rates are the same?

A. Take a point where there are two or three or more lines reaching into a particular town, the time of delivery and the location of the freight yard or the delivery point of the contracts for the various buildings in that city. Time is a factor with us more than anything else. The most direct route is always the best one.

Q. That is to say, the excellence of the service in reaching a particular terminus?

A. Yes, providing that their delivery point is as convenient as we would want it. For instance, the line that would make the best time might be four or five miles away from our contract. The question would then come up as to whether we could wait two or three days and ship by a slower route so as to get delivery closer to the building. That, of course, is figured out on our various contracts from time to time.

Q. When you give shipments to a particular line, what, if anything, do the soliciting agents do with reference to those shipments—the men that come and try to get you to give the shipments?

A. In the first place, they find out, through various means that they have, that there are certain contracts given out to certain companies. If in the West, they will come with information from their Western agent; and if in the East, with information from their Eastern agent.

Q. And then what do they suggest, as a rule, as induce-1737 ments to secure shipments, when rates are the same?

A. They suggest as gently as they can that we ship via the line that they represent.

Q. What service do they perform for the shipper?

A. Personal solicitation, that is about all. They might remind us at times that there are certain unpaid freight claims due the Company and that they might pay them.

Q. They work in that way to get the business?

A. Yes.

Q. When you were with the International Pump Company, how did the traffic move to the Pacific Coast?

A. I have no direct knowledge of that. The position I held there did not cover the routing of freight.

Q. So you don't know how it did move?
A. No, not as a general proposition.
Q. How is that?
A. No, I don't, generally speaking.
Q. I misunderstood you; I thought you did know how it was routed. You say you route your stuff to California terminals over the Union Pacific or Southern Pacific. Do you send anything by the Sunset route?
A. No. We find it is the best policy to load the class of machinery that we ship on the car and have it take the direct route. The question of transfer comes up. Take electrical apparatus, if it is transferred even once or twice, it does not add to it much. The percentage of breakage would be enormous. We prefer the direct route. There is nothing to be gained by shipping by the Sunset route. We do not want the sea voyage. The sea air is not of any benefit to electrical apparatus.

Q. Is your business solicited at present by way of New Or-1738 leans, all-rail, by the Southern Pacific people?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you use that line at times?
A. No. We have used it several times when there have been blockades out West, when they could get it through by way of New Orleans, but as a general proposition we do not do that.
Q. That is exceptional, is it?
A. Oh, yes. We probably had three or four cars the last few years.
Q. Where do you ship from?
A. Various points—Boston, Springfield, Yonkers, Philadelphia, Rochester, Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago, Moline. We have many more plants, but we would hardly call them shipping points; they take care of local business more than anything else. Those I have mentioned are the main shipping points.
Q. Is all this routing in your charge, from all those places?
A. Well, it is under my general direction, yes.
Q. Now when you speak of shipments to the Coast, distributed as you have stated, does that apply to all the plants?
A. We do not ship to the Pacific Coast from all the plants.
Q. You send all your business to the Coast from certain specific plants, considered from the plants generally?
A. Yes.
Q. From where do you ship to the Coast?
A. The main points would be Yonkers, Chicago and Buffalo. We do have other points from which we ship to the Coast, but their tonnage is very light.
Q. To the Northern Pacific Coast country how do you ship?
A. Great Northern and Northern Pacific.

Q. And do you use the Union Pacific to Portland?
1739 Why, yes; the business is divided between the two lines there. When I see the conditions in Portland (so far as the actual conditions are concerned) are in favor of one or the other line, that would be the line we would use.

Q. Your company is one of the largest, is it not, Mr. Banham?

A. Well, it is of the elevator companies.

Q. That is what I mean.

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Do you ship to the Orient?

A. No.

Q. You do not have any business there?

A. We probably have had one or two shipments, but very few of them.

Q. But of very little consequence?

A. They have not gone into sky-scrapers over there yet.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You do not ship to Portland by way of the Southern Pacific, do you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Such business as you send to Portland goes there by the Northern Pacific or the Union Pacific and its connections?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated that the most of your shipments to the Pacific coast originate at New York, or Yonkers, or Buffalo, or Chicago.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that west of Chicago, as a rule, they divide it as between the Atchison and the line made up of the Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and connections east?

A. Yes.

Q. All of your shipments that go by way of the Union Pacific go over the Central, don't they; that is, the Southern Pacific
1740 line from Ogden to California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are your shipments from this territory solicited both by the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That has been so right along, hasn't it?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. All of these companies owning any part of any of these transcontinental lines, like the New York Central lines, the Chicago & Northwestern, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, the Burlington—such lines solicit your business, don't they?

A. Yes, sir, very actively.

Q. Even though they own portions of the line?

A. Yes. Frequently a representative of the Union Pacific Company will come into my office, and will be followed immediately by a Southern Pacific representative.

Q. In the territory about Chicago, that is, for shipments from your plants in Illinois (Chicago), isn't it true that representatives of the Southern Pacific solicit that business by way of Union Pacific and Ogden?

A. From Chicago?

Q. Yes, and that territory. In other words, doesn't the Southern Pacific representative work for that business by way of the Ogden route?

A. That is, from Chicago?

Q. And Moline and other points.

A. Yes, that is the way it would go. It would travel by the Union Pacific—Southern Pacific.

Q. From Buffalo and such points, do not the Southern Pacific representatives try to get it to go via the Union Pacific and Ogden, if they cannot get it by the Sunset route?

A. Oh, yes. They prefer to get it by the Sunset route, but we have always shipped it direct West without coming East on it—or South, rather. I might say that the commodity we are ship-
1741 ping from Buffalo is rails, which have to be loaded on one car and go through without transfer.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. When you speak of the Union Pacific solicitor coming in, being followed at times by the Southern Pacific solicitor, the Southern Pacific man tries to get you to route your stuff by New Orleans, doesn't he?

A. He tries to solicit it that way and tries to get it that way, but we are very firmly against shipping it that way.

Q. Judge Lovett asked you if at Chicago the Southern Pacific agent did not solicit traffic by Ogden. You are aware of the fact, are you not, that the Southern Pacific-Union Pacific have the same agent in Chicago?

A. Yes, I believe so.

Q. So if the Union Pacific was soliciting by Ogden, the Southern Pacific agent would have to be doing it, because he is the same man.

A. The same man, yes.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Before the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had a joint agent there, didn't the agent of the Southern Pacific in that territory solicit by way of Ogden?

A. Well, I don't remember that. That was a little before my time. I don't remember just what date they consolidated those two offices.

Q. 1901 or 1902?

A. That would be before my time as an active traffic manager.

Q. I understood you to say that the New York Central and all of the trunk lines out of here actively solicit you for your 1742 business to the Pacific Coast; do they not?

A. Yes, such lines as can handle it. Of course, we have not a plant in New York.

Q. I mean from this locality.

A. Yes; any trunk line that covers any territory that we ship to, they all come around and solicit right along.

1743 CHARLTON A. SWOPE,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct-examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Swope, where do you live?

A. New York City.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am the eastern freight agent of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad.

Q. How long have you had that position?

A. Five years.

Q. Previous to that time what was your position?

A. Previous to that time I was the traveling freight agent of the same road, located at New York City, for five years.

Q. Previous to that time what was your position?

A. Previous to that time I was located in the general offices at Louisville in a clerical capacity, for about thirteen years.

Q. Mr. Swope, you are an officer of the Traffic Club here in New York, aren't you?

A. Incidentally; I am secretary of the Traffic Club; it is not a salaried position.

Q. Do you remember the traffic situation in New York a few years prior to 1901?

A. I do.

Q. When Mr. Hawley was the agent of the Southern Pacific here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What competition, if any, was there between the Southern Pacific and other lines for transcontinental business?

A. I came to New York in 1898, and between that time and 1901 there was competition to transcontinental points between those two lines—between all the lines.

1744 Q. Was there competition between the Union Pacific, the Southern Pacific, the Santa Fe, the Northern Pacific, and the Great Northern?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you acquainted with the Union Pacific representative here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was he?

A. Mr. R. Tenbroeck was the general eastern agent at that time.

Q. And who was the agent of the Southern Pacific?

A. Mr. Edwin Hawley was in charge at that time.

Q. And he was succeeded by whom, later?

A. Mr. L. J. Spence.

Q. You know Mr. Spence, do you?

A. Yes, sir, very well.

Q. Now, as representing the Louisville & Nashville, what did you have to do with transcontinental traffic, and with whom did you work?

A. I solicited the business the same as I did other business. Our interest in transcontinental business from this territory has never been of the same importance as business to other territory on my line. For that reason I never paid as much attention to that as to other business. But we did solicit business for transcontinental points in connection with the all-rail route via New Orleans.

Q. Do you here in New York solicit the business that originates out in the middle part of the country?

A. My territory is east of the Buffalo-Pittsburg line. I have jurisdiction of all territory east of Buffalo-Pittsburg. From the Middle West—I presume you mean Cincinnati and Louisville and that territory?

Q. Yes.

A. I solicit from that territory in some cases, but not fre-
1745 quently; that is, if business was moving from that territory, which was controlled in New York or in the territory east of Buffalo-Pittsburg, and it was reported to me, then we endeavored to secure it.

Q. Via New Orleans?

A. Yes, via New Orleans, or in some cases via Memphis. We have a junction point via Memphis, Tennessee.

Q. Then how would it move from Memphis—El Paso?

A. El Paso route, yes.

Q. But your interests were entirely with the Sunset route of the Southern Pacific as against the Union Pacific Ogden route?

A. Yes.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You still continue to do that, don't you, Mr. Swope?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. There has been no change in your work in that respect?

A. No, sir, no change.

Q. The volume of business moving from this territory and territory east of the Buffalo-Pittsburg line to the Pacific coast all-rail via New Orleans is very small, isn't it?

A. Very small, yes.

Q. As a matter of fact, practically every railroad line in the country solicits transcontinental business and all other kinds of freight business, does it not?

A. All the important lines that can handle it, yes.

Q. How many lines do you believe there are extending from the Atlantic, beginning say at the northeastern boundary and extending down to the Mexico boundary, over which trans-
1746 continental traffic actually moves? Do you suppose there are 50 or 100?

A. Well, counting each line as a connection in the chain, I should say there were fully that many. 50 or 100 is a good wide limit, but I should say there are certainly that many.

Q. As an illustration, I suppose the New York Central from here to Buffalo might of itself be a party to 15 or 20 such lines, might it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And so with nearly every other railroad, including the little intermediate lines?

A. Yes; a good many of them have several junctions, you know, several routes.

Q. Mr. Severance suggested even the little line about which Mr. Hughes testified.

A. Well, I wouldn't be able to testify about that.

Q. Whatever transcontinental business moves over the Union Pacific, that is to say, business reaching the Pacific coast south of Portland, over the Union Pacific, would go over the Southern Pacific from Ogden to the Pacific coast, wouldn't it?

A. That is my understanding, yes.

Q. And the Union Pacific line extends from the Missouri River to Ogden? That is your understanding, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And that is one of the intermediate carriers that engages in this transcontinental business?

A. Yes.

Q. What is true of the numerous lines extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific is also largely true of the lines extending from the east and north and northwest to New Orleans and the Gulf
1747 points, isn't it? That is to say, aren't there a good many lines over which the traffic moves from New York and New England over your line to New Orleans?

A. Yes, there are a great many. Not quite so many I should say.

Q. Not quite so many?

A. In a case of that kind the trunk lines are more largely interested in the Ogden route on account of their slightly greater haul that they get that way. For instance, they would haul the business to Chicago or to St. Louis; whereas, in working via the New Orleans route they would only haul it to Cincinnati or to Louisville, turning it over to our line as part of the connecting line to New Orleans.

Q. Unless they happened to have a line running farther south than Cincinnati or New Orleans?

A. Well, I was speaking of the trunk lines and their affiliations as we know them here in Central Traffic Association territory.

Q. Your line is one of a few lines having New Orleans terminals running east of the Mississippi River?

A. Yes.

Q. And then it has a great many connections into the east and north?

A. Yes.

Q. Chicago and territory?

A. That is true.

Q. And so with the Southern Pacific and the Atchison. Being the only two lines that reach the Pacific Ocean south of Portland, as their lines extend east they have a great many connections that would engage in this transcontinental business?

A. I should say so.

Q. The Union Pacific and Southern Pacific solicitors in this territory continue to solicit business quite actively?

1748 A. Quite actively, yes.

Q. I believe you say that Mr. Hawley was succeeded by Mr. L. J. Spence, acting for the Southern Pacific Sunset route?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Tenbroeck continued, as agent, to act for the Union Pacific until he retired, a few months ago, on account of age, didn't he?

A. Yes, sir, succeeded by Mr. DeFriest.

Q. Mr. Tenbroeck continued as agent of the Union Pacific from a time antedating your coming to New York until some time in 1908, didn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Swope, there are a great many lines east of the Missouri River gateway, are there not, leading up to that gateway?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And very few lines west of that gateway?

A. Comparatively few, yes.

Q. Now take Council Bluffs, the eastern terminus of the Union Pacific. How many lines are there leading up there and handing over business to the Union Pacific?

A. There are comparatively few; that is, few compared with the number there east of the Mississippi River.

Q. That is, there are many lines east of the Mississippi gateway; less lines from there to the Missouri River gateway, and still less transcontinental lines from the Missouri River to the coast?

A. Yes.

Q. I won't stop to have you recite all those, because they 1749 are all shown on the map. Now going down to the south, to the New Orleans gateway: how many lines are there to the coast from the New Orleans gateway?

A. There is only one line that has a terminal line. There are other lines there that are a connection of the Southern Pacific.

Q. And what are they?

A. There is the Texas Pacific through New Orleans——

Q. They go to El Paso, don't they?

A. Yes, to El Paso.

Mr. LOVETT. And many other leading points.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Yes, but that is the westernmost connection, isn't it?

Mr. LOVETT. Also connects with the Missouri Pacific, you know.

Q. El Paso is the western terminus of the Texas Pacific, isn't it?

A. Yes, I think so.

Q. And what other lines are there out of there that connect with the Southern Pacific?

A. That is all on trans-continental business—those two lines.

Q. So these many lines in the east that are picking up business and handling it along and getting it toward the west, finally converge into these few lines that do the business west of the Missouri River and the Mississippi?

A. That is right, I believe.

Mr. LOVETT. And they finally converge into a point where they have got only the Southern Pacific and the Atchison left, don't they?

1750 WITNESS. That seems to represent the case exactly.

Q. That is not true as to Portland, is it?

Mr. LOVETT. I asked my question with reference to the south of Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE. You didn't say that.

A. No, they have more outlets to Portland, the two other strong lines—the Southern Pacific and the Great Northern.

Q. What about the Union Pacific?

A. Oh, yes, the Union Pacific goes to Portland.

Q. It reaches Portland over its own rails, doesn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. That is some subsidiary line—the O. R. & N.?

A. I understood the question to be Southern California and San Francisco.

Q. At the present time the traffic can reach Southern California from Salt Lake City over what is known as the Clark road too, can't it?

A. Yes, the San Pedro route: it runs to Los Angeles.

Q. But that does not run to San Francisco?

A. No, I believe not.

Q. And the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific each runs to San Francisco?

A. Yes.

1751 J. ALLEN GREGORY,

being duly sworn on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Gregory, where do you live?
A. New York.
Q. How long have you lived here?
A. One year December 2nd last.
Q. Before that, where did you live?
A. Richmond, Virginia.
Q. What is your business?
A. Traffic manager of the Central Foundry Company and its subsidiaries.
Q. Previous to your connection with the Central Foundry Company what was your business?
A. Railroad.
Q. For how long?
A. Since 1899.
Q. Where are your foundries located?
A. Alabama, Tennessee, Indiana, New Jersey, New York, and Pennsylvania.
Q. At what town in Alabama?
A. Bessemer and Anniston.
Q. Have you got a foundry at a place called Holt?
A. Yes. A pig iron place there—Central Coal & Iron Company.
Q. Whereabouts in Maryland?
A. Dundalk, near Baltimore.
Q. Whereabouts in New York?
A. Medina.
Q. Where is that?
A. On the New York Central, east of Buffalo.
Q. And in New Jersey?
A. Newark.
Q. Tennessee?
A. South Pittsburg.
Q. Indiana?
A. Vincennes.
Q. Pennsylvania?
A. Lansdale.
Q. Where is that?
A. That is on the Philadelphia & Reading.
Q. Does your firm have transcontinental business?
A. Yes, on pipe.
Q. From what plants do you ship to the coast?

1752 A. Well, it depends. At present we are shipping from Alabama, Anniston mostly, and South Pittsburg, Tennessee, and Vincennes, Indiana.

Q. Over what lines does your traffic move to the coast?

A. What do you mean by the coast?

Q. To California points.

A. Over the Southern Pacific, and Santa Fe, and Union Pacific.

Q. From what points?

A. Over the Southern Pacific from Anniston and South Pittsburg; mostly from Anniston.

Q. South Pittsburg, did you say?

A. Very seldom; it would be an exceptional move.

Q. Then over the Union Pacific?

A. Union Pacific, Vincennes and South Pittsburg, and sometimes from Anniston.

Q. And over the Santa Fe from where?

A. From all of them.

Q. Can traffic move from the points you have named—in fact, I think you said it did move from Anniston, South Pittsburg, and Vincennes at times over these different routes.

A. That is right, yes, sir.

Q. Are the rates the same from all of them?

A. Yes, sir. Not from all plants, no.

Q. No, I mean from those that you have spoken of?

A. Yes, they are now, but they were not at one time.

Q. I mean, are the rates the same say from Vincennes? Can traffic move by Omaha or Southern Pacific line?

A. You mean as far as the railroad is concerned? Yes, sir, the rates are the same.

Q. That is what I mean. Now, who solicits your transcontinental business—the representatives of what road?

A. Why, actively the Union Pacific and the Santa Fe and 1753 its connections.

Q. How do your shipments go to the North Pacific Coast?

A. Over the Great Northern, the Union Pacific and the Northern Pacific.

Q. Who solicits your business for that part of the country?

A. All three companies.

Q. All three of them?

A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination, by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I believe you stated that your shipments to California points from Anniston usually go by the Southern Pacific.

A. They usually do, yes, sir.

Q. Do you mean the Southern Pacific west of El Paso?

A. No, sir; New Orleans.
Q. New Orleans.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Don't they generally go by way of the Frisco-Rock Island line to El Paso?
A. Not from Anniston, in connection, no, sir.
Q. From what points do you use that route?
A. South Pittsburg, Tennessee.
Q. That goes over the Rock Island-Frisco?
A. Why, no; sometimes over the Rock Island; as a rule, over the Iron Mountain route and the Missouri Pacific to El Paso.
Q. To El Paso, and thence over the Southern Pacific?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And from Anniston you say that goes by way of New Orleans?
A. Generally speaking, yes, sir.
Q. Over what line usually out of Anniston?
A. The Louisville & Nashville.
1754 Q. The Southern Pacific has no line of its own into Alabama, or Birmingham?
A. No, sir.
Q. The Southern Pacific has no line of its own into Anniston?
A. No.
Q. What rail lines extend from Anniston to New Orleans?
A. Directly, as far as we are concerned, the L. & N. Railroad.
Q. About how far is it by that line?
A. I don't know the distance; about 3-days' run so far as the freight traffic is concerned.
Q. Does any of that business go out by the way of the Atchison from Anniston?
A. Sometimes, yes, sir, through the Memphis gateway—Frisco to Kansas City.
Q. Frisco to Kansas City?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And thence over the Atchison?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Does any go from Anniston via the Union Pacific?
A. Why, an exceptional car through Kansas City, Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific into San Francisco.
Q. Generally speaking, then, Mr. Gregory, the business for California points, which originates at these various plants of yours, may move by the Southern Pacific and its connections at New Orleans or El Paso, or the Atchison and its connections at Kansas City, or east of Kansas City or Chicago.
A. Not Chicago.
Q. You do not ship any by Chicago?
A. No.

Q. And via the other lines, Union Pacific and lines connecting with the Southern Pacific at Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. Whatever moves over the Union Pacific for California points goes out over the Southern Pacific from Ogden, doesn't 1755 it? That is part of the route?

A. Why, I don't specify the junction, but to my understanding it goes that way.

Q. You have never shipped any via the Southern Pacific to Portland, Oregon, have you?

A. No, sir.

1756 AFTERNOON SESSION.

Present: On behalf of the complainant, Mr. Severance; on behalf of defendants, Mr. Lovett, Mr. Spooner, Mr. Cravath.

JACOB SCHIFF,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Schiff?

A. New York.

Q. And what is your business?

A. I am a banker.

Q. With what firm of bankers are you connected?

A. Kuhn, Loeb & Company.

Q. You are a partner in that firm, are you not?

A. I am.

Q. And Mr. Otto H. Kahn is one of your partners?

A. He is.

Q. That firm has been in existence a good many years, has it not?

A. About forty years.

Q. Mr. Schiff, do you recall the time that the Union Pacific Railroad or Railway Company was re-organized?

A. I do.

Pamphlet marked Complainant's Exhibit 109 (Schiff).

Q. I show you Complainant's Exhibit 109. Is that the plan of re-organization of the Union Pacific?

A. I should assume it is.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I offer in evidence Complainant's Exhibit 109 (Schiff):

1757 Complainant's Exhibit 109 (Schiff) is as follows:

1758 To the security holders of the Union Pacific main lines proper, inclusive of the Kansas Pacific line:

The system of the Union Pacific Railway Co. having become dismembered, and the holders of the securities of the branch lines having already taken steps for their own protection, it has become evident that the holders of the various kinds of bonds secured upon the main stem of the Union Pacific Railway Co., including the Kansas Pacific line, must combine in order to protect themselves.

The main difficulty in effecting a prompt reorganization of the Union Pacific Railway Co. proper, is in the impracticability thus far experienced of reaching a settlement with the United States Government, which holds a second lien upon the Union Division from Omaha to a point 5 miles west of Ogden, 1,038 miles, and on the Kansas Division from Kansas City (exclusive of the Kansas City, Missouri, terminals) west of the 394th Mile Post in Kansas; but which has no lien upon that part of the Kansas Pacific line between the 394th Mile Post and Denver, 245 miles, nor on the Leavenworth Branch, Leavenworth to Lawrence Junction, 32 miles, nor on the Cheyenne Division, Denver to Cheyenne, 104 miles. Congress having thus far been unwilling to pass any legislation authorizing a settlement, it becomes imperatively necessary on the part of the holders of the First Mortgage Bonds, of which part have already matured, and all of which will mature within the next few years, to combine for an enforcement of their prior lien. Eminent counsel have advised that the lien of the First Mortgage Bonds may be effectively fore-1759 closed; and while it is very desirable to make a settlement with the United States Government, and to continue efforts in this direction, further delay on the part of the First Mortgage Bondholders in protecting themselves by securing their legal rights would be likely to become dangerous and to result in loss.

The undersigned have been asked by large interests to formulate and proceed with a reorganization, which shall at once secure to the holders of the First Mortgage and other bonds requiring consideration in reorganization a full return in new securities of the successor Company with fixed charges based upon the lowest results from the operation of the main line, and the Kansas Pacific and Denver Pacific lines which have been obtained during the times of the greatest depression. A Plan is submitted herewith to the consideration of the security holders, which, it is believed, fully carries this purpose into effect, and at the same time secures to First Mortgage Bondholders the payment of the matured and maturing interest until it shall become practicable to carry out the reorganization. Should this end, contrary to expectation, not be attained, the bonds which holders are requested to deposit without delay will be returned without expense.

Prompt action on the part of bondholders in uniting being imperative, the time during which deposits can be made has been limited to December 31st, 1895, after which date no bonds will be admitted, unless otherwise determined, except upon the payment of a penalty of five per cent.

Stockholders must likewise deposit their share certificates, 1760 properly endorsed, prior to December 31st, 1895, but will not be required to pay any part of the assessment of $15 a share until the same is called for hereafter by the Committee after the Plan shall have been declared operative. Upon stock deposited after December 31st, 1895, the assessment will be at the rate of $20 a share, unless otherwise determined, $5 of which shall be payable at the time of deposit, as a penalty.

In case the reorganization is abandoned, without having been declared operative, holders of receipts will receive back the shares to which they are entitled, without expense to them, on surrender of their receipts, properly endorsed, at the Depositaries which issued them.

Deposits may be made at any of the Depositaries on and after November 1, 1895, from which date matured coupons on First Mortgage Bonds will be cashed as provided in the Plan.

The Committee may at any time after December 31, 1895, alter the penalties above specified or decline to receive further deposits of bonds or stock.

The Mercantile Trust Company of New York has been designated as the Central Depositary both for the bonds and the stock (with auxiliary Depositaries as set forth in the Plan), and will issue engraved Certificates of Deposit, for the listing of which application will be made to the New York Stock Exchange at the proper time. Temporary receipts will be issued in exchange for securities deposited until the engraved Certificates shall be ready.

Protective Committees already organized in the interests of 1761 the holders of either of the classes of bonds embraced in the Plan are invited to confer and co-operate with this Committee in respect to such interests.

REORGANIZATION

of the

UNION PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

STATEMENT.

MILEAGE:

The main lines of the Union Pacific Railway Company are as follows:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Union Division—Council Bluffs to a point 5 miles west of Ogden | 1,048.01 | miles |
| Kansas Division—Kansas City to Denver | 643.55 | " |
| Leavenworth Branch—Lawrence to Leavenworth | 31.93 | " |
| Cheyenne Division—Denver to Cheyenne | 104.10 | " |
| Total main line mileage | 1,827.59 | " |

LANDS:

The outstanding land and town lot contracts on December 31st, 1894, were as follows:

|---|---|
| Union Division | $2,727,480.27 |
| Kansas Pacific and Denver Pacific divisions | 3,435,271.28 |

CAPITAL STOCK:

[a] NOTE.—The lien of the Government for the security of this debt is a second lien subordinate to the lien of the First Mortgage bonds on the Union Division, and of the Eastern and Middle Division bonds on 394 miles of the Kansas Division. The proportions of the Principal of the debt ($33,539,512) applicable to the Union and Kansas Divisions, respectively, are as follows:

|---|---|
| Union Division debt to the Government | $27,236,512 |
| Kansas Division " " " " | 6,303,000 |

1764 FIXED CHARGES:

The interest on the debt to the United States (Principal $33,539,512) has been an accumulating obligation, diminished only by application of withheld compensation for Government service and by Sinking Fund receipts. The accumulated interest, now aggregating, after all deductions, more than $19,000,000, will mature, it is claimed, with the maturity of the principal of the debt which now impends.

In the following table, which states the fixed charges of the Union Pacific Railway Company (proper) for each of the five years from 1890 to 1894, inclusive, the following liabilities are not included:

1. The excess of interest on the debt to the Government over the percentage of net earnings applicable to it under the Thurman and other Acts.[a]
2. Interest on bonds held in main line mortgage Trusts under conversion provisions.
3. The obligations under guaranties, determined by the deficit in the operations of auxiliary lines to meet interest or provide the traffic receipts guaranteed by the Union Pacific Railway Company.

GENERAL CONSIDERATIONS:

1. The mortgage debt for which provision is made in the following Plan for Reorganization is exclusive of main-line bonds held in Trusts or Sinking Funds under Mortgages included in the proposed reorganization—the issues being reduced. to that extent, for reorganization purposes.

The bonds thus available under new plan without the necessity for provision in new securities are as follows:

|---|---|
| Omaha Bridge Renewal 5% Bonds (held by the Receivers) | $322,000 |
| Eastern Division bonds (held in Denver Extension Sinking Fund) | 304,000 |
| Middle Division bonds (held in Denver Extension Sinking Fund) | 385,000 |
| 1766 Denver Extension bonds (held in Denver Extension Sinking Fund) | 1,781,000 |
| Kansas Pacific Consols (held in Kansas Pacific Further Security Trust and by the Receivers) | 120,000 |
| Kansas Pacific Income 7s, unsubordinated (held in Kansas Pacific Consolidated Mortgage Trust) | 252,300 |
| Kansas Pacific Income 7s, subordinated (held in Kansas Pacific Consolidated Mortgage Trust) | 3,988,550 |
| Denver Pacific First Mortgage 7s (held in Kansas Pacific Consolidated Mortgage Trust) | 971,000 |
| Leavenworth Branch First Mortgage 7s (held in Kansas Pacific Consolidated Mortgage Trust) | 585,000 |

2. Nor does the reorganization include provision for the Collateral Trust obligations of The Union Pacific Railway Company. The securities embraced in these Trusts are largely those of companies which have already, by orders of court made in the original general receivership cause or in independent foreclosure proceedings, lost in part or in whole their character as portions of what has been distinctively known as the Union Pacific System. Independent reorganizations of many of these properties are pending. The purposes which brought into existence guaranties of the obligations of many of these auxiliary companies have been accomplished by construction and otherwise, and considerations will not exist under reorganization for continued relations with these properties upon the basis of an assumption of any of their fixed charges. Geographical conditions and considerations of mutual advantage point to a continued operation of such of these auxiliary properties as have had a demonstrated value, in harmony with that of the reorganized Com-
1767 pany, and relief from the burden of these guaranties will, it is believed, be an advantage obtained without detriment to the earning capacity of the property.

3. The total charges for the prosperous year of 1892 (including interest on fixed bonds, mortgage sinking funds, Government deductions and requirements, and other charges made up in large part of guaranty obligations), aggregated the sum of $7,881,475.44; or a sum greater by $881,475.44 than an amount necessary to pay the annual interest on the maximum Mortgage Debt and full dividend on the maximum issue of Preferred Stock contemplated in the following plan of reorganization:

The maximum interest and dividend requirements under the Plan applied to the average annual net earnings of the past 10 years shows these results:

NOTE.—The lowest net earnings realized by the Union Pacific Railway were those of the year 1894, when they were $4,315,077.25, or $315,077.25 in excess of interest on the maximum amount of bonds as proposed in the following Plan:

PLAN.

It is proposed, through such foreclosure proceedings as the Committee shall cause to be instituted or shall adopt, or through such other means as the Committee shall determine, that a new company shall succeed to (or that the present company reorganized upon the basis of indebtedness fixed in this plan shall retain) the main lines and lands covered by the mortgages included in the plan.

Interest received by the Committee on deposited bonds of this class will be accounted for to the holders of corresponding Certificates of Deposit.

CASH PROVISIONS FOR FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS.

Through arrangements made with the Syndicate hereafter mentioned, the following cash provisions are made in respect to defaulted and future interest on present outstanding First Mortgage bonds of the Union Pacific and Kansas Pacific Railway Companies, as shown in detail below.

1771 First. The coupons now in default upon present First Mortgage bonds are to be purchased in cash for account of the Syndicate at the time of the deposit with the Committee of the bonds to which they pertain.

Second. Coupons maturing on deposited First Mortgage bonds in the interval between the deposit thereof under the plan and the date from which bonds of the new company are to bear interest (January 1st, 1897), are to be purchased by the Syndicate from the Committee, which in turn shall apply the amounts so received, at the respective due dates of the coupons, to the payment of corresponding installments on its outstanding certificates applicable to such deposited bonds.

Third. At the time of the issue of the new Four Per Cent. bonds the difference between the interest at their rate and at the rate of the present First Mortgage bonds (i. e., the rate difference of 2%) shall be adjusted in cash covering the periods between January 1st, 1897, and the respective dates of the maturity of the present bonds. The proportion of the current semi-annual interest installments which shall have accrued on January 1st, 1897, on such of said bonds as do not bear January coupons shall be likewise provided for in cash at the time of the delivery of the new bonds.

The BONDS to which the foregoing cash provisions apply and the extent of the CASH REQUIREMENTS to meet these provisions, are thus shown:

In all cases where the foregoing provisions apply to semi-annual interest installments not represented by coupons because of the prior maturity of the principal of the bonds, the Syndicate will take assignments of such interest installments from holders presenting their bonds for deposit, or from the Committee as to such bonds as shall have been deposited, and will hold and treat such assignments in the manner hereinafter provided with respect to coupons taken up by the Syndicate.

ASSESSMENT.

The common stock of the present company will be assessed at the rate of $15 per share.

Shareholders paying the assessment of $15 per share will receive the amount of the assessment (viz., $15 per share) in new preferred stock at par, and will also receive par of their present common stock in common stock of the new company.

Shareholders who do not pay their assessments as called will forfeit their rights. The stock assessment will be underwritten before the plan is declared operative.

The proceeds of the assessment shall be applicable to the cash requirements of this plan as herein provided, and to such requirements as shall be fixed and determined by the Committee, including such expenses and charges as it shall make or incur in the premises, and suitable compensation to the members of the Committee.

1774 The amount of this assessment shall be payable at such times and in such installments as the Committee shall determine after the plan has been declared operative, but not more than $5 per share shall be called in any consecutive thirty days.

REORGANIZATION SYNDICATE.

A reorganization syndicate has been organized under the management of Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Company, Bankers, to furnish the sum of Ten million dollars for the following purposes:

1. To purchase all the interest coupons on First Mortgage bonds now in default.

2. To purchase as they shall mature hereafter the interest coupons on First Mortgage bonds and, also the semi-annual assignments of interest accruing on bonds already matured during the pendency of the Plan and until it shall become operative.

3. To purchase, if it shall be found advisable for the promotion of the reorganization, any outstanding First Mortgage bonds and Omaha Bridge bonds, and to deposit the same under this plan; and, if it shall be found advisable, to purchase all or any defaulted or future maturing coupons or interest assignments on Omaha Bridge bonds.

Coupons and interest assignments purchased for account of the Syndicate shall be deposited in The Mercantile Trust Company of New York, which shall issue its certificates for the same to the Syndicate, or such other course shall be taken in respect thereto

1775 as shall be determined by the Committee and the Bankers to effectively and conveniently carry out this feature of the plan, and as will secure to the Syndicate all rights of the bondholders in and to the coupons and interest claims so purchased and in and to the lien and right of enforcement of the lien thereof.

Such steps shall be taken in respect to all purchased coupons and interest assignments as will secure a valid claim for cumulative interest in favor of the Reorganization Syndicate.

The right is reserved on behalf of the Committee, with the assent of the Bankers, to call for an increase of the amount required to be advanced by the Syndicate to Fifteen million dollars.

The Syndicate is to advance a sum not exceeding $100,000 for expenses repayable with six per cent. interest after the plan shall have been declared operative.

All advances made by the Syndicate shall be re-payable to it in gold.

Six Million Dollars of preferred stock are to be turned over as compensation to the Syndicate, of which the Bankers are to retain One Million as their own compensation.

LIMITATIONS OF TIME.

Should it in the opinion of the Committee appear desirable to make any substantial alterations in the foregoing plan, it shall make publication of such proposed alterations for at least twenty days, during which time the security holders, not approving of the proposed alterations, shall be permitted to surrender their certificates of deposit and withdraw their securities, upon refunding with six per

1779 AGREEMENT.

Depew, Marvin Hughitt, and Oliver Ames, 2d, parties of the first part, and herein called the "Committee," and holders of such bonds and stock of The Union Pacific Railway Company as shall, conformably with the provisions of the annexed Plan and of this Agreement, be deposited as in said Plan and herein provided, parties of the second part, and herein called "Depositors."

Whereas, the parties of the first part have been and hereby are constituted a Committee for the reorganization of the affairs of The Union Pacific Railway Company proper, inclusive of its Kansas Pacific Lines, and have formulated the annexed Plan for such reorganization:

Now this agreement witnesseth:

That each and every person or party who shall have deposited with either of the Depositaries hereunder as hereinafter provided any bonds of the Union Pacific Railway Company receivable under this Agreement, or any stock of said Company, hereby promises and agrees to and with the Committee and every other party hereto, and they and the Committee respectively promise and agree as follows:

1780 majority of the Committee and lodged respectively with the Depositaries, shall be held and taken as the original Agreement. The said Plan is, and shall be, taken to be a part of this Agreement, with the same effect as though each and every provision thereof had been embodied herein, and said Plan and this Agreement shall be read as parts of one and the same instrument, but it is understood, however, that no estimate, statement, explanation or suggestion in said Plan, or in the statement which precedes the same, or in this Agreement, or in any circular issued or to be issued by the Committee, is intended to or shall operate as a representation or warranty or as a condition of the deposit of securities hereunder, and no error or defect therein shall operate to release any depositing security holder, except with the consent of the Committee.

Depositors of securities shall receive receipts or certificates of deposit in form to be approved by the Committee, specifying the securities deposited and assessments, if any, paid thereon, and all rights of the depositors in respect of such deposits shall be such only as are evidenced by such receipts or certificates; and thereafter the holder of any such receipt or certificate, or of any receipt or certificate issued in lieu thereof or in exchange therefor, shall be subject to this agreement and entitled to have and exercise the rights of the original depositor under the receipt or certificate issued to him in respect of the securities therein mentioned.

The respective receipts or certificates of deposit, and the interest represented thereby, and all rights of the holders in respect of 1781 the deposited securities and assessments paid thereon, shall be transferable only subject to the terms and conditions of this agreement and in such manner as the Committee shall approve, and upon such transfer the transferees and holders of such receipts or certificates of deposit shall for all purposes be substituted in place of the prior holders, subject to this agreement. All such transferees, as well as the original holders of receipts or certificates of deposit, shall be embraced under the term "Depositors," whenever used herein. Each receipt or certificate of deposit may be treated by the Committee and by the Depositaries as a negotiable instrument, and the holder for the time being may be deemed to be the absolute owner thereof and of all rights of the original depositor of the bond or stock and assessments in respect of which the same was issued, and neither the Depositaries nor the Committee shall be affected by any notice to the contrary. By accepting any such receipt or certificate, every recipient or holder thereof shall thereby become party to this agreement with the same force and effect as though an actual subscriber hereto under seal.

Depositors must in all cases deposit with the certificates for their stock, or with their bonds or other securities, such transfers, assignments and powers of attorney as may be required by the Committee, in order to vest in said Committee or to enable it to transfer the complete and absolute title to such stock, bonds or other securities, and to coupons or interest installments on deposited bonds; and the depositors respectively agree at any time on demand of the Committee to execute any and all transfers, assignments or writings necessary for vesting complete ownership of the bonds, stocks or other 1782 securities deposited hereunder in said Committee or in its nominees, or for the purpose of enabling said Committee to carry out said plan of reorganization.

The Committee shall have power to fix or limit the time within which all or any class of security holders may deposit their securities and become parties to this agreement as herein provided, and may, in its discretion, and on such terms and conditions as it may see fit, either generally or in special instances extend or renew the time so fixed or limited.

Holders of securities not deposited in the manner herein provided within the times so fixed, limited, extended or renewed will not be entitled to deposit the same or become parties to this agreement or share in the benefits thereof and shall acquire no rights thereunder, except by express consent of the Committee and on such terms and conditions as the Committee may prescribe. Depositors of stock who shall fail to pay their assessments, or any installments thereof, within such time as shall be fixed or limited shall cease to be entitled to any benefit hereunder, or in the securities deposited or assessments paid, and shall absolutely forfeit, without right of redemption, their stock, together with any part of the assessments paid thereon, and the Committee may sell the same, or the new securities which may be issued in respect thereof, to any purchaser paying such amount as the Committee may determine, and the proceeds thereof may be used for any of the requirements of carrying out said plan, and as a reserve for the uses of the new company. The Committee may, however, in its discretion, on such terms as it shall see fit, waive by resolu-1783 tion any such forfeiture or failure to pay the assessment within the times allowed.

Second. The Depositors hereunder hereby request the Committee to endeavor to carry into practical operation this agreement, including the foregoing plan of reorganization, in its entirety or in part, to such extent and in such manner and with such additions, exceptions and modifications as the Committee shall deem to be for the best interests of the Depositors. Each and every Depositor, for himself and not for any other Depositor, does hereby sell, assign, transfer and set over to the said parties of the first part as joint tenants, and not as tenants in common, and to the survivor and survivors of them and to their successors, as a Committee, each and every bond, share of stock, security or obligation or evidence thereof deposited hereunder, and every Depositor hereby agrees that the Committee shall be, and hereby is, vested with all the power and authority of owners of the stock, bonds, securities and obligations deposited hereunder, with full right to transfer the same into its own name, as a Committee, or into the name of any other person or persons whom the Committee may select; to vote thereon at any meeting of stockholders or bondholders or creditors; to use every such stock, bond, security or obligation as fully and to the same extent as the owner or holder thereof, including power to declare due the principal of any bond or other obligation deposited hereunder, and to revoke any such declaration whenever made; to call or attend, and either in person or by proxy to vote at, any and all meetings of stockholders or bondholders or creditors of any 1784 corporation, however convened; to terminate or to seek to dissolve or modify any trust or lease, in whole or in part; to apply for the determination of the validity thereof, or for the removal of any trustees or the substitution of other trustees, or to take any other steps in respect of any trust or lease or under any provision thereof; to purchase at such prices as it shall see fit, or to pay, compromise or settle with the holders of any coupons, notes or other obligations of the Union Pacific Railway Company, or of any or either of the original Companies consolidated therein, or of auxiliary Companies heretofore related thereto, or any Receivers' certificates or obligations issued or which may be issued or incurred by the Receivers thereof, and to apply for that purpose any moneys received from the assessments on the stock, or which may otherwise be received or raised by the Committee; to sell and transfer and to effectively assign any and all coupons on deposited bonds, and any rights, claims or demands for accrued or future interest on such bonds; to give all bonds of indemnity or other bonds, and to charge therewith the securities deposited hereunder or any part thereof, if the Committee shall so deem necessary or expedient in carrying out the purposes hereof; to institute or cause to be instituted or to become parties to any legal proceedings which could be instituted by any Depositor or any corporation, or any officer of any corporation whose stock or bonds or other obligations (or any part thereof) are deposited hereunder, and to participate in, adopt or extend its aid and co-operation in and to any and all legal proceedings now existing; to apply for receivers, or the removal of receivers and the substitution of other receivers, or for the termination of any receivership 1785 and the delivery of any property to its owners; to enter into settlement of any litigation now or at any time existing or threatened, in whole or in part, with plenary power to enter into arrangements for decrees, or for facilitating or hastening the course of litigation, or in any way to promote the objects of the Plan and the purposes of the Committee; to do whatever, in the judgment of the Committee, may be necessary to promote or to procure such joint or separate sales of any property or franchises herein concerned, as the Committee may deem desirable, wherever the same may be situated; to adjourn the sale of any property or franchises, or of any portion or lot thereof at discretion; to bid, or to refrain from bidding, at any sale, either public or private, either in separate lots or as a whole, for any property or franchise or any part thereof, whether or not owned, controlled or covered by any deposited security, including or excluding any particular rolling stock, or other property, real or personal, and at, before, or after, any such sale, to arrange and agree for the resale of any portion of the property which the Committee may decide to sell rather than to retain; to hold any property or franchises purchased by the Committee either in its name or in the name of persons or corporations by it chosen for the purposes of this agreement, and to apply any security deposited hereunder in satisfaction of any bid or towards obtaining funds for the satisfaction thereof; it being understood that the term property and franchises includes any and all railroads, railroad and other transportation lines, leaseholds, stock or other interests in corporations, in which the Union Pacific Railway Company has any interest of any 1786 kind whatever, direct or indirect. The amount to be bid or paid by the Committee for any property or franchises shall be absolutely discretionary with it; and, in case of the sale to others of any property or franchise, the Committee may receive out of the proceeds of such sale or otherwise any dividend in any form accruing on any securities held by it.

The enumeration of specific powers hereby conferred shall not be construed to limit or to restrict general powers herein conferred or intended so to be; and it is hereby distinctly declared that it is intended to confer on the Committee, and each depositor hereunder hereby confers on the Committee, in respect of all securities deposited or to be deposited, and in all other respects, any and all powers necessary or expedient, or which the Committee may deem necessary or expedient in or towards carrying out or promoting the purposes of this agreement in any respect, even though any such power be apparently of a character not now contemplated; and the Committee may exercise any and every such power as fully and effectively as if the same were herein distinctly specified, and as often as, for any cause or reason, it may deem expedient. And it is further understood and agreed that the methods to be adopted for or towards carrying out this agreement shall be entirely discretionary with the Committee.

Third. Any moneys paid under or with reference to said plan or this agreement shall be paid over by the Depositaries to the Committee, and shall be applicable for any of the purposes of the plan and agreement as may be most convenient, and as may from time to 1787 time be determined by the Committee, whose determination as to the propriety and purposes of any such application shall be final, and nothing in said plan shall be understood as limiting or requiring the application of specific moneys to specific purposes. No liability in respect or in favor of any bonds, stocks, obligations, securities or debts not called for and accepted on deposit hereunder, nor in favor of any lease or contract, is assumed hereunder, or by or for any new company (notwithstanding any mention thereof, or estimate in respect thereto, or reservation of securities to provide therefor, in said plan), nor is any trust in their favor created or impressed upon any deposit or payment hereunder, or upon any securities to be issued under the plan. Any obligation in the nature of floating debt or otherwise against the Union Pacific Railway Company or any property embraced in the plan, either as proposed or as carried out, or any securities held as collateral for any such obligations, may be acquired or extinguished or held by the Committee at such times, and in such manner and upon such terms as it may deem proper for the purposes of reorganization, but nothing contained in the plan or in this agreement is intended to constitute, nor shall it constitute, any liability or trust in favor or in respect of any such obligation.

The Committee shall have absolute and complete discretion and latitude in the use, disposition or distribution of all securities of the new Company, which are specified in the plan as reserved for purposes therein stated and which are in excess of the securities there embraced in the defined issues for reorganization purposes; and it may use, dispose of, distribute or apportion any of such re-
1788 served securities of the new Company in any manner and upon any terms which it may deem expedient or advisable to promote or accomplish the substantial objects and purposes of the plan and of this agreement. In case of any claim, lien or obligation not herein fully provided for, and affecting the Union Pacific Railway Company, or any property or franchise thereof, the Committee may from time to time make such compromise in respect thereto or provision therefor as it may deem suitable, using therefor any securities not expressly required for settlement with Depositors; but the total amount of new securities to be created, as set forth in the plan, shall not be increased.

Fourth. The Committee may from time to time make contracts or arrangements with any other Committee, person, syndicate, or corporation, for the purpose of carrying this agreement, or any of the provisions or purposes thereof, into effect. The Committee may employ counsel, agents, and all necessary assistance, and may incur and discharge any and all expenses by the Committee deemed reasonable for the purposes of this agreement. Its selection of the Depositaries named in the plan, and any selections which may be hereafter made by it of further or substituted Depositaries, are hereby authorized, ratified, and confirmed. The Committee may prescribe the form of all securities and of all instruments at any time to be issued or entered into under this agreement. It may create and provide for all necessary trusts, and may nominate and appoint trustees thereunder. It may, at public or private sale, or otherwise, dispose of any securities of the new company left in its hands because of any failure to make deposits hereunder. In so disposing of any 1789 such new securities thus left in its hands the Committee may use the same or the proceeds thereof for the purpose of carrying out the reorganization in such manner as it may deem expedient and advisable.

Fifth. The Committee may procure the organization of one or more new companies, or may adopt or use any existing or future companies, and may cause to be made such consolidations, leases, sales, or other arrangements, and may make, or cause to be made, such conveyances or transfers of any properties or securities acquired by the Committee and take such other steps as the Committee may deem proper for the purpose of creating the new securities provided for in the plan and carrying out all or any of the provisions thereof.

The Committee may negotiate and agree with any and all companies or persons for obtaining or granting running powers, terminal facilities, exchanges of property, or any other conveniences which it may deem necessary or desirable to obtain or to grant, and may make contracts therefor binding upon such new company; and generally may authorize, ratify, and make such purchases, contracts, stipulations, or arrangements as will in its opinion operate directly or indirectly to aid in the preservation, improvement, development, or protection of any property of the Union Pacific Railway Company, or to prevent or avoid opposition to, or interference with, the successful execution hereof.

The Committee may proceed under this agreement, or any part thereof, with or without foreclosure, and may exercise any power after foreclosure sale.

Any action contemplated in the plan or agreement to be 1790 performed on or after completion of reorganization may be taken by the Committee at any time when it shall deem the reorganization advanced sufficiently to justify such course, and the Committee may defer, as it may deem necessary, the performance of any provision of the plan or agreement, or may refer such performance to the new Company.

Sixth. The bonds deposited under this agreement, and all Receivers' certificates, coupons and claims purchased or otherwise acquired under this agreement, shall remain in full force and effect for all purposes, and shall not be deemed satisfied, released or discharged by the delivery to the depositors of new securities in respect of their deposits, and no legal right or lien shall be deemed released or waived, but said bonds and other claims, and any deficiency judgment obtained in respect of any of said deposited bonds, and any judgment upon any of such claims, and all liens and equities, shall remain unimpaired, and may be enforced by the Committee or by the new Company or other assigns of the Committee until paid or satisfied in full or expressly released. Neither the Committee nor any bondholders or creditors of the Union Pacific Railway Company, by executing this agreement or by becoming parties thereto, release, surrender, or waive any lien, right, or claim in favor of any stockholders or other parties interested in such company, and all such liens, rights or claims shall vest unimpaired in the Committee, and in the new Company, as its assigns; and any purchase or purchases by or on behalf of the Committee, or the new Company, under any decree for the enforcement of any such lien, right or claim shall vest the property purchased in the Committee or the new Company, 1791 free from all interest or claim on the part of such stockholders or other parties.

Seventh. The Committee may construe this agreement (including the plan of reorganization), and its construction thereof or action thereunder in good faith shall be final and conclusive.

The Committee may supply any omission or correct any error in the plan or in this agreement, and may modify or depart from any provisions thereof which it shall unanimously deem not to be substantial. In case, however, in the opinion of the Committee, any substantial change or alteration of the plan or of this agreement shall be necessary, such amendment shall be made only in the following manner:

A copy of the proposed change or alteration shall be lodged with each of the Depositaries under this agreement, and a notice thereof shall be advertised in the manner specified in Article Tenth hereof. Thereupon any holders of receipts or certificates of deposit who do not assent to such alteration may, at any time before a date specified in such advertisement, which date shall be at least twenty days after the first publication of such advertisement, withdraw the securities represented by their receipts or certificates of deposit upon surrendering their said receipts or certificates of deposit to the proper Depositaries.

Any interest paid or advanced in purchase of coupons or otherwise to holders of receipts or certificates in respect of deposited bonds represented thereby, or in respect of the new bonds to be issued 1792 in exchange therefor under the plan, must, in such cases, also be repaid with interest by the holders of such certificates of deposit before the deposited bonds represented by such certificates shall be surrendered in exchange therefor. Any assessments paid on deposited stock so withdrawn or the proceeds of the use thereof, shall be returned to the holders of certificates of deposit representing such deposited stock, less a pro rata share of the expenses and other expenditures and compensation of the Committee incurred up to the date of such withdrawal, which pro rata share shall be such as the Committee shall estimate to be properly applicable to the stock so withdrawn. All holders of certificates of deposit who shall not exercise this right to withdraw their securities within said time shall be deemed to have assented to and adopted such change or alteration and shall be bound thereby, and the Committee shall be fully authorized to carry the same into effect with all the powers provided in this agreement.

Wherever the plan or this agreement is referred to in the plan or in this agreement, it shall be deemed to include any change or alteration thereof so adopted.

The plan may be abandoned by the Committee at any time notwithstanding it may have previously declared the same to be operative.

The Committee may at any time abandon such portions and features of the Reorganization as relate to any of the lines, or parts of lines, embraced in said plan, which lines or parts of lines, by reason of failure of holders to deposit securities affecting the same, or for any reason satisfactory to the Committee, it may deem 1793 expedient to omit from the Reorganization; and in such event the Committee shall, upon the surrender of the corresponding certificates of deposit and reimbursement of advances in respect to the bonds represented thereby, as above provided in case of withdrawals, return to the holders the deposited bonds secured upon the lines, or portions of lines, thus omitted, and the securities apportioned in the plan to the bonds thus returned shall not be issued.

In case the Committee shall finally abandon the entire plan, after having once declared it operative, the stock, bonds and securities deposited hereunder, or their proceeds, or any stock, bonds, securities, or claims representative thereof, then under the control of the Committee, shall be delivered to the several Depositors in amounts representing their respective interests upon surrender of their respective receipts or certificates. In such case the assessment moneys paid by the depositing stockholders, or any coupons, notes, Receivers' certificates, or other claims or property acquired therewith, or the proceeds thereof when received, shall be distributed or equitably adjusted among the respective holders of the receipts or certificates of deposit for stock in proportion to the amount of the assessment moneys paid thereon respectively.

Eighth. The action of a majority of the members of the Committee, expressed from time to time, either at a meeting or in writing with or without meeting, shall for all purposes constitute the action of the Committee, and have the same effect as if assented to by all. It may adopt its own rules of procedure. Any vacancy in the 1794 Committee may be filled by appointment in writing by the remaining members or a majority of them, and the Committee may by action of a majority of its members add to its number. All title, rights and powers vested in the Committee hereunder shall, from time to time, vest in the members of the Committee for the time being, without any further appointment, transfer or assignment whatsoever. In case of absence, any member may vote by any other member as his proxy.

Any member of the Committee may at any time resign by giving notice in writing to a majority of the remaining members, and the Committee may give full release and discharge to any such member, or to the personal representative of any deceased member. The Committee may act through sub-committees or agents, and may delegate any authority, as well as discretion, to any such sub-committee or agent. The Committee, or the Depositaries, or any present or future member of either, may be member of the Committee or of the Depositaries, and all or any of them may be or become pecuniarily interested in any contracts, property or matters which this agreement concerns, including any syndicate agreement, whether or not mentioned in the plan. Any direction given by the Committee shall be full and sufficient authority for any action of the Depositaries or any trust company or other custodian, or for any sub-committee or agent.

Ninth. The Committee undertakes in good faith to endeavor to carry out said Plan and this agreement, but the members of the Committee assume no personal responsibility for the execution thereof. No member of said Committee shall be liable in any case for the acts of the other members or of any other Committees or of any 1795 Depositary, nor for the acts of their agents, sub-committees or employees; nor shall they be personally liable for any error of judgment or mistake of law, but each shall be liable only for his willful misfeasance. No Depositary shall be liable for the acts of the Committee or of any other Depositary hereunder, or of any agents of the Committee or of any Depositary.

The members of the Committee shall be entitled to receive reasonable compensation for their services, and such compensation, with the reasonable expenses of said Committee, shall be paid as part of the expenses of reorganization, the amounts of such compensation and expenses being first approved of by at least four members of the Committee. The accounts of the Committee shall be filed with the Board of Directors of the new Company, and, when audited by said Board of Directors, shall be binding and conclusive on all parties, and the Committee shall be thereby discharged, turning over to the new Company any balance in the hands of the Committee.

The acceptance of new securities by any Depositor shall estop such Depositor from questioning the conformity of such securities, as to character or otherwise, with any provision of said plan, and the acceptance of new securities by a majority in amount of any class of depositors shall so estop all Depositors of such class.

Tenth. All calls for the deposit of bonds and stocks, for the payment of assessments or for the surrender of certificates, all notices fixing or limiting the time for the deposit of securities or the payment of assessments, and all other calls or notices hereunder, shall, except when otherwise provided, be inserted in two or more daily 1796 papers of general circulation published in the City of New York, and in one or more daily papers of general circulation published in the cities of London, Boston, Amsterdam and Frankfort, respectively, twice in each week for two successive weeks. Any call or notice whatsoever, when so published by the Committee, shall be taken and considered as though personally served on all parties hereto and upon all parties becoming bound hereby, as of the respective dates of insertion thereof, and such publication shall be the only notice required to be given under any provision of this agreement.

Eleventh. This agreement shall bind the Committee and their successors in office appointed in accordance herewith and the depositors hereunder, their and each of their heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns.

In witness whereof, the members of the Committee have hereunto signed their names, and all other parties hereto have deposited securities as above set forth.

1797 Q. I see by this plan, Mr. Schiff, that you were one of the re-organization committee.

A. I was.

Q. And Kuhn, Loeb & Company were the bankers of the committee.

A. They were.

Q. It also appears, on page 17 of this re-organization pamphlet, that a re-organization syndicate was organized under the management of Kuhn, Loeb & Company.

A. I remember about that.

Q. You remember that, do you?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember now, Mr. Schiff, when the present Union Pacific Company took over the properties and commenced business?

A. About. It was in the beginning of 1898.

Q. You were a member of the Board of Directors, were you not?

A. I remember some of the board.

Q. I say you were a member of the board?

A. Yes.

Q. Up to what time?

A. I think up to April, 1906.

Q. Mr. Kahn was also a member of the Board of Directors at the same time, was he not?

A. I think he was.

Q. Do you recall, Mr. Schiff, the issuance of a hundred millions of convertible bonds of the Union Pacific?

A. I do.

Q. They were brought out through your house?

A. Bought by our house.

Q. Do you remember the purpose for which they were issued?

A. I do.

Q. What was it?

A. To put the Company in funds.

Q. For what purpose were the funds to be used?

A. The first part, which was issued I think to the extent of $40,-000,000, if I remember correctly, was sold to put the Company in funds to pay for its purchase of Southern Pacific stock, or 1798 perhaps, rather, to put the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company in funds to pay for its purchase of Southern Pacific stock.

Q. Well, the purchase of the Southern Pacific stock was financed by the Union Pacific in the first instance, through those convertible bonds, wasn't it?

A. As far as I can remember, it was financed for the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company by the Union Pacific.

Q. Well, these various bond issues are in evidence. Do you remember the time that the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern purchased the stock of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. That is, you remember the fact of their purchasing it. At the time of that purchase, or prior to the time it was consummated, did Mr. Harriman and yourself have any conversation with Mr. Hill, or the parties who were negotiating that purchase, with reference to securing an interest in the purchase?

Mr. LOVETT. The defendants object to any testimony with reference to the purchase of the stock of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company by the Northern Pacific or any other company, because there is no issue in regard thereto made by the petition in this case.

Mr. CRAVATH. You simply meant to ask about any conversation in which Mr. Schiff himself took part?

Q. Mr. Hill testified in the Northern Securities case that Mr. Harriman and yourself did have a conversation, and it is that evidence I want to ask you about.

A. Do you want me to answer?

Mr. LOVETT. Answer the question.

1799 WITNESS. As far as I can remember—this is a matter of seven or eight years ago, but as far as I can remember, there were either one or two discussions between Mr. Harriman and Mr. Hill, and I believe I was present at least at one of them, in which the general aspect of the situation was discussed, and in which Mr. Harriman objected to the Burlington & Quincy passing into the hands of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern, and insisted that it should be kept independent. He said that the Union Pacific was perfectly satisfied with the position of the Burlington & Quincy as it existed, and he thought it was inadvisable that it should be attached to the two northern corporations, or either of them.

Q. Well, that is part of the conversation, but that is not the part that I was particularly directing your attention to. Do you recall a request that was made either by Mr. Harriman or yourself or both of you in one of those conversations, that you gentlemen or the Union Pacific, in case the purchase was to go through, should be allowed to participate in it with the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern?

A. I cannot exactly remember whether it was a formal request. I know such was the desire, in order to keep the Burlington & Quincy independent, that the Union Pacific interests, if the purchase was made by the two Northern companies, should have an interest in it.

Q. Yes. You do not remember the exact conversation, I suppose, so many years ago?

A. No. That is eight years ago.

Q. And was the desire expressed that that interest be an equal interest with the others, that is, one-third to each of the three companies?

A. That I cannot remember.

Q. All you remember is that it was the desire to have some interest in the purchase?

A. Yes.

1800 Q. What ground of objection did Mr. Harriman urge on behalf of the Union Pacific, or from its standpoint, to the Northern lines acquiring the Burlington?

A. As far as I can remember, he thought existing conditions should not be disturbed.

Q. But if it was to be purchased, that the Union Pacific interests should share in the purchase?

A. Should have an interest, yes.

Q. Do you remember about when that conversation was, Mr. Schiff?

A. As far as I can remember, it was in the spring of 1901, but I can not remember exactly whether it was in April or May.

Q. A little earlier, wasn't it?

A. It was in the spring of the year.

Q. What did Mr. Hill respond to that suggestion?

A. As far as I can remember, it was declined.

Q. Declined.

A. But I am not certain.

Q. Mr. Schiff, have you a recollection of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Company buying a large amount of Northern Pacific stock in the spring of 1901?

A. Indeed I have.

Q. And that was turned over to the Union Pacific or the Oregon Short Line, wasn't it?

A. It was re-sold to the Union Pacific or the Oregon Short Line.

Q. Almost immediately, wasn't it?

A. After a very short time.

Q. Now, prior to the time that your firm went into the market and bought that block of Northern Pacific stock, did you have any conversation with Mr. Harriman with reference to making those purchases?

A. We made the first purchase without conversation or conference with anybody. We only informed Mr. Harriman, after we had started purchasing Northern Pacific stock, that we had done so.

1801 Q. Do you remember how much you had bought up to that time, when you had your talk with Mr. Harriman?

A. I do not remember.

Q. It appears in the testimony that you turned that stock over in certain blocks.

A. We did.

Q. You recall that fact, don't you?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Until finally the Union Pacific had acquired a majority of the then outstanding Northern Pacific stock, counting the preferred and the common together.

A. As far as I remember, of the common and preferred stock combined.

Q. What was the purpose of the Union Pacific or the Oregon Short Line in acquiring the majority of the stock of the Northern Pacific?

A. I think that is a question which Mr. Harriman is better able to answer than I, but as far as I can answer it I will say its purpose was to continue, if possible, the status quo as far as the Burlington & Quincy was concerned—to keep it independent.

Q. That is, to get a half-interest in the control of the C., B. & Q.?

A. There was nothing clearly thought or said about it. I think the Union Pacific managers felt that if they controlled the Northern Pacific, which they had no desire to control because it was the Northern Pacific,—but if they did control the Northern Pacific, which at that time, together with the Great Northern had accomplished the purchase of the Burlington & Quincy, they might still be in a position to enforce independent management of the Burlington & Quincy.

Q. And that was the purpose? It was for the purpose of controlling the action of the Burlington that you (and by "you" I mean the Union Pacific interests) sought to take over the control of the Northern Pacific?

1802 Mr. LOVETT. I object to that question because it is not a fair statement of the witness's statement.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I will ask him to state it, then.

A. By no means the action of the Burlington; it was rather to compel the action of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, or, rather, the Northern Pacific which had bought the Burlington jointly with the Great Northern, and to leave the Burlington & Quincy in its status quo.

Q. What do you mean by the "status quo?"

A. Leave it independent.

Q. What interest did the Union Pacific have in what was done with the Burlington?

A. While it was, to some extent, a sharp rival, it was always able to get along with it, but the managers of the Union Pacific did not know, with two new interests coming into that territory, what might become of the Burlington and what havoc might be played with existing competitive conditions which were entirely satisfactory.

Q. That is, you did not want new competitors to come into the Union Pacific territory? You did not want the Northern lines to come down there as competitors in the Union Pacific territory?

A. That was not the case, as far as I understand it. I do not believe, as far as I can remember, that anything was considered or thought about it at that time, except that existing conditions should not be changed. As you are aware, the thing worked out differently, and it is rather difficult to say now what would have been the result if the Union Pacific had carried out its purpose in forcing the status quo to be maintained.

Q. Now, Mr. Schiff, you say that the status quo meant that the Burlington, while a sharp rival, was one that you could get along with in the Union Pacific territory. That is what you said a 1803 minute ago, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was to prevent any different or other rivalry, was it not, that you desired to prevent the Northern lines getting control of the Burlington?

A. By no means.

Q. What did you want then? What were you afraid of?

A. We were not afraid of anything, but we knew we were satisfied with the status quo and we wanted to have that maintained. We were not theorizing. We did not know what was beyond. We only knew what existed, and we wanted to hold on to that.

Q. You wanted to hold on to the situation that then existed?

A. Yes.

Q. This friendly rivalry with the Burlington?

A. Yes.

Q. You knew at that time, did you not, Mr. Schiff, that the western terminus of the Northern Pacific was the same as the western terminus of the Union Pacific with its subsidiary lines into Portland?

A. You mean that both companies had an entrance into Portland?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. You knew they were competing for business to the Coast by way of Portland, did you not?

A. Yes.

Mr. LOVETT. That the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern were?

Mr. SEVERANCE. The Northern Pacific and the Union Pacific.

Mr. LOVETT. By way of Portland?

Mr. SEVERANCE. Yes.

Mr. LOVETT. That is news to me. You mean the business into Portland?

Mr. SEVERANCE. Yes.

Q. Judge Lovett thinks I did not state my question cor-
1804 rectly. What I meant to ask you (and I think you understood me) is, that both lines reached Portland and were competing for business into Portland. You understand my question, don't you?

A. That I do not know. I mean in a general way. You must understand, and I think it will clear up the situation as far as I am concerned, that as to the actual traffic arrangements and business of the Union Pacific, Mr. Schiff and Mr. Kahn, the directors of the Union Pacific, knew very little. They were simply the financial experts, or whatever you want to call them.

Q. Mr. Kahn testified in the record here that you were the fiscal agents, but in your answer you do not like that expression.

A. I cannot say exactly we were the fiscal agents. I think the Union Pacific, if it had found it to its advantage, would have done business with other people. We re-organized the Company. We were looking after its financial affairs as far as the directors desired us to do so.

Q. You were the financial representatives of the Union Pacific from the time of the re-organization, were you not, and are still?

A. I don't know what you call financial representatives. We attended to most or practically all of its financial business.

Q. You had no intimate relations with any other transcontinental line at that time, had you, and have not had since you re-organized the Union Pacific?

A. I was a director of the Great Northern for many years.

Q. Up to what time?

A. I think up to 1900 or 1901; I don't remember.

Q. But not since then?

A. Not since then, no.

Q. And in looking after the financial matters here, your firm
1805 has been the Union Pacific banker, since the re-organization, hasn't it?

A. Yes, you might style it so.

Q. And you have not acted in that capacity for any other transcontinental line during that time, except incidentally, perhaps?

A. We have done business with a great many transcontinental lines.

Q. Undoubtedly.

A. We have done considerable financial business with the Great Northern. While directors in the Union Pacific, we have done business with the Atchison. I don't know whether we have done any business with the Northern Pacific, but it is not unlikely we have; I mean that we participated in the business, not directly probably.

Q. But you had no such character of relations with these other lines that you had with the Union Pacific? That is true, isn't it?

A. No, we had not.

Q. Isn't it a fact, Mr. Schiff, that since the re-organization, whenever the Union Pacific have had any securities to sell, or when they bought any large amount of securities, that they have been bought or sold through your house?

A. Yes; they gave us an opportunity to deal with them.

Q. How is that?

A. They gave us the first opportunity to deal with them.

Q. And you have accepted that opportunity?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember, Mr. Schiff, of certain conversations had by Mr. Harriman and yourself with Mr. Ripley and Mr. Morawetz, or either of them, in or about the year 1904, with reference to the Santa Fe?

A. I can not exactly remember. I know of those conversations. I am not quite clear in my mind whether I was present or not.

1806 I think I was present at one, but not more. However, I am not certain.

Q. Was that conversation with Mr. Morawetz or with Mr. Ripley, or both?

A. Even that I cannot remember. I have seen Mr. Morawetz so often, almost every week or oftener, that I cannot at present remember exactly what conversation you refer to.

Q. I will refresh your recollection or direct your attention to what I mean. Mr. Ripley testified, at the time an inquiry was being made into these railroads a couple of years ago, that in the summer of 1894 (1904) he had certain conversations with you and Mr. Harriman, and certain conversations with Mr. Morawetz, Mr. Harriman and yourself and your associates, with reference to having representation on the Board of Directors of the Santa Fe. It is about that representation I want to ask you.

A. If Mr. Ripley testified to a fact which he remembers, it is no doubt correct. I cannot for the moment remember whether I was present at those conferences, though in general I knew of them.

Q. You knew of them. From whom did you know of them?

A. I think Mr. Harriman, if I was not present. Mr. Harriman has probably, and I think almost certainly, repeated what was said at the conferences.

1807 Q. Mr. Schiff, you knew at that time that requests were made upon the Santa Fe people for representation of yourself and your associates?

A. I did.

Q. Who were the gentlemen that were included in the expression "Mr. Harriman, Mr. Schiff, and their associates?" Who were the other gentlemen?

A. Mr. William Rockefeller, Mr. Henry H. Rogers, Mr. Harriman, Mr. James Stillman, and ourselves.

Q. Mr. Frick?

A. No.

Q. He wasn't acting with you in that matter. Mr. Frick was then a director in the Union Pacific, was he not?

A. I have to refresh my memory. I do not remember just exactly about that.

Q. What was it that you gentlemen desired of the Santa Fe at that time?

A. We had been purchasing a large amount of the common stock of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad, and, under the laws of Arizona, we were entitled to cumulative voting, to two directors.

Q. The laws of Kansas, I think you mean; Kansas instead of Arizona.

A. Well, one of them. Kansas. We were entitled to two directors and we wanted them without resorting to cumulative voting.

Q. What gentlemen did you ask to have put on the Santa Fe board in the first instance?

A. Mr. Rogers and Mr. Frick.

Q. Eventually; but whom did you ask in the first instance to put on before that?

A. Will you please repeat that question?

Question read by the reporter.

A. Eventually?

Mr. CRAVATH. Whom did you ask in the first instance?

1808 Q. Whose were the first names you suggested, Mr. Schiff?

A. I do not remember that anybody else was suggested, except Mr. Frick and Mr. Rogers.

Q. Don't you remember of Mr. Harriman being suggested as one of the gentlemen to go on the board, and that Mr. Ripley objected to an executive officer of the Union Pacific going on?

A. I do not remember that.

Q. You do not remember any names other than Mr. Rogers and Mr. Frick?

A. I do not.

Q. What was your object in asking for this representation?

A. We were large owners of Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe stock, and we wanted to have representatives on the board to know that our interests were properly protected.

Q. Were you dissatisfied with the management of the Santa Fe road at that time?

A. I do not think we were.

Q. Were there any changes in the management that you desired to have made?

A. As I have said, we wanted to have two of our own representatives put on. It is but usual and natural that large stockholders should want to be represented on the board of managers.

Q. Yes; but I say was there any particular method of doing business on the Santa Fe that was objectionable to you, so that you wanted representatives to change it?

A. Not as far as I personally know.

Q. Did you know of anybody else in your syndicate who was dissatisfied?

A. I do not.

Q. Then there was no change of method of operation that you desired?

A. Not as far as I know of.

1809 Q. Mr. Harriman has testified in this case, with reference to his conversations with Mr. Ripley and Mr. Morawetz concerning representation on the Santa Fe road, as follows: I want to read it to you and see if your recollection agrees with his. He says: "It was, in substance, that we were to try to establish a better relationship between all railroads, in the line that we should deal more frankly with each other, more publicly and more frankly, and not operate our lines for the purpose of destroying each other, but for the purpose of helping each other and for developing the territory served by each; and to that extent I even went so far with Mr. Morawetz as to tell him that as far as the Southern Pacific was concerned, I would be willing to even put him on the Executive Committee of the Southern Pacific, so that he might know what our intentions were, if he chose to." Does that agree with your recollection of the attitude of you gentlemen at that time?

A. It does by no means. I must refer you to Mr. Harriman. I might as well state here, clearly, that as far as Kuhn, Loeb & Company were concerned they purchased Atchison stock because they considered it cheap; and for no other reason.

Q. You have no recollection of this matter that Mr. Harriman testified about being discussed—establishing better relations between the Union Pacific and the Santa Fe?

A. That is a matter, I suppose, of four years ago. I believe it was in 1904—four years ago.

Q. Yes.

A. I do not remember that it was discussed.

Q. You do not remember anything about it?

A. It may have been discussed with Mr. Kahn, and still I
1810 may not have been present, but I am sure I wasn't——

Q. You do not remember any such discussion in your presence?

A. No. Mr. Severance, I would like to add to this.

Q. Yes; go ahead, Mr. Schiff.

A. It is probable that in purchasing stocks, different participants had different purposes. As I have stated already, our purpose was to invest in Atchison stock because we considered it very low in price; and it may have been said, even if I do not remember it now, that it would be an advantage if friendlier relations than existed could be obtained in consequence. That may have been stated. Even if I do not remember it, it may still be a fact that that might have been stated.

Q. That might have been stated, although you do not remember it?

A. Yes.

Q. You did not suggest that Mr. Kahn or yourself go on that board, did you?

A. I do not think so.

Q. You do not remember that?

A. No.

Q. I think you said that you were present at one conversation with Mr. Ripley. Do you remember what was said in that conversation?

A. I think I may have been.

Q. But you can not remember about it?

A. But I do not remember about it exactly, no.

Q. That is all.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Mr. Schiff, this stock that you and your associates owned at the time of the discussions about representations on the Atchison
1811 board was stock that you gentlemen owned, and not stock of the Atchison that the Union Pacific owned; isn't that true?

A. That is correct.

Q. You were representing the personal interest of yourself and your associates in these discussions?

A. That is correct.

Q. At the time of the conversations with Mr. Hill, about which you were interrogated, the Burlington owned a line extending from Chicago to Omaha where it connected with the Union Pacific, did it not?

A. It did.

Q. And also a line as far westwardly as Denver, where it connected with the Union Pacific again?

A. It did, as far as that.

Q. Then it connected with the Union Pacific at other points in Nebraska and Colorado and Wyoming, did it not?

A. It did.

Q. Wasn't it a system that originated a great deal of traffic, Mr. Schiff?

A. As far as I know, it was.

Q. One of the effects of the control of the Burlington by the Northern Pacific and Great Northern would have been to divert to those lines, as against the Union Pacific lines—or the tendency would have been to divert to those lines as against the Union Pacific line—such traffic as originated on the Burlington lines for the Pacific coast, would it not?

A. I have no doubt that would have been possible.

Q. I understood you to testify in answer to questions from Mr. Severance that the first time that the purchase of the Northern Pacific was talked about was after the Burlington had been acquired in the interests of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern; isn't that true?

A. That is correct. Please repeat that question again.

The question was read by the reporter.

A. I am not certain that the purchase by the Great North-
1812 ern and Northern Pacific of the Burlington was then actually accomplished, but it had been talked about.

Q. You are not sure that the purchase at that time had reached the control of the Burlington?

A. I am not certain, sir.

Re-direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Schiff, had Kuhn, Loeb & Company started in independently some time before to buy control of the Burlington?

A. Never.

Q. Never did. Judge Lovett has asked you with reference to certain lines of the Burlington which were in position to turn over business to the Union Pacific, which question of his you answered just now. It was not with reference to business that the Burlington could turn over to the Union Pacific, that they were in rivalry, as you stated a while ago, was it, but it was business that could move over either line, wasn't it?

A. I believe it was.

Q. Your associates at the time that you purchased this Santa Fe stock, that is, Mr. Kahn, Mr. Harriman, Mr. William Rockefeller, Mr. Henry H. Rogers and Mr. Stillman—were all members of the Union Pacific Board, were they not?

A. Mr. Kahn was only an associate, and like myself was a member of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Company.

Q. Well, he was a member of the Board of the Union Pacific.

A. Yes; he and I were members of the Board of the Union Pacific.

Q. He was a members of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific?

A. He was a member of the Executive Committee of the 1813 Union Pacific.

Q. Mr. Stillman was a member of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific?

A. I believe he was.

Q. Mr. Rogers and Mr. William Rockefeller were both directors of the Union Pacific?

A. Mr. Rockefeller was not.

Q. Wasn't he?

A. Never.

Q. Of the Union Pacific?

A. No.
Q. Mr. Harriman was?
A. Yes, sir, he was.

1814 STUYVESANT FISH,

called as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Fish?
A. In Putnam County, New York.
Q. Have you ever been in the railroad business?
A. All my life, nearly.
Q. With what roads have you been connected?
A. With the Illinois Central Railroad, beginning in 1871.
Q. In what capacity did you work for the Illinois Central?
A. Oh, in various. For the last nineteen or twenty years, down to 1906, as president.
Q. Where does the Illinois Central run? What main points does it reach?
A. From Chicago to New Orleans; from Chicago at present, to Omaha; and, since about 1870 to Sioux City, just north of Omaha, on the Missouri River; various branches in other directions.
Q. St. Louis?
A. St. Louis, Louisville, Memphis.
Q. With what transcontinental lines does it have a physical connection?
A. With the Southern Pacific at New Orleans; with the Union Pacific at Omaha; with the Gould system at St. Louis and other points—if you call that a transcontinental line.
Q. Well, west of the Missouri River?
A. The only two points at which the Illinois Central reaches the Missouri River are Sioux City and Omaha.
Q. Mr. Fish, during the time that you were connected with 1815 the Illinois Central, say down to 1901——
A. 1906.
Q. Well, I am going to ask you about a period up to 1901.
A. Oh, I beg your pardon. I thought you misunderstood me.
Q. ——were the Union Pacific and the Sunset route of the Southern Pacific competing for business of the Illinois Central, and if so, in what territory?
A. They were competing for our business by the two several lines; that is to say, the Union Pacific taking it at Omaha for their direct line west, and the Southern Pacific taking it at New Orleans for their more circuitous route around through Southern California.
Q. Prior to 1901 how active was that competition?

A. I think it was as active as between any two roads that were in the business.

Q. What territory did that competition cover?

A. The competition between those two railroads covered the whole territory, as I understand it. Of course the Illinois Central did not reach the eastern states territory.

Q. No, but I mean did it cover the whole of the territory that is reached by the Illinois Central; that is what I want to get at.

A. Yes. We sent our business in differently, either way, one way or the other, as suited us best, as we could do best, and it varied from time to time.

Q. The rates were the same?

A. I understand the rates were the same. I am not a very good witness as to rates, because I did not have to do directly with them. I always understood the rates were the same, both on passengers and freight.

Q. What about the competition, if any, for passenger bus-
1816 iness to the coast—emigrant or first-class?

A. Well, I remember one time we sold tickets which were good to go around one way and come back the other, indifferently; and that lasted for some time; I couldn't tell you how long. About emigrant business I haven't a definite recollection; I do not remember about that.

Q. Mr. Fish, it appears in the testimony that the Union Pacific, in connection with the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation lines, reaches Portland, Oregon. What do you say, as a railroad man, as to whether, for the purposes of competition, it would be feasible to work business to San Francisco over the Union Pacific to Portland and thence down by boat?

Mr. LOVETT. You don't mean that. You had better let him read that question. You don't mean what you said.

(Question read by the Reporter.)

Mr. LOVETT. Is that what you mean?

Mr. SEVERANCE. Yes. I mean for the purpose of competing with direct rail lines to San Francisco—whether that would be feasible.

A. I should think so.

Mr. LOVETT. I do not think you got your question straight; but it is all right if it is satisfactory to you.

Mr. SEVERANCE. In what way?

Mr. LOVETT. You asked whether it would be feasible to work business over the Union Pacific to San Francisco, then from San Francisco to Portland, and then down by boat. That is what you said.

1817 Mr. SEVERANCE. No, no; you have got it the other way. Read that question again. I may have mis-stated it. I don't think I said that.

(The question was re-read by the Reporter.)

Q. By way of the Union Pacific to Portland and thence by boat. That is what I intended to say. You understood my question?

A. I think I understood you. Of course the Union Pacific does not run to Portland. The Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation and their affiliations do.

Q. Well, they own the road?

A. Yes.

Q. What I intended to ask was—if I didn't put it properly, I think you understood me—whether as a competitive measure it would be feasible to work business destined for San Francisco by rail to Portland and thence down by boat, as against the all-rail line.

A. I should think so.

Q. And what effect, if any, do the boat lines have on transcontinental rates?

A. There is the boat line, sailing ship line, around the south end of South America. I presume that has some effect. I have very often seen references to it as having an effect. Then, of course, there is the boat line via the Panama Railroad, which, it is pretty well understood, was kept in control by the transcontinental lines for a long while. Then there is the line (coming north all the time) of the Southern Pacific, the Morgan line of steamers to New Orleans and overland from there. I should say generally that they had a marked effect, and that you might count, in the United States, in our own trade, including the trade of Panama—you could 1818 count the steamboat line, if it did not exceed five times as long as the rail line, as something that would compete. From three to five times is the generally received opinion—depending upon circumstances, as to whether it was three or whether it was five.

Mr. LOVETT. We are quite prepared to stipulate that the boat line running around Cape Horn would have a very considerable effect on rates between the Atlantic ports and the Pacific.

Q. What is the character of the business that originates down along the line of the Illinois Central, from Chicago to New Orleans? Is it very much diversified, Mr. Fish?

A. Yes, sir, it is a diversified business. It is some manufacturing, but it is agricultural products, lumber, and coal, and the agricultural products in some form of manufacture—I mean in the sense of flour and glucose, partly manufactured. Of course there is a local business of vegetables, you know, and very highly——

Q. It is a very general business, is it not?

A. It is a miscellaneous business. Coal is the largest item.

Q. Does your line—I mean by your line the Illinois Central, formerly your line—pick up business anywhere along the line down between Chicago and New Orleans at intermediate points, destined for the coast, delivered to it by other lines from the east?

A. Yes. I don't think a great deal of it, but it does get some at certain points.

Q. What points?

A. It would receive it at Louisville, for instance. Some would come in there. And at other points where what you might call the eastern trunk lines cross the Illinois Central. The Illinois

1819 Central is crossed by all those lines at one point or another—Chicago, or south thereof—and at those points is where that business would come.

Q. Is that some of the business that you said you moved indifferently one way or the other, south or north?

A. Well, I meant that we moved all the business we had, indifferently. The whole policy of the road was to make no permanent alliances, but to deal with all our competitors, from time to time, as we thought best in our own interests from time to time.

Q. Your competitors or your connections, which do you mean?

A. Connections. Did I say "competitors?"

Q. You said competitors, yes.

A. Excuse me; I meant to say connections. Correct that, will you?

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. And you would send the business over the route that would give you the most revenue, wouldn't you, Mr. Fish?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think you testified that the Illinois Central connected with the Southern Pacific at New Orleans and with the Union Pacific at Omaha, with its line from Chicago. With what other lines reaching west of the Missouri River has it connections, Mr. Fish?

A. With the Burlington; with the Missouri Pacific; with the Northwestern—not at Omaha; it connects with the Northwestern at Omaha, but not for business west of the Missouri River.

Q. It connects with the Northwestern at Chicago, doesn't it?

1820 A. No; it connects with the Northwestern more particularly at Sioux City, with the Sioux City & Pacific.

Q. With the St. Paul?

A. With the St. Paul.

Q. The Rock Island?

A. Well, let me see. I don't think on the Missouri River that it connects with the Rock Island.

Q. No; I don't ask——

A. I thought your question was directed to that.

Q. I am not asking about where the connection is, but with the lines that cross the Missouri River or lie west of the Missouri River.

A. Oh, at one point or another we connect with them all.

Q. That is, with the lines you have mentioned; with the Rock Island——

A. Yes, including the Atchison.

Q. With the Atchison?

A. Yes.

Q. And all the lines extending from Chicago, or St. Louis, westwardly?

A. Yes.

Q. Or the Missouri River westwardly?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I believe you said the policy of the Illinois Central was to treat all of those connections impartially and work its through traffic in the interests of its own line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I presume you had in with all of these lines, or practically all of these lines, through rates for traffic to the Pacific coast, did you not?

A. I presume we had, but I could not testify to it. I think so.

Q. It was consistent with your general policy to have such tariffs?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then to treat those connections impartially and let 1821 the traffic move the way that meant the most to the Illinois Central?

A. Not to treat the lines impartially, but to treat those best that treated us best. It was purely a selfish policy.

Q. Yes, that is what I thought. You worked it the way that was to the best interest of the Illinois Central?

A. Yes, sir; for the time being.

Q. None of those lines could make any lawful rates from points on the Illinois Central, without the consent of the Illinois Central, could they, Mr. Fish? That is to say, traffic originating on the Illinois Central, destined to the Pacific coast, moved under through rates established by agreement with carriers participating in the haul, is that correct?

A. I think so; until recently.

Q. And they could not make—any foreign line—neither the Union Pacific nor the Southern Pacific could make a rate on traffic originating or destined to a point on the Illinois Central, without the consent of the Illinois Central, could they?

A. No, sir. There was a division of the through rate, of which we got our part. We got our division of the through rate.

Q. But that through rate could not be changed without the consent of the Illinois Central, lawfully; I mean without some rebate or something of that sort.

A. I do not quite understand you. You mean the rate on the Illinois Central—our proportion of the through rate?

Q. No, I mean this: I assume the traffic originating on the Illinois Central, destined to the Pacific coast, was handled by the 1822 Illinois Central under a through rate made from that point to the final destination, and that through rate was divided among the Illinois Central and its various connecting lines participating in the haul, and that such through rate was filed with the Commission, or published as required by law. Now, my question is, is it not true that such rate, so established, and on which that traffic moved, could not be changed either by the Union Pacific or the Southern Pacific or any other line, without the consent of the Illinois Central Railroad Company.

A. In so far as it related to the Illinois Central's division—the share of the through rate—yes.

Q. The Illinois Central would not consent to its change in any way—that is, neither party to that rate had any right to change it without the consent of the others, had it—the through rate? In other words, wasn't the Illinois Central as much interested as the other lines in having the law observed? It would not allow one of its connecting lines to change a through rate to which it was a party, without consulting it, would it?

A. Well, we could not help ourselves with regard to matters west of the Missouri River. They were a law to themselves always—people west of the Missouri River. We could not control them.

Q. Do you mean that if the Union Pacific, or the Southern Pacific, or the Atchison wanted to change a rate from a point on the line of the Illinois Central to San Francisco, that they could change it without saying anything to the Illinois Central about it?

A. No, they couldn't, but——

Q. That is the question.

A. That is according to agreement. According to fact, they 1823 were a law to themselves out there and they made the rates.

Q. Well, I was asking about the open rate, the published rate. They could not lawfully change the rate without your consent?

A. On our road I don't think they could.

Q. The traffic that originated on the Illinois Central, destined to the Pacific coast, moved, I believe you have already testified, by these various connections as it might be to the interest of the Illinois Central to move it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had a traffic manager of the Illinois Central, didn't you, Mr. Fish?

A. Yes, sir, for many years; Mr. T. J. Hudson, and his assistant, Mr. Markham.

Q. And your knowledge of the rate matter was such, I suppose, as was derived from such supervision and attention as you gave it as president of the company?

A. Well, I gave probably less than I ought to. If you want to get the rates you will have to call Mr. Hudson or Mr. Markham.

Q. I don't want to know the rates; I want to know just generally your relation to the matter. You relied on Mr. Hudson and Mr. Markham and their assistants for the details of the rate matters?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All of these lines that you have mentioned were competing, in the sense in which you used the term to Mr. Severance, for this business originating on the Illinois Central, and the Burlington, the Rock Island, the Denver & Rio Grande, the Missouri Pacific, the Atchison, the Union Pacific, the Southern Pacific, the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern, the St. Paul, and the Northwestern? Didn't they all have men working for this business?

1824 A. Oh, they all had men in the field working for it, but they did not compete for our business—the Northern Pacific and

Great Northern, because we didn't reach them; the Milwaukee & St. Paul, because we did not run west of the Missouri River in those years; and the Atchison, because we ran away from it at Chicago; it simply crossed us in the neighborhood of St. Louis, and that was all; it was too close up to Chicago.

Q. The Atchison, then, did not compete for——

A. For the Illinois Central business, I should say the Atchison did not to any appreciable extent.

Q. Why not, Mr. Fish?

A. On account of its situation on the map. The Illinois Central is a north and south line from Chicago to New Orleans, with a branch up to Dubuque, Iowa, opposite the northwestern corner of Illinois, and they crossed us right there, within perhaps a hundred miles of Chicago.

Q. I suppose the Atchison would allow the Illinois Central as large a division on traffic from Illinois Central points to California, at Chicago, as the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific line would allow at Omaha; that is, you would turn it over to the Atchison then, wouldn't you, rather than haul——

A. There might be other considerations. I think we would.

Q. You don't know whether they did that or not, do you?

A. Oh, I don't think it was ever done.

Q. You think it was never done?

A. I don't think it was ever done.

Q. If the Burlington or the Rock Island and the Denver and Rio Grande would allow the Illinois Central as much on business interchanged at Chicago as the Union Pacific would allow at Omaha, wouldn't you interchange it with them at Chicago?

1825 A. I don't think we ever did.

Q. And then business to St. Louis: if you could get as much out of the Pacific coast business by working it by way of St. Louis as by hauling to Omaha, if St. Louis was a short haul on your line, you would naturally take it that way, wouldn't you?

A. Yes; but I don't think any business moved that way. I have no recollection of it.

Q. You testified in answer to questions by Mr. Severance, that you thought it was feasible for the Union Pacific to carry business to San Francisco by way of Portland—that is, by rail to Portland and thence by boat to San Francisco. Do you know whether any business ever moved that way from east of the Missouri River, Mr. Fish?

A. No; I do not. I am not familiar with that branch of the business.

Q. Then, in expressing that opinion you did not wish to be understood as having personal knowledge, or of testifying as an expert with respect to that particular locality, did you, Mr. Fish?

A. No; but as to these circumstances of the additional water haul not affecting the rate materially, I had in my mind the case of the Morgan Line of steamers exactly at the time. I do not know exactly the distance of the Morgan Line of steamers, but I suppose it is at least 2,000 miles from here to New Orleans, and then 2,400 or 2,500 miles from San Francisco; whereas, when they start here they are only 2,300, something of that kind.

Q. And because business moves by water over the Morgan Line to New Orleans and Galveston and then to the Pacific coast by 1826 the Sunset route, you see no reason why the same thing could not be accomplished by way of Portland and San Francisco? That is the reason upon which you base that opinion?

A. Well, that and a good many other instances of long water lines.

Q. That is to say, you know that the Columbia River and the Pacific Ocean form a means of transportation by water between Portland and San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Therefore, you assume that business can be moved by boat between Portland and San Francisco, is that it?

A. Oh, I understand there was a line of steamers there maintained.

Q. Is that the reason you understand that it is feasible to move business that way?

A. Excuse me; you have got me confused. I don't understand your question. Which do you mean? Because what? Because there was a line of steamers?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, there wouldn't be a line of steamers unless somebody thought they could move freight.

Q. What I want to know is what circumstances you base your opinion that it is a feasible transportation route for the Union Pacific by way of Portland to San Francisco. What are the circumstances on which you base that opinion, if you wish to be understood as expressing a definite opinion on the subject?

A. The Union Pacific had their own line of rails, with their affiliations—the east lines controlled by them—up to Portland, and the market is San Francisco, and the sea is open to them, and I understand they had a line of steamers there for some time on that route.

Q. And it is upon those circumstances that you base the 1827 opinion that that is a feasible route for the Union Pacific, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don't know what other circumstances, from a traffic standpoint or otherwise, or a transportation standpoint, may exist that would make that entirely impracticable from a railroad or traffic standpoint, do you, Mr. Fish?

A. No, I do not.

Q. And you don't know, I believe you stated, whether any traffic actually ever moved that way over the Union Pacific to San Francisco?

A. Any Illinois Central traffic, I do not.

Q. Any traffic east of the Missouri River?

A. I do not know about that.

Q. What is the western terminus of the Northern Pacific, do you know, Mr. Fish?

A. The western terminus of the Northern Pacific?

Q. It is on Puget Sound—Tacoma and Seattle, isn't it?

A. I think so. Tacoma rather than Seattle, I think, but I am not sure.

Q. And it has a line also to Portland from Tacoma, or that vicinity?

A. To testify to my own knowledge, I don't know. I am perfectly willing to admit the fact.

Q. You don't know, then, what is really the——

A. No. I know it is in the Puget Sound country. The last time I was there Tacoma seemed to me to be their place.

Q. Then there is an open sea from Tacoma to San Francisco, isn't there, Mr. Fish?

A. Yes.

Q. So that it would be quite as feasible for the Northern 1828 Pacific to move traffic from its eastern termini to San Francisco, by way of Tacoma, or Seattle, or Portland, as for the Union Pacific, wouldn't it?

A. I think not. They would have to go a good way to the north. They would have to go away up to the international boundary there at Victoria, or Vancouver's Island, to get out.

Q. By water, and the length of the water haul is not important, is it?

A. Well, there is a limit there. As I say, it is from three to five. What the distances are I cannot testify.

Q. Portland is 100 miles inland, isn't it, on the Columbia River?

A. It is somewheres inland.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I will correct your geography. It is on the Willamette River.

Q. Well, on the Willamette River.

A. And so is Tacoma as far east as Portland.

Mr. LOVETT. Read that question, will you?

(Question read by the Reporter.)

Mr. LOVETT. Change that to read "On the Columbia or Willamette River."

Q. What is the answer to that question?

A. Yes; but Tacoma is just as far east.

Q. But it is on the Puget Sound with straits to the sea, isn't it?

A. Yes—which, of course, they use up north to the international boundary.

Q. The Northern Pacific also has a line to Portland, hasn't it?

A. That is what I said I don't know. I believe they have. You tell me so.

Q. Well, I thought perhaps you knew of the general location.

A. It is a good many years since I have been out there.
1828½ It must be seven or eight years since I have been out there.

Q. And you did not have occasion to learn that during your connection with the Illinois Central Railroad Company?

A. No, sir. If I learned it I have forgotten it.

Q. So that if it is feasible for the Union Pacific to handle San Francisco traffic by way of Portland, it is equally as feasible for the Northern Pacific, except that it reaches Puget Sound instead of Portland, is that true?

A. No, I don't know that it would be equally. It seems to me the distance would be very much greater. I could figure it out. It looks to me as if the distance was very much greater.

Q. Do you know what it is?

A. No, I don't know what it is.

1829 EDWARD T. JEFFERY

called as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Jeffery, where do you live?

A. New York.

Q. What is your business?

A. Railroading.

Q. How long have you been railroading?

A. 52 years and a half.

Q. How long?

A. 52½ years.

Q. With what railroad have you been connected?

A. Illinois Central and Denver & Rio Grande, in an official capacity, and as a director in several others, also chairman of the Board of Directors of the Wabash Company.

Q. What relation have you to the Western Pacific?

A. President of it.

Q. The Western Pacific is now under construction, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. From what point to what point?

A. Salt Lake City to San Francisco.

Q. When did you begin the construction of the Western Pacific?

A. Active construction commenced about three years ago.

Q. How long have you been with the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. 17 years and four months.

Q. What capacity?

A. President.

Q. All the time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where does the Denver & Rio Grande run?

A. From Denver, via Colorado Springs and Pueblo, to Salt
1830 Lake City and Ogden, Utah, with numerous branches and laterals.

Q. It originally ran to Grand Junction, didn't it, the Rio Grande Western?

A. Originally to Grand Junction, and from thence the connection to Salt Lake and Ogden was the Rio Grande Western, the control of which was acquired by the Denver & Rio Grande about seven years ago, and the two companies were consolidated a few months ago.

Q. And is the Denver & Rio Grande affiliated with the Western Pacific?

A. The Denver & Rio Grande owns two-thirds of the capital stock of the Western Pacific.

Q. With what lines does the Denver & Rio Grande connect on the east of Denver?

A. The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy; the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific; the Union Pacific at Denver; the Missouri Pacific at Pueblo; and I might say with the Rock Island at two or three points—Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo; also with the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe road at those three points.

Q. Now, Mr. Jeffery, how many years were you connected with the Illinois Central?

A. Thirty-three.

Q. Thirty-three years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was your last position with that road?

A. General manager.

Q. For how many years?

A. Why, I think four or five.

Q. Before that what were you?

A. General superintendent and acting chief engineer.

Q. Now, Mr. Jeffery, do you recall and are you familiar with what is called the Morgan Line from New York to the coast, in connection with the Southern Pacific?

1831 A. I was, some years ago, when connected with the Illinois Central, familiar with it.

Q. Do you know what that line is composed of—a line of ships from here to New Orleans or Texas, and a railway line from there to the coast?

A. Yes.

Q. What I mean is, the Sunset route of the Southern Pacific is composed of the Morgan line of steamers and the rail lines west?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the time that you were familiar with that line was it in competition with the all-rail lines to the Coast, for business to the coast?

A. Yes.

Q. Including the Union Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall the time that the Southern Pacific stock was purchased by the Union Pacific—I don't mean to give the date, but you remember the fact?

A. Yes, in general I remember the fact.

Q. And the changes that were made in the organization of the companies?

A. In a very general way.

Q. Now what effect, if any, did that amalgamation of authority have upon the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. It gradually eliminated the free interchange that there was between the Southern Pacific and the Denver & Rio Grande system at Ogden, and at Salt Lake City to an extent.

Q. In what way was that elimination brought about?

A. Why, the common control of the Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Oregon Short Line, working for the common interest of the properties named, would inevitably reduce the interchange with the Denver & Rio Grande system, a competing line from Denver to 1832 Salt Lake City and Ogden, and competing via its eastern connections from Missouri River points and Chicago and St. Louis, and so on.

Q. What difficulty, if any, did the Denver & Rio Grande find in securing east-bound business by reason of that change.

Mr. LOVETT. Before he answers that will the stenographer read the answer to the last question?

The reporter read the answer to the last question, and then, upon further request by Mr. Lovett, the answer to the next preceding question.

A. The east-bound business was gradually diverted from the Denver & Rio Grande.

Q. To what line or lines?

A. Well, I think the greater portion to the Union Pacific and its eastern connections; some was doubtless taken by the Atchison system when it reached San Francisco.

Q. Do the Denver & Rio Grande maintain commercial agencies on the Coast?

A. Yes.

Q. What places?

A. San Francisco and Los Angeles, and at Portland, Oregon.

Q. You had commercial agencies there before 1901, when the Southern Pacific stock was purchased, had you, as well as since?

A. Oh, our commercial agencies have been there a great many years.

Q. And what were those commercial agencies established and maintained for?

A. To solicit and route business via the Denver & Rio Grande system and its eastern connections.

Q. Was there any lessening of the efforts of your commercial 1833 agencies to route business that way since this consolidation?

A. No, I think they have been rather stimulated to greater effort.

Q. How does your tonnage, east-bound, delivered to you by the Southern Pacific, compare with what it was before the Union Pacific took over the Southern Pacific?

A. It is less.

Q. How is the business of the Pacific Coast in general as compared with what it was seven or eight age? greater or less?

A. Greater.

Q. Does your line maintain commercial agencies in the east?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Union Pacific and others likewise?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the purpose of a commercial agency off the line of a railroad?

A. To solicit and route business via the line or system that is represented by the commercial agency.

Q. Do you recall, Mr. Jeffery, the closing of the Sacramento gateway to Portland? I don't mean the date, but do you remember the fact?

A. No, I don't recall that very distinctly.

Q. You don't remember about that? Do you do business in and out of Portland? Did you before the Union Pacific bought the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, we formerly had considerable business in and out of Portland and tributary territory.

Q. Over what line did that reach you?

A. Oregon Short Line, via Salt Lake City.

Q. And the same over the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, the same over the Southern Pacific.

Q. What kind of traffic was that, if you remember?

A. Why, it was somewhat diversified. There was lumber in 1834 very considerable quantities, and some sheep, cattle, wool, fruits.

Q. Hops?

A. Some Oriental traffic, occasionally got a cargo of that; hops; diversified business, such as is generally shipped from the North Pacific coast points.

Q. The Oriental traffic you speak of was brought by ship from the Orient to Portland?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you at any time get Oriental traffic by way of San Francisco?

A. Yes, we had a share of that.

Q. Do you now share in that?

A. Very slightly.

Q. Do you get cargoes from Portland now, and the Orient?

A. No.

Q. Does the Southern Pacific maintain through rates with you now by the Ogden gateway?

A. Yes.

Q. Does the Oregon Short Line?

A. To a very limited extent. A number of the divisions of rates have been taken out, withdrawn, with the Oregon Short Line, by the Oregon Short Line.

Q. Prior to 1901 how was the Ogden gateway as to being free and open between you and the Union Pacific, or otherwise?

A. In 1901?

Q. Before that, I say?

A. Oh——

Q. Before the Southern Pacific bought the Union Pacific?

A. Oh, it was a free and unrestricted gateway.

Cross-examination, by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Have not the Southern Pacific and the Denver & Rio Grande system the same rates and divisions on California business that they had prior to 1901, Mr. Jeffery?

A. Yes, substantially the same.

1835 Q. There has been no substantial change in the rates or divisions?

A. No, not substantial; no substantial change.

Q. The difference lies in the fact that whereas, prior to 1901, the Southern Pacific, as between the Denver & Rio Grande and the Union Pacific, was impartial, since 1901 it has preferred the Union Pacific with unrouted traffic; isn't that the difference?

A. That is the difference, yes. The Union Pacific is the preferential connection of the Southern Pacific, that is all there is to it.

Q. Such business as your agents on the Pacific coast or elsewhere can have routed over the Southern Pacific and your line, the Southern Pacific as a rule respects that routing, doesn't it?

A. No, as a rule they don't.

Q. If your agents route it?

A. Yes.

Q. I have never thought they ought to, but I thought they did?

A. No, not always.

Q. Are you sure about that, Mr. Jeffery?

A. Yes, I have had a good many reports on that subject.

Q. The reason that I question it so, is that Mr. Stubbs seems to be quite positive in the opinion that you are mistaken in that, with due respect to you—that the Southern Pacific does respect the routing of such traffic as your agents are able to control?

A. Well, I would not want that to be misunderstood, Judge Lovett, that after a shipment is secured and routed and in transit, that the Southern Pacific would disrespect the routing.

Q. That is the question I asked.

A. Because that would not be the case.

1836 Q. No.

A. Oh, no, the Southern Pacific would respect the routing under those circumstances.

Q. Well, that is the case that I referred to in my question. Now, what you really meant by your other answer was that the Southern Pacific agents would really work against the agents of your system in favor of the Union Pacific; is that true?

A. Yes, very actively.

Q. In other words, the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific would work together?

A. Yes.

Q. As against your system?

A. Yes.

Q. The public is not suffering from that situation, is it, Mr. Jeffery?

A. I would rather the public would speak for itself, Judge Lovett.

Q. Well, I won't press that question. The Southern Pacific line was the only outlet for the Denver & Rio Grande system to the Pacific coast south of Portland, wasn't it, Mr. Jeffery?

A. Yes.

Q. And you mentioned the Western Pacific Railway Company just now. That is a line controlled by the Denver & Rio Grande, and being built—promoted by the Denver & Rio Grande to the Pacific coast, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. The construction of that line was really made necessary because of the changed relation between the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific systems which occurred in 1901, wasn't it, Mr. Jeffery?

A. Well, it was made necessary by the changed attitude of the Southern Pacific toward the Denver & Rio Grande.

Q. That is what I meant.

A. I would rather put it that way.

Q. Which you attribute to the control of the Southern 1837 Pacific by the Union Pacific, do you not?

A. Yes, I have so attributed it.

Q. The competition, which you testified in your answer to direct interrogatories, that had been eliminated by this changed attitude of the Southern Pacific, was competition east of Ogden, wasn't it, or east perhaps of your eastern terminus, Denver, inasmuch as both the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific and all of the eastern connections of both of those systems were dependent upon the Southern Pacific for an outlet west of Ogden and Salt Lake?

A. I don't quite grasp the question. Could I have it read, Judge Lovett?

Q. Yes, certainly.

The reporter then read the question.

A. I would rather think, Judge Lovett, that it was all competition east and west of Ogden, on traffic in both directions.

Q. But all that traffic had to pass over the Southern Pacific from Ogden to the Pacific coast, hadn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. So this competition that you refer to, that was eliminated, was not competition between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific, but competition between the connections of the Southern Pacific east of Ogden; that is to say, between the Denver & Rio Grande system and its connections on the one part, and the Union Pacific on the other? In other words, the Southern Pacific was not itself engaged in that competition, unless it was as an ally against the Union Pacific, since it got the traffic in any event, no matter which of its eastern connections got it, whether you or the Union Pacific?

Mr. SEVERANCE. Then, do you eliminate the Sunset Route by that question?

1838 Mr. LOVETT. Yes, that is a separate proposition now. I am asking only about the competition that Mr. Jeffery testified was eliminated by the changed relation or changed attitude of the Southern Pacific to the Union Pacific. As I understood him, he testified in substance that the effect was to eliminate the competition afforded by the Denver & Rio Grande system and its eastern connections. My question now is, whether that competition was not a competition between the Denver & Rio Grande system and its connections, on the one hand, and the Union Pacific on the other, and that the Southern Pacific was not interested in that competition, since it got the traffic anyway, no matter which of the others brought it to Ogden?

WITNESS. Do you mean prior to——

Q. 1901.

A. Prior to 1901?

Q. Yes.

A. Could I have my answer on direct examination read?

Q. Yes. (To reporter:) Will you look it up, Mr. Taylor?

The EXAMINER. The answer in which the witness stated about elimination.

The reporter read the questions and answers as follows:

"Q. Now what effect, if any, did that amalgamation of authority have upon the Denver & Rio Grande? A. It gradually eliminated the free interchange that there was between the Southern Pacific and the Denver & Rio Grande system at Ogden, and at Salt Lake City to an extent. Q. In what way was that elimination brought about? A. Why, the common control of the Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, and Oregon Short Line, working for the common interest of 1839 the properties named, would inevitably reduce the interchange with the Denver & Rio Grande system, a competing line from Denver to Salt Lake City and Ogden, and competing via its eastern connections from Missouri River points and Chicago and St. Louis, and so on."

WITNESS. I didn't quite get the relevancy of your question to that answer; that was the reason I asked to have it read.

Mr. LOVETT. Now, perhaps you had better read my question again, Mr. Taylor. Will you have it read again, Mr. Jeffery?

WITNESS. Yes.

The reporter read from Judge Lovett's previous question, as follows: "I am asking only about the competition that Mr. Jeffery testified was eliminated by the changed relation or changed attitude of the Southern Pacific to the Union Pacific. As I understood him, he testified in substance that the effect was to eliminate the competition afforded by the Denver & Rio Grande system and its eastern connections. My question now is, whether that competition was not a competition between the Denver & Rio Grande system and its connections, on the one hand, and the Union Pacific on the other, and that the Southern Pacific was not interested in that competition, since it got the traffic anyway, no matter which of the others brought it to Ogden."

Q. I eliminate everything except what Mr. Jeffery had in mind in his answer to that direct interrogatory.

A. Thank you. What was in my mind, Judge Lovett, was this: that before the period named the relations of the Denver & Rio Grande and Southern Pacific were quite intimate. The South-
1840 ern Pacific would turn over business to the Denver & Rio Grande at times of its own accord without that business being routed by Denver & Rio Grande commercial agencies; and west-bound the Denver & Rio Grande, with its eastern connections ramifying clear through to the Atlantic seaboard, would of course secure all the transcontinental traffic they could and throw over to the Southern Pacific, feeding it at Ogden. For North Pacific coast territory the same policy was pursued; and during the receivership of the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company there was the fullest and freest interchange, and virtually a division of traffic—of competitive traffic—on the part of the Oregon Short Line and Oregon Navigation, according to the Denver & Rio Grande a fair proportion of it. Subsequent to the date named, due to common interest and control, there was gradual diminishing, shrinking of the interchange, notably east-bound, so that to-day the amount of freight traffic received from the Southern Pacific by the Denver & Rio Grande is very small, and it is very small, too, from the Oregon Short Line. West-bound, the Denver & Rio Grande gives a very, very much larger amount of business to the Southern Pacific than the volume of east-bound traffic it receives at Ogden, because the Denver & Rio Grande has no other channel open for its west-bound traffic.

Q. Whereas the Southern Pacific has the Union Pacific?

A. And east-bound the Southern Pacific has the Union Pacific and the excellent facilities that that system possesses.

Q. Now, I understand that answer thoroughly. But I don't 1841 think it answered the question.

A. I don't think I grasped your question, Judge Lovett.

Q. Let me state it again. I understood your answer to one of the questions on direct examination to be, in substance, that this changed attitude of the Southern Pacific greatly reduced (I will follow your own language as nearly as I can) the volume of traffic controlled by the Denver & Rio Grande system and its eastern connections, competing lines of the Union Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. That they were able to control and interchange with the Southern Pacific, that is what I understood your testimony to be. Now, the question that I now ask you is whether that competition, that is to say, that traffic formerly controlled by the Denver & Rio Grande and its eastern connections in competition with the Union Pacific, and carried to or from Ogden—whether the competition with respect to that traffic was not between the Union Pacific on the one hand and the Denver & Rio Grande and its eastern connections on the other, and not with the Southern Pacific, the Southern Pacific being a connecting rather than a competing line for that traffic—eliminating for the present the Sunset Route?

A. Yes, I think it was largely so. I would not say wholly so, but very largely so.

Q. Well, it is entirely so with the Southern Pacific, where its Ogden line was not competing for that traffic, because it was a connecting and not a competing line—a connecting line of both systems—and got the traffic of both systems, no matter whether [illegible]ar line or the Union Pacific carried it to Ogden. Isn't that true?

A. Yes, I think that is true.

1842 Q. You haven't any doubt about it, have you, Mr. Jeffery?

A. I am not quite clear on the point you are making, but I think what you say is so.

Q. The facts are so much stronger than my own opinion about it that I want to get the fact, and I regret that I am unable to make myself understood about it. But the Southern Pacific owns or controls the Central Pacific, extending from Ogden to the Pacific Ocean, and during all the time about which you have testified, it was the only line extending westwardly from Ogden to the Pacific Ocean. The Union Pacific and the Denver & Rio Grande both lying east of Ogden, and on this transcontinental traffic, or traffic to the Pacific Ocean south of Portland—both the Union Pacific and the Denver & Rio Grande were dependent on the Southern Pacific to handle the business to the Pacific Ocean. Is not that true?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, such competition east of Ogden (except the Sunset Route, we will say) as existed between the Union Pacific on the one hand, and the Denver & Rio Grande and its eastern connections on the other, was competition only between them and their connections, and not between them or either of them and the Southern Pacific, the Southern Pacific being merely the connecting line and the outlet for both? In other words, whatever the Denver & Rio Grande or the Union Pacific brought was still grist for the mill of the Southern Pacific; isn't that still true?

Mr. SEVERANCE. And you are still eliminating the Sunset Route?

Mr. LOVETT. Let me finish my question first, please.

1843 Mr. SEVERANCE. I thought you had finished it.

Mr. LOVETT. I object to any interruptions till Mr. Jeffery answers my questions.

A. All that the Denver & Rio Grande brought to Ogden was grist for the Southern Pacific mill, because it was the only route that there was to send business west from Ogden by. Now, the reason why I am in doubt about answering your other question, which you have taken so much pains to elaborate, and which I apologize for troubling you with, is that there were periods, as I remember it, some years ago, when Southern Pacific rates ran back into Nevada, certainly into certain points in the interior of California, which affected competitive traffic to those points and in that territory; so that it made a competition at some of those points through the Ogden gateway for the Denver & Rio Grande or Union Pacific and their eastern connections, and through the San Francisco gateway to those points and connections via sometimes vessels around Cape Horn, an all-water route, sometimes via the Panama route, sometimes perhaps via New Orleans and the all-rail route thence to San Francisco, although I imagine that the Southern Pacific protected that long haul carefully. My recollection is that in the early days of my connection with the Denver & Rio Grande I heard the traffic officers discussing this phase that I have just mentioned, and that is the reason why I made the qualified reply to Judge Lovett that it was almost wholly so; that is, that the competition was almost wholly as you state it. Now, whether there is any truth in the views I have just expressed I am unable to 1844 say, but there is a doubt in my mind, and hence I would prefer to save the doubt.

Q. Well now, Mr. Jeffery, that answer of yours about that situation, from such knowledge as I have of the location of the lines on the ground, is perfectly inexplicable to me, and if you can make it a little clearer, just what you mean by it, I shall be very much obliged.

A. Well, I was told years ago, when I went to the Denver & Rio Grande, that there were times when the——

Q. I was asking about the situation that existed during your connection with the Denver & Rio Grande; I don't know but there might have been something about that—I can't see how it is possible—but wouldn't you limit your answer to anything that transpired from the time you commenced your connection with the Denver & Rio Grande, I think you said fifteen years ago?

Mr. SEVERANCE. 17 years and four months.

Q. Seventeen years and four months.

A. I was doing that, Judge.

Q. Now, did the conditions which you have just mentioned exist at any time since your connection with the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. Yes. I have just been explaining——

Q. Oh!

A. —— that our traffic officers advised me of this. I don't know so of my own personal knowledge.

Q. Where was it, Mr. Jeffery? How would that traffic move?

A. The way I have described it.

Q. Move by water?

A. Just as I stated, according to the statements that were then made to me.

Q. From what point to what point?

1845 A. From Atlantic coast points via Cape Horn to San Francisco, and thence to the jobbing houses in San Francisco, and then on certain rates of the Southern Pacific to its local territory.

Q. Then neither the Union Pacific nor the Denver & Rio Grande would handle that traffic at all, would they?

A. I am saying that in this territory, at those points, there would be competition from San Francisco on the one hand over the Southern Pacific, don't you see?

Q. Yes.

A. And through the Ogden gateway on the other, into the same territory; competition in markets, if you please to call it so; competition of jobbing points.

Q. But using the Southern Pacific in every case, wouldn't it?

A. Yes, using the Southern Pacific in every case.

Q. That is, it could not get west of Ogden without using the Southern Pacific?

A. Oh, no. Now, that is what I refer to, and that is all I refer to; that is all I had in mind when I hesitated a little about answering your question.

Q. Well, if I understand you, then, Mr. Jeffery, that was very foreign to the question that I was asking you.

A. Well, I regret that.

Q. It was whether the competition for this transcontinental traffic, east of Ogden (excepting such as went by the Sunset Route) was not between the Union Pacific and the Denver & Rio Grande and its connections.

A. That is, transcontinental traffic?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. Traffic from the Atlantic seaboard and any points west of the Atlantic seaboard were always competed for by the South-

1846 ern Pacific Sunset Route in connection with the Morgan line, wasn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. But assuming that two trains moved from this territory, or anywhere east of the Mississippi River, or east of Denver, to San Francisco, for example, whether those trains go over the Union Pacific or the Denver & Rio Grande, when they get to Ogden they must go over the Southern Pacific to San Francisco; that is true, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. The Denver & Rio Grande, I believe you testified, still has its soliciting agents at Portland?

A. Yes.

Q. And that formerly the Denver & Rio Grande got business from Portland both by the Oregon Short Line (the O. R. & N. route) and by the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. And that its business from that territory has been greatly reduced since 1901——

A. Yes.

Q. —— because the Union Pacific controls the Oregon Short Line and the Denver & Rio Grande, and naturally prefers its own line east of Ogden; that is one reason, I presume?

A. Yes, that is my judgment.

Q. And another reason is that the Southern Pacific prefers the Union Pacific for that business as well as for other business that it can control?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, business that formerly moved by the Southern Pacific to the Denver & Rio Grande from Portland and that vicinity to Willamette Valley went down over the Siskiyou Mountains by way of Sacramento and then to Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know about what the length of that line is from Portland?

A. I don't recall it. It was a circuitous route.

1847 Q. And over two or three mountain ranges, wasn't it?

A. There was one pretty severe one, I remember.

Q. Where is that? On the Central Pacific?

A. Yes, there would be two severe mountain ranges, one on the Central Pacific and the other on the line running up north toward Portland.

Q. I believe you testified that your companies were building the Western Pacific from Salt Lake City to San Francisco because of the changed attitude of the Southern Pacific——

A. Yes.

Q. Since 1901. I think that is all.

Re-direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Jeffery, it is in evidence in this case that what is called the Sacramento gateway from Portland has been taken out; that is, that traffic is not permitted to move over these two mountain ranges that you have spoken of, but it was all sent by the Oregon Short Line. That is already in the record. Now, that being the case, whatever traffic your agent is able to get at Portland must come over the Short Line, must it not?

A. Yes.

Q. If the other way around has been shut up?

A. I think so.

Q. Now, you testified a few moments ago, if I understood you correctly, that your divisions had been taken out with the Short Line?

A. I said most of the divisions, I think, Mr. Severance.

Q. Most of the divisions?

A. I said most of the through rates and divisions of rates had been withdrawn.

1848 Q. Well then, if the competition of the Southern Pacific line around by Sacramento, with the Oregon Short Line, has been removed, and if your divisions then with the Short Line have been taken out, how can you get any business out of Portland?

A. We don't get much.

Q. They wiped you off the map, then, as far as Portland is concerned, practically?

A. Oh, we come up smiling. We are still on the map, but we don't ——

Q. But are not doing any business?

A. We don't do much business.

Q. Well now, Mr. Jeffery, you were explaining to Judge Lovett (he didn't quite understand it, I think; I think I did, but I will see if I did) about this Nevada matter. As I understand you, the Southern Pacific years ago used to move traffic from Nevada points westerly to San Francisco and then south by the Sunset Route to the east, as against the straight line over the Southern Pacific?

A. No, I did not intend to testify——

Q. Then what did you intend to testify? Then I didn't understand you.

Mr. STUBBS. He didn't say anything of the sort.

A. In the first three or four years of my presidency of the Denver & Rio Grande, which commenced seventeen years and four months ago, I was told by Denver & Rio Grande traffic officers, and especially by its traffic manager, that there were certain lines of business at local points, in western Nevada, and in the interior of California, which points were reached by the Southern Pacific, to which points business was done from San Francisco by San Francisco jobbers, and perhaps by jobbers from the Atlantic seaboard 1849 through San Francisco, in competition with traffic that would go via Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific and Denver & Rio Grande, and the eastern connections of the two last named.

Q. Well, then, I understood you correctly, only I had the direction of the traffic turned around; it is traffic originating on the seaboard, instead of traffic destined to the seaboard, that you had in mind?

A. I was informed, and as a traffic proposition I should think it very reasonable to-day, to regard it as having been a fact—it might be to-day a fact—that certain classes of business would be shipped to certain interior points in California from San Francisco, which same points could buy directly from the east, and the business be sent on the long all-rail haul.

Recross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. But over the Southern Pacific as a part of the all-rail haul?
A. Over the Southern Pacific as part of the all-rail haul.
Mr. SEVERANCE. That is right.
WITNESS. And it was this idea in my mind that made me hesitate unnecessarily long, and trouble Judge Lovett unnecessarily in his explanation about answering his former question.
Mr. SEVERANCE. Yes, I understand that.
WITNESS. Because I was——
Mr. LOVETT. We all understand it now.
WITNESS. Because there would be, you see, in that instance, competition over the western portion of the Southern Pacific to the points referred to from San Francisco against similar classes of traffic that would come through the Ogden gateway destined to the same 1850 points, and passing over the Southern Pacific to reach those points.
Mr. SEVERANCE. That is right.
WITNESS. Now, that is all I had in mind, and I hope I made it plain.
Mr. SEVERANCE. That is plain.
Q. Rates to those points could not be made without the consent of the Southern Pacific, because it was part of the through line?
A. The Southern Pacific would no doubt adjust the rates so that both classes of shippers, east and west, would be put on an even keel.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Just one other question. Now, in addition then to practically taking away your business in Oregon, by reason of the Southern Pacific agents in California working for the Union Pacific, your ability to compete with the Union Pacific has been diminished?
A. Very greatly.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. The Southern Pacific takes whatever business you can take to it, doesn't it, Mr. Jeffery?
A. I beg pardon?
Q. I say the Southern Pacific welcomes whatever business you offer it at Ogden, doesn't it?
A. This question has reference to east-bound traffic?
Mr. SEVERANCE. East-bound business I asked about.
Q. Or east-bound traffic. Well, does that matter affect the rates any, Mr. Jeffery?
A. No. That is, nothing affects the rates but the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Courts.
Q. I beg pardon?

A. I say nowadays there is nothing affects the rates but 1851 the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Courts, fortunately.

Q. That is true, yes. Mr. Jeffery, is not the substance of the situation this: That instead of being on an equality with the Union Pacific in working with the Southern Pacific for California business, that the Union Pacific is the favorite of the Southern Pacific?

A. Is the favorite?

Q. Yes.

A. Decidedly, decidedly.

(An adjournment was here taken until the afternoon of Tuesday, January 12, 1909, at 2 p. m.)

1852 ROOM 508, CUSTOM HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY,
Tuesday, January 12, 1909, 2 P. M.

The hearing was resumed before the Special Examiner, Hon. Sylvester G. Williams, at the above time and place, pursuant to adjournment.

Present: On behalf of the Complainant, Mr. C. A. Severance; on behalf of the Defendants, Mr. R. S. Lovett, Mr. John C. Spooner, Mr. Walker B. Hines, Mr. James M. Beck.

Mr. LOVETT. The defendants desire Mr. Victor Morawetz sworn on behalf of the defendants. He was subpœnaed on behalf of the Government to appear here, but the Government counsel have not examined him, but have consented that we might examine him at this time, as he may be abroad when we come to take the testimony of the defendants.

VICTOR MORAWETZ,

being duly sworn on behalf of the Defendants, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HINES:

Q. Mr. Morawetz, please state how long you were connected with the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company, and in what capacity?

A. In 1895 I was a member of the committee which reorganized the old Atchison system—and counsel of that committee. When the present company was organized and took over the properties on January 1, 1896, I became a member of the Board of Directors
1853 and of the Executive Committee of the new company, and its general counsel. Subsequently, I think in 1898, I became also the chairman of the Executive Committee. About two years ago I resigned as general counsel, but continued to act as chairman of the Executive Committee until last October, when I resigned as chairman and as director, and since that date I have had no official connection with the company.

Q. During the time that you were chairman of the Executive Committee, please state whether or not you were familiar with the affairs of the company and the policy of the company.

A. Yes, I was quite familiar with the affairs of the company, except operating matters and traffic matters, and I was probably more familiar than anyone with the policy of the company so far as this policy was directed by the Board of Directors.

Q. Reference has been made in the testimony in this case to contracts to which the Southern Pacific and the Atchison were parties, respecting certain railroads in Northern California and respecting the Phoenix & Eastern in Southern Arizona. I wish you would please state in your own way the circumstances which led up to the Atchison's interest in the properties affected by those contracts, and the circumstances which led up to the contracts which were finally made.

A. You mean that I should state the negotiations also?

Q. Yes, and also the negotiations in regard to the matter.

A. In 1901 the Atchison company bought the stock and second mortgage bonds of the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix Railway Company. At that time Mr. Frank Murphy was the president of the company. On account of Mr. Murphy's familiarity with the property and with the territory through which the line runs,
1854 and on account of our respect for his ability and his character, he was requested to continue to act as president of the company, and he has so acted until the present day. At that time Mr. Murphy had a project to build an extension from Phoenix to Benson. When we took the property over we did not favor building that line. It did not seem to me that the line would be profitable as an investment; it would be no part of the Atchison through line; traffic could not advantageously be sent via Phoenix over the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix to Ash Fork and then around over our main line. The local business in prospect did not seem to me very attractive. Agricultural business there was none, and there were no developed mines along the line, but merely prospects; and of course mines are proverbially uncertain, and after they are played out there is nothing for a railroad to look forward to. For that reason I was not in favor of spending the capital of the Atchison system for the construction of that line. Mr. Murphy was very enthusiastic about it, and subsequently decided that he would cause the line to be built anyhow. When it became apparent that the line was going to be built, I advised Mr. Ripley that I thought if that line was to be built, we had better build it ourselves; and it was arranged, in substance, that we should build the line as far as Dudleyville. Mr. Ripley was not disposed to go down the San Pedro Valley to Douglas, because——

Mr. SEVERANCE. Benson, you mean?

WITNESS. To Benson, I mean—because he did not think it
1855 would pay to do so. In the summer of 1902 we concluded that it would be advisable to extend the Atchison system into the territory north of San Francisco Bay and west of the range of mountains which I believe is called the Coast Range. Negotiations were started by Mr. Ripley with the owners of the stock of the California & Northwestern Railroad Company for the purchase of their stock; but pending those negotiations the stock was sold either to the Southern Pacific or to persons from whom the Southern Pacific subsequently acquired it. Thereupon, in the autumn of 1902, we bought the stock of the Eel River & Eureka Railroad, which was a short line extending out of Eureka, and which I think originally was built merely as a logging road. The traffic of that line was the redwood timber into Eureka, from where it was transported by ship. We bought that line for the purpose of obtaining the redwood traffic, and for the purpose of obtaining a foothold in the territory which, as I have stated, we desired to enter. Sometime in the autumn or winter of 1902 negotiations were begun for the adjustment of the differences existing between the Southern Pacific Company and the Atchison with regard to conditions in Northern California and in Arizona. Mr. Harriman objected quite strenuously to our construction of the Phoenix & Eastern line, because he considered that an invasion of territory properly tributary to the Southern Pacific system. Mr. Harriman desired us to sell to him the constructed part of this Phoenix & Eastern road, and to retire from the territory south of Phoenix. I stated to Mr. Harriman that the settlement of any questions as to Arizona territory, and as to Northern California territory, would 1856 have to go together. I was willing to sell the Phoenix & Eastern line, but I wanted to get into the territory in Northern California; and I then formulated the terms upon which I was willing to settle these controversial questions. These terms, in substance, were as follows: That the Southern Pacific Company should give us a half interest—an equal half interest—in all the lines—the California & Northwestern and another line——

Mr. LOVETT. The North Shore.

WITNESS. The North Shore line, which it had, north of San Francisco Bay, amounting to approximately 400 miles, I think. We would give them a half interest in our Eel River & Eureka line, amounting to about 40 miles of main line, and a few branches, amounting to less than 50 miles all together; and that all lines to be constructed in that territory as far up as Oregon, that is, up to the end of Humboldt County, should be open to the Atchison and to the Southern Pacific on equal terms. The idea of establishing a low-grade line between Phoenix and Deming, of which this Phoenix & Eastern line would be a part, was first suggested during these negotiations. I never heard of it, and it was not contemplated until that time; it was certainly not contemplated when the construction of the Phoenix & Eastern line was begun. I was more than willing—was desirous—of making a settlement on the terms which I have stated, because the Atchison Company had no money at that time for the construction of the proposed line in Northern California, which would have cost approximately twelve millions of dollars, and it had no money for the construction of the new mileage in Arizona. The 1857 project of building a low-grade line up the Gila Canyon to Deming was not contemplated by us ever as a project to be immediately carried out, or to be carried out within any specific time. I was never convinced that it would pay us to build that line. It would have cost approximately ten millions of dollars to build the low-grade line between Phoenix and Deming, and it would have cost a million or two millions more to put the line between Deming and Belen in proper order for the carriage of any heavy amount of business. This low-grade line, even after the completion of the proposed cut-off between Wickenburg and Bengal, would have been about 160 miles longer than the present line between Belen and Bengal, and about 175 miles longer than the present line between Albuquerque and Bengal. It would have obviated only the objectionable grades on about 369 miles of our present line. In the winter of 1901 we took up the project of building a low-grade cut-off from Belen to our Pan-Handle Division, to serve as a second transcontinental line. The surveyors were put in the field in the winter of 1901–1902, and the line has since been constructed between Rio Puerco, which is a point west of Albuquerque, to Belen, and thence to Texico, where it connects with our present mileage, and very large sums have been spent in reducing grades and curvature on our Pan-Handle line with a view to establishing a better line than the existing one between Chicago and the Pacific Coast.

Q. By the Pan-Handle line, Mr. Morawetz, you mean the line from Texico through the northern part of Texas and northwestern Oklahoma?

1858 A. Yes. I wish to state that the construction of this line had absolutely nothing whatever to do with the proposed or contemplated construction of the cut-off—of the so-called low-grade line between Phoenix and Deming. This Belen cut-off was undertaken before this so-called low-grade line between Phoenix and Deming was ever thought of: and the reasons, if you care to hear them, for the construction of the Belen cut-off were as follows: Our existing line was nearing the limit of its capacity—that is, the traffic of our existing line was reaching the limit of the capacity of that line; and looking ahead, we saw that we should, in the not far distant future, have either to double-track the mountain divisions of our existing line or get another outlet.

Q. By the existing line you mean the line through southeastern Colorado by way of Trinidad?

A. Yes, over the Raton and Glorieta Mountains. At that time there were rumors and indications that other systems, or at least one other system, contemplated building in the direction of the Rio Grande River; and although we would have preferred to postpone somewhat the construction of the Belen cut-off, we somewhat hastened our action because the Abo Pass was of great strategic value, and we thought it advisable to occupy that pass. We therefore began the construction of the Belen cut-off from the west and occupied the pass first, and then gradually extended it east. Another reason, and an important reason, for the construction of that line was that we contemplated, and the Atchison company still contemplates, the construction of a line from Texico in a southeasterly direction to Brownwood, Texas, which, in conjunction with the existing 1859 Gulf line of the Atchison company, will give it the shortest, and I am inclined to think, the best, line between San Francisco and the Gulf of Mexico. In connection with this Belen cut-off it was proposed to reduce the grades on the existing line to six-tenths of one per cent a mile as far west as Winslow. When that construction is completed there will be but 369 miles of road between Bengal and the east which is not a six-tenths grade, except as to one or two pusher grades or doubling grades. Mr. Harriman objected strenuously to the terms which I demanded of him, and the contest for the location of the Phoenix & Eastern line, which has been referred to in the testimony, took place because he was unwilling to accept the terms which I demanded. About September, 1904, while this controversy was still going on, I was informed by Mr. Harriman that he and some of his associates in business had purchased about 300,000 shares of Atchison stock, and he asked for representation on the Board of Directors. I stated to him that I would never willingly give any representation on the Board of Directors to the Union Pacific Railway, or to any rival company. He stated to me that not a share of that stock was owned by the Union Pacific Railway Company or the Southern Pacific Company, but that it had been bought by himself and several gentlemen who were associated with him as a private investment, because they believed in the Atchison property and in the country through which its lines ran. The gentlemen, I may say here, who were associated with Mr. Harriman, were Mr. Rogers and Mr. William Rockefeller, Mr. Stillman, and Mr. Schiff, or his firm,

Kuhn, Loeb & Company. I stated to him that I would not 1860 be willing to give any of these gentlemen a place on the Board of Directors until the differences existing between the Atchison and the Union Pacific Company had been adjusted; but if those differences were adjusted I would be willing to give to those gentlemen some representation on the Board of Directors in view of their personal holdings, with the understanding that the nominees would be acceptable and satisfactory to my own Board of Directors. I further stated that I would not be willing to have any of the executive officers, including himself, on our Board of Directors. There was a little difference of opinion between us on that point. Mr. Harriman and I had discussed the subjects—the general railway policy—on more than one occasion, and he urged that the management of great railway systems—the different great railway systems in the country—should deal with each other openly, fairly, and in a broad spirit of live and let live; and I agreed with him as to that general policy. I remember telling him that it was my belief that many, if not most, of the abuses in railway management were due to a failure to observe that policy, and to attempts of the officials of rival companies to obtain advantages over the others through petty methods and sharp practices; but I told him that I did not believe in having the officers of one company upon the Board of Directors of a rival company. He did not agree with me as to that, because he suggested that he should go on the Atchison board, and he offered me a place on the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific or the Southern Pacific (I don't remember which). At the time of the annual meeting of the 1861 stockholders in October, 1904, the differences to which I have referred had not been adjusted; but before I went out to the meeting Mr. Harriman handed me proxies for about 280,000 shares, but with the understanding that I would not use them unless in the meantime we had reached an agreement. The points open at that period of the negotiations were very few. One point—I don't know whether you care to go into the details——

Mr. LOVETT. I would like to hear the whole story.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Oh, yes, I want it all.

WITNESS. Well, one point was this, as I recall it. He had finally agreed that if the other terms of the settlement were carried out, the Southern Pacific would build a low-grade line between Phoenix and Deming, and give to the Atchison company an option, whenever it wanted, to take trackage rights over that line on very favorable terms—terms which would give us the use of that line for less than half of what it would cost us if we had built it ourselves. But he wanted to hitch on to this grant of trackage right a condition that we would not use the line for traffic to El Paso which there would be exchanged with the Missouri Pacific system or the Mexican Central or the Rock Island. While I did not attach much importance to this condition, because I knew we would never, if we could help it, send business that way, when we contemplated having the best line between the Pacific coast and Galveston, all over our own rails, yet I was not willing to assent to that condition; and therefore, at the annual meeting I did not vote the proxies, but brought them back and handed them to Mr. Harriman. Soon after that he yielded 1862 the points in difference, and the terms which I had demanded from the very beginning of the negotiations were agreed to without any modification to the disadvantage of the Atchison system; and thereupon two of the directors of the Atchison company retired, and Mr. Rogers and Mr. H. C. Frick were elected directors, and one of them a member of the Executive Committee.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Which one?

WITNESS. Mr. Rogers. As further explanation, I wish to state that in discussing the question of representation on the Board of Directors, Mr. Harriman and I were quite open with each other. I realized and he realized that the gentlemen whom I have named could, if they had desired, have elected four directors of the Atchison Company—four out of fifteen—because our board is a classified board, and under the system of cumulative voting one-fourth of the stock represented at a meeting can always elect one director; so that in four years the holders of one-fourth of the amount of stock represented at the meetings could put in four directors. With 300,000 shares to start with, and the proxies which they might obtain, it was evident that they could have elected one director a year—and then kept four directors in office. But I pointed out that no good could be obtained, either to the individuals or to the property, by a Board of Directors divided against itself, and that the only sensible course was to act amicably and give fair representation to these large interests, which I suggested should be two.

Q. Mr. Morawetz, the record shows that Mr. Rogers and 1863 Mr. Frick were elected members of the board, and Mr. Rogers elected a member of the Executive Committee, in February, 1905, and that these contracts respecting Northern California matters and the Phoenix & Eastern matter were not formally authorized by the board until December, 1906. I understand from you, however, that prior to February 8, 1905, the terms of those contracts had been substantially settled; is that correct?

A. Everything was agreed to before these gentlemen were elected members of the Board of Directors. The actual drafting of the various agreements was put off, and was done in a leisurely way, and was carried out at the dates indicated.

Q. That was largely just a matter between the lawyers, then, as to phraseology?

A. It was a matter between the lawyers altogether.

Q. Will you please state how many members were on the Executive Committee?

A. Seven. I want to state further, if I have not already stated it, that the line between Wickenburg and the Colorado River was started, and part of it built, irrespective of the construction of a low-grade line to Deming. Originally, at the urgent insistence of Mr. Murphy, we consented to the construction of 50 miles of road, easy construction, west of Wickenburg. There were several purposes in view in building that line. One was to obtain the mining traffic 1864 which, it was represented to us, would come to us through the construction of that line. Another was that we were anxious to help on the construction of the dam of the Colorado River south of the Needles, and the reclamation of a very large body of land which is contemplated. A further reason was that ultimately this line would give us the best line from the west into the Salt River Valley, and would become an important, valuable link in any transcontinental line which might be established through Phoenix. There was talk at that time of other systems building in from El Paso, and we were desirous of occupying that territory so as to meet any line which might be constructed to Phoenix, and receive the traffic from that line at Phoenix, if possible. No doubt, also, it was considered that if ever we or the Southern Pacific should build its low-grade line between Phoenix and Deming, our line from Phoenix west to Mojave would be a link in the whole transcontinental line established in that way.

1865 Q. You have stated that business originating on the Phoenix & Eastern could not be satisfactorily or profitably handled by the main line of the Atchison system.

Mr. SEVERANCE. No; I did not understand him to so state. Pardon me; he did not so state.

Q. I will be very glad if you will restate what——

A. I think I did.

Q. I will just get you to state again your view of that proposition.

A. I think I stated that business originating on the Phoenix & Eastern line could not be advantageously hauled up through Phoenix over the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix to Ash Fork and thence west.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I beg your pardon. I thought you were speaking of east-bound business, and then through Deming.

Mr. HINES. Oh, no.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I misunderstood your question.

WITNESS. At that time there was no smelter on the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix line. Afterward, a small smelter was established at Humboldt and was in operation for a short time, and has since failed. While that smelter was in operation, any ores from the Phoenix & Eastern line no doubt could be hauled, and I think some were hauled, to the smelter.

Q. I understood Mr. Murphy to express, in his testimony, the opinion that the arrangement which the Atchison made with respect to Northern California matters and the Phoenix & Eastern was an unwise one from the Atchison's standpoint. I would like you to 1866 explain what Mr. Murphy's connection with the matter was, and whether he was connected with the general situation in such a way as to be fitted to judge of the general situation.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I call attention to the fact that I did not examine Mr. Murphy at all with reference to the Northern California matter. However, you may go ahead.

A. Mr. Murphy had nothing to do with any of these negotiations, and I do not think that Mr. Murphy ever considered the conditions and needs of the Atchison system as a whole. Mr. Murphy was an enthusiastic son of Arizona and had very high ideas of the possibilities of Arizona, and he was always anxious to spend money of the Atchison company in the construction of lines in Arizona which he was certainly convinced were desirable for Arizona as well as for the Atchison system.

Q. With respect to the contracts which were made regarding the Northern California and the Phoenix & Eastern, I would like you to state specifically whether Mr. Frick and Mr. Rogers exerted any influence, in the Board of Directors or otherwise, regarding the shape that those contracts took, or the substance of those contracts.

A. They certainly exerted no influence. I do not think they ever considered either contract. The terms of the contracts were settled before they ever became directors.

Q. I wish to ask you further, Mr. Morawetz, if, during the time you were chairman of the Executive Committee, and while Mr. Frick and Mr. Rogers were directors and Mr. Rogers was a member of the Executive Committee, either of these gentlemen ever undertook to exert in favor of the Southern Pacific any influence upon the Atchison board or the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I object to that as purely speculative.

1867 Mr. HINES. I ask him if it is a fact.

Mr. SEVERANCE. He would have to form a conclusion as to what was to the interests of the Southern Pacific and give his conclusion as to whether what they did was in the interests of the Southern Pacific. It would be a mere conclusion, necessarily. It could not be anything else.

A. I always found both Mr. Frick and Mr. Rogers to be as zealous Atchison directors as any on the board. I do not recall that at any time any question was raised as to the interests or desires of the Union Pacific or of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. I will ask you, Mr. Morawetz, whether Mr. Harriman ever exerted, or undertook to exert, any influence upon you, on the board of the Atchison, adverse to the Atchison and in favor of the Southern Pacific or Union Pacific interests.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I object to that for the same reasons as I did the preceding question. I think it is pretty evident from Mr. Morawetz's testimony that he tried to do something.

A. He never did, and he never was consulted. To indicate the relations that existed, I wish to state an incident. About two years ago, at an Atchison board meeting, I recommended to the Board of Directors an increase of $98,000,000 in the capital stock of the company, to provide for future capital requirements. The board voted the increase and called a meeting of the stockholders to ratify the action, and the action of the board appeared in the newspapers on the following day. I casually met Mr. Harriman on the street on that day, and he stated to me that he thought it rather rough 1868 that, as he and his associates were the largest individual stockholders of the Atchison, he should first learn of so radical an action as an increase of $98,000,000 of stock in which he was interested by reading it in the newspapers.

Q. Mr. Morawetz, it is in evidence that the Union Pacific owns $10,000,000 of the preferred stock of the Atchison. I wish to ask you if that, or anything else, has led to the Union Pacific controlling in any way the action of the Atchison, or exerting any influence upon the action of the management of the Atchison affairs?

A. Not the slightest.

Q. If you care to do so, I would be glad to have you state to what extent, if at all, you have owned stock in the Southern Pacific or Union Pacific.

A. I have never owned a share in the Southern Pacific Company. At the time of the recent panic I bought 1,000 or 2,000 shares of Union Pacific stock, held it for three days, and then sold it. Except for that I never owned a share of Union Pacific stock. I have none to-day.

Q. Mr. Morawetz, so far as you know, has there ever been any relaxation in the competition between the Atchison, on the one hand, and the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific on the other, since the matters about which you have testified took place?

A. I never heard of such a thing.

Mr. SEVERANCE. What do you mean? Since these contracts were made?

Mr. LOVETT. Since the negotiations commenced.

Mr HINES. Since the negotiations respecting these contracts commenced.

1869 Mr. SPOONER. What was the answer?

WITNESS. I never heard of it.

Q. You don't mean you never heard of any competition between them?

A. Of any relaxation.

By Mr. BECK:

Q. Mr. Morawetz, in the discharge of his duties as a director and a member of the Executive Committee of the Atchison, has Mr. H. H. Rogers been a loyal director of the Atchinson?

Mr. SEVERANCE. I object to that as calling for a conclusion, purely speculative, and asking for an opinion.

A. I think a most loyal and zealous director in the interests of the Atchison company.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Mr. Morawetz, I have only one or two questions. To what extent, if any, did Mr. Murphy—Frank Murphy I believe it is—direct or control the policy of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company?

A. Not at all. He confined his attention to the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix line and the conditions in Arizona.

Q. He was never a director of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company, was he?

A. No, sir.

Cross-examination, by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Morawetz, when was the construction of the Wickenburg line commenced?

A. I should think it was begun in 1903, but I will ascertain and furnish you the date definitely.

Q. When was the construction of the Phoenix & Eastern begun?

1870 A. In the summer or winter of 1902, I should say.

Q. Then the Phoenix & Eastern was under construction before the Wickenburg branch?

A. I think it was.

Q. When was the first talk between Mr. Ripley and Mr. Murphy and yourself, or any of you, with reference to continuation of the Phoenix & Eastern to Deming? When was that matter first discussed? Wasn't it prior to the time the construction of the Phoenix & Eastern was actually entered upon?

A. I can ascertain those dates, but I can not state definitely now. In 1902, when the construction of the Phoenix & Eastern was begun, the idea was to build to Benson. The idea of a line up to Gila canyon was first brought up at the time of the controversy with the Southern Pacific, on account of our building into what they called their territory.

Q. Do you remember when that was?

A. That must have been the winter of 1902. I wish to state here, if you please, that at no time, until we sold the Phoenix & Eastern line, was any definite line decided upon as the proposed low-grade line, if any should be constructed. Our engineers were at work both in the South and in the North to ascertain what line would be the most desirable; and the line which was under consideration at the close of the negotiations was a line through the Arivapa canyon, which is south of the Gila canyon.

Q. That is interesting, but that is not what I asked. What I asked is this: When did the Santa Fe people—that is, Mr. Murphy, Mr. Ripley and yourself, or any other gentlemen in the Santa Fe with whom you discussed the mater—first take up the ques-
1871 tion (not the definite location of a line to Deming) of building a connection from Dudleyville, or somewhere in that vicinity, to Deming? Was that in 1902?

A. I think it was first discussed in the winter of 1902–3.

Q. And the Wickenburg line was started in 1903, as you stated—the construction of the Wickenburg line—about six months after, would you say?

A. I do not remember the date.

Q. You stated a little while ago it was 1903.

A. That is my impression. I could ascertain.

Q. If that is the case, then, your testimony on direct examination, or your statement—I don't know as it was asked, but you made the statement on direct examination, that the building of the line through to Deming had not been considered up until after you had commenced the construction of the Wickenburg line. Now did you intend to so state?

A. No.

Q. Or was that an inadvertance?

A. I think I referred to the Belen cut-off then, did I not?

Q. No; the Wickenburg. You did not intend to so testify?

A. I did not intend to so testify, no. I don't think I did.

Mr. LOVETT. I don't think so either.

Mr. HINES. Won't you let him re-state what he understands the fact to be?

Mr. SEVERANCE. No, that is all I want.

Mr. HINES. Do you object to his stating that right there?

Mr. SEVERANCE. Stating what?

Mr. HINES. What his understanding of the fact is.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Well, I have brought it out now. Certainly.

1872 Go on, Mr. Morawetz. Make any explanation you wish to.

WITNESS. I simple state that I do not remember the precise dates. They were in 1902 or 1903, or about there. I can get you exact dates, if you want them.

Q. You do not intend to testify, then, that the Santa Fe commenced the construction of the line from Wickenburg west previous to the time that you had had the matter of a low-grade line to Deming under discussion, do you?

A. I do not.

Q. You stated at the beginning of your statement that Mr. Murphy projected the Phoenix & Eastern, individually, or with some associates. Was that in 1901?

A. At the time when we bought the line in 1901. He had those plans under consideration.

Q. You learned, did you not, while that line was under construction, that citizens along the line had given rights-of-way to the Phoenix & Eastern to induce the construction of a competitive line to Benson?

A. I may have, though I do not recall it.

Q. You knew, did you not, that terminal facilities had been furnished by the residents of Benson to induce you to come down there, and that the Phoenix & Eastern owned those facilities, or that land, at the time you sold the line?

A. I may have. I do not know.

Q. Did it seem to you a proper and just thing to sell that line out to the Southern Pacific after those people had given you the right-of-way and the terminal grounds at Benson, merely on account of the trade in Northern California, and to keep out of the Southern Pacific territory?

1873 A. I do not know, Mr. Severance, that I knew those facts. I know this: that when we took up the Phoenix & Eastern it was with an understanding with Mr. Murphy that we would cause the line to be built as far as Dudleyville, and that we were not ready to go any farther; and I remember that Mr. Ripley did not think it advisable to go to Benson, while I was disposed to go to Benson if we went anywhere.

Q. Well, you went somewhere, didn't you?

A. We went to Dudleyville.

Q. You were overruled in that, were you? If so, by whom?

A. Hardly overruled, no. I was inclined to think that sooner or later the line would be extended to Benson anyhow.

Q. That was your idea?

A. After being built to Dudleyville.

Q. You knew that the right-of-way had been given to you along the line between Phoenix and Dudleyville in order to get a competing line in there, didn't you?—A. I can not say yes and I can not say no. I do not recall it. But it is not unlikely that I was informed.

Q. You knew the Southern Pacific had a line over as far as Mesa along the line of the Phoenix & Eastern?—A. Yes.

Q. When was it that Mr. Harriman came to you and objected to the invasion of his territory? Was that after the line was completed, or before?—A. Oh, before it was completed; while it was in the course of construction.

Q. Was that at the time rocks were being thrown down on the tracks, as Mr. Murphy says, or was it before that?—A. Oh, it was before.

1874 Q. Before that?—A. The contest as to the location of the Phoenix & Eastern line took place after I had formulated my demands and after Mr. Harriman had refused to agree to them.

Q. I see. So when you found you couldn't agree otherwise, he tried the "rock" treatment, did he?—A. I remember stating to him that I did not think such action would facilitate the negotiations and that it certainly would not influence me favorably to agree to his demands.

Q. Mr. Morawetz, if the line had been extended to Benson, as originally contemplated when Mr. Murphy proposed to build it, you would have connected there with the El Paso & Southwestern, would you not?—A. Yes.

Q. The El Paso & Southwestern is an entirely independent line, isn't it?—A. I believe it to be.

Q. Built by the Copper Queen people?—the Phelps-Dodge people, controlled by them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Douglas is the president—Prof. Douglas?—A. Yes.

Q. That line reaches El Paso, doesn't it?—A. Yes.

Q. And there connects with the Mexican Central, doesn't it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Running to Mexico City?—A. Yes.

Q. And connects with other lines to the east?—A. Yes.

Q. The Texas & Pacific?—A. Yes.

Q. At the present time the El Paso & Southwestern has no way of reaching the Pacific Coast, except by the Southern Pacific from Benson, has it?

A. No. Practically none.

Q. Has it any other way, except by going around by El Paso?

A. It connects with the Atchison at El Paso and at Deming, and through the Southern Pacific it connects with the Atchison

1875 at Phoenix; but practically its only outlet is the Southern Pacific.

Q. Yes. It would be a very round-about way to go around there?—A. Yes.

Q. The only thing that was left, in order to give an outlet and an interchange between Arizona and the country to the west and the country along the El Paso & Southwestern and down into Mexico, was the construction of this short line from Benson to Dudleyville, as long as the Santa Fe owned that road; isn't that true?—A. Yes.

Q. And was that the invasion of Southern Pacific territory which Mr. Harriman objected to?—A. No, he did not specify. It was generally extending our mileage south of Phoenix.

Q. He thought that there should be a wall erected at Phoenix, and you should stay on your side of the fence and he on his side of the fence; isn't that right? Or didn't he propose to stay on his side of the fence?—A. I should have proposed it if he had not.

Q. Well, that was his suggestion, was it—that you should not go south of Phoenix?—A. No. Really all that I can remember is that he objected to our construction of this line south of Phoenix, on the ground that we were going into territory which was properly tributary to Southern Pacific lines.

Q. This territory that he was trying to protect was not served at that time by the Southern Pacific, was it? That is, the territory lying between Benson on the south and, you might say, Mesa on the north, except for that little line over by Maricopa?—A. No. I
1876 presume that we were as near it as the Southern Pacific. But the mineral traffic there was traffic between the local points and the east, which could not be properly served by the Atchison lines, but which naturally fell into the system of the Southern Pacific or of the El Paso & Southwestern, which was equally near. So far as the Atchison was concerned, it was simply a question of a short local haul.

Q. Of a short local haul, to deliver over to another line to the east, wasn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. If you had built on to Benson?

A. Yes.

Q. But that would have created a competition in that business to the east, which Mr. Harriman desired to prevent, by reason of the action of the El Paso & Southwestern?

A. Practically there was no business from those points.

Q. But the business was being developed, Mr. Murphy testified. People were opening up mines there, largely.

A. They were prospects, yes. There were no real——

Q. He says there was a great deal of money spent there in opening up mines, and that people were obliged to haul their ore out with wagons, and all that.

A. You cannot operate a copper mine without a railroad, and there was no railroad reaching to the mines.

Q. In the San Pedro Valley?

A. In the San Pedro Valley. I do not think there is a mine there today.

Q. Mr. Murphy testified to the contrary.

A. I think he is mistaken.

Mr. LOVETT. I don't think he did, Mr. Severance.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Yes, he said they were opening up mines.

1877 Mr. LOVETT. He testified there was development going on there, but what kind of development he did not say.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Yes, very large development.

Q. You haven't heard of the Southern Pacific extending their lines in there to open up that territory, have you?

A. No, sir.

Q. The Southern Pacific did not need the Phoenix & Eastern line for any local purposes, did it?—A. I did not understand.

Q. They did not need a line from Dudleyville into Phoenix for anything, did they—the Southern Pacific?—A. No more than we did. If there was any traffic there they would want it as much as we did, and more.

Q. They had a line out as far as Mesa, which reached the rich fruit-growing district, didn't they?—A. A few miles out.

Q. Well, 18 miles. And that reached out into the rich fruit-growing district of Salt River Valley, didn't it?—A. I presume so.

Q. You have been out in the Salt River Valley, have you not?—A. I have been, yes.

Q. Do you recall where Mesa is located?—A. Southeast of Phoenix, isn't it?

Q. Southeast.—A. Yes.

Q. And the Southern Pacific had their own line there, so they did not need the Santa Fe's Phoenix & Eastern to tap Mesa?—A. The Phoenix & Eastern does not go to Mesa, does it?

Q. Yes. Doesn't it?—A. I think not.

Mr. HINES. Would you like to have the map, Mr. Morawetz?

Mr. SEVERANCE. You should know better than I. You are 1878 chairman of the board, and I am not.

Witness and counsel examine map.

Q. Then, you see it does go there?—A. It does, yes.

Q. Judge Lovett says it is not 18 miles, but only 17½, I believe.—A. I accept the amendment.

Mr. LOVETT. Judge Lovett did not say that.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I thought you did. What did you say?

Mr. LOVETT. I am not on the witness stand.

Mr. SEVERANCE. You said 17 and a fraction.

Mr. LOVETT. No.

Q. Was there, then, any substantial reason why that line should have been acquired by the Southern Pacific, except to stop any possible competition in that territory and to prevent a new outlet?—A. I do not doubt that the Southern Pacific wanted to buy the line, and did buy it, for the reason which was assigned, namely, that they did not want the Atchison to extend into that territory.

Q. Well, that is another way of stating that they did not desire competition from any other line in that territory, isn't it?—A. No. They did not want that territory to be occupied by the Atchison, because if there was anything in the territory for a railroad company they wanted it for themselves.

Q. That is not entirely the whole truth, is it, Mr. Morawetz? If your line had been extended down to Benson, it would have produced competitive conditions, certainly, between the country to the east and Phoenix, would it?—A. Oh, I agree.

1879 Q. Yes.

A. Yes. I agree. I thought you meant the line to Dudleyville.

Q. No, I am speaking of the whole proposition.

A. The whole proposition, yes.

Q. Getting control of the proposition?

A. No doubt.

Q. So that the real reason why Mr. Harriman desired to get that line into their hands was to prevent possible future competition through a line that you might run down to Benson?

A. I think that is true.

Q. And you accommodated him in that regard?

A. No, sir.

Q. Getting for it what you thought was a sufficient equivalent in another direction?

A. No, sir. I would have sold that line independently for cost and interest, because, according to my best advices, it would not pay for years to come, if at all, and if we ever wanted to build a line through there to Deming we could build it without having lost in the meantime interest on the investment.

Q. Why did you undertake the construction of this line in 1902, if you proposed to sell it out to anybody who would buy it for cost and interest?

A. There was no thought at that time of selling it, of course.

Q. There wasn't any thought of selling it out until Mr. Harriman came to you and made his objection to your going into the territory, was there?

A. There were several reasons.

Q. Just answer that question.

Mr. HINES. Well, let him answer the other one. Let him get through answering the other one.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I think I got an answer. I am not try-

1880 ing to choke off Mr. Morawetz. I think you will agree to that.

Mr. HINES. I didn't think so. That is why I called attention to it.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Let Mr. Morawetz answer it in his own way.

WITNESS. Strike out the answer "There were several reasons." There was no thought of selling it out until the controversy arose with the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Well, the controversy was as to whether you would build the line or whether you would not, wasn't it?

A. That was the controversy.

Q. And there was never any proposition made to you by anybody else to buy it, was there?

A. Never.

Q. You stated that Mr. Murphy was a very enthusiastic son of Arizona and had rather large ideas of the possibilities of the Territory, and so forth. He built the line from Ash Fork to Phoenix, did he not?

A. He did.

Q. And you thought enough of that afterward to buy it?

A. I think very well of it now.

Q. So that when Mr. Murphy projected that enterprise he was building very well, was he not?

A. He was.

Q. And that is a successful line for the Santa Fe?

A. It is.

Q. He certainly knows the possibilities of the territory much better than anybody in New York that you are acquainted with, does he not?

A. He does.

Q. Did Mr. Murphy have anything to do with the California-Northwestern situation? I ask you that because Mr. Hines seemed to include that in his question.

1881 A. Nothing. He was interested in that situation when we bought the Eel River and Eureka road. He furnished us the engineer of the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix line to make a reconnaissance of the country to the south of Eureka, and we went over the project quite fully with him at that time. But he had nothing to do with the negotiations.

Q. I don't mean the negotiations with Mr. Harriman, but did he have anything to do with the negotiations pursuant to which the Santa Fe acquired some lines of road up there?

A. I am not sure of that. He was very much interested in the project.

Q. Then he sometimes laps over outside of Arizona?

A. Yes; occasionally.

Q. Yes; that is what I wanted to find out. Now, I notice by the contract that you made with the Southern Pacific at the time you turned this Phoenix & Eastern over there is a provision that you have referred to with reference to trackage rights to the Atchison at such time as the line is built through to Deming.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I find in Article 2 of the contract, complainant's Exhibit 104 (which is the agreement with respect to the sale of the Phoenix & Eastern, dated December 7, 1906) the following language: "The Southern Company further agrees that it will cause such line between Phoenix and Deming to be completed within three years after delivery to it of an instrument signed by the president and authorized by the Board of Directors of the Atchison Company, requesting the Southern Company to cause such line to be completed and to execute such trackage contract, Exhibit 'B,' and agreeing that the 1882 Atchison Company will execute such trackage contract, if said line between Phoenix and Deming shall be completed within three years after the delivery of such request." So far as you are advised, has the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe road made any request of the Southern Pacific to build that line?

A. Never.

Q. And you don't think they ever will, do you?

A. I am confident that the Atchison Company never will ask trackage under that agreement, because I do not think it would pay.

Q. Then, you don't think much of the contract that you made in that regard?

A. I think it is a desirable option to have. I do not believe that it would ever pay the Atchison Company to haul its transcontinental traffic that way.

Q. Then, that leaves this situation, doesn't it; that the Atchison Company turned over to the Southern Pacific the Phoenix & Eastern so as to keep out of its territory, reserving a right which you regard of no value, so far as trackage is concerned; that is the fact, isn't it?

A. An option is always of some value. I do not regard it of much value.

Q. That is the traffic agreement that you referred to in your testimony concerning which you had such long discussions with Mr. Harriman?

A. No, sir. The principal difference was in regard to the Northern California situation. Mr. Harriman refused to give us a half interest in his lines north of San Francisco Bay. He wanted us to sell him our investment at Eureka, or he proposed that we should build from Eureka down to Willetts, to a connection with his lines, and that the line so built north of Willetts should be owned jointly by the Southern Pacific and the Atchison. That was the principal 1883 difficulty between us.

Q. Yes, but you testified in your long statement which you made in answer to Mr. Hines, if I understood you correctly, that you had a long controversy with Mr. Harriman with reference to the movement of business by El Paso, in some way; I didn't quite catch what it was.

A. I stated, Mr. Severance, that most of the points in difference had been settled before the meeting at which the stockholders were to be elected; but a few questions remained open, and one of those questions was this question as to the movement of traffic over this Gila canyon line, if we should exercise the option.

Q. If you regard that contract giving you that option, or rather the rights that you could get by exercising that option, as of so slight advantage to the Santa Fe that you do not think they will ever exercise the option, why did you have any trouble over a little matter of that sort which would never become operative?

A. As I stated, the particular difference seemed to me of especially little importance, because I knew we would not send traffic to Galveston via the Texas & Pacific line in any case, having our own line all the way through; but I was not willing to yield the point, although I did not consider it of much consequence.

Q. That is, you were trying to make a point that would look well on paper, but was really of no value; is that right?

A. It never appeared on the papers. The point never appeared in the papers. Mr. Harriman wanted to limit our trackage contract. I refused to limit it.

Q. You wanted it unlimited?

A. I wanted it unlimited.

1884 Q. But it was such a valueless thing you are satisfied the Santa Fe will never take advantage of it. It would not if you continued chairman of the Board.

A. It is not of very much value, in my judgment. Mr. Harriman considered it of very much more value than I did.

Q. Well, Mr. Morawetz, the fact is that you traded off the situation in Arizona for a half interest in the Harriman lines in California? Isn't that it, practically, to sum it up?

A. No, sir. I went into the construction to Dudleyville reluctantly. Personally I was quite willing to sell this Phoenix & Eastern line at cost and interest, because I did not believe it would pay, and I do not believe it has yet paid operating expenses.

Q. Well, most any line which starts for some connecting point with other lines and stops half way, is not lucrative, is it—is not apt to be? Suppose you had taken your Belen cut-off and built it half way and stopped out on the prairie somewhere: that wouldn't have been of much value, would it?

A. Well, that line to Dudleyville was built to develop local traffic, and not as a tunnel between two points.

Q. But if it had gone to Benson, it was a line that would have opened up new traffic, wouldn't it, in connection with the El Paso & Southwestern?

A. I am not a traffic man, but Mr. Ripley, who is a traffic man, advised me that he did not think enough traffic would be obtained there to pay for the construction of the line from Dudleyville down.

Q. He did not think the interchange of business would be sufficient?

A. So I understood, yes.

Q. Are you sure he said that?

A. I am very confident that that was his view.

1885 Q. What was Mr. Ripley's attitude—as long as we are going into that—on building the line to Deming from Dudleyville?

A. You mean the low-grade line?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Mr. Ripley and I discussed the matter, and he stated to me that it would be many years, if ever, before the Atchison company could afford to build that low-grade line.

Q. Why? Because it was hard up, or because it wouldn't pay?

A. Because it wouldn't pay. To establish that low-grade line would have involved the expenditure of more than $15,000,000.

Q. You stated on your direct examination $10,000,000 to build to Deming and $2,000,000 more to strengthen the line up to Belen. Where did the other $3,000,000 come in?

A. Well, it is something over $3,000,000 from Wickenburg to Bengal.

Q. Well, you are building that anyway?

A. Partly.

Q. You built as far as the Colorado River and built a very expensive bridge across the river, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. And how much further have you to build up to Bengal?

A. About 90 miles; 96 miles.

Q. How much will that cost, according to your estimates?

A. I should think about $2,000,000.

Q. Is it the intention of the Santa Fe to stop where they are, after building that big bridge over the Colorado River?

A. Some day the line will undoubtedly be extended and a line will be built from somewhere about Parker, in a northeasterly direction, to Ash Fork, to give us a second line between Bengal and Ash Fork. That will leave only the short piece of line between 1886 Ash Fork and Winslow to be covered, in order to give us practically two lines across.

Q. Do you think it will be a matter of a number of years before that line is completed?

A. I think very likely.

Q. You kept right on building your bridge and your other line, didn't you?

A. It would take two years to build that bridge. The foundation had to be put in at low water in the river. The subject was discussed, and it was decided that we had better get that bridge in so that whenever we found it desirable, or profitable, or otherwise desirable, we could strike quickly across to Bengal. The construction of that bridge meant two years' delay.

Q. The construction of the line from Bengal to the Colorado River, at the bridge, is not difficult, is it?

A. Not seriously difficult.

Q. I mean it is not heavy work?

A. Not very.

Q. For the western country it is not heavy work?

A. Not very.

Q. And therefore you do expect, do you not, Mr. Morawetz, that that will be rather speedily completed, so that you will have the advantage of the through cut-off; isn't that the intention?

A. There was no authority granted to complete that line when I left the Atchison last October, and it was not intended to construct the line within any definite period. It was held in abeyance.

Q. Wasn't that largely owing to the financial situation?

A. No.

Q. If the panic had not struck, a year ago last fall, don't you think that line would have been completed through to Bengal speedily?

A. No.

Q. You don't?

A. No, I think not.

1887 Q. Up in Northern California you originally contemplated the purchase of the California & Northwestern yourselves?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Southern Pacific got ahead of you and bought it first, did they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you bought some lines up around Eureka?

A. The Eel River and Eureka lines.

Q. And you bought them with the intention of continuing them down to San Francisco bay?

A. In contemplation, but not with the intention.

Q. Well, in contemplation?

A. Yes—of the possibilities.

Q. You didn't buy them simply to keep and have them stand still, but you expected to make a connection with your main system at San Francisco bay, didn't you?

A. We wanted a foothold in that country. We knew we could get out the timber and bring it down by water, as it goes now, until we found it profitable to build a line down to a connection with our own system.

Q. Are the mills on the tidewater there, or are they inland?

A. Some inland and some on tidewater, I think.

Q. And you bring the lumber out, or, in case the mills are on tidewater, bring the logs out, and the lumber is taken down by boat?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you have a line of boats there?

A. No; we have no boats.

Q. Mr. Morawetz, I notice in your contract with the Southern Pacific you grant them trackage rights between Phoenix and Mojave. That is the contract annexed to the agreement relating to the sale of the Phoenix & Eastern?

1888 A. If they are willing to take it. They have not been willing to take it yet.

Q. But they are entitled to it any time, aren't they?

A. They are; and we are anxious for them to take it, because if they will take it, we will instantly finish the line. But one of the reasons why we are not finishing it is we are afraid the Southern Pacific will not take the trackage rights.

Q. The Southern Pacific, if they would take their business through over your line, when it is finished, by Wickenburg, would get a much better grade into California than they do over their present line, would they not?

A. A much better grade for their Northern California business.

Q. That is what I mean—Northern California.

A. But not for Los Angeles.

Q. I don't mean for Los Angeles. I mean for San Francisco and Northern California business.

A. Oh, yes; much better.

Q. So that that privilege of the Southern Pacific to run over your line from Phoenix to Mojave is a valuable privilege, is it not?

A. Well, I discussed that subject with Mr. Ripley, and he was very anxious that they should exercise the trackage rights, because it would relieve us of half the interest on the cost of construction and of half the taxes and of half the maintenance charges. But of course the Southern Pacific are not going to do that unless they find it more profitable to pay all that than to use their own line.

Q. Do you think that was another instance of putting something in a contract that is of no consequence and no use—like your trackage rights from——

A. I didn't say it was of no consequence and of no use.

1889 Q. Don't you think, Mr. Morawetz, that that is a valuable right that you gave to the Southern Pacific there to get a low-grade route up to Mojave or up to Bengal, wherever it is?

A. Well——

Q. Didn't they regard it as so in their negotiations with you?

A. I can only say that they did not ask for it, but I offered it.

Q. You offered that?

A. I offered it.

Q. So that you not only let them have your line out to Dudleyville, but you offered them a half interest in your line on to California?

A. I did not offer them anything of the kind. I offered them an opportunity to pay half the interest on cost and half the taxes, half the operating expenses and maintenance.

Q. Did you offer them anything else?

A. I did not.

Q. You kept the rest for the Santa Fe, did you?

A. I tried to.

Q. Mr. Morawetz, what reason did Mr. Harriman give you for wanting representatives on your Board of Directors?

A. The only reason he gave was that these gentlemen had acquired large personal interests in the stock of the Atchison and it was only proper that they should have representation. He stated to me, and I believe it to be true, that these gentlemen bought Atchison stock because they thought it was a good investment. One of them (I think it was Mr. Schiff) stated to me that his interest in the Atchison was relatively as large as his interest in the Union Pacific.

1890 Q. I am asking you at present about your conversation with Mr. Harriman. I will come to the Schiff business a little later, perhaps.

A. All right.

Q. Mr. Harriman made no other suggestion than that—that they ought to have representation because they had secured stock?

A. None other.

Q. You had some discussion with him about the propriety of his going on your board?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he ask to go on your board?

A. Yes, as I have stated. He suggested he should go on the Atchison board and that I should go on their board.

Q. Why did he say he wanted to go on the Atchison board?

A. I don't think he assigned any reason.

Q. On your direct-examination you gave some explanations as to conversations you had had with Mr. Harriman.

A. As to policy.

Q. As to policy?

A. As to policy.

Q. Let me ask you this: in substance, did he ask to be put on the Atchison board so that he might be kept advised as to prospective action to be taken by the Atchison?

A. He did not so state: but, of course, the object of going on a Board of Directors would be to take part in the management. There could be no other.

Q. So that he wanted to go on the board so as to take part in the management of the Santa Fe road, and you objected to it?

A. I objected to his going on the Santa Fe board and objected equally to my going on his board.

Q. Why did you make that objection?

A. Because I did not believe it to be wise to have the officers of a rival company on the Board of Directors.

Q. Why not?

1891 A. Because I thought, and still think, that the management would be more satisfactory if there were no divided counsels upon the board.

Q. Does not that apply to directors as well as to other officers?

A. I do not think so. I have not found it so in my experience. The strongest and richest men commonly have interests in a great many companies, and I have never found there was any substantial objection to allowing them to sit as directors of these companies, even though the companies be to some extent competitors or rivals.

Q. I think I have read in some books on corporations—of recognized merit—that directors who are interested adversely to their companies are disqualified from acting; have I not?

A. Undoubtedly. If a question had arisen between the Union Pacific and the Atchison, I should have considered that any director who owns stock in the Union Pacific would have been disqualified.

Q. Is it not also a fact that a corporation is entitled to the unbiased advice of each member of the Board of Directors?

A. Undoubtedly. But it is perfectly well settled that a man may be a director of more than one company.

Q. Oh, yes, undoubtedly. But therefore you would favor, as a general proposition, would you——

A. Independent boards of directors; yes, of course.

Q. Oh, you would? That is what I want to know.

A. Of course.

Q. Then, you don't think that Mr. Rogers and Mr. Frick, who were directors of the Union Pacific, should have been placed on your board?

A. That does not follow.

Q. Are they better than other men?

A. Not at all.

Q. How is it that you want independent boards of directors,
1892 and still think it is all right that these two particular gentlemen should be on both boards?

A. There are no better directors than Mr. Rogers or Mr. Frick, except upon questions in which they have conflicting interests, when, of course, they would not undertake to vote. It is very rare—I do not recall any case where a question arose in the Board of Directors since these gentlemen were on the board in which the Union Pacific or the Southern Pacific interests were involved, or in which it was necessary that they should abstain from voting.

Q. Let me ask you this: you stated that the completion of the Wickenburg cut-off would add greatly to the facilities of the Atchison in handling transcontinental business, and give you that much more double-track. Did you not so state?

A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you state that that would make you practically another double track from Ash Fork to Bengal? I so understood you.

A. I should say if we should construct a line which has been under consideration from some point east of Parker to a point between Prescott and Ash Fork, it would give an alternate line between Bengal and Ash Fork.

Q. That would be a useful thing to the Santa Fe, wouldn't it; save you a lot of grades there?

A. No, sir, it wouldn't pay now to build such a line.

Q. Wouldn't it, when business is normal? Isn't your business large enough so that it would pay?

A. No, sir; oh, no.

Q. It is not?

A. Oh, no. If we had another line we could not use it now to advantage, because the increase of interest charges and of maintenance charges would far exceed any saving in operation.

Q. When a question like that arises, the Santa Fe board, or the Santa Fe corporation is entitled to an unbiased judgment of its Board of Directors upon the question as to whether those additional facilities should be provided or not, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

1893 Q. And if the Santa Fe were in active competition with other transcontinental lines, any additional facilities of the Santa Fe which enable them to do business more cheaply helps them that much in their competition with the other lines, doesn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Therefore it is at least preferable that directors of the Union Pacific or Southern Pacific or any other company that is in competition with the Santa Fe should not be in a position to pass upon the advisability of additional facilities for the Santa Fe, isn't it?

A. They should not be in a position to decide whether additional facilities should be made, but in this case there would be thirteen to two.

Q. So that you would expect them to vote in the interests of the Union Pacific, but be beaten thirteen to two; is that the idea?

A. No, sir, I should expect them to vote as they have always voted—to do the best thing for the Atchison.

Q. But that is because you have confidence in these two gentlemen, and the rules that would ordinarily apply to everyday men do not apply to them?

A. Well, I have not found that men in large affairs take so petty a view of a situation.

Q. That is, they are not swayed by self-interest?

A. They are not swayed by small considerations.

Q. Well, of course the amount of stock they might have in a rival line would determine to some extent whether the consideration was small or great, wouldn't it?

A. Presumably.

1894 Q. Now, if you don't think any harm would naturally result from having two Union Pacific representatives in the Santa Fe board——

A. There are not two Union Pacific representatives on our board, Mr. Severance. Mr. Frick never was suggested or considered a Union Pacific representative.

Q. I will change the form of my question. I will say two directors of the Union Pacific on your board. You are aware of the fact that Mr. Frick was a director of the Union Pacific?

A. He is now.

Q. He was at the time he went on your board, wasn't he?

A. I understand so.

Q. You say he was not suggested. Who did suggest him? You say he was not suggested by them. Who did suggest Mr. Frick as a director of the Santa Fe?

A. His name was suggested by Mr. Harriman.

Q. And he was then a director of the Union Pacific?

A. It was not suggested that Mr. Frick was a representative of the Union Pacific.

Q. Oh, I would not have expected it would be put in that way, of course.

A. That is what you said.

Q. I changed my question when you objected to that; it didn't occur to me that it was an improper way to state it. Instead of Union Pacific representative I will put it this way: There are two directors on the Santa Fe who had been directors of the Union Pacific at the time they were elected to the Santa Fe board?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you think no harm can result from so small a minority of Union Pacific directors on the board. How large a 1895 minority would you still think safe for the Santa Fe, so that the action of the Santa Fe could not be in any way affected by the fact that they are representatives of a competing line or directors of a competing line?

A. Well, Mr. Samuel Tilden said, "It is difficult to tell the results of things that never happened."

Q. That would be a mere speculation, would it?

A. A mere speculation. But I may state here, Mr. Severance——

Q. Oh, that answers the question.

A. ——that I was willing to accept two gentlemen who were satisfactory to me and my board rather than to have four gentlemen thrust into the board, concerning whose selection I had no choice.

Q. Now, what reason did Mr. Harriman assign for inviting you onto the Union Pacific board if you were not a stockholder?

A. It was because of his expressed policy that two great railway systems should deal with each other openly and frankly, and on the principle of live and let live.

Q. That is, he was opposed to what he termed in his testimony destructive competition, is that it?

A. I didn't understand it.

Mr. Severance. Just one moment. I will put the question in its own words.

(Printed transcript of record of proceedings taken before Interstate Commerce Commission sent for.)

Mr. Severance. You can make a statement, if you like, so
1896 that it will be in the record, that the Belen cut-off makes a difference of 11 miles.

Witness. I state, in order that it may be put into the record, that the line of the Atchison between Chicago and the Pacific coast is 11 miles shorter via the Belen cut-off than via the existing line, but that Albuquerque is a few miles nearer to Chicago than Belen. The difference in favor of the Belen route arises because of the cut-off from Belen to the main line west of Albuquerque.

Q. Mr. Harriman testified before the Interstate Commerce Commission, and his testimony by stipulation has been read into this record, concerning his conversations with you as follows; see if this accords with your recollection.

A. I didn't know that he testified to that at all.

Q. Yes; see if this accords with your recollection. He was asked to state his interviews with Mr. Ripley and yourself concerning putting some of these gentlemen on the Santa Fe board, and, after having been asked to state what he said, this is his response: "It was in substance that we were to try to establish a better relationship between all the railroads, in the line that we should deal more frankly with each other, more publicly and more frankly, and not operate our lines for the purpose of destroying each other, but for the purpose of helping each other, and for developing the territory served by each, and to that extent I even went so far with Mr. Morawetz as to tell him that as far as the Southern Pacific was concerned, I would be willing to even put him on the Executive Committee of the Southern Pacific so that he might know what our inten-1897 tions were, if he chose to." Is that about your recollection?

A. That is about my recollection, yes.

Q. Then it was his opinion, expressed to you, that you should have common directors, and the roads should be operated so as to help each other instead of being operated, as he expresses it, to destroy each other or in opposition to each other, they should be operated to help each other; is that right? Is that the way you recall it?

A. Yes, substantially that.

Q. And he speaks of them being so operated as to develop the territory served by each, and then his idea was that wherever the Southern Pacific had established itself in a certain territory, or wherever the Santa Fe had established itself in a certain territory, the other lines should not build in and attempt to divide the business; is that right?

A. Substantially that.

Q. One question I forgot to ask you. Do you know anything about the difficulty the Santa Fe has in Northern Arizona in getting water to run their engines?

A. Yes, we have spent a great deal of money in Northern Arizona in building dams and sinking wells. Formerly it was necessary to haul water by train, at times considerable distance.

Q. Is not that still done?

A. I think at times of the year, at certain times, they still haul.

Q. That is very expensive, isn't it? It makes it a very expensive operation?

A. It makes it a very expensive operation, yes.

Q. Now, you would not meet with that difficulty along this 1898 Southern line in Arizona, down the Gila Canyon?

A. No.

Q. That is an expense you would save in operation?

A. Yes, that is relatively, not very large.

Q. Well, isn't it considerable?

A. It is a considerable expense, but when it comes to an interest charge of $750,000 per annum, and a maintenance charge of an equal amount, it becomes trifling.

Q. I understand that is not the whole thing. Now, west of the place that the Belen cut-off strikes the main line at present you have some heavy mountain climbing, haven't you?

A. As far as Winslow, Arizona, that is, between Rio Puerco and Winslow, by the expenditure of $1,700,000 we can establish a six-tenths of one per cent grade, leaving the stiff grades to be dealt with only those between Winslow and——

Q. Bengal?

A. Well, really the Colorado River.

Q. Now, what altitude do you have to climb between Winslow and the Colorado River?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Where is the continental divide; east or west of Winslow?

A. The San Francisco mountain is west of Winslow, I think the continental divide is also, but I am not sure.

Q. There is very heavy climbing in the vicinity of Flagstaff, isn't there?

A. That is the San Francisco mountain.

Q. That is west of San Francisco, of course, I can tell you that.

A. Yes, I know, that is the San Francisco mountain.

Q. Then you don't get away from that mountain climbing?

A. No.

Q. If you make your line low grade to Winslow?

A. About 1½ per cent.

1899 Q. And you go up and down several times there, don't you?

A. Twice.

Q. Only?

A. Once or twice, I think that is all.

Q. Haven't you a big climb west of Ash Fork, and a curve too?

A. The road drops down to the river at Needles, and then there is a steady rise from the river up.

Q. Up to Ash Fork?

A. No, up toward——

Q. Well, coming east how is it?

A. The same thing; that is, coming east it drops down towards the river and then rises from the river.

Q. You have got a great big climb a little ways west of Ash Fork, where you have a horseshoe bend with rises around the mountain, haven't you?

A. Between Ash Fork and the river is a stiff grade.

Q. Now, all that climbing—that 300 and how many miles?

A. 369 miles contains the material grades to be dealt with.

Q. That is, between Winslow and what point?

A. And Bengal.

Q. And Bengal, yes. And those grades would be substantially eliminated if you made this detour around by Deming, wouldn't they?

A. Yes, but by the addition of 160 miles of additional mileage.

Q. Yes, I understand that; you have to travel 156 or 157 miles farther, but you would get practically a water-grade?

A. No.

Q. Nothing above six-tenths?

A. Oh, yes, there would be more. The main line between Wickenburg and the Colorado River has a grade of 1.25.

1900 Q. That is only for a short distance?

A. A short distance.

Q. But substantially all the way you have got a low-grade line?

A. Then the line between Wickenburg and Phoenix is one per cent or more.

Q. All the way?

A. Not all the way.

Q. Very little of it, isn't it? That is an easy grade, as a rule, up to Wickenburg from Phoenix, isn't it?

A. I think it is about 54 miles, something like that.

Q. But there is no such climbing to do as there is on the other line?

A. No such prolonged grades, no.

Q. Now, in the matter of double tracking, you cannot handle as much business on a single track in a mountain country as you can in a level country, can you?

A. No, because the movement is slower.

Q. The movement is slower, yes. And even a double track in a mountain country is not as efficacious as one track in a mountain country and another track where it is level?

A. No, I don't agree with you there. Of course a double track is very much better than two single tracks.

Q. Undoubtedly that is true, but if you wanted a second outlet—for instance from this point west of Albuquerque to Kansas you have two tracks; they are not double tracks, but they are two single tracks, very far apart. Now, that relieves your congestion a good deal on the eastern end, doesn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And the same would be true if you had a second track going up through by Wickenburg into Bengal. Although the 1901 tracks would not be side by side, that is, that track and the original track, still it would relieve the congestion?

A. Of course, I would very much rather have them together, but it would decidedly relieve congestion, and that is one of the things we have in consideration.

Q. And if one of those tracks is a low-grade line, as the Belen cut-off is a low-grade line, it is more useful to you and more easily operated than as though you had a second track which was subject to the same grades as the original line?

A. Yes, if it didn't cost more.

Q. Yes, I understand. Well, the cost of coal and men, and all that.

A. That is, if the construction and maintenance did not cost more it would of course be better.

Q. Yes, I understand that. Now, you stated in answer to the general question put you by Mr. Hines, that these contracts with Mr. Harriman were agreed to, but there was some delay in putting them in writing. It appears that these gentlemen whose names were suggested as directors by Mr. Harriman went on the board in February, 1905, and the contracts were not approved by the Board of Directors until December, 1906; that is practically two years. What occasioned that long delay?

A. Well, I went off on a vacation; the thing was as good as settled; and, as is very common in the management of railway companies, the drafting of the contracts is postponed until the convenience of the counsel.

1902 Q. And you would not be able to suggest any other reason for this two years' delay except the convenience of counsel?

A. There was no other reason.

Q. Just one other thing, and then I am through. You stated that at the time you turned this Phoenix & Eastern over to Mr. Harriman, or at the time you agreed to turn it over, the Santa Fe did not have any money to build the line down to Benson. Are you sure of that?

A. I know that we were very short of money for all the things which were pressing upon us—improvements, additions, construction.

Q. Well, you were engaged in other expensive construction at the time, weren't you, amounting to very much more than the cost of that little line?

A. Oh, yes; that was one of our troubles. We have a system of 10,000 miles, and the requirements of such a system for capital for improvements, additions and extensions are enormous.

Q. You make a good many extensions out of operation, don't you—charge it to operation?

A. Well, we never charged extensions specifically to operating expenses, but we undoubtedly spent a very large amount of earnings in betterments and improvements and additions.

1903 Q. Now, these contracts were approved in December, 1906. I have in my hand your annual report for the year ending June 30, 1907, and I observe by this annual report that $9,600,000 was expended on capital expenditures out of earnings that year?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well then, if you were able to spend money at that rate out of your earnings, capital expenditures, you certainly could have built a line costing less than two millions down there to Benson, couldn't you, if you wanted to?

A. I think we needed twenty millions that year, and spent over twenty millions, didn't we?

Q. I dare say. As a matter of fact, you were not so hard up, with your big railway system, with 100 millions of capital, that if you had desired to build into Southern Pacific territory you could not have built that line to Benson?

A. Mr. Severance, it is undoubtedly true that if it had been deemed urgently in the interest of the Atchison company to build that line down to Benson it would have been built.

Q. That is what I thought.

A. But the management didn't think that the advantages of building that line were sufficient to counterbalance the disadvantages.

Q. What were the disadvantages?

A. The disadvantages were two-fold: one, that the profits—the profitableness of the line was, to say the least, problematical; and, so far as I am concerned, that I did not think it was good policy to invade the territory of another company unless I saw that it would be very profitable to do so.

Redirect examination by Mr. HINES:

1904 Q. Mr. Morawetz, Mr. Severance asked your opinion as to the value to the Atchison of the option to use the line between Phoenix and Deming which was given by the contract with the Southern Pacific. Now, I want to ask your opinion as to the comparative value of that option, considering that the Atchison was relieved of the cost of carrying the property as compared with building that line itself?

A. Well, as I have stated, while I did not believe that it would be profitable to build the line, there was some value to the option. I doubt that it will ever be to the advantage of the Atchison to exercise that option for the purpose of hauling its own through transcontinental business. It is barely possible that the time may come when for the purpose of hauling the business of the Missouri Pacific and the Rock Island from El Paso it may pay the Atchison to exercise that option and haul the business over that line when constructed.

Q. That is, you think the status of the Atchison in having that option is more advantageous than if the Atchison had built that line itself and had to carry the burden of it?

A. I consider that it would be ruinous to the Atchison to build that line, at least for many years to come. If, in the future, the growth of business should be so large as to make it profitable, why, the Atchison will build it.

Q. It still has that right?

A. There is nothing to prevent it. I wish to say that it could build the line, duplicate the line from Phoenix to Dudleyville, at far less than it received for that line from the Southern Pacific.

1905 Q. Mr. Severance asked you a question to this effect, which apparently was not answered: Why did you build that Phoenix & Eastern line if you were willing to sell to anybody for cost and interest? I did not understand that you made a complete answer to that question.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Yes, he did.

Q. You started to state that there were several reasons which prompted the acquisition or building of that line by the Atchison, and then another question was asked; I just want to ask you if you had anything further to state on that proposition?

A. The reasons were mixed. Mr. Murphy was going ahead to build the line. I thought it better that we should build it than that it should be an independent line in that territory; and furthermore, there was certain strategic value possible to that line at a time when other lines coming in from the east were talking about building to California. Furthermore, we had the glowing accounts of Mr. Murphy as to the mineral possibilities of the territory in question. Our attitude, however, is indicated by the fact that originally we did not want to build it.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I have one or two questions only, Mr. Morawetz. You were asked by Mr. Severance whether you did not believe that the reason, and perhaps the only reason, why the Southern Pacific wanted to buy the Phoenix & Eastern was that it was an invasion of the Southern Pacific's territory?

A. It occurs to me I ought to limit that. I believe the Southern Pacific did have a project—had had a project for some time—to build a line down the Gila Valley to a connection with its Maricopa 1906 line south of Phoenix, without going to Phoenix, and this would have been part of that line; but I think the main reason, so far as I knew, was a desire to keep the Atchison out of that territory.

Q. Didn't you understand that the Southern Pacific had a project of building down the Gila Canyon and shortening its main line, reaching its line in the vicinity of Lordsburg on the east, and the extension westerly from Phoenix to Yuma?

A. I understood that the Southern Pacific had that project under consideration.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Have you heard anything more about that project since they bought the Phoenix & Eastern?

Mr. LOVETT. They are building it just the same.

A. I have not. I have not been interested in it.

Q. Now, you stated in answer to Mr. Hines a moment ago that you were impressed by the strategic value of this line because of other lines that might come in from the east.

A. That was one item.

Q. What was the line coming from the east that you were fearful of?

A. We were not fearful of them——

Q. Of course you feared nobody, but what was the line you had in mind?

A. ——but we were anxious to connect with them and receive their traffic as soon as possible.

Q. Well, who were they?

A. The rumors—they were mere rumors—related to the Rock Island and the Missouri Pacific.

Q. Well, those lines still reach El Paso?

A. They do.

Q. And can still reach farther west to Benson over the El Paso & Southwestern?

A. They can.

1907 Q. There was no change in that situation, then, at the time you turned this road over to the Southern Pacific, from what it was at the time you built it?

A. No.

Q. So that, as a matter of fact, you held this strategic position for the benefit of the Southern Pacific?

A. Oh, no. The Southern Pacific——

Q. In effect?

A. ——didn't need it.

Q. That is what I think.

A. And the conditions changed very materially. The idea of rival construction across the continent in that part of the territory I think has been given up.

Q. That is, the Southern Pacific didn't need it, as you say, but they bought it.

A. The Southern Pacific did not need it to make connection with those lines, because it connects with them now at El Paso. So it would.

Mr. SEVERANCE. That is all.

By Mr. BECK:

Q. A question was addressed to you by Mr. Severance with reference to the propriety of Mr. Frick and Mr. Rogers going on the board of the Atchison. He quite ignored, in the question, the fact that they were largely interested in Atchison stock. Did that fact influence your judgment in reaching your conclusion?

A. I stated to Mr. Harriman at the outset that I never would consent to representation on the Atchison board of any Union Pacific stock, but that as those gentlemen were very large stockholders in their own interests, and as they had the power to elect directors, I should favor giving them representation voluntarily and amicably.

1908 Q. And in asking for such representation they were within their rights as stockholders under the laws of the state of the incorporation?

A. Of course.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Now, that brings up another question. You said that you told Mr. Harriman that you would not consent to any Union Pacific stock being represented. Suppose the Union Pacific had had this 30 millions of stock, or 27 millions, or whatever it was, in its treasury at that time, how would you have prevented it?

A. Well, I should have said, "Force your way on the board if you can, but you won't get there with my consent."

Q. Now, you are aware of the fact, are you not, that in the treasury of the Union Pacific at the present time there are 10 millions of Santa Fe stock?

A. I am aware that subsequent to the date of these transactions the Union Pacific Railway Company acquired a block of Atchison stock.

Q. Then you know, don't you, that the Union Pacific is now the owner of 10 millions of that stock?

A. Yes, but it was not at the time.

Q. I understand the way you limit it?

A. I do.

Q. You know that they have now?

A. That they have now, yes.

Q. Now you say that if the Union Pacific itself had owned this stock, and had suggested a representation on the board, you would have let them fight their way in through the elections?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is still your attitude, is it?

A. It was when I resigned from the Atchison board.

1909 Q. And in your opinion it is not proper, is it, that a corporation should own stock in a rival competitive line?

A. It is certainly undesirable, if it is legal.

Q. And of the latter you are not prepared to give an opinion as a witness, I suppose? [Witness laughs.]

Q. You leave the legality open?

A. I leave it open.

Mr. LOVETT. He said it is undesirable.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Undesirable.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. The ownership of 10 millions of stock by the Union Pacific in the Atchison would be without any influence in the management of that corporation, wouldn't it, necessarily?

A. The mere ownership of the stock?

Q. Yes, or any effort to vote it, or any voting of it?

A. I don't see how it could influence it in the least.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. It could, if its managing officers had some stock to vote with it, as they did have at the time of these negotiations, couldn't it. It would simply add 10 millions to their power over the Santa Fe election?

A. Yes.

Q. That is what I mean.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I ask to have identified a list of the executive committee of the Santa Fe for the last few years, which will be marked as complainant's Exhibit 110, and I offer the same in evidence. It was delivered to me by Mr. Hines, and is agreed to be a proper list.

New York, January 8, 1909.

(An adjournment was here taken until the afternoon of Wednesday, January 13, at 2 o'clock.)

1912 ROOM 508, CUSTOM-HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY,
Wednesday, January 13, 1909, 2 P. M.

The hearing was resumed before the Special Examiner, Hon Sylvester G. Williams, at the above time and place, pursuant to adjournment.

Present: On behalf of the Complainant: Mr. C. A. Severance; on behalf of certain defendants, Mr. R. S. Lovett.

JAMES DOUGLAS,

being duly sworn on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Professor Douglas, where do you live?

A. Spuyten Duyvil.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am president of the El Paso & Southwestern, and I am president of several mining enterprises.

Q. Are you president of the Copper Queen?

A. I am president of the Copper Queen, yes.

Q. Where is the Copper Queen mine located?

A. The Copper Queen is located in Cochise County, Arizona, near the town of Bisbee.

Q. Has the Copper Queen other mines than that?

A. It is interested in other mines.

Q. What is the nature of the country around Bisbee? What are the productions there?

1913 A. The principal production is copper; nothing else to speak of.

Q. Are the mines very extensive, or otherwise?

A. Very extensive.

Q. How large a town is Bisbee?

A. I do not think there is any exact census, but the population is in the neighborhood of 15,000 people.

Q. All engaged in mining or industries that are supported by the mines?

A. Supported by the mines.

Q. Merchants?

A. Merchants.

Q. Where is Douglas?

A. Douglas is in the Sulphur Spring Valley, 28 miles from Bisbee.

Q. What is the industry that is carried on there, chiefly?

A. The industry carried on there chiefly is the smelting of ores that are raised in Bisbee by the two large companies which are operating in Bisbee.

Q. What is the other large company in Bisbee aside from the Copper Queen?

A. There are several large ones. The C. & A. is the largest—that is, the Calumet & Arizona.

Q. That is the Calumet & Arizona?

A. Yes. The Superior & Pittsburg is the next largest.

Q. Can you tell generally about the output of the Copper Queen?

A. The output of the Copper Queen is about 6,000,000 pounds of metallic copper a month, and the output of the C. & A. and the Superior & Pittsburg at the present time is in the neighborhood of between four and five million pounds a month.

Q. What railroad is there at Bisbee and at Douglas?

A. The El Paso & Southwestern runs into Bisbee and connects Bisbee with Douglas.

1914 Q. How long is the El Paso & Southwestern road?

A. The El Paso & Southwestern road, with branches, is 290 odd miles.

Q. Was that road built by the interests that own the Copper Queen?

A. It was built by people who have interests in the Copper Queen.

Q. When was the El Paso & Southwestern built?

A. The El Paso & Southwestern bought the Arizona & South Eastern, which was built from Bisbee into Fairbank, and then into Benson, and subsequently the road was extended to Douglas, and when it was decided to build into El Paso it was then called the El Paso & Southwestern, and that road bought the original Arizona & Southeastern roads; so that the El Paso & Southwestern at the present time extends from El Paso into Benson and has a branch up to Bisbee.

Q. Outside of the mines at Bisbee and the smelters at Douglas, what other industries are there along the line of the El Paso & Southwestern, if any?

A. Outside of those interests very little freight comes to the line except from Clifton, which is a mining region about 120 miles from a place called Hachita, where the junction occurs between the A. &

N. M. Railroad and the El Paso & Southwestern. That is the only large body of freight that we receive.

Q. Now, what kind of traffic is there over the line?

A. The traffic is principally mineral traffic, but of course there is a population fed by the El Paso & Southwestern approximating 30,000 people, and they of course are large consumers, and 1915 therefore there is a certain amount of merchandise and there is a certain amount of general mining. Moreover, at Douglas the El Paso & Southwestern has a junction with the Nacozari Railway, which runs down into Mexico for a distance of 70 odd miles, and that of course yields the El Paso & Southwestern a considerable amount of traffic.

Q. At El Paso with what lines do you connect?

A. We connect at El Paso with the Southern Pacific, the Mexican Central, the Santa Fe, the Rock Island, and the Texas & Pacific.

Q. Do you exchange traffic with all of those lines?

A. Yes.

Q. Prof. Douglas, are you familiar with the San Pedro Valley, from Benson up to Dudleyville?

A. Yes, quite familiar with it.

Q. What is the nature of that country?

A. Well, the San Pedro Valley is the only perennial stream between the Rio Grande and the Colorado River. It runs almost the whole way between Benson and Dudleyville between ranges of mountains. It is a narrow valley and swept by floods from the mountain ranges on each side. At about 80 miles from Benson one gets into a highly mineralized country, where the mines have never been developed very actively, partially for the want of cheap transportation.

Q. You say it is a highly mineralized country?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you personally investigated that region to some extent?

A. I have looked at various mines down there, and near Dudleyville I had charge of mines at one time. They are all low-grade mines; they are mines that could only be made to pay under very favorable conditions, supposing they could be made to pay at all.
1916 Q. That is, they could only be made to pay if you had proper transportation facilities?

A. With cheap transportation facilities and cheap fuel.

Q. You say it is highly mineralized. Do you mean by that, that there are a great many mines in there?

A. I mean that there is a large territory over which mineral is found, but it does not follow that the mineral is worth anything.

Q. I see. But you say you did have charge of one mine there?

A. Yes, sir; I had charge of a mine on the Indian Reserve, close to San Carlos Canyon.

Q. How far from the railroad?

A. 70 miles. It didn't pay.

Q. You had to transport everything by wagon, had you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. A 70-mile wagon haul for copper is prohibitory, isn't it?

A. Unless the price of copper is very high, which it was at the time.

Q. But under ordinary conditions?

A. No, under ordinary conditions it is out of the question.

Q. Prof. Douglas, are you acquainted with Mr. Frank Murphy?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the El Paso & Southwestern Railroad, or its officials, including yourself, have any negotiations with Mr. Murphy with reference to exchange of traffic or trackage lease?

A. Yes, we had.

Q. That is, between the El Paso & Southwestern, on the one hand, and a line from Phoenix to Benson, on the other?

A. Yes, sir.

1917 Q. The proposed line. What form did that take—the form of correspondence?

A. It took the form of correspondence and drafts of possible contracts, which were never made.

Q. How long a time did those negotiations extend over?

A. Over a whole year.

Q. Have you copies of those letters and telegrams and drafts of contracts?

A. I have copies of a number of letters and telegrams and some drafts of the terms on which we agreed or didn't agree to possibly make possible contracts.

Q. Now, at that time was or was not the El Paso & Southwestern desirous of making a contract to move traffic over that proposed line?

A. We had no objections at all. Otherwise we would not have contemplated the making of a contract.

Q. And your negotiations extended over a period of more than a year?

A. Yes, I think they extended from August, 1901, to July, 1902.

Q. At the time those negotiations began, was that proposed line of Mr. Murphy independent of the Santa Fe or was it a Santa Fe project, if you know?

A. Oh, I think it was independent of the Santa Fe. Mr. Murphy's line, the Phoenix & Eastern, at that time was independent of the Santa Fe, so we understood.

Q. And before the negotiations concluded had it been taken over by the Santa Fe? Do you know or don't you know?

A. I don't know.

Q. Your negotiations were all with Mr. Murphy?

A. All with Mr. Murphy, yes.

Q. Can you produce that correspondence?

1918 A. Yes, sir. Some of it is here in duplicate letters and some of it is in letter-books.

Q. Have you arranged those papers in chronological order?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you let me have them, please.

(The witness handed papers to Mr. Severance.)

Q. I show you Complainant's Exhibit 111–A (Douglas). What is that exhibit?

A. That is Mr. Murphy's letter to Mr. Hutchinson.

Q. And attached to it is what?

A. Attached to it is evidently the memorandum of the contract which Mr. Murphy was anxious that Mr. Hutchinson should sign.

Q. That initiated the correspondence?

A. That initiated the correspondence.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I offer Complainant's Exhibit 111–A (Douglas) in evidence.

Complainant's Exhibit 111–A (Douglas) is as follows:

COMPLAINANT'S EXHIBIT 111–A. (Douglas.)

THE DEVELOPMENT CO. OF AMERICA

Park Row Building, New York City.

AUG. 10, 1901.

Mr. HUTCHINSON,
Phelps Dodge & Co., New York.

MY DEAR MR. HUTCHINSON:

Enclosed herewith please find a memorandum from which we 1919 hope you will be able to prepare for me the first thing Monday morning a letter which will be of such a character as to permit of my using the same in connection with negotiations that I expect to have under consideration constantly from this on, looking towards the early construction of the line between Phoenix and Benson.

"As suggested in the memorandum I fully expect to be prepared to enter into a definite contract with you within 90 days and I shall be disappointed if I am not able to do so within 40 days.

"I must, however, have something from your company to show that arrangements have been agreed upon for exchange of business on favorable terms or I cannot hope to get the money necessary to build the road. It is almost impossible to get any one to believe that we can develop sufficient business between Phoenix and Benson to justify the expenditure of the large sum of money that will be required.

"I understand that you would not care, probably, to write as definite a letter as I would wish to have, prior to your seeing Prof. Douglas. However please make your letter as full and comprehensive as circumstances will justify and as soon as you have had a chance to talk the matter over with Prof. Douglass I shall hope to receive from you or from him a letter that I can depend upon in making representations and basing my calculations.

Very truly yours,

F. M. MURPHY.

"P. S.—Please understand that by referring to another com-
1920 pany as being likely to construct the road, I did so in order to avoid complications such as might arise if compelled to construct under the Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix charter.

F. M. M."

MEMO RE CONTRACT BETWEEN ARIZONA & S. E. RY. AND S. F. P. & P. RY.

1st. Conditioned on the S. F. P. & P. Ry., or some other reliable company designated by them, extending its line or building from Phoenix to Benson, within three years and completing 25 miles thereof within one year from date, continuing construction at the same rate per annum until the road is completed between Phoenix and Benson; the A. & S. E. will grant the S. F. P. & P., or the company building as above, a rate of $\frac{3}{4}$ cent per ton per mile over the A. & S. E. Ry. between Benson and El Paso or Deming on all freight in C. L. of 24,000 lbs. or over, or western classification.

2d. Will grant a constructive mileage of $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles for one, on all business originating on S. F. P. & P., or the company above designated, and destined to points on A. & S. E. when the distance hauled by S. F. P. & P., or company designated, is equal to or in excess of that hauled by A. & S. E. or 2 ms. for one, when the distance is less than that hauled by A. & S. E.

3d. If and when desired, will grant S. F. P. & P., or company constructing as above, the right to run its cars and engines over 1921 the A. & S. E. between Benson and Deming or El Paso upon payment to A. & S. E. of a proportion of interest on cost, taxes and maintenance, such proportion being based on use, i. e. on the number of wheels run by S. F. P. & P. or company constructing the road herein referred to, over the line as compared with total number of wheels run thereon. This to apply to both freight and passenger business, but S. F. P. & P. or the company herein suggested, to have no rights as to local business originating at stations on A. & S. E. Ry.

4th. Unless and until the S. F. P. & P. or the other company referred to exercises its option to run its own trains over A. & S. E., the rates, both passenger and freight to be made so far as practicable by adding together the local rates of each party, but when these appear too high, through rates to be established by mutual consent.

5th. The S. F. P. & P. or other company referred to, agrees as to business originating on A. & S. E. and destined to points on S. F. P. & P., Deming to Phoenix inclusive, it will allow A. & S. E. the same constructive mileage as is allowed the S. F. P. & P. or other company referred to, on business in the other direction.

6th. Both parties agree that as to business which can be handled with reasonable directness by the joint routes contemplated under this contract, each will work exclusively with the other and will make no divisions thereon with other roads without the written consent of the other party.

7th. The Arizona and South Eastern Railroad Company or the El Paso and South Western Railroad Company agree to construct 1922 a road from Tombstone to a connection with their road at Fairbank, or some point in that immediate vicinity, beginning construction of said branch at the same time or prior to the Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix Road beginning the construction of the branch between Phoenix and Benson, and continue construction as rapidly as is the case on the part of the Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix Road or the road referred to above, in the construction of the line between Phoenix and Benson, and further agree that they will make the connection between Tombstone and some point on their road at or near College Peak by constructing a line from Tombstone to such point on the El Paso and South Western Railroad, same to be completed by the time the Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix Road, or company referred to above, or other reliable company, completes its line between Phoenix and Benson.

8th. During the construction and prior to the completion of the line from the Arizona and South Eastern via Tombstone to College Peak, or some point in that vicinity, the rate to the Tombstone Consolidated Mines Company will be based on the direct distance from Tombstone to Deming or El Paso via College Peak.

9th. On Materials to be used for the original construction of the Tombstone Consolidated Mines Company, Ltd., plant, a rate of ¾¢ per ton per mile from Benson, Deming or El Paso to Tombstone will be given. This to cover fuel, tools, general supplies of all kinds during construction, etc. The rate on fuel and materials after construction not to exceed 1¼¢ per ton per mile final rate to be agreed upon.

10th. Of course it is not expected that this memorandum
1923 is to cover all of the details necessary to be put into the contract, but it gives the general understanding.

11th. The length of time that this pro-rating railroad contract and traffic arrangement is to cover is understood to be 10 years unless otherwise mutually agreed.

12th. It is further understood on the part of the Arizona and South Eastern or El Paso and South Western Road that if the conditions herein are acceptable, the Santa Fe Prescott and Phoenix or some reliable company as herein indicated, will enter into a reliable contract within 90 days from date covering all the essential points mentioned herein.

13th. It is understood that if, for any reason, it should prove impracticable to complete the line from Tombstone via College Peak within the time as herein indicated, the contract arrangement between Benson, Deming and El Paso, covering all through business, will be based upon short mileage from Benson to Deming and El Paso via Tombstone, but it is expected the road will be constructed from Benson via Tombstone, as herein contemplated and set out.

Q. Complainant's Exhibit 111-B (Douglas) is the answer to Mr. Murphy's letter, isn't it?

A. Yes; the answer of Mr. Hutchinson to Mr. Murphy's letter. I will state, however, that the board did not altogether agree in Mr.

Hutchinson's views as expressed in that letter—the terms which he provisionally agreed to.

1924 Q. That afterwards came out in the correspondence, did it?
A. Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I offer Complainant's Exhibit 111–B (Douglas) in evidence.

Complainant's Exhibit 111–B (Douglas) is as follows:

COMPLAINANT'S EXHIBIT 111–B. (Douglas.)

"EL PASO & SOUTH WESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY,

99 John Street.

James Douglas,
President.
Arthur Curtiss James,
First Vice-President.
S. P. Hutchinson,
Second Vice-President and General Manager.

NEW YORK, August 12th, 1901.

Mr. F. M. MURPHY,
Care of Development Company of America,
Park Row Building, New York City.

MY DEAR MR. MURPHY:

"I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of August 10th, enclosing memorandum of a proposed traffic and trackage agreement between the Arizona & South Eastern Railway, the title of which is now the El Paso & South Western Railroad, and the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix Railway.

"Considering the proposed agreement in detail, we will agree to the first paragraph, viz: that when the S. F. P. & P. Railway or some other reliable Company designated by them, has extended its line to Benson and connected with the El Paso & South Western, said El Paso & South Western will establish joint rates with the S. F. P. & P. or their designated Company, on all through freight 1925 in carloads according to the minimums in the Western Classification. The proportion of the through rate accruing to the El Paso & South Western will be three-fourths cents per ton per mile.

"We will agree to the second paragraph, viz: to grant a constructive mileage of one and one-half miles for one, on all business originating on S. F. P. & P. or their designated company, and destined to local points, when the distance hauled by the S. F. P. & P. or their designated Company is equal to or in excess of that hauled by the El Paso & South Western; and a constructive mileage of two for one when the distance hauled by the S. F. P. & P. or Company designated is less than that hauled by El Paso & South Western.

"We will agree to the third paragraph, viz: that we grant the S. F. P. & P. or Company designated, the right to run both passenger and freight trains over the El Paso & South Western Railroad from Benson to Deming or El Paso upon payment to El Paso & South Western of a proportion of interest on the cost, taxes and maintenance, such proportion being based on use, that is, number of wheels run by S. F. P. & P. or Company designated. It is understood, however, that the S. F. P. & P. or Company designated, will have no rights as to local business originating at stations on El Paso & South Western Railroad.

"We will agree to the fourth paragraph, viz: that joint rates for local carload business, that is, business shipped from points on the S. F. P. & P. or designated Company, to points on the El Paso &
South Western Railroad west of El Paso or Deming, shall be 1926 made as far as practicable, by adding together the local rates of each railroad. When necessary for competitive or other reasons, through rates may be established by mutual consent. This paragraph is to be understood as applying also to freight originating at local points on the El Paso & South Western Railroad and shipped to local points on the S. F. P. & P. or designated Company.

"We agree to the fifth paragraph, viz: that on business originating on the El Paso & South Western at local points and destined to points on the S. F. P. & P. to Phoenix inclusive, the same constructive mileage as is allowed the S. F. P. & P. or designated Company, will be allowed the El Paso & South Western Railroad.

"We agree to the sixth paragraph, viz: that all business which can be handled with reasonable directness by our joint route under this agreement, will be handled exclusively over this joint route, and that no divisions with other roads on such business without the written consent of both companies shall be made.

"We agree to the seventh paragraph, viz: as to the construction of the branch from Tombstone, Arizona, to the connection with the El Paso & South Western at or near Fairbank, as I understand from conversation with you that President Douglas agreed to do this. However, it is expressly understood that the building of this branch depends entirely on the development of the mines at Tombstone, as otherwise nothing would be accomplished by said branch being built.

"We agree to the eighth paragraph, viz: that the mileage dis-
1927 tance shall be computed on the direct distance from Tombstone to El Paso or Deming via College Peak. The same distance will be used in computing the mileage on freight delivered to or received from the S. F. P. & P. between Benson and El Paso or Deming.

"We agree to the ninth paragraph, viz: to grant a construction rate of three-fourths cent per ton per mile from Benson, Deming or El Paso to Tombstone, for material used in the original construction of the Tombstone Consolidated Mines Company, Limited. This to cover fuel, tools, general supplies of all kinds during construction, etc., and I would like to add to that, that this construction rate ceases two years after the signing of a formal contract, as this seems to be ample time for the original construction to be completed, but we also agree to consider favorably a request for said rate to continue for a longer period in case original construction work is still being pursued. We also agree that the rate on fuel and material after the original construction is not to exceed one and one-fourth cents per ton per mile.

"We understand the tenth paragraph, viz: that this memorandum gives merely the general understanding between the two companies.

"We agree to the eleventh paragraph, viz: that ten years is to be the period for the existence of the proposed traffic and trackage arrangements.

"We agree to the twelfth paragraph, viz: That the El Paso & South Western Railroad will enter into a reliable contract with the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix or their designated Company, 1928 within ninety days from date, with the essential points mentioned herein, agreed to by the parties to the contract.

"We agree to the thirteenth paragraph, viz: that in computing the mileage covering all through business from Benson to Deming or El Paso, the short line distance, viz: via Tombstone and College Peak, shall be used.

"It is distinctly understood however, that nothing in this letter shall be considered to be binding upon the El Paso & South Western Railroad Company to build the branch into Tombstone except on the understanding which you had with President Douglas. It is further distinctly understood that nothing in this letter shall be taken as binding on the El Paso & South Western Railroad to build the line from Tombstone to College Peak. The fact that the El Paso and South Western Railroad agrees to base their mileage on the short line distance should however, prove a strong inducement to your people to construct your railroad.

Yours truly,

EL PASO & SOUTH WESTERN RAILROAD CO.

2nd Vice-Pres't and Gen'l Manager."

Q. I show you Complainant's Exhibit 111–C (Douglas). Is that a copy of a letter you wrote to Mr. Murphy?

A. October 23, 1901; yes; Douglas to Murphy regarding modification of Hutchinson's letter.

Q. Who was Mr. Hutchinson?

A. Mr. Hutchinson was general manager of the road.

1929 Q. Now, in this letter Exhibit 111–C, you start out by saying: "Referring to our conversation this morning, I shall see Mr. Kenna in Chicago on either Friday afternoon or Saturday morning. As he was interested in the extension of your road, I shall talk over the matter with him." Had you had a talk with Mr. Murphy here in New York?

A. I suppose I had, judging from that letter; I should say I had.

Q. You did have talks with him about this proposed contract?

A. Oh, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I offer in evidence Complainant's Exhibit 111–C (Douglas).

GENTLEMEN:

"I herewith beg to acknowledge the receipt of your message Nov. 11th reading as follows:— 'Murphy telegraphs to you here ninth that he desires to meet you in New York to make contract on terms of your letter of August 12th, part of which was withdrawn by President Douglas. It will not do for you to see Murphy, or to discuss contract until President Douglas and we have fully discussed 1933 all points of contract.' I also confirm my reply, reading as follows:— 'Your message about Murphy received, and will be obeyed.'

"I also confirm the following telegram received from President Douglas today. 'Reply to Murphy if you see or hear from him, that Company cannot renew negotiations till my return to New York, after middle of December.'

"I have had some conversation with President Douglas regarding my letter of August 12th to Mr. Murphy, and I am sorry to learn from him that a certain portion of my letter did not meet with approval, and was withdrawn. I have not a copy of the letter with me, but I remember very distinctly one clause in it stating that the negotiations were only preliminary, and that nothing in the letter was to be construed as binding on either party, or words to that effect. I understand the clause to which exception is taken, was that relating to the terms under which Mr. Murphy's trains could have trackage rights over our road. Possibly my wording was unfortunate, but I had in mind, and I am sure that Mr. Murphy did also, that the value placed on our road was to be fixed by us. I think President Douglas interpreted my wording too literally; it should be remembered that the letter was merely preliminary—Mr. Murphy was sailing for Europe very soon, and I certainly understood from President Douglas that it was advisable to hold out every legitimate inducement to Mr. Murphy to enter into arrangements with us in case his road was built.

"I naturally do not like to be put in a position of seeming not to safe-guard the Company's interests, or of assuming too much authority. I regret that I have been misunderstood in the matter, but do not see that the Company's interests have been at all jeopardized by any action of mine.

Yours truly,

Mr. JAMES DOUGLAS,

DEAR SIR:

"I had a conversation with Mr. F. M. Murphy today at the Sheldon House. He is very anxious to see you before you go East. He asked me to tell you that he was going to Tombstone tomorrow (Friday) and would leave there probably Sunday morning, and he will be much obliged if you will telegraph him at Tombstone when you can see him. He thought that possibly you might be going West on Sunday. I told him I was not posted as to your movements. Mr. Murphy will tell you all that he told me in regard to his plans, so it is hardly necessary to put them in the letter. There is noth-1935 ing much now in addition to what he told us last Summer, except that his survey is nearly completed, and he will shortly start the corps on the final location, and proceed to secure the right-of-way, etc.

"In regard to the trackage clause in my letter to him, which you did not approve of, Mr. Murphy stated that he understood perfectly that my letter was merely a preliminary one, and that the trackage arrangement would be put on a basis satisfactory to our Company; he did not expect us to move his trains over our track except on a basis that would yield us a fair return. He seemed a little worried lest we might have made some arrangement with the Southern Pacific Company which would render us less anxious to build to Tombstone, but I told him, that to the best of my knowledge, we were not making arrangements with the Southern Pacific just at this time.

Yours truly,

S. P. HUTCHINSON,

WITNESS. Now, there are some telegrams in the letter book, which are not in that file. Do you wish to see them?

Mr. SEVERANCE. No, I don't think so.

Q. I show you Complainant's Exhibit 111-H (Douglas). Is that a letter from Mr. Murphy, on the 10th of March, 1902, addressed to El Paso & Southwestern Railroad Company?

EL PASO & SOUTHWESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY,

GENTLEMEN—

"Referring to your letter of August 12, 1901, addressed to Mr. F. M. Murphy, in regard to a proposed traffic and trackage agreement to be entered into between your Company and the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix Railway Company or some other reliable company to be designated by it that shall build a line from Phoenix, Arizona, to Benson, Arizona, and to a point of connection with your Road: The Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix Railway Company hereby respectfully notifies you that it designates the Phoenix & Eastern Railroad Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the Territory of Arizona for the purpose of constructing and operating a railroad between Phoenix and Benson, as a reliable and proper Company with which your Company can enter into the proposed agreement, but the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix Railway 1937 Company assumes no responsibility for said Phoenix & Eastern Railroad Company.

Yours truly,

SANTA FE, PRESCOTT & PHOENIX RAILWAY CO.,
By F. M. MURPHY, Its President.

Q. I show you Complainant's Exhibit 111–I (Douglas), with papers attached. Is that a letter to Phelps, Dodge & Company from you.

A. Yes.

Q. Under date of May 10, 1902?

A. Yes, sir; suggesting a traffic agreement.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I offer Complainant's Exhibit 111–I (Douglas) in evidence.

Complainant's Exhibit 111–I (Douglas) is as follows:

COMPLAINANT'S EXHIBIT 111–I. (Douglas.)

New York.

GENTLEMEN:

"If Mr. Murphy wishes to discuss the traffic arrangement between his prospective road, and the El Paso & South Western, 1938 you will find the draft of an agreement drawn up by Mr. Osborne. I think it would be eminently fair to base the proposition on the following terms:

Say for the long haul from Benson to El Paso, 300 miles at $20,000 per mile, $6,000,000, 5% would make fixed charges $300,000, on the assumption that the Phœnix & Eastern pay one-half, the charge to them per train mile would be 69 cents. The average cost of maintenance of way, as per annexed statement, made from the Inter-State Commerce Reports, Group No. 10, is $827.00 per mile of road. Therefore the proportion which the Phœnix & Eastern should pay for maintenance of way would be $.57, making a total cost of $1.26 per train mile. The maintenance of way charges do not include terminal facilities and switching at termini, telegraph service, joint depot service, roundhouse service, nor water; and therefore it would be proper and right to increase that sum of $1.26 by at least 5 or 10 cents per train mile.

I should say that this charge should cover the right to run one freight train of 20 cars a day, and one passenger or mixed train of six cars, and that all subsequent traffic should be done at a reduced rate. An equitable charge would probably be five cents per car mile for freight cars, and 10 cents for passenger cars. This car mileage should be computed on cars in excess of those allowed by the train mileage on trains, or whether they compose additional trains. When they compose additional trains, one locomotive might be counted equal to two cars.

Yours truly,

JAMES DOUGLAS,
President.

1939 Group X—14927 miles—cost $12,346,880.00 per year.

The average cost of Maintenance of Way and Structures in 1900 for roads in Arizona, New Mexico and the Pacific Coast was $827.00 per mile of road. Assuming that the El P. & S. W. R. R. absorbs one-half this charge, it will leave $124,050.00 per annum, which applied to S. F. P. & P. train mileage above, will equal a per train mile charge of .57 cents.

NOTE.—

Group X—14927 miles—cost $12,346,880.00 per year.

The average cost of Maintenance of Way and Structures in 1900 for roads in Arizona, New Mexico and the Pacific Coast, was $827.00 per mile of road. Assuming that the El P. & S. W. R. R. absorbs one-half this charge, it will leave 124,050.00 per annum, which applied to S. F. P. & P. train mileage above, will equal a per train mile charge of .57+ cts.

This would make the total charge per train mile for 1940 the S. F. P. & P. R'y

Covering Fixed charges ..... $1.05—
" Maintenance ..... .57+

equal to $349,920.00 per annum.

To arrive at the proportion of Maintenance of Way and Structures each road should pay, based on train mileage, add the train mileage of the S. F. P. & P. R'y to that of the El P. & S. W. R. Q. I show you Complainant's Exhibit 111–J (Douglas). Is that the traffic agreement that Mr. Osborn drew up?

A. I believe that is the traffic agreement that Mr. Osborn drafted, yes.

Q. Who is Mr. Osborn?

A. Mr. Osborn is our attorney.

1941 Q. In connection with this matter?

A. In connection with that matter. As you will see, it never went further.

Q. I notice at the bottom of the eighth article of this document a memorandum. Is that in your writing?

A. That is my writing, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I offer in evidence Complainant's Exhibit 111–J (Douglas).

Complainant's Exhibit 111–J (Douglas) is as follows:

COMPLAINANT'S EXHIBIT 111–J. (Douglas.)

This agreement made this day of 1902, by and between the El Paso & Southwestern Rail Road Company, a Corporation organized and existing under the laws of , party of the first part, hereinafter called the E. P. & S. W. R. R. Co., and the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix Railway Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of party of the second part, hereinafter called the S. F. P. & P. Ry. Co.,

Witnesseth: That whereas the parties hereto desire to establish joint rates for exchange of freight in car load lots and less and for the running of freight and passenger trains, now, therefore, the parties hereto mutually covenant, promise and agree each to and with the other as follows:

1942 First. The S. F. P. & P. Ry. is hereby granted the privilege of connecting its Railroad at or near Benson, N. M., with the Railroad of the E. P. & S. W. R. R. and for the period of five years after such connection shall have been made and thereafter until either party hereto shall have given one year's notice to the other of its desire to terminate this contract, the S. F. P. & P. Ry. shall have the right to operate its locomotives, engines, trains and cars over the Railroad of the E. P. & S. W. R. R. to and including all junctions with other railroad lines with which said E. P. & S. W. R. R. may connect and including the use of all terminals, side-tracks and stations and facilities of the E. P. & S. W. R. R. on the terms and conditions following, to-wit: The S. F. P. & P. Ry. (Solid Trains) shall and will pay to the E. P. & S. W. R. R. for all locomotive engines, trains and cars run by it over said line of Railroad during the continuance of this agreement at the following rates, viz.: One Dollar and twenty cents ($1.20) per train mile for each train and in addition thereto the sum of five (5) cents per car mile for each car in any such freight train in excess of twenty cars.

One dollar and twenty-five ($1.25) cents per train mile for each passenger train or mixed passenger and freight train and in addition thereto the sum of ten (10) cents per car mile for each car in any such train in excess of six cars.

For each light engine or light engine and caboose the sum of forty (40) cents per mile run, the return trips of pushers or helpers engines, nevertheless, to be free unless such engines shall be used to haul cars, in which event they shall be considered as parts of the trains of cars so hauled.

1943 It being mutually understood and agreed that the foregoing rates of charge are conditioned upon the undertaking by the S. F. P. & P. Ry. to move each way over the entire length of said line of road not less than one freight train every day and not less than one passenger train per day, Sundays excepted, and the S. F. P. & P. Ry. shall pay to the E. P. & S. W. R. R. for the right to use said line or road as aforesaid at the rates above prescribed for the number of trains above provided to be moved daily, whether said trains are actually moved or not.

JOINT RATES ON CAR LOADS OR LESS.

Second: Other through freight in car loads will be rated according to the minimum in the Western classification; the proportion of the rate accruing to the E. P. & S. W. R. R. will be three-fourths (¾) cents per ton mile.

Where business originates on one line destined to local points on the other line, the constructive mileage of one and one-half (1½) miles for one will be granted to the line on which the business originates when the distance hauled by the line on which the business originates is equal to or in excess of that hauled by the line to which it is consigned; and a constructive mileage of two for one when the distance[a] hauled by the line on which the business originates is less than that hauled by the line to which it is consigned.

Joint rates for local car load business, that is business
1944 shipped from points on one of the lines of the parties hereto, to points on the line of the other of the parties hereto, shall be made as far as practicable by adding together the local rates of each railroad. When necessary for competitive or other reasons other rates may be established by mutual consent.

[a]After the word "distance" appears in pencil the words "actual mileage."

All business which can be handled with reasonable directness by the joint route established under this agreement will be handled exclusively over this joint route and no division shall be made with other roads on such business without the written consent of both companies.

Third: Monthly accountings shall be made between the parties hereto for all sums of money to become due under and by virtue of this agreement and the S. F. P. & P. Ry. shall pay to the E. P. & S. W. R. R. on or before the 15th day of each calendar month during the continuance of this agreement all sums of money which shall have accrued thereunder during the next preceding calendar month.

Fourth: All trains run upon said Railroad of the E. P. & S. W. R. R. are to be dispatched by and run under the rules and superintendence of said Railroad or its successors. Passenger trains are to be given precedence over other trains and trains of all parties to be given equal dispatch according to their class.

All time cards, rules, regulations or orders for the movement of trains, cars and engines, or in respect to the operation of the 1945 said line or railroad shall be reasonable and fair to all parties and without favor or discrimination in favor of or against any party.

Fifth: The S. F. P. & P. Ry. shall not do any local business at any point on the line of Railroad of the E. P. & S. W. R. R.

Sixth: The E. P. & S. W. R. R. shall direct and control in respect to the maintenance, improvement and operation of the Railroad, bridges and facilities so to be used by the S. F. P. & P. Ry. and other appurtenances but shall not be liable in any event to the S. F. P. & P. Ry. for or in respect to any damage or injury which may result in defects in or injuries to the said line of Railroad or the bridges included therein or from the act or negligence of any persons or parties in charge of the maintenance, improvement or operation thereof.

Seventh: In case of any interruption or delay to the traffic or the road by reason of the destruction of any structure by fire, or washout of bridges or embankments, or destruction or damage caused by wrecked train, tornado, cyclone or the elements generally, or in case of interruption from any cause, neither party shall have the right of action for damages as against the other party for such delay to traffic or damages to persons or property by reason of such delay.

Eighth: Each of the parties hereto shall be solely responsible for all damage and injury caused by its locomotives, trains or 1946 cars, or the operation thereof, or which occur to its locomotives, trains or cars, or the contents thereof, or to its passengers.

On this page appear the following pencil notes:
How about payment for joint use of terminal depots?
Should be without telegraph service?
Water?

Ninth: It is further understood and agreed by and between the parties hereto that when the S. F. P. & P. Ry., or its successors, shall at any time during the continuance of this agreement fail to comply in all respects with the obligations imposed upon it by this agreement then and in that case the E. P. & S. W. R. R. may at its election declare this agreement at an end and upon notice thereof in writing given by said E. P. & S. W. R. R. to the S. F. P. & P. Ry. this agreement shall be terminated and all rights and privileges hereby granted to said S. F. P. & P. Ry. shall then and there and thenceforth cease and determine.

In witness whereof the parties hereto have caused these presents to be signed by their respective presidents, vice-presidents and secretaries, or assistant-secretaries, and their corporate seals to be hereunto affixed the day and year first above written.

1947 Q. I show you letter copy-book marked No. 4, El Paso & Southwestern Railroad Company, and call your attention to a letter appearing under date of March 18, 1902, page 186. Is that the answer to the letter of Mr. Murphy of March 10th which was introduced in evidence here as Complainant's Exhibit 111–H?

A. That is my letter to Mr. Murphy.

Q. Answering his letter of March 10th?

A. I suppose so, I would like to see the letter of March 10th. [After looking at letter of March 10th.] Yes, that is it; that is in answer.

Q. Is that right?

A. Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE. This letter is as follows:

"MARCH 18, 1902.

Mr. F. M. MURPHY,
President, Prescott, Arizona.

DEAR MR. MURPHY:

Yours of March 10th with regard to the negotiation of the agreement between the Phoenix & Eastern Railroad and the El Paso & South Western has been received and we will be glad to take it up when you reach New York or after Mr. D. Willis James, who is now absent in California, returns. Yours truly, J. Douglas, President."

Q. I show you copy of a letter appearing on page 348 of the same copy-book, No. 4, El Paso & South Western Railroad Company. Is that a letter-press copy of the letter you wrote Mr. Murphy, under date of April 8, 1902?

A. Yes, that is it.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I will read this letter into the record:

1948 "APRIL 8, 1902.

F. M. MURPHY, Esq.,
New York.

MY DEAR MR. MURPHY:

"In confirmation of our conversation over the telephone this morning, I would be glad to see you to-morrow morning to renew negotiations for a contract between your projected road and our own. I feel that a contract can be made which will be mutually advantageous, and I understand from your conversation that you have the same feeling.

J. DOUGLAS."

Q. I show you copy of a letter appearing on page 334 of copy-book marked No. 5, El Paso & Southwestern. Is that a letter written to Mr. Murphy by yourself?

A. Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I will read this into the record.

"JUNE 23, 1902.

F. M. MURPHY, Esq.,
President, New York.

DEAR SIR:

"We have carefully read and considered the contract which you submitted to us, and there are a number of clauses as well as conditions which we are unwilling under any circumstances to agree to. As a preliminary to further negotiations we want to again repeat that the letter of Mr. S. P. Hutchinson, at one time this company's second vice-president, addressed to you August 11, 1901, and relating to traffic and other arrangements proposed by you to be entered 1949 into between the S. F. P. & P. Railway Company and the El Paso & South Western and other companies, was wholly unauthorized and has never been recognized as binding by any of the parties concerned, it may be added, including the interests you yourself represent. Nevertheless this company will be glad at any convenient time to consider a fair traffic agreement which will give due protection to its own interests, while recognizing the advantages of a connection such as is proposed by your Company.

Yours truly,

J. DOUGLAS,
President."

Q. I show you Complainant's Exhibit 111–K (Douglas). Is that the answer of Mr. Murphy to that communication?

A. That is the answer exactly.

Q. To the one I have just read.

A. Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I offer in evidence Complainant's Exhibit 111-K (Douglas).

DEAR SIR:

1950 "I am just in receipt of your favor of the 24th enclosing official letter referred to dated June 23rd. While I am forced to disagree with you as regards the construction to be placed upon the letter received from Mr. S. P. Hutchinson addressed to me while Second Vice-President of your Company, wherein he undertook to indicate in writing in substance the conversation we had had at various times when it was made clear to me that your Company was disposed to encourage the construction of the Phoenix & Eastern Road in some substantial way, I have no desire to contend for anything that might be claimed from that letter, not in every sense right and proper, all things considered. I do think, however, that it is not right for you to undertake to disregard the letter entirely. I am pleased to know that your Company is disposed to enter into a fair traffic agreement with the Phoenix & Eastern, granting due protection and consideration to all interests concerned.

"I leave for Chicago today, returning here about the 6th of July at which time I shall hope to have the pleasure of meeting you and if possible agreeing upon a satisfactory traffic contract between the two companies.

FRANK MURPHY, Esq.,
President, S.-F. P. & P. R. R. Co.,
Park Row Building, City.

DEAR SIR:

"Pursuant to our conversation of the 11th inst., the El Paso & South-Western Railroad Company will be glad to take up with you, at any time within ninety days, the preparation and execution of a contract, between your road and itself, upon substantially the following terms:

"1st. Each road to grant the other a rate of three-fourths of a cent per net ton-mile on carload lots, (tons 2000 lbs.) whether originating on the line of either road, or from points beyond, on coal, coke, bullion, if released to $100 per ton, ore not exceeding $100 per ton in value, lumber and construction materials. Hauls less than 100 miles in length at said rate, to be reckoned one hundred miles.

Rate not to include loading, unloading, switching, delivery
1952 or receiving charges accruing to other parties, and no arbitraries or differentials to be granted. The parties to make joint tariff rates on other freights from time to time.

"2nd. The El Paso & Southwestern will grant you the right to run your trains over its main tracks and passing tracks, for an annual rental charge of 2½% on $30,000 per mile of main track, with an added charge at the same rate, for betterments and additions, not exceeding $5,000 per mile in all.

"Your rights under this head to be limited to receipt and discharge of traffic at Deming, El Paso or Benson, which has been received at, or is destined for points on the line of your railroad, or its connections beyond; all traffic originating at, or destined for points on the line of the El Paso & Southwestern, between the termini or originating at one of said termini and destined for another, being reserved for that company exclusively.

"Traffic exchanged at either of said termini, with carriers other than your own lines, to be considered as having originated at that point.

"The foregoing rental shall not entitle you to the use of any side track, other than passing tracks for meeting trains, nor any terminal; but your use, if any, of terminals, shall be specially arranged for, upon a fair basis.

"Your rights to the use of said tracks and facilities to be in common with the use thereof, by the El Paso & Southwestern, and any other companies or persons admitted by the latter-named company to the use thereof.

1953 3rd. The cost of maintenance and operation, including taxes, water, telegraph and telephones to be divided between all parties using said tracks, on a wheelage or car-mile basis.

4th. The other provisions customary in contracts between railroads having similar relations to be agreed upon.

5th. Your said rights to the use of the property and the accruing of rentals, to begin as soon as your road shall be ready for operation, but in any case, within not less than two (2) years, from this date, and to continue for the period of ten (10) years from the date of the commencement of your rights. Rentals to be paid whether you shall actually use the said rights or not, provided you are not prevented from using the same by the fault of the El Paso & Southwestern.

6th. The length of the contract to be ten years from the date when the rental begins to accrue.

7th. Rentals to be paid in gold coin of the U. S., and together with your share of maintenance and operation, to be paid monthly.

As the preparation of the contract will be a matter of some complexity, we would suggest that if you are able to join us in its preparation before the ninety days have expired, we would be glad to take the matter up by our joint attorneys.

DEAR SIR:

"I left New York Monday morning, returning last evening, and have before me your letter of the 14th inst. I shall be very glad to take up and discuss with you within the next 90 days, as you suggest, the form of contract to be entered into between your road and the Phoenix & Eastern, which I have arranged to construct. I shall expect that it will be agreeable to you when considering the form of contract to take into account the correspondence that has passed between us in this connection and the various conferences we 1955 have had relating to the proposed contract.

"I should be pleased to receive a letter from you to the effect that you will make a rate of 3/4¢ a ton per mile on all material used in connection with the construction of the Phoenix & Eastern hauled over your road within the next two years, including such material as may be required for the construction of any branch lines into the mining districts from points along the line of the Phoenix & Eastern.

"This rate of 3/4¢ per ton per mile to be given to me as President of the Phoenix & Eastern irrespective of any contract arrangements that may hereafter be entered into. I may find it necessary to begin construction at Benson at an early date, and while I of course understand that your verbal statement in accordance with the suggestions above would be binding upon your Company, I should like to have the same in writing as a matter of record prior to becoming compromised to any considerable extent involving the expenditure of a large sum of money.

(It was agreed by counsel that after the foregoing exhibits had been incorporated into the record, the reporter should return the same to Mr. Douglas, and that the copies should stand in lieu of the originals.)

Q. Prof. Douglas, what direct outlet to California points do you have now in connection with the El Paso & Southwestern?

A. The most direct is over the Southern Pacific from Benson and likewise the next most direct is of course over the Santa Fe from Deming.

Q. But if you connect at Deming you have to send everything away up north, almost to Albuquerque?

A. Yes.

Q. That is a long way around.

A. Yes. So we do not get much over the Santa Fe; most of our traffic comes over the Southern Pacific.

Q. That is a direct line to California?

A. That is a direct line.

1960 Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Did the negotiations between Mr. Murphy and your companies ever proceed beyond the point shown by this correspondence, Mr. Douglas?

A. No, sir; never.

Q. The contract contemplated by the negotiations never consummated?

A. Never consummated.

Q. Was it down the San Pedro Valley that the line promoted by Mr. Murphy was to be constructed?

A. It was up the San Pedro Valley, yes, from Dudleyville, you know. It would run up the San Pedro Valley from Dudleyville to Benson.

Q. Oh, the river flows north?

A. The river flows north; yes, sir.

Q. Is Benson in the San Pedro Valley?

LOSE IN CENTER

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe you have already testified that the San Pedro Valley is rather narrow and is swept by the floods in the river. There is no agriculture there, is there?

A. Oh, there is agriculture but not a great deal. In the upper reaches of the valley there is a good deal of agriculture, but below 20 miles from Benson there is very little agriculture.

Q. Most of the agriculture country is in the vicinity of Benson?

A. Yes; within 20 miles of Benson.

Q. About what would be the distance, according to a practicable route, for a railroad from Benson to Dudleyville?

A. Between 80 and 90 miles, I should think.

Q. Your company has never deemed it to its interest to construct that line, has it, Mr. Douglas?

A. No.

Q. You have never considered that it would be a profitable venture, have you?

A. Oh, I have considered it. I don't know whether it 1961 wouldn't be a profitable venture, but we never seriously thought to build it.

Q. You preferred that Mr. Murphy and his company should build to Benson, rather than to undertake to build yourself?

A. Well, I would sooner have somebody else build and that we make a connection at Benson and get that traffic.

Q. Under such an arrangement as suggested, it would be a feeder for your line?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Murphy testified here a few days ago, Mr. Douglas, that during or preceding his negotiations with your companies he had secured for his line right of way practically to Benson, and I believe certain terminal grounds in Benson. Now, there is an abundance of right-of-way in Arizona still, isn't there, Mr. Douglas?

A. Yes, there is an abundance of right of way, but it very often happens that in a narrow valley one right of way is a very great deal more favorable than another, and it may mean a very great difference in the cost of the road.

Q. But where the right of way is across private land, is it usually very expensive or not, in Arizona?

A. Not unless the private land occupies the whole valley.

Q. Well, how is it in the San Pedro Valley north of Benson? Is the right of way there expensive?

A. I should say south of Benson there are places where it would be very desirable to have the exclusive right of way, especially, in the lower reaches of the valley.

Q. Do you know whether the right of way is at all expensive?

A. Oh, no, land would not be expensive.

Q. The right of way for such a line as Mr. Murphy was proposing—a right of way into Benson—could not have cost very much, could it, Mr. Douglas?

1962 A. No, it wouldn't have cost very much.

Q. Do you know anything about his terminal grounds in Benson?

A. I know nothing whatever about that.

Q. That would not be a very expensive proposition at Benson, would it?

A. No, not—it might be made expensive, of course, if there were much opposition to getting in there, you know.

Q. But one could secure suitable terminals at Benson without much expense, couldn't he?

A. If the road was open and there was no opposition and the property was not bought up with a view of preventing him, why, of course he could get it very cheaply.

Q. How much would it be necessary to buy up there in order to prevent another company from getting in?

A. For yards?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, if that was going to be the terminus of his road he would require a good many acres, and it would be quite expensive to buy that.

Q. But you didn't quite understand my question. I say if an opposition road should undertake to buy up all the available ground in the vicinity of Benson for yards, they would have a pretty big contract, wouldn't they?

A. Well, they would have a good big contract; at the same time there are certain desirable points where you want to make connections, and if you cannot get to those points where are you?

Q. What is the population of Benson?

A. Oh, the population of Benson is quite small. It has been a very stagnant place from the very beginning. I don't think the population of Benson ever exceeded a thousand people, or anything of that kind.

1963 Q. Isn't it in rather a wide valley?

A. No, not a very wide valley.

Q. Ten miles?

A. Of course, you know, if they were going to make connection with us they would have to make connection with us. Now the Southern Pacific at Benson has a very large area of ground. They received, of course, certain rights from the town of Benson, and their yards cover so much ground that any other railroad wanting to get in, distinctly into Benson, to make a connection with us, might have a little trouble.

Q. Couldn't they connect with you at many points at Benson?

A. No.

Q. Is there only one point of connection there?

A. Substantially only one point where they could very well connect at Benson.

Q. Only one point where they could connect with your line?

A. Yes, in Benson itself. There is probably only one point. In fact we make use of the Southern Pacific yards at present. We have substantially no termini in Benson at all.

Q. Why?

A. Well, one reason is because we cannot very easily get them.

Q. Why?

A. Because the Southern Pacific owns pretty nearly everything around there.

Q. Owns pretty nearly everything, eh? It is better off than I supposed it was. I was under the impression that there was a considerable area there that was not occupied by anybody.

A. Well, but not exactly where you want to be.

Q. What do you mean by the limits of Benson, in the town
1964 of Benson? About what area do you include in that?

A. Well, Benson consists of one or two streets, you know, parallel with the tracks of the Southern Pacific Railway; and then, again, you know the Santa Fe used to come in and their yards and their station were three-quarters of a mile, or nearly a mile, out of Benson. So all that territory that the Santa Fe originally owned, the Southern Pacific now owns. The result is that there is very little available space on the south side of the Southern Pacific tracks for anybody else. We come in over the Southern Pacific tracks, into the Southern Pacific yards.

Q. You mean that there is very little available space to get in on one of those two streets on each side of the Southern Pacific track; but do you mean to say that there is very little available space for another line to get terminals and yard room within a mile of the Southern Pacific station in Benson?

A. Oh, no, no; I do not mean to say to the north of the Southern Pacific tracks. There would not be plenty of space; but to get across the Southern Pacific tracks and make connection with us and get your yard to the south of the Southern Pacific tracks, it would be a difficult thing.

Q. Your line runs out of Benson, doesn't it?

A. Our line runs out of Benson to the south.

Q. It could connect with you anywhere off the ground of the Southern Pacific, couldn't it?

A. It could connect with us; I should suppose it would have to cross the San Pedro to the east in order really to connect with us.

Q. Across the San Pedro to the east?

1965 A. Yes; and then probably run for some distance up the San Pedro Valley beyond Benson in order to make a connection with us.

Q. You mean west of Benson?

A. I mean to the south of Benson.

Q. To the south of Benson?

A. Yes. Unless we crossed the Southern Pacific tracks to make connection with them to the north, I don't know where they intended to make any connection with us to the south.

Q. I am not speaking of where they intended, but where they could cross.

A. Well, I don't know where they could make connection with us as we enter Benson at the present time, unless, as I say, they followed the San Pedro to the south of Benson and got fairly outside the property owned by the Southern Pacific and which was originally owned by the Santa Fe.

Q. About how many acres does the Southern Pacific own there, do you understand?

A. Oh, I don't know exactly.

Q. Can't you approximate it?

A. No, I couldn't approximate it.

Q. A thousand acres?

A. I couldn't say, but it doesn't require a very large acreage, you know, to stand seriously in the way of your making a connection.

Q. And that, too, in a country where there is only one town of a thousand inhabitants?

A. Well, yes.

Q. What is the nearest town to Benson?

A. The nearest town to Benson used to be a place called Contention, but that is all wiped off the map.

Q. I am glad of that.

A. That used to be the next station. St. David's is a Mor-
1966 mon town but not directly on the line of the Sonora Railroad or our railroad.

Q. Was it on the line of the Southern Pacific?

A. No. No, it was on no line at all. It was on the other side of the San Pedro River, you know.

Q. When was Contention wiped off the map, Mr. Douglas?

A. Contention was wiped off the map when the Contention mills ceased to be productive. Contention was one of the Contention mills, one of the great mills in the early Tombstone days.

Q. Was that before your negotiations with Mr. Murphy, or after?

A. Oh, long before.

Q. Then, taking the situation existing at the time of your negotiations with Mr. Murphy and at this time, what is the nearest town to Benson?

Mr. SEVERANCE. You mean on the railroad, do you?

Mr. LOVETT. No; on or off.

WITNESS. St. David's is the nearest town, but it is off the railroad.

Q. How far from it?

A. Oh, about half a mile, I should say. It is on the other side of the river, on the other side of the valley altogether.

Q. What is the size of St. David's?

A. I should say St. David's was a small Mormon town, with five or six hundred inhabitants.

Q. Then the next nearest town?

A. Is Fairbank.

Q. How far is that?

A. Fairbank is 18 miles from Benson.

Q. What is the population of that?

A. Fairbank is in rather a decadent condition; I should suppose 400 or 500 people, perhaps.

1967 Q. In that territory for 18 miles, between Benson and St. David's, is it populous or not?

A. No.

Q. Is the country about Benson thickly populated?

A. No.

Q. Practically no population?

A. Not much population. The valley to the north of Benson, of course, has a few ranchers in it.

Q. How wide is the valley at Benson?

A. The arable land, do you mean?

Q. No, I mean where it is practicable to locate a railroad with reasonable expense.

A. At Benson? Oh, I should suppose about half a mile or three quarters of a mile.

Q. About half or three-quarters of a mile?

A. Yes; without getting up on to the slope of the hills.

Q. After getting up on the slope of the hills a hundred feet or more, how far could you go?

A. Oh, quite wide.

Q. How is that?

A. I should suppose it would be a mile or two.

Q. You still think that it would be impracticable for Mr. Murphy's road to get across, or under, or over the Southern Pacific to make a connection with the El Paso and Southwestern at Benson?

A. Oh, it would not be impossible by any means.

Q. Would it be a serious problem?

A. That depends entirely upon the action that the Southern Pacific might take there. If they opposed their crossing on grade it would be pretty serious, because they have got a great many tracks there which they would have to get across; build viaducts over those tracks.

Q. Can't they get across in that valley without crossing any 1968 of the Southern Pacific tracks except its main tracks?

A. No.

Q. Do the Southern Pacific's tracks extend entirely across the valley?

A. Oh, yes, entirely across the valley.

Q. And is that the reason your line never extended north of Benson—that you could not get across the Southern Pacific?

A. No, it is not the reason we never extended. The reason is that we had not any particular motive to extend north of Benson. Our railroad served a certain special purpose there—primarily to carry the coal and coke to the large smelting interests (our own and others), and there was no object to build north of Benson for any large volume of traffic that we felt sure of.

Q. Most of your people were interested in the mining business before they became interested in the railroad business, were they not?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. They are interested in most of the mines along the line, are they not—that is, the operating mines?

A. Well, the owners of the principal amount of stock in the railroad are likewise the owners of the majority interest in the mines.

Q. You spoke of other mines where the Copper Queen mine is located.

A. Yes; the C. & A.

Q. At Bisbee?

A. The Calumet & Arizona.

Q. Are those who are interested in your company interested in that mine?

A. No, none at all. We have no interest in them at all.

Q. And what other mine was there? You mentioned another.

A. I mentioned the Superior & Pittsburg—another group of 1969 mines owned by people who are in friendly relations; but we have no interest in them at all.

Q. You have no interest in their shares?

A. No.

Q. Then, at Douglas, the people interested in your railroad are also interested in mines there, are they not?

A. No; we are interested in smelters.

Q. Smelting, I mean.

A. We have got a large smelter there.

Q. The road you mentioned in Mexico to Nacozari that afforded some traffic to the El Paso & Southwestern, that is controlled by your people, too, is it not?

A. Yes, sir, that is controlled.

Q. Do you know of any mining operations in the San Pedro Valley east of Dudleyville?

A. Do you mean east, or do you mean north of Dudleyville?

Q. I mean between Dudleyville and Benson.

A. Between Dudleyville and Benson? Oh, yes, there is the famous old Mammoth gold mine which had been worked on and off for the last thirty years. And then, again, there were several copper properties within two or three miles of the valley, and there are very large low-grade lead deposits, known as the Arivaca lead deposits; and then not very far from Dudleyville are the mines to which I referred as once having had charge of. They were then known as the San Carlos mines, and now they are known as the Sadler Mountain, and there are a great number of other mines around there.

1970 Q. Those are the mines that you referred to in your direct testimony, as having low grade ore that could not be operated except with very cheap fuel and cheap transportation, are they?

A. Yes.

Q. Those mines are not being operated, are they?

A. Yes. They are now owned by the Sadler Mountain Mining Company.

Q. Are they taking out ore?

A. They have been until copper dropped a year ago. They took out a considerable quantity of ore; and they have got a smelter up there.

Q. And they took it out by wagon on the 70 miles haul?

A. Oh no; they did not work until Mr. Murphy's road was nearer than 70 miles by a great deal.

Q. You referred to a neighborhood where there was some population and industry in Arizona, near the A. & N. M.?

A. That is the Clifton district, yes.

Q. Yes, the Clifton district.

A. The Arizona & New Mexico Railroad runs up—that is a railroad owned by a Scotch company that owns some of the most important mines about Clifton. They built that road in the early eighties.

Q. Is that the Arizona & New Mexico Railroad?

A. Yes.

Q. Where does that run from?

A. That runs from a junction with our line at a place called Hachita, and it runs through Lordsburg and thence up to Clifton.

Q. Is Clifton north or south of the Southern Pacific Railroad?

A. Clifton is north of the Southern Pacific.

Q. And this road runs through Lordsburg and connects with your line where?

A. At Hachita.

1971 Redirect-examination by Mr. SEVERANCE.

Q. Mr. Douglas, you spoke of the Santa Fe formerly owning a line of road at Benson. Where did that run?

A. Down to Guaymas, on the Gulf of California. That was the Sonora Road.

Q. The Sonora Road?

A. Yes.

Q. Who built that?

A. It was built by the Santa Fe.

Q. And that ran from Guaymas up to Benson, did it?

A. To Benson, yes.

Q. Was that before your road was built into Benson?

A. Oh yes.

Q. How long ago——

A. Before our road was built to Fairbank.

Q. How long ago did the Santa Fe part with that line?

A. Some years ago.

Q. Do you remember how long ago?

A. You may recollect. I do not recollect. About six or seven years ago, I should think, five or six years ago.

Mr. SEVERANCE (addressing Mr. Lovett): Do you know when it was?

Mr. LOVETT. Yes. The Santa Fe leased that road, the New Mexico & Arizona Railroad, running from Benson to Nogales and thence on to Guaymas, including the Sonora Railroad, to the Southern Pacific, in 1898. Possibly it was leased before that; but the existing lease was made in 1898, at the same time, and covered by the same instrument that the Southern Pacific leased to the Atchison what is now part of the Atchison's main line from Needles to Mojave, California.

1972 Mr. SEVERANCE. I thought it was part of that deal.

Mr. LOVETT. I thought you had that in the record, but I can give you a copy of the instrument.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I thought that was what it was. That is all right—your statement.

WITNESS. The reason it is called the New Mexico & Arizona is because as originally surveyed it started in New Mexico. There was going to be an extension directly of their Deming road over very near the location that we subsequently built from Deming.

Q. You stated that the ability of Mr. Murphy's road to get into a connection with you at Benson would depend a good deal upon the disposition of the Southern Pacific owing to its terminals there; did I so understand you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In answer to Judge Lovett?

A. Yes.

Q. And you say that if they were not satisfied to allow it in, they could have made some delay?

A. Yes, it could naturally have made delay—easily.

Q. How is that?

A. Naturally they could have made delay, I say.

Q. Did you ever have any experience with them when you were building into El Paso?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. How long did they tie you up getting into El Paso?

A. They didn't tie us up very long, because we opened another gateway into El Paso as soon as we found the one gateway obstructed. But they might have tied us up.

Q. You had to get a new gateway into El Paso because the Southern Pacific got in your way there, did you?

1973 A. Yes. They got their maps filed ahead of us and stopped us going in.

Q. Did they have a line out of El Paso at that time?

A. Yes. They wanted to change their location and get a better location.

Q. I see. They concluded to change to the line where you were going in?

A. Well, they got their maps in ahead of us, somehow or other, and, getting their maps filed ahead of us, why, they got the first right of way.

Q. And then you went in another way?

A. Then we got in another way. That is all right.

Q. Mr. Douglas, Mr. Lovett was asking you something about the smelters at Douglas. The Copper Queen smelter at Douglas is one of the very largest in the United States, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. What smelters are there larger than the Copper Queen?

A. Oh, the Washoe is a larger smelter, and I suppose the smelter at Great Falls, if it was pressed, perhaps, could turn out a little more copper than we can; but I doubt it.

Q. The Washoe is the only one that is commonly understood to be larger than the Copper Queen?

A. It is larger than ours.

Q. You have the second largest smelter in the country, at Douglas?

A. Yes.

Q. And there is another smelter at Douglas also, isn't there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Calumet & Arizona?

A. The Calumet & Arizona, yes, sir.

Recross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Mr. Douglas, what is the size of El Paso?

A. I am sure I don't know. I suppose El Paso has over 1974 100,000 inhabitants at the present time.

Q. And you were able to get your road into El Paso?

A. Yes, we got our road into El Paso.

Q. Notwithstanding the opposition of the Southern Pacific?

A. And we crossed the Southern Pacific tracks on grade—thanks to the decision of the Railroad Commission of Texas.

Q. But you could have gotten in there without the decision of the Railroad Commission of Texas, too, couldn't you?

A. I suppose we could have; but you wanted us to go to a good deal of expense, to avoid crossing your grade; but we were at last permitted to do so.

Q. We wanted you to cross over-head, didn't we?

A. Yes, you wanted us to cross over-head.

Q. You crossed the Southern Pacific at other points, didn't you?

A. Yes, we crossed the Southern Pacific at—let me see— at Deming we have to cross your tracks.

Q. You don't mean to be understood as saying, do you, Mr. Douglas, that if anybody really wanted to build a railroad from Dudleyville to a connection with your tracks, that the difficulty, or the power of the Southern Pacific, with respect to a crossing at or in the vicinity of Benson would seriously interfere with or discourage the enterprise, do you?

A. Oh, I do not mean to say it would prevent them, but I think that they could interfere.

Q. Don't you mean that whenever one railroad attempts to cross another's tracks that there is generally a controversy?

A. Yes.

Q. And that there would have been such a controversy at 1975 Benson?

A. Yes, there would have been a controversy, just as there was a controversy at Deming when we were crossing your track.

Q. Is that not generally the case?

A. That is generally the case, oh yes. I do not mean to say that the Southern Pacific would act very differently in the matter than we ourselves might act if a rival road were coming in to a point where we were.

Q. And even if it was not a rival road, you probably would not want them to cross your tracks at grade, if you thought you could make them cross over-head or under them?

A. No, we should not want them to cross at grade if we thought they could cross by an over-head crossing.

Q. And the Southern Pacific would probably have insisted upon something of that sort, at least at Benson. But you do not think the difficulty of crossing at Benson was such as to preclude or seriously interfere with the construction of Mr. Murphy's road, if he wanted to do it?

A. Oh, no. If he decided to build into Benson he could have gotten across somehow or other.

1976 Mr. SEVERANCE. I now offer in evidence, pursuant to our stipulation, portions of the testimony given by Otto H. Kahn, a witness before the Interstate Commerce Commission, who testified at New York, February 27, 1907. I understand it is agreed by all parties that this testimony may be written into the record and have the same force and effect as though Mr. Kahn were upon the stand giving the same testimony.

Mr. LOVETT. Yes.

OTTO H. KAHN

testified:

Examined by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live?

A. In Morristown, New Jersey.

Q. What is your business?

A. Banker.

Q. Of what firm of bankers are you a member?

A. Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Q. How long have you been a member of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.?

A. About ten years.

Q. Is that a copartnership or corporation?

A. Copartnership.

Q. Who are the copartners?

A. Jacob H. Schiff, Felix M. Warburg, Paul M. Warburg, Mortimer Schiff, Louis A. Heinsheimer, and myself.

Q. For how many years has the firm been composed of those gentlemen?

A. Of these particular gentlemen since about three years.

Q. Who were the partners in Kuhn, Loeb & Co. at the time of the reorganization of the Union Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Of the Union Pacific Railroad Company?

Q. Yes.

A. Jacob H. Schiff, Abraham Wolf, Felix M. Warburg, Louis A. Heinsheimer, and myself.

1977 Q. At that time, Mr. Kahn, and prior to the reorganization, the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., were quite largely interested in the Union Pacific, were they not?

A. At the time of the reorganization?

Q. Yes.

A. Undoubtedly.

Q. And who were the committee of reorganization, do you remember?

A. I don't remember exactly, no.

Q. Was any member of your firm a member of that committee?

A. That is ten years back; I don't remember it exactly, but the records would of course show it.

Q. I call your attention to the printed plan of reorganization to refresh your memory. After inspecting that, can you state, was any member of your firm a member of the committee?

A. Yes. Jacob H. Schiff was a member of the committee.

Q. And what relation did Kuhn, Loeb & Co. bear to the transaction?

A. They were bankers to the committee.

Q. In connection with the reorganization of the Union Pacific and its subsequent management, what particular member of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. was particularly interested more than the others?

A. I was a member of the Executive Committee and Mr. Schiff was on the Board, and as far as the details were concerned, I would be more conversant with them than Mr. Schiff would.

Q. Did that statement include the reorganization as well as the subsequent management?

A. Chiefly the subsequent management.

Q. Were you familiar with the method of reorganizing the company and with the properties at that time?

A. Fairly so, yes.

Q. Will you state whether, in the reorganization of the Union Pacific there was any scaling down of securities of the old 1978 company which it succeeded, or was there on the other hand an enlargement of the securities put out?

A. I should say there was both; that is, in lieu of the high interest-bearing bonds, the six per cent bonds, there were issued four per cent bonds and stock.

Q. But the aggregate of the face value of the securities was quite largely increased, was it not?

A. To the extent, I believe, of giving for the old six per cent bonds new four per cent bonds, and an appropriate proportion of stocks, and also giving in for the assessment which was furnished in cash, preferred stock and new common stock.

Q. Now at the time your firm, as bankers for the committee, and Mr. Schiff as member of the committee, took hold of the Union Pacific, it was in the hands of receivers, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And had been operated by receivers for several years?

A. Yes.

Q. Had the interest on the old bonds been paid during the receivership?

A. Not on all of them.

Q. Prior to the reorganization, did the Union Pacific have quite a number of branch lines which did not participate in the reorganization?

A. I believe so.

Q. Can you name them?

A. No; I could not be certain that I was naming them correctly.

Q. Do you remember the St. Joe & Grand Island was one, or don't you?

A. I believe so; I am not certain about that.

Q. You are not certain about that?

A. I don't believe anybody could be about the affairs of the 1979 company which date back ten years, except the records would show it.

Q. Well, you were connected with the reorganization as committeeman, and I thought possibly you might remember.

A. No.

Q. Now you spoke about the interest on the bonds being scaled down. Is it not a fact, sir, that you issued the six per cent bonds you have mentioned, new bonds dollar for dollar, bearing four per cent interest, and running for a long period of time, and also an amount equal to 50 per cent of the face of the bonds in preferred stock of the new corporation?

A. The records would show whether we did or not.

Q. Well, don't you know as a matter of fact that you did that?

A. I don't remember the details of the reorganization, but you have the plan of the reorganization before you, which shows exactly what was done.

Q. Then you don't remember whether that was done or not?

A. I don't remember the exact details of the transaction, which dates back ten years.

Q. I want this on the record, so I will show you that [handing paper]. Having inspected that, can you now answer whether I am correct in my statement?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the aggregate capitalization of the new Union Pacific Road under the reorganization, stock and bonds?

A. That also would show from the records.

Q. Well, it is right there in front of you. Let me ask you if this is correct. $100,000,000 of bonds, is that right?

A. Not all of which were issued at the reorganization.

1980 Q. Have not they been issued?

A. Since, but not at that time.

Q. How many of them were not issued at that time?

A. It does not appear quite clearly from this plan. It says for the actual purpose of re-organization, there were issued in round figures $51,000,000, and there were reserved to dispose of equipment obligations and re-organization, and corporate uses, $13,000,000, and the balance reserved for settlement of the debt to the United States and for extraordinary requirements, in round figures, $36,000,000.

Q. Those bonds were used, were they not, or the proceeds of them, to settle the debt to the United States?

A. I believe not. I believe that quite a considerable amount was turned over to the new company, and was later on sold for its corporate purposes.

Q. But you paid the Government in excess of the amount of those bonds, didn't you?

A. We did.

Q. Well, you finally got out $100,000,000 of the bonds of the new company, didn't you?

A. But not all at the reorganization.

Q. No, but can you tell me how many were not used for the purpose of reorganization, and to pay the Government debt?

A. This plan does not show, but I remember that a considerable amount was turned over to the new company and was sold later on by the new company, for its corporate purposes, equipment, improvement and so on.

Q. Mr. Harriman yesterday testified that it was his recollection that it was something in excess of $5,000,000, is that your recollection?

A. I could not recollect the exact amount; it may have been $5,000,000, it may have been $10,000,000.

1981 Q. How much preferred stock did the new company issue, $75,000,000?

A. It issued in the reorganization in round figures $47,000,000, reserved to dispose of equipment obligations and reorganization and corporate uses $7,000,000, and balance reserved for settlement of the debt to the United States, and for extraordinary requirements, in round figures $21,000,000.

Q. You eventually got out the $75,000,000.

A. That makes a total of $75,000,000?

Q. You think you got out the $75,000,000?

A. That makes a total of $75,000,000—it was approximately that.

Q. Then, Mr. Kahn, how much did you pay the Government in settlement of that debt—it was in excess of $50,000,000, wasn't it—you recall it was over $50,000,000 finally paid?

A. I think so.

Q. There was first, a contract or arrangement to pay less than $50,000,000, and that was disapproved of by the president, and it was increased to something over $50,000,000.

A. I think so.

Q. You issued also $61,000,000 of common stock, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. What was that common stock issued for?

A. According to the plan of reorganization, that common stock was issued in exchange for common stock of the Union Pacific Railway Company on which assessments were paid under the plan.

Q. How much was the assessment that was called on common stock—$10 a share, wasn't it?

A. I think it was $15.

1982 Q. Or $15—which was it?

A. The common stock, the plan says will be assessed at the rate of $15 a share.

Q. Now, what did the subscribers to that $15 a share get for it?

A. They got the amount of the assessment in new preferred stock at par and also received par of common stock in common stock of the new company. I am quoting from the plan.

Q. So that in a nutshell, the plan of reorganization contemplated the issuance of $100,000,000 of bonds, $75,000,000 of preferred stock, a portion of which was used to pay the common stockholders of the old corporation for their assessment of $15 a share, and $61,000,000 of common stock which was exchanged dollar for dollar for the common stock of the bankrupt road?

A. That is right.

Q. Making a total capitalization of $236,000,000. Now the old corporation had outstanding a capital stock and funded debt of only $201,294,882, did it not?

A. I don't see that the plan shows. Of course I don't remember the exact figures.

Q. You could not tell without figuring up. That is correct, however, Mr. Kahn.

A. Yes, here it is—the total funded debt, $140,425,682.

Q. What was the capital stock?

A. $60,868,500.

Q. That makes a total of $201,294,882?

A. Correct.

Q. As against a total issue of securities by the new company of $236,000,000—an increase of $34,705,818.

A. The comparison is not quite correct, because part of the new capitalization was used later on for additional equipment and other improvements, it was not all used to take up the 1983 $201,000,000 of old capitalization.

Q. How much of it was so used?

A. I don't know the exact figure. I should say common and preferred together, probably somewheres in the neighborhood of $20,000,000, but I am not positive.

Q. You say the common and preferred together?

A. I did not mean common; I meant bonds and preferred stock together.

Q. Now, every share of the common stock of the present Union Pacific, so far as it was issued at the time of the reorganization, was issued in exchange for common stock of the old road, wasn't it?

A. So fas as it was issued in the reorganization—yes.

Q. $61,000,000?

A. Yes.

Q. That is correct, and do you know anything about what that old stock represented?

A. No, I do not.

Q. You know at that time it was worth very little, don't you—I mean in the market?

A. I know it had been worth 150 and more.

Q. Yes, I know; but at the time of the reorganization, it was worth very little?

A. Of course, it was stock of a bankrupt road.

Q. And still it went in at par, and that is the same class of stock that is now selling at 170 or 180—whatever it is—the common stock of the new road.

A. It is the same character of stock.

Q. Part of the same stock?

A. Part of the same stock.

Q. Now, the preferred stock of the Union Pacific which was then issued, was issued as a bonus upon the exchange of the bonds of the old corporation for the bonds of the new corporation, was 1984 it not?

A. I do not think as a bonus. It was issued as a fair trade, refunding a six per cent bond for a four per cent bond and for fifty per cent of preferred stock; in other words, getting an old six per cent bond—interest at the rate of four per cent on the new bond, and at the rate of two per cent on the new preferred stock.

Q. So that it is your opinion, then, is it, that in capitalizing a railroad, it is immaterial what the par value of the securities may be; you look only to the rate of interest or dividends that are to be paid on the securities; is that your view?

A. I am not competent to express opinions on railroad questions.

Q. You just expressed one; you said it was a fair trade because it was an exchange of six per cent bonds for new four per cent bonds and half that amount of stock.

A. I referred to this particular case; but I am not prepared to answer a general, theoretical question as to capitalization of railroads; I am not competent to answer.

Q. You say it was a perfectly fair way to consider the capitalization of the Union Pacific?

A. In that particular instance, yes.

Q. So that you think the capitalization so far as the Union Pacific is concerned, not giving any opinion on any other road, is fair if based on the amount that is to be paid out as interest and dividends, without reference to the face value of the stock?

A. I am not prepared to say that. I am only saying that this particular scheme of reorganization was the best that at that time it was possible to carry through, and was a fair and reasonable one.

Q. The net result was there and so scaling down of se-
1985 curities as far as the par value, but on the other hand, there was an increase to some extent.

A. There was a very heavy scaling down of the fixed obligations.

Q. You draw a distinction then, between the dividends on the preferred stock, and the fixed interest charge on the bonds?

A. In this particular case, yes.

Q. You draw it just the opposite way Mr. Harriman did yesterday, on the Alton.

A. I am not comparing the Alton with Union Pacific. I am simply referring to this particular reorganization plan.

Q. In this particular, he took in dividends, and you left them out?

A. In this particular instance, I do not leave them out; I am simply explaining they were substituting for six per cent bonds a four per cent bond, and fifty per cent in preferred stock, making the same return; and that, in this particular reorganization, those were the best terms that were obtainable in order to carry through the reorganization, which had been attempted by others before, and which had not been carried through, because no terms could be arrived at as between the old bondholders and old stockholders and the reorganization committee.

Q. That is, you mean those were the best terms you could make with the stockholders?

A. Best terms possible to make with the stockholders and old bondholders.

Q. Now, after the reorganization of the company, did you go on the Board?

A. Yes, Mr. Schiff and myself went on the Board.

Q. Both Mr. Schiff and yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. And up to what time did you continue on the Board?

A. We continued on the Board until about a year ago; and perhaps I might say in this connection, that we went on the 1986 Board of the Union Pacific because we recognized that the reorganization of the Union Pacific devolved a considerable more responsibility upon us, towards the public which had bought the bonds, and for that reason we went on the Board; but in going on the Board, of course, we did not cease to be bankers.

Q. Oh, I found that by going through the records.

A. Nor did we give up our rights to do business with the company; but we did feel it incumbent on us in dealing with the company, to deal at arms' length. In each instance where we had any contracts with the company, our interests were fully disclosed, it was entered on the record, and we declined to vote on that particular transaction. In no case in dealing with the Union Pacific——

Q. Now, Mr. Kahn, I have not asked you for this statement, but if you want to make your statement now, go ahead and make it. I asked if you went on the Board and how long.

A. I want to add that in no case in dealing with the Union Pacific, did our profits exceed a fair and usual banking compensation or commission, and in more than one instance, did we render services to the Union Pacific without any compensation whatever; and about a year ago we reached the conclusion that the Union Pacific—that, firstly, because of great claims upon our own kind, which our own business made upon our time, we were not in a position to give the necessary time and attention to the affairs of the Union Pacific, and being bankers and not railroad men, and the Union Pacific credit and standing being established beyond peradventure, we thought that we would retire from the Board of the Union Pacific, and we did so retire.

Q. Have you finished your statement, Mr. Kahn? Now,
1987 during the time that Mr. Schiff and yourself were directors of the Union Pacific, were you also directors of other roads in the west?

A. We were directors—I was a director of the Oregon Short Line, became one shortly afterwards, and a director of the Oregon Railroad and Navigation. I think that is all.

Q. Were either of you directors of the Great Northern or Northern Pacific?

A. Mr. Schiff was director of the Great Northern for a time, and I believe a director of Northern Pacific for a time. I am not sure about the latter.

Q. When?

A. I don't remember the exact date, but I think he was a director of the Great Northern, and remained a director of the Great Northern until 1901.

Q. Was that the last year that he was in the Great Northern?

A. I am not sure about it.

Q. Did he go into that Board for the purpose of establishing the credit of the Great Northern, and did he leave it as soon as he had accomplished that?

A. He had been in the Board of the Great Northern a great many years. I don't know for what reason he went in and I don't know for what reason he left.

Q. You don't think he stayed in the Great Northern because of any sense of duty to put the road on its feet, do you?

A. I beg your pardon——

Q. He did not stay in the Great Northern from any sense of duty he owed it to put it on its feet?

A. He had not reorganized the Great Northern Railroad, and the cases were totally different.

Q. The Great Northern never has been reorganized?

A. Exactly.

Q. Well, now, you say you were both members of the Board
1988 of the Union Pacific from the organization of the company down to about a year ago?

A. Yes.

Q. In addition to being a member of the Board, what position did you occupy with reference to the road?

A. I was a member of the Executive Committee.

Mr. CRAVATH. When you retired from the Union Pacific Board in particular, you and Mr. Schiff retired from all other boards at the same time?

A. Yes.

Q. For the same reason?

A. For the reason that we were bankers and not railroad men, and we found the demands of our business were such we could not give proper attention to both our banking business and directors.

Q. Well, now, Mr. Kahn, you had been bankers all the time, hadn't you?

A. We had.

Q. And you had been busy bankers all the time?

A. Yes.

Q. And had done a large business?

A. Yes.

Q. And had done a large business with those various roads for which you were directors?

A. Yes.

Q. Hadn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Then what was it that suddenly came over your minds that induced you to depart from your old practice of being bankers and directors at the same time?

A. As far as Union Pacific is concerned, the Union Pacific, as I have said, was established, and its standing and its credit was fixed beyond peradventure.

Q. And that had been so for several years?

A. That is a question of degree. Every banker feels that when he reorganizes a company, that he owes it a duty for a number of years to stay by it. As far as the Union Pacific is concerned, 1989 that, to a certain extent, determined our remaining on the Board, and besides that, our business increased from year to year, and we simply found we were not able to keep pace with our business in both offices.

Q. The Union Pacific had established its credit in 1901, so that it was able to sell $100,000,000 of bonds, without considerable trouble?

A. The Union Pacific in 1901, was in the midst of great financial operations, because its credit was good from the beginning, but at the same time, if I say its credit and standing were established beyond peradventure, it is simply a question of degree.

Q. You say in the midst of great financial operations in 1901. You mean the financial operation of getting out these new securities, do you?

A. Yes.

Q. And buying these other stocks?

A. Yes.

Q. And until that operation was concluded, you felt it your duty to remain on the Executive Committee?

A. I can only repeat in a general sense, in slightly different words, what I have said before. I cannot add anything new to it.

Q. At that time you had not thought of getting off the Board?

A. No.

Q. And you did not think of it until about a year ago?

A. Until about a year ago—yes, we thought of it a very long time before.

Q. But you did not carry out your thoughts.

A. That plan of retiring from the Board of the railroad company was not a sudden conclusion, but was one that had been maturing in our minds for a long time.

Q. By the way, in passing, let me ask you, who is Mr. S. Sigman?

1990 A. He is one of the clerks in our office.

Q. And has been for several years, hasn't he?

A. Yes.

Q. Who is E. S. Steiner?

A. Also a clerk in our office.

Q. And has been for several years, hasn't he?

A. Yes.

Q. Who is Charles Ess? Do you know him? Do you know such a man?

A. I don't know him.

Q. Now, from the time of the reorganization of the Union Pacific, down, I might say, to the present time, your bank has been the fiscal agent of the Union Pacific, has it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And still is?

A. Still is.

Q. That is, when they want to sell securities, they sell them through you, and when they want to buy securities, they buy them through you, as a rule?

A. Provided that we offer as good or better terms than anybody else.

Q. Well, we will come to that a little later. But, as a matter of fact, whatever may have been the inducements to do it, practically all the securities that have been purchased by—or a very large percentage of the securities purchased by the Union Pacific, and a very large percentage of securities sold by the Union Pacific, have passed through your hands, haven't they?

A. Yes. That is the practice in the case of all large railroad companies, that they deal with one particular banker.

Q. Yes; and you have been the particular banker of the Union Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. In passing, I will ask you, you were one of the incorporators, one of the first directors—not incorporators—one of the first Board of Directors of the Union Pacific named in the articles?

A. Named in the articles?

1991 Q. Of incorporation?

A. Of incorporation—I believe so, yes.

Q. When did the Union Pacific commence paying dividends on its preferred stock?

A. I don't remember the exact date, it is matter of record.

Q. Can you remember about how long after it commenced business?

A. Not exactly.

Q. You don't remember when. Can you remember when it commenced paying on its common stock?

A. Not exactly.

Q. We will get that from somebody. I did not know but you might recollect. The first large financial transaction which the Union Pacific embarked in after its reorganization was the acquisition of the Southern Pacific stock, was it not?

A. Correct.

Q. Who conducted the negotiations for the acquisition of that stock?

A. These negotiations were conducted by us as fiscal agents for the company, and Mr. Harriman.

Q. With whom were the negotiations had?

A. With Huntington.

Q. A. G. Huntington?

A. A. G. Huntington and Speyer & Co.

Q. That is, it was with those two parties. They represented a large block of Southern Pacific stock which controlled the property?

A. Yes.

Q. That is right.

A. That is right.

Q. At whose instance did you undertake those negotiations?

A. Largely at our own instance and of course in conference with Mr. Harriman.

Q. Well, you did not undertake the purchase of those securities as an investment for your house, but you undertook the purchase with the intention of turning them over to the Union Pacific, didn't you, after conversation with Mr. Harriman?

1992 A. If the Union Pacific wanted them, after mature deliberation by its Board. If they did not want them, we would have been perfectly willing to keep and sell them to somebody else, and it would have been very easy to sell them to somebody else.

Q. Now, Mr. Kahn, before you bought these securities or entered into any contract to buy them, didn't you have a thorough understanding with Mr. Harriman that the Union Pacific would take them, practically of course, subject to the approval of the Board?

A. We had this understanding, that we were bound to offer to the Union Pacific. If the Union Pacific did not want them or for any reason could not buy them, then we were stuck with them.

Q. Didn't you have an understanding with Mr. Harriman that he would take them?

A. Mr. Harriman certainly was in favor of taking them provided they could legally be bought, and providing the remaining members of the Board were of the same opinion.

Q. Did you not consult other members of the Board prior to the acquisition, or to the contract for the acquisition of the securities, besides Mr. Harriman?

A. Prior to the contract for the acquisition, I don't believe so.

Q. You don't think you talked to any other member of the Union Pacific Board?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. Are you sure of that?

A. I say I don't believe so. It is a matter of seven years back and I can not remember every single step that was taken in that connection, but in a general way we undertook to take the risk of buying that stock. I remember the executors of the Hunting-

1993 ton estate wanted a banker's obligation, and were not satisfied with a corporation obligation; they wanted a banker's obligation to protect them, and there was a question when a certain amount of cash down had to be paid at once, before the Union Pacific or any other railroad company could act or get together, and we simply stood in the breach and took the risk.

Q. Well, Mr. Kahn, you would not undertake to say now, would you, that you consulted with no one other than Mr. Harriman, on the Union Pacific Board, before you undertook to take over these securities?

A. I would not affirm it and would not deny it. It is a matter of seven or eight years back and I can not remember each single step that was taken in connection with the negotiation at the time, or each single person with whom I talked or did not talk.

Q. But you had a thorough understanding in the matter with Mr. Harriman, and he participated in the negotiation?

A. He participated in the negotiation.

Q. And you had a thorough understanding with him so far as he was concerned, the Union Pacific would take the stock?

A. The understanding with him was, that so far as he was concerned, we were bound to offer that stock to the Union Pacific at cost, plus a reasonable commission for our services in the matter, which we did.

Q. You wrote a communication to the Board, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. In which you said: "We have purchased 432,700 shares of the Southern Pacific Company of Kentucky, to be paid for as follows: 144,233 shares on February 11th; 268,467 shares on, or 1994 at our option before July 10th, with interest at 4% per annum from February 11th, all said shares to be deposited with a Trust Company until entire payment is completed.

"We have further purchased the following shares:

"200,000 shares to be paid for on, or at our option before March 4th.

"45,000 shares to be paid for, one-half on February 5th, and one-half on February 8th.

"The average price at which we have made the above purchases, exclusive of interest accruing, is $50.6146 per share."

That is an accurate statement, isn't it?

A. Certainly.

Q. That is stock you bought from Speyer & Company, and had arranged to buy from Speyer & Company and Mr. Huntington?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you further add:

"In order that your holdings of Southern Pacific stock may aggregate 750,000 shares, we agree to sell to you on March 4, 1901, 72,300 additional shares at the same price, viz: $50.6146 per share, plus interest at the rate of 4% from February 11, 190—." From whom did you buy that stock?

A. From whom did we buy that stock? We undertook to deliver that stock; we bought it in the market.

Q. You bought that in the market and bought that for whatever price you could get it, and made whatever profit you could on it?

A. Or whatever loss.

Q. Had you not already bought it when you addressed this communication to the Board?

A. I don't remember. I don't believe we had.

1995 Q. You know perfectly well, Mr. Kahn, do you not, that you had already bought that stock?

A. I know perfectly well that we had not, now that I think back.

Q. This communication is dated the 4th of February; you say you had not bought it?

A. I know perfectly well, now that I think back, that we had not bought it.

Q. What were the ruling prices of Southern Pacific stock at that time?

A. At the time that letter was written, I believe about 49—between 48 and 49.

Q. So you took the chance of its going up above $50 a share?

A. Which it did.

Q. And you lost money then on it, did you?

A. I am not saying that.

Q. Oh, you are not? I misunderstand you.

A. I didn't say that.

Q. Upon that purchase price, you say you were "also to be paid by the company $2.50 a share upon said 750,000 shares, of profit to us for the risk assumed in making these purchases"?

A. That is right.

Q. The risk you assumed was the risk that the Union Pacific Board would not approve of Mr. Harriman's provision relative to the acquirement of this stock, was it?

A. No; that was only one of the risks. There was an additional risk.

Q. What was it?

A. The other risk, to which our attention was called by our counsel, was a legal risk. At that time it was not certain whether the Union Pacific or the Oregon Short Line could legally acquire the Southern Pacific stock.

Q. Why?

1996 A. Because the Southern Pacific Company was a holding company and not a railroad company, and that defect, if it existed, was later on cured by appropriate legislation, I believe. But that time, that risk existed and was forcibly called to our attention by our counsel, and we were told that we were incurring a very substantial risk in standing in the breach.

Q. You thought you were incurring a substantial risk.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you were willing to accept the risk in view of the fact, as you said, that that stock went up above 50.61 a share?

A. We could not have known that at the time we undertook the risk. It might just as well have gone down. It varied, as all stocks do.

Q. You were a member of the Executive Committee at that time. What was the purpose of the Union Pacific in acquiring this stock?

A. As I said to you before, I am a pretty poor witness on railroad questions, and whilst I was a director of the Union Pacific, of course I am not an expert on railroad matters; but I understand in a general way that the main purpose of the Union Pacific in acquiring the Southern Pacific was to be certain of not being shut off at Ogden from reaching San Francisco. At that time it had become quite apparent that the Southern Pacific would not remain an independent line, that one or another of the——

Q. Would not what?

A. Would not remain an independent line, and that one or the other of the large systems would buy it, would get control of it. Reports had come to all of us of negotiations which were being carried on by other large systems to acquire the Southern Pacific. It 1997 was, as I understood it, of vital importance to the Union Pacific not to be shut off at Ogden, and to continue to be able to use the line from Ogden to San Francisco. Naturally I also understood that the north and south lines in California were valuable feeders. I always understood also—as I say, I am not competent to pass on these questions very well.

Q. Go on. It is very interesting.

A. I always understood that the Southern Pacific was bought by the Union Pacific for advantages which it afforded as a connecting line, and it never entered our minds at that time that it could be in any sense considered a competing line.

Q. That never entered your head?

A. That never entered our heads at the time.

Q. You did not think of such a thing as that?

A. Never.

Q. You did not know that traffic moved to California both ways, both over the Union Pacific and over the Southern Pacific, Sunset Route?

A. I was not generally posted on these questions. I only know we bought the Southern Pacific because it was represented to us that it was a necessary supplement to the Union Pacific, and if we did not buy it the Union Pacific would be bottled up at Ogden.

Q. The Union Pacific owned the line to Portland.

A. The Union Pacific owned the line to Portland, to Northern California, yes.

Q. So that they could not shut you off from access to the Pacific Ocean?

A. But they could have shut us off from access to San Francisco by the Southern Pacific, which we had always used theretofore, I believe.

1998 Q. And so, for the sake of getting a line 800 miles long, which you regarded as essential to the Union Pacific, you bought six or seven thousand miles. Is that the idea?

A. No; I said the lines in California were doubtless an additional inducement.

Q. Was not the Southern Pacific any inducement, the Sunset Route?

A. I don't believe it was. I understood at that time that it was a nuisance. It certainly was not an inducement at that time.

Q. You regarded it as a nuisance?

A. As a nuisance.

Q. Do you still regard it as a nuisance?

A. I don't know.

Q. I do not think there is any question, from what we have learned in the examination in the West, that Mr. Stubbs had made that quite a nuisance to the Union Pacific.

A. I don't know.

Q. I think you are right. That had been made a nuisance. And because it was a nuisance, and because you wanted a connection into the San Francisco for the other reasons you have given——

A. Excuse me. You put it just the other way on. I said that the necessity of acquiring with the Southern Pacific the line which you call the Sunset route was the very opposite to an inducement. The Union Pacific did not buy the Southern Pacific because the Southern Pacific contained that southern line, but it bought it in spite of that.

Q. That is, the southern line was forced on to you?

A. I think if at that time the southern line could have been cut off from the Southern Pacific, it would have been preferable to all of us.

Q. Are you still of the same mind?

A. I am no longer a railroad director, and I have not followed its affairs since then.

Q. Up to a year ago, when you retired from the Board, were you still of the same mind that you would be glad to have the Southern Pacific Sunset Route cut off from the rest of your system?

1999

A. I believe under the present management that it had been much improved and made valuable.

Q. Then as I understand it, there is something that transpired in the four years from 1901 to 1905, when you retired from the Board, that made you change your mind about the desirability of divorcing the Sunset Route from the rest of the Southern Pacific system?

A. I never had any opinion about it.

Q. Do you know whether the balance of your Executive Committee, so long as you were a member of that committee were of the opinion that it would be a good thing for the Union Pacific to lop off the Sunset Route?

A. That question never came up, because it was not a practical question.

Q. You do not remember any gossip about that after the time you bought the Southern Pacific stock?

A. I do not.

Q. That feeling that the Sunset Route was a nuisance was never discussed after that time?

A. I want to make clear that it was not a nuisance to the Southern Pacific, but I want to bring out again that in my mind, and from what I then heard from those more competent to judge than I, the Southern Pacific was acquired because of its connecting features, and not because of that Sunset Route, which at that time was, I believe, not a profitable part of the system.

Q. And that situation changed, did it, after the new management came into control, so that you ceased to regret having to take in the competing line to the south?

A. I have no doubt the new management greatly improved that road.

2000 Q. And your regrets over that vanished?

A. I never referred back to those regrets, nor were there any regrets. I simply stated the fact that it was not an inducement.

Q. What provision did you make to pay yourself for this road? I mean what provision did the Executive Committee or Board of Directors make to pay Kuhn, Loeb & Co. for this stock?

A. They paid Kuhn, Loeb & Co. cash for this stock.

Q. How is that?

A. They paid the cash under the offer.

Q. How did they get that cash?

A. I think by the issue of convertible bonds, which were sold.

Q. Now, calling your attention to that matter, it appears by the minutes of the meeting at which your proposition was in form laid before the board, namely, a meeting of the Board of Directors of February 20, 1901, that resolutions were adopted accepting your proposition and providing for the issuance of $100,000,000 of convertible bonds. That is right, is it?

A. That is right.

Q. You were familiar with that at the time?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, those bonds, according to this resolution, were to be offered to the holders of the common and preferred stock of the company for subscription at par?

A. $40,000,000 of it.

Q. I mean $40,000,000. I will get to that in a moment. $40,000,000?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that done?

A. That was done.

Q. What amount of the bonds was taken by the stockholders, all of them?

A. No; I don't believe all of them. I forget exactly how many, but not all of them.

Q. Give us your best recollection.

2001 A. I don't want to state anything off-hand which I am not positive about.

Q. Were over half of them?

A. I think so; yes.

Q. Were over three-quarters of them?

A. I doubt it, but I am not sure.

Q. You would not deny that at least $30,000,000 of the $40,000,000 were taken by the stockholders, would you?

A. I wouldn't deny it and I wouldn't affirm it.

Q. But you would be willing to say that in excess of $25,000,000 were taken by the stockholders, would you not?

A. I believe so.

Q. It appears further on in the same resolution, as follows:

"Whereas, it is important to the company to insure at once funds "for present commitments and future requirements, that the said "sale of $40,000,000 of bonds be definitely assured, and attending the "necessary proceedings for the creation of said bonds, such funds

"as may be necessary to meet such commitments and requirements "be available, Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co., be and they are hereby "requested and authorized to agree to underwrite the subscription "by the stockholders of this company of said $40,000,000 of the First "Lien Convertible Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds of this Company, and "this Company hereby undertakes that it will pay to Messrs. Kuhn, "Loeb & Co., or such syndicate as they may form, a commission of "two and one-half per cent. upon said $40,000,000 of bonds, and to "said Kuhn, Loeb & Co. for their individual services a further com-"mission equal to two and one-half per cent. upon said $40,000,000 "of bonds." Now, that money was paid over and the stock was acquired by the Union Pacific. A little later on, as I under-2002 stand it, the Union Pacific bought some more of this stock. That was the next year, was it not?

A. It was in 1902; yes.

Q. From whom did they buy that stock?

A. They bought that stock from Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Q. What did they pay Kuhn, Loeb & Co. for that?

A. I think the price as shown on the record is 65.

Q. Was that stock that was acquired by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. for the Union Pacific, or was it stock that Kuhn, Loeb & Co. happened to own, and sold to the Union Pacific?

A. That was stock which Kuhn, Loeb & Co. held individually, and without any reference to the Union Pacific of any kind.

Q. That is, it was not stock you had bought for the Union Pacific the way you did the other?

A. Not at all.

Q. Mr. Harriman did not participate in those negotiations?

A. In the negotiation for the purchase?

Q. In the negotiations by which you acquired the $15,000,000 of additional stock?

A. No.

Q. Nobody except Kuhn, Loeb & Co. And that you turned over to the company at 65, $9,750,000. Now, will you state what the inducement was to the Union Pacific to acquire that additional stock. They were already in possession of the management of the road.

A. Yes. At that time, I believe—I think Mr. Harriman is a better man to ask about that than I, because we did not take part in any transactions which involved dealing with ourselves, and therefore, as I say, I am not a good witness to speak for the Union Pacific side of the case.

Q. I suppose, though, you and Mr. Harriman spoke as you passed by—talked things over?

A. Certainly we talked things over, but we were not a de-
2003 termining factor in any negotiations with ourselves. Therefore I say I am not a good witness to examine on the Union Pacific side of the case.

Q. But you were present at the discussions on the subject?

A. Yes. My recollection is that at that time efforts became apparent, which later on crystallized, to form a strong combination against the Union Pacific control of the Southern Pacific, and the Union Pacific directors felt that the holdings of the Union Pacific had better be increased to what Mr. Harriman called yesterday an unquestionable dominating interest. Negotiations were opened with us for the purpose of our holdings of stock, and we sold them at the market price of the day.

Q. With whom did you conduct the negotiations for the sale of that $15,000,000 of stock to the Union Pacific?

A. Probably with Mr. Harriman.

Q. And you agreed on that sale with Mr. Harriman and turned the stock over to the road at $65 a share?

A. He made us an offer, I believe, to sell that stock at that price to the Executive Committee or the Board, and the Executive Committee or the Board accepted the offer.

Q. Previous to that, however, you had agreed on the sale with Mr. Harriman, subject to the ratification of the committee?

A. Doubtless.

Q. Outside of this $40,000,000 of bonds that were issued in 1901, for the purpose of acquiring or paying for the Southern Pacific stock, there were some more of those bonds, were there not?

A. Yes.

Q. And some other stocks were acquired: is that true?

A. That is true.

2004 Q. What were the stocks acquired?

A. There were acquired about $78,000,000 of Northern Pacific common and preferred stock.

Q. Mr. Kahn, when was the idea of acquiring Northern Pacific stock first taken up by the Union Pacific or any of its officers or directors or committees?

A. That idea started with the purchase by the Northern Pacific and Great Northern of the Burlington.

Q. And that was prior to 1901, was it not?

A. No: I believe that was in March, 1901.

Q. I did not mean prior to 1901, but I mean it was prior to April, 1901.

A. Prior to April, 1901; yes.

Q. Now, with what officials of the Union Pacific did you discuss the advisability of acquiring the Northern Pacific for the Union Pacific?

A. We discussed the advisability of doing that in April, I believe, with Mr. Harriman.

Q. With Mr. Harriman.

A. Yes.

Q. There was no action taken, was there, by the Board of Directors, authorizing that acquisition?

A. No; there was no such action taken, nor was it at that time at all certain that the Union Pacific would finally acquire it or not. It was a very big transaction to undertake for the Union Pacific. The Union Pacific had, as I said before, only a couple of years before emerged from bankruptcy.

Q. Yes, I heard you say that.

A. It was very questionable whether the Union Pacific would finally conclude to undertake that transaction or not.

Q. Mr. Kahn, am I to understand then that the matter of acquiring the stock of the Northern Pacific was a simple matter of 2005 negotiation between Mr. Harriman and yourself, or your firm, and that it was not taken up by the Board of Directors or the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific? I want to be sure I understand you.

A. I said nothing of the kind.

Q. That is what I want to know.

A. Oh, no, Mr. Harriman and we, in April, 1901, owing to the acquisition by the Northern Pacific and Great Northern of the Burlington, became convinced that it was very desirable that a controlling interest, or at least an influential holding of Northern Pacific, should be concentrated in friendly hands, pending decision of the question. It was not a matter that could be decided in a day or a week, or four weeks, or six weeks, pending the decision of the question of the action, if any, the Union Pacific intended to take in the matter; and it was in pursuance of that idea, and in pursuance of the necessity which we saw for having such a concentrated holding, and knowing also at the same time that the Northern Pacific was a very excellent proposition and was selling at a very cheap price; knowing also, as we did, of certain plans which were on foot for increasing the value of Northern Pacific; being certain that the purchase of Northern Pacific at the then prevailing prices was an advantageous purchase under any circumstances; being perfectly willing to hold the stock for ourselves if the Union Pacific did not want it; in fact, preferring to hold the stock for ourselves if the Union Pacific did not want it, but at the same time feeling morally bound to give the Union Pacific opportunity to buy it from us if they wanted it;—taking all those things into consideration, we started buying Northern Pacific stock.

2006 Q. You made that start after you had talked with Mr. Harriman, and Mr. Harriman had agreed with you that it was advisable for the Union Pacific to get it?

A. No; Mr. Harriman had agreed with us that it was desirable that a compact holding the Northern Pacific should be in friendly hands.

Q. When was that talk?

A. That talk, I should say, was during probably the first fortnight in April.

Q. How is that?

A. During the first few weeks in April.

COPY BOUND CLOSE

Q. During the first two weeks in April?
A. The first few weeks in April.
Q. 1901?
A. Yes.
Q. I call your attention to a letter you wrote to Mr. Harriman as chairman of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific on April 15, 1901, which reads as follows:

"We are the owners and holders of 100,000 shares of preferred "stock and 150,000 shares of common stock of the Northern Pacific "Railway Company. As in our opinion the acquisition of these "shares by the Union Pacific Railroad Company would be of great "value to its system, we offer to sell these shares to your company "at the price of 101 per share of preferred stock and 102½ per share "of common stock."

What advantage to the system did you think it would be to acquire that 250,000 shares of stock?
A. That is again a railroad question.
Q. But I am quoting from Kuhn, Loeb & Co's. letter to Mr. Harriman.
A. I know. You are quoting from a letter which was written six or seven years ago, and you are quoting a reference in this 2007 letter to a railroad question. In a general way it is quite apparent that it was of great importance and great weight to the Union Pacific to acquire a holding in Northern Pacific, so as to enable it to get its connection into Idaho, Washington and those other states and territories that Mr. Harriman yesterday referred to. I am not prepared to go into detail in explaining its advantages. I would rather have a railroad expert explain that.
Q. I am merely asking what you meant when you wrote this letter, that is all.
A. I have just explained to you that I considered at the time that the acquisition of the Burlington by the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern, tended, as I understood it, to shut out the Union Pacific from those territories in the Northwest, and we considered that if it were possible for the Union Pacific to have a substantial holding and possibly a controlling holding, in Northern Pacific, the Northern Pacific in its turn having half of the control of the Burlington, it would be a very beneficial thing for the Union Pacific. At the same time we were convinced that the stock was selling far below its real value, and the result has shown that our judgment was correct.
Q. I think I understand your position now. You and Mr. Harriman had had a talk, and you had agreed that it was advisable in view of the purchase of the Burlington by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, that the Union Pacific should buy the stock of the Northern Pacific, and, if possible, get a control of it for the Union Pacific.
A. Yes.
Q. That is right?

OSE IN CENTER

A. Yes.

Q. In pursuance of that talk, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. went into the market?

A. Yes.

2008 Q. And you bought this amount of stock, and immediately upon buying it you offered it to the Union Pacific at the prices stated, this first block? I am coming to the additional block in a moment.

A. Yes; that is so, in a general way, except that you stated that we had agreed with Mr. Harriman that the Union Pacific would buy the stock, whilst I have stated the opposite.

Q. I misunderstood you, then. I did not intend to misquote you.

A. I said the opposite. I said to you that we agreed with Mr. Harriman that it was very desirable that a substantial holding of Northern Pacific stock should be in friendly hands, and that it was very questionable at that time whether the Union Pacific would finally determine to buy that stock or not, but that we felt committed in any event, morally committed, as soon as we had a substantial holding, to offer it to the Union Pacific, which we did.

Q. If there was no understanding that you were acquiring this stock for the Union Pacific how did it happen that you wrote this letter to Mr. Harriman on the 15th of April, 1901?

A. I think this letter is the best evidence that we had no such understanding.

Q. You think it is?

A. I think it is.

Q. Mr. Harriman, on the same day, answered your letter, and said, among other things:

"I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of to-day, offering to "sell to this Company 100,000 shares of the preferred stock and "150,000 shares of the common stock of the Northern Pacific Rail"way Company, at 101 per cent per share of preferred and 2029 "102½ per cent per share of common stock, the latter ex divi-
"dend—for which books close to-morrow. I have authority "from this company to purchase any such stock, and I believe with "you that the acquisition of this stock will be of great benefit to this "company."

When did Mr. Harriman get that authority? After his talk with you about the advisability of somebody getting control of the Northern Pacific?

A. Mr. Harriman signed that letter, and he is responsible for the statements contained in it. I don't know when he got the authority.

Q. You were on the Executive Committee, from where the power would naturally flow, and on the Board, were you not?

A. Yes; and in pursuance of our general line of policy, I would take a very unsubstantial part in the determination of the Union Pacific side of this case, because we were interested on the other side.

A. Oh, no. I am speaking about the power that was given to Mr.

Harriman, which I assumed, perhaps incorrectly, was prior to your acquisition of the stock?

A. Our acquisition?

Q. Yes, prior to your talk which resulted in your buying the stock.

A. There is nothing here to show it.

Q. You do not know about that? You do not know when he got that authority?

A. No.

Q. Or how he got it?

A. No.

Q. Or from whom he got it?

A. No. If he had any such formal authority, the books, the records, would show it.

Q. You did not doubt his authority? You regarded the transaction as closed, did you not?

A. He signed the letter as chairman of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific Railroad.

2010 Q. Yes; of which you were a member?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, I call your attention to a letter of the next day, the 16th—you have copies there of all the letters—in which you state you are "prepared to make delivery against payment for the same, which "we calculate to be $25,475,000." Was that paid?

A. That would be the purchase price?

Q. I say, was it paid? Did you get the money?

A. So I assume. It does not show here. I have no doubt we did.

Q. You turned over the shares and got the money, did you not?

A. I have no doubt we did.

Q. Then I call your attention to a letter of the 29th of April, 1901, written by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. to Mr. Harriman, in which you offer to sell to the Union Pacific 160,000 shares of preferred, at 102.50 and 120,000 shares of common at 112 per share, that offer to remain open until the next morning.

A. Yes.

Q. Am I to understand, then that between the time you turned over this first lot to the Union Pacific and then, you had gone on and purchased additional shares?

A. It does not appear from this that when we offered to the Union Pacific the block of $25,000,000, that was all we had. I don't know if we did or did not. It doesn't show here whether we did or did not, but we went on, in exactly the same way I have previously described. For the Union Pacific, the assumption or purchase of all this Northern Pacific stock involved a heavy financial commitment, and I suppose it was determined from instance to instance how far the Union Pacific was prepared to go, whether it wished to go any further than the preferred, $25,000,000. Our method of proceeding was on our own risk and responsibility to go ahead and buy 2011 the stock as best we could, feeling certain, as we did, that it was a most advantageous purchase, in any event, and being perfectly prepared to keep it ourselves if the Union Pacific didn't want it, and preferring to keep it ourselves if the Union Pacific didn't want it, and at the same time feeling morally bound to offer it to the Union Pacific from time to time, as we had a substantial amount, at a very slight increase on the price we had paid, I don't believe in any instance exceeding 2½ per cent. upon the amount we had paid. We offered the stock to the Union Pacific at very much lower prices, taking it all through, than it sold for on the day on which our offers were made. In one instance I remember we offered the Union Pacific our holdings of stock at 7 or 8 percent below the market price of that day. We did it simply because we considered ourselves morally committed to do that, and we did it in spite of the fact that if we had kept the stock we would have obtained 7 or 8 or 10 or 12 per cent more for it, and on the same day, at that.

Q. What is that? I did not catch that last.

A. I said we made the offer to the Union Pacific after we had accumulated a substantial amount, in each instance at what we paid for it plus a very slight commission, and we did that notwithstanding the fact that on the day we made that offer, on the respective days when we made that offer—the market price was very substantially in excess of the price at which we gave to the Union Pacific an option, an opportunity to buy from us.

Q. As I understand then, Mr. Kahn, you went on buying Northern Pacific stock?

A. Yes.

Q. And you went on buying it with the intention of turning it over to the Union Pacific?

A. We did not.

2012 Q. You did not?

A. No; we went on buying it, being perfectly willing, and preferring, to hold it for ourselves, because we knew we were buying something at a price very much below its intrinsic value; but we bought it with the determination to give the Union Pacific the benefit of our skill in purchasing it, and of our responsibility and risk incurred in purchasing it, and offering it to the Union Pacific at the price at which we bought it, plus a very small commission.

Q. But, Mr. Kahn, however strongly you felt that you were getting this stock for much less than its intrinsic value, it had not occurred to Kuhn, Loeb & Co. to get into the market and buy Northern Pacific stock until the time you thought the Union Pacific ought to have it, and after you had had this talk with Mr. Harriman whatever the talk was?

A. Oh no, the value of the Northern Pacific was very much increased by their obtaining control of the Burlington, and we went into the market the moment the Northern Pacific obtained control of the Burlington.

Q. That was the latter part of March?

A. That was the latter part of March.

Q. Whatever may have been your intentions, it is a fact, is it not, that as fast as you acquired a substantial block of the Northern Pacific stock that spring, you turned it over to the Union Pacific?

A. We offered it to the Union Pacific.

Q. You turned it over to them. They got it, did they not.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were not very much astonished when they accepted your offers, were you?

A. We were not very much astonished, but we were rather 2013 distressed, because we would much rather have kept the stock.

Q. But you survived that distress.

A. We survived it, and let a profit of $63,000,000 go to the Union Pacific out of those transactions.

Q. It was on the 29th you made this offer, of 160,000 shares of preferred and 120,000 shares of common, and that was accepted by Mr. Harriman, on the same day, as chairman of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific? He states the letter will constitute a contract. That stock was taken and paid for, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to another letter of Mr. Harriman, written on that same day, the 29th of April, stating:

"The Union Pacific desires to purchase additional shares to the amount of at least 250,000 shares."

And he desires to know whether they can be procured from or through yourselves, and upon what terms. I do not find any letter in these files in answer to that. What answer did you return to that?

A. I believe in answer to that letter we offered him all we had, which was, I think, about $16,000,000 of the stock, if I remember rightly. I am not sure. Anyhow, we offered him all we had.

Q. On the 30th of April, Mr. Harriman addressed you a letter, as follows:

The Union Pacific Railroad Company, for the purpose of financing corporate requirements, desires to sell $25,000,000, face value, of its First Lien Convertible Four Per Cent. Gold bonds. In compliance with the agreement between this Company and your-
2014 selves, evidenced by your letter of February 5, 1901, to the undersigned, I am authorized to offer on behalf of the Railroad Company to sell these bonds to you upon the terms mentioned in your letter. I shall be glad to hear promptly whether you will purchase the same.

Upon payment by you or your assigns for these bonds at their face value, less interest to May 1st, when the interest on the bonds begins to run, the Company will be prepared to pay you the 5% commissions as agreed upon February 5, 1901.

Now, there was no arrangement made, was there, in this letter of yours of February, by which you were to have anything to do with any of the bonds other than $40,000,000?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. Was there? What was it?

A. I think you will find it in the letter.

Q. The only letter put into the files is the letter with reference to the sale of the stock. There is the resolution following that for the sale of the bonds to you or to your syndicate. Just a moment, Mr. Cravath, and I will look it over and see if we can find it.

A. I think I can save some time, because I know what it is.

Q. It is not here; just state what it was.

A. It must have been overlooked, because we put it in there.

Q. It may have been overlooked.

A. I mean it is in the records, it must have been overlooked, to furnish it to you.

Q. We have here a copy of the records relating to the transaction.

A. Yes.

Q. Certified by the secretary, Mr. Millar.

A. Yes.

Q. And Judge Lovett and Mr. Cravath and I have all looked it over, and we do not find anything there providing that you shall have the right to take the other $60,000,000.

2015 A. If you send for the record of our correspondence with the company, which is the only record we have of that, you will find that we have that right. You will find we have the correspondence with the company.

Q. Suppose you bring it up here at two o'clock.

A. I will try to get it—I think you should address that inquiry to the company and not to us.

Q. It appears in evidence of the $40,000,000 in bonds were to be offered to the stockholders.

A. Yes.

Q. And the stockholders took some $25,000,000 in round numbers, you don't know exactly.

A. Yes.

Q. Now there does not seem to be any offer made to the stockholders of this additional $25,000,000.

A. No.

Q. Do you mean that there was an agreement in force at that time between the Union Pacific and Kuhn, Loeb & Company, by which you were to have the right to take the additional $60,000,000, at a discount of five per cent.

A. Certainly.

Q. You do?

A. I do. We consider that no more than fair. At the time we took a very great responsibility which you do not appreciate, but which existed, and existed to a very great extent. At the time we became responsible for the issue of the Union Pacific four per cent. convertible bonds, the Union Pacific credit was not yet such as to insure the sale of new bonds on a four per cent basis at par, and by our efforts we placed those bonds and obtained the money for the company, whether it came from the stockholders or from us makes no difference. If the stockholders subscribed it was because we guaranteed the security to a certain extent, anyhow. I mean our 2016 pressure and our efforts had a great deal to do with the success of that issue, and if we undertook to become responsible for that issue we considered it ourselves perfectly justifiable, and the railroad company considered it perfectly justifiable to stipulate that any further issue of those bonds should be offered to us at the same price.

Q. Then, as I understand it, in consideration—take the whole transaction together—in consideration of your purchasing the Southern Pacific stock, you got a commission on that?

A. Yes.

Q. And in consideration of organizing a syndicate to underwrite the $40,000,000 you got a commission on that?

A. Yes.

Q. Although $25,000,000 were taken by the stockholders?

A. It was not known and could not have been known at the time we agreed to do that.

Q. Let me finish my question. I have been patient with you and trust you will allow me to place my question on the record. Then, as an additional compensation for what you have done, outside of these commissions, you also got the privilege of taking other $60,000,000 with a five per cent commission. Is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Mr. Lovett. I think, in order that the record may be intelligible it would be well to file that correspondence as an exhibit, because you have been referring to it.

Mr. Severance. I will do that.

Q. Well, at any rate, Mr. Harriman, whether it had been agreed that you should have that right or not, did offer you the $25,000,000 of face value of the bonds.

A. Yes.

Q. At five per cent. discount?

A. Yes.

2017 Q. And you took them, didn't you?

A. We did.

Q. And the proceeds were used to pay you for the Northern Pacific stock you were buying?

A. Yes.

Q. Then on the 7th of May Mr. Harriman addresses you another letter, stating that "the Union Pacific desired to make additional "purchases of the stock, common and preferred, of the Northern "Pacific Railway Company to an amount up to but not exceeding "$24,500,000 par value, in the aggregate of both stocks. On behalf "of the Executive Committee and with its authority, I desire you to "make purchases for account of the Union Pacific Railroad Company "and shall be glad to hear promptly your views as to the prices at "which the stock can be obtained so far as you can judge."

A. Yes.

Q. Then you answered that letter, stating "We ourselves own and "control 80,000 shares of preferred and 86,000 shares of common

1231

"stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, and we offer to "sell these shares to the Union Pacific Railroad Company at the rate "of $109.00 per share of preferred stock, ex-dividend for which "books close May 10th, and $131.50 per share of common stock. We "must ask you to advise us before four o'clock today, if practicable, "whether the company will accept this offer, in order that we may "govern ourselves accordingly."

Then you pointed out in a foot note, that the prevailing prices were several points in excess of the prices quoted by you.

A. We quoted that the closing price for common stock was 143½ when we offered it at 131½ and the preferred closed at 110 when we offered it at 109.

Q. And on the same day, Mr. Harriman, as chairman of the Executive Committee, answered your letter, in which you offered to 2018 sell the stock at that price, and he accepts the offer and then gives you additional authority to make additional purchases in the market for account of the Union Pacific Railroad Company of preferred stock in the aggregate a total cash expenditure of $9,200,000, using your discretion as to price and times of purchase, but not to exceed the average rate of $115.00 per share ex-dividend for which books close May 10th. Did you make any purchase under that authority?

A. Yes; we purchased some preferred stock and turned it in at cost.

Q. What is that?

A. We purchased preferred stock on the order of the company and of course turned it in for what we paid for it.

Q. You turned it in without any commission?

A. Certainly. We might have received the ordinary bankers' commission, but we simply turned it over at cost.

Q. And all the commission you got was the commission of 1/8 per cent upon that?

A. It may have been 1/4 or 1/8, but from that time on we acted as agent.

Q. Well, there is a regular broker's commission of 1/8, isn't there?

A. Yes, but we are not brokers, we are bankers; we do not accept orders from clients to purchase stocks in the market, we have not a commission business. We do accept from railroad companies and other large corporations large and discretionary orders requiring particular skill and particular ability to execute orders, but only as I say, if they involve special objects, and if they involve large amounts, and for those we do not charge 1/8 per cent but we do charge a commission commensurate with the object at stake. We usually charge from 1/2 to one per cent. As a rule we charge one per cent for handling that kind of an order.

2019 Q. Then as I understand it, when stocks are purchased by a member of the Stock Exchange in rather small quantities, the individual who does that is a broker, but when it is done in large quantities, he is a banker, is that it?

A. No; that depends very much upon the circumstances of the case. A railroad company is not qualified and has not got the facilities to go to half a dozen brokers, and they could not get one broker, but to half a dozen and tell them, "I want to buy ten million, twenty, thirty or forty million dollars of stock," and give them exact orders. What they would do would be to go to a banker in whose ability and skill they have confidence and who they know will not take advantage of the order, and they would say "take such means as you deem desirable, and pay as little as possible," and for that the banker would not require the ordinary brokerage commission, which he might have to pay out half a dozen times over, but would require an appropriate commission, which is usually from one-half to one per cent, as a rule one per cent.

Q. That ordinarily your charge against the Union Pacific or any one you are acting for would be one per cent?

A. We have acted for a great number of railroad companies in similar circumstances and our charge has been uniformly one per cent on the par value.

Q. But in the case of the Union Pacific your charge was uniformly two and one-half per cent.

A. Our charge was one per cent or less for the Union Pacific. Whenever we acted for the Union Pacific, generally less.

Q. I thought you got two and a half on the Southern Pacific, and that was a large purchase requiring ability and skill.

A. We did not acquire that stock in the market or on the commission, but at our own risk, and a very substantial risk, and 2020 the Union Pacific had the right to take it, as they saw fit..

Q. And that same condition applies to the Northern Pacific, does it?

A. To a much greater degree, because our responsibility in the Northern Pacific was a very heavy one indeed, and the amount involved was extremely large.

Q. You knew at the time you bought this stock of the Northern Pacific and turned it over to the Union Pacific, of which you were an executive committeeman, that the Northern Pacific and Great Northern had jointly acquired the Burlington?

A. Yes.

Q. You knew that for a large part of the distance traversed by the Union Pacific, it was an active competitor, with the Burlington, didn't you?

A. The Northern Pacific?

Q. The Union Pacific was an active competitor with the Burlington?

A. Yes.

Q. You knew that on trans-continental business, the Northern Pacific was a competitor with the Union Pacific, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. You knew that?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you explain to me, then, why knowing those facts, and of course knowing the law, being a banker, you sought to acquire the control of a competing line in violation of law?

A. To begin with, knowing the law being a banker; there is a difference between a banker and a lawyer, and a difference between a banker's understanding of the law and a lawyer's understanding of the law, sometimes. I mean that in this sense, that the banker is not competent to judge of the niceties of the interstate commerce and anti-trust laws.

Q. Did that occur to you in connection with the matter?

2021 A. It did to such an extent that it was a factor in determining the risk we ran. We bought the Northern Pacific stock at a very great risk, legal and otherwise, and we offered it to the Union Pacific, and I was one of the fifteen who determined that the Union Pacific should buy that stock, but when we finally came to determine whether it should buy it or not, I declined to vote on the question, therefore I am the last person you should ask in regard to that matter.

Q. Well, you were turning it over in large bundles day by day?

A. Not every day, but on three instances.

Q. Well every few days.

A. No, not every few days.

Q. At that time you bought that stock and turned it over to the Union Pacific for the purpose of enabling the Union Pacific to control the Northern Pacific and through it, the Burlington?

A. Yes.

Q. Or to have a half interest in controlling the Burlington?

A. Yes.

Q. You did that, knowing they were competitive lines?

A. We did that knowing that we were advised that the Oregon Short Line would have the right to hold the Northern Pacific stock.

Q. Why didn't you sell it to the Oregon Short Line?

A It was sold to the Union Pacific or through the Union Pacific to the Oregon Short Line, the Union Pacific being simply the financial intermediary, because the Oregon Short Line did not have the cash or the means of raising the money, except through the Union Pacific.

Q. You sold it to a company which you realized had no right to handle it, as an intermediary, to get it into the hands of an-

2022 other company that had the right?

A. No, I did not say that. I was not advised that the Union Pacific had not the right, but I was advised they had a clear right to hold it.

Q. And were similarly advised of the physical situation, that they were competing lines.

A. In a certain sense.

Q. But as to whether or not one competing line could buy another, you did not know anything about it?

A. The Union Pacific was not buying the Burlington.

Q. It was buying the Northern Pacific, which you said was competing with the Union Pacific.

A. But I was not told and I did not see it, and I am not sure in my mind now that the Union Pacific and Northern Pacific, taken by themselves, are competing lines in the meaning of the law. I don't know whether they may or may not be.

Q. You don't know about that?

A. I do not know, no.

Q. Well the Supreme Court of the United States says that they are.

Mr. CRAVATH. Five judges out of the nine did.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Yes, I know; that is a majority; that is quite enough.

Mr. CRAVATH. It shows at least a room for doubt in the mind of a layman. They were divided five to four.

Mr. SEVERANCE. They did not divide five to four on that proposition; there was not anything in the dissenting opinion which disagreed with that proposition. Well, so much for the Northern Pacific.

Q. Now you held that stock as has been testified here, I mean the Union Pacific and afterwards the Short Line held that, as has 2023 been testified by Mr. Harriman, for a number of years.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, coming down to the disposition of that stock did you have anything to do with selling it?

A. Yes, I think we sold nearly all of it.

Q. That is, the Northern Pacific stock or its successors, the Northern Securities and afterwards, the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, which you got for the Northern Pacific, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. That was sold through Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

A. Yes, that was sold through Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Q. Wasn't it sold by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. for the Union Pacific or the Short Line, or was it sold by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. for their own benefit?

A. It was sold up to—let me put it this way. It was sold by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. on direct order of the company, for the company, up to some time in, I think it was, June 1906, when we were no longer directors and a different transaction took place.

Q. That is, as long as you were directors in the selling of that, you acted for the company?

A. We acted for the company.

Mr. CRAVATH. By directors, you mean—

Mr. SEVERANCE. Directors of the Union Pacific.

A. Well, we acted simply as brokers in selling it.

Q. What is that?

A. We acted simply as agents of the company in effecting sales to the best of our ability, and I think I may say that we did pretty well, and that we worked off a huge amount of stock practically without depressing the market price, just as I may say we did 2024 pretty well in buying the Northern Pacific stock, because we bought about $70,000,000 of it, before anybody had any idea we were doing it.

Q. I am glad to have you hand these bouquets to yourself, Mr. Kahn; I think perhaps you did.

A. I think to a certain extent, these bouquets are displayed to show we were earning our commission and a good deal more, I think.

Q. Later on, I see by this report, that a large amount of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific was sold through Kuhn, Loeb & Co.?

A. Yes.

2025 Q. Was that sold under a contract?

A. May I ask under what date?

Q. It begins on the 17th day of last July and runs down to the 1st of February, 1907, the 17th of last July. I mean 1906.

A. There were direct purchases made from the company by us.

Q. What I wanted to get at, were these made pursuant to a single contract or were they various blocks sold from time to time?

A. They were in various blocks.

Q. And sold under the dates stated?

A. And sold under the dates stated.

Q. According to this there is a block of $2,800,000 of the capital stock of the Northern Pacific sold the 1st of February for $5,954,000 and odd dollars.

A. What, a block of how much?

Q. That is what made me think that it must have been under some contract. That is a pretty high market price for Northern Pacific.

A. A block of how much? $2,800,000 sold for $5,954,000? That is correct. We sold that at about 250. That would work out about right.

Q. For the Northern Pacific.

A. Yes.

Q. Are you not mixed up with the Great Northern?

A. No. We bought Great Northern from the company as high as 335.

Q. This is Northern Pacific.

A. And we bought Northern Pacific as high as 225.

Q. I am speaking about the 1st of February, 1907, this was only the other day.

A. The first of February, 1907?

Q. Yes, the 1st of February, 1907.

A. No.

2026 Q. You certainly could not have paid over 200 Northern Pacific stock then, could you?

A. No—yes, that is right.

Q. You paid 210 for it the 1st of February, did you, for Northern Pacific stock?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was an independent transaction and not pursuant to any contract?

A. Yes, an independent transaction.

Q. Just an offer made to you from time to time?

A. Yes.

Q. Then as I understand you, since last summer all of these sales that have been made to you were made in small or comparatively small blocks?

A. Yes.

Q. From time to time?

A. Yes—sales to us or the sales which were made through us?

Q. What?

A. Did you say the sales to us or through us?

Q. To you.

A. No, the sales to us were made in quite substantial blocks and the sales through us were smaller blocks.

Q. They are quite substantial blocks but they are smaller than some of the other blocks.

A. Well, but in the aggregate——

Q. They are in blocks of not less than 2800 shares or more than a million.

A. Yes.

Q. Some of the sales last summer went as high as seven million, in some of the other stocks.

A. Yes.

Q. How about the balance of that one hundred million dollars of convertible bonds, the $25,000,000 we accounted for. Did you get the others?

A. We got the others at the same price.

Q. So you got the whole $100,000,000 outside of what the stockholders took out of the first $40,000,000?

A. Yes, we bought $40,000,000 at that price.

Q. If you will try to find that correspondence in reference to the agreement—will you?

A. Yes.

2027 AFTER RECESS.

Q. While I think of it, Mr. Kahn, you have produced four copies of the letter that you wrote Mr. Harriman on the 5th of February, 1901, with reference to the bonds, convertible bonds, asked for this morning. That is it? [Showing letter to witness.]

A. Yes.

Q. That is a copy of the letter?

A. Yes.

Q. It may be marked in evidence as Mr. Kahn's Exhibit 1.

A. I have not brought the answer to it. It was a simple acceptance of our terms.

Letter marked Exhibit 1 and attached to Mr. Kahn's testimony.

Q. Now, this letter is dated the 5th of February, 1901, and starts out:

"Referring to our letter of even date herewith we beg to say that "in financing an issue of this class of bonds and in thus inviting the "confidence of our clients in the securities, it is of serious concern to "us that we assure ourselves (a) that the future financial policy of "the Union Pacific," &c., &c. Then you say "In the foregoing view "we write to say that our undertaking to purchase the $40,000,000 "Convertible Bonds of a total authorized issue of $100,000,000, is "subject to the following further conditions, namely:

"1. That so long as any such issue of bonds are unissued the Rail- "road Company will, until May 1st, 1906 (unless we otherwise con- "sent) raise such additional capital as it shall from time to time "require exclusively by the issue of such Convertible Bonds, namely: "The bonds of said issue convertible into the common stock of the "Company at par at any time within five years after their respective "dates of issue.

2028 "2. That we are to have the right and privilege with respect "to any additional bonds of said issue which the Union Pacific "Railroad Company may decide to sell prior to May 1, 1906, to pur- "chase them at the same price as the initial issue of 40,000,000 of "such bonds will net the Company after the payment of the Syndi- "cate commissions and our own.

"Yours truly,

"(Signed) KUHN, LOEB & Co."

Why didn't you embody that in your other proposition, if that was a condition?

A. I know of no particular reason why. Those letters were framed by counsel, and we simply adopted their form, without giving it any further thought.

Q. Do you know any reason why those conditions were not laid before the Board of Directors of the Union Pacific road?

A. They were laid before the Board of Directors and embodied in a resolution, of which you have or can have a copy.

Q. Is there any other resolution?

A. I don't know what resolutions you have? There is a resolution of the Board of Directors embodying this.

Q. I have the resolution in which the Board of Directors passed on the $40,000,000 proposition.

A. Yes.

Q. I don't find any reference to the balance of the bonds.

A. If you have the full text of the resolution, you will find reference to this letter in it.

Q. You think there is a resolution?

A. I know there is.

Commissioner LANE. Was it in contemplation of the fact that you were going to purchase or intended to purchase large quantities of stock for the Union Pacific that you left the directorate of the Union Pacific?

2029 WITNESS. I don't think I quite grasp your question.

Commissioner LANE. Did you go out of the Union Pacific, did you leave it as a director in order to become its broker?

WITNESS. No; certainly not. Our relations with the Union Pacific, financially speaking, were in no way changed after we left it from what they were before. We were their fiscal agent before, and we continued to be their fiscal agent afterwards.

Commissioner LANE. Your relations were in no way changed?

WITNESS. Were in no way changed.

Q. I asked you this morning, Mr. Kahn, as to who S. Siegman and E. S. Steinman were. You said they were both employed in your office?

A. Yes.

Q. They have appeared for several years on the books of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, quite large holdings of stock in the name of E. S. Steinman and S. Seigman?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that your stock?

A. The fact that that stock is in the name of those gentlemen does not necessarily mean so, and I won't say whether it is or is not; but a great deal of stock is left in the name of bankers, as a matter of convenience—bankers or their nominees.

Q. You do not know whether that stock belonged to you or not?

A. I am sure that not all of it belongs to us.

Q. There is a good deal of stock standing in your name?

A. It is the same way. A great deal of stock is left standing in our name, just as a great deal of stock is left in the name of other bankers, as a matter of convenience.

Q. Mr. Harriman testified yesterday there was a considerable amount of Southern Pacific stock that was held by himself and 2030 his immediate friends? You are among them, are you not? I am not asking as to the amount of your holdings, but you have at all times been interested in Southern Pacific stock?

A. We have at times been holders of Southern Pacific stock, and at times we have not.

Q. At the time of the annual meetings you have been, as a rule, holders of Southern Pacific stock?

A. Sometimes we have and sometimes we have not. It varies.

Q. Mr. Kahn, during the time you were on the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific, were there any branch lines constructed?

A. I have no doubt there were. I don't remember.

Q. Did you have anything to do with constructing any of them?

A. Nothing.

Q. Do you know how they were constructed, whether directly by the road, or through the organization of auxiliary companies?

A. To the best of my knowledge, they were always built directly by the road.

Q. That is the best of your recollection?

A. Yes; I feel quite certain of it.

Q. And the money paid directly out of the treasury of the road?

A. Yes.

Q. And built by the road itself?

A. Built by the road itself. What I meant to convey was, that a compact or large holding in a railroad like the Illinois Central, where the stock is very much scattered and hard to get, and can only be accumulated very slowly and cautiously, that such a compact holding has a value of its own over and above the market value, and that from what I knew at the time and know now as to the in-2031 tentions of theirs in regard to Illinois Central, I have no doubt we could have disposed of our stock if we had attempted it, and if we had entered negotiations and played our hand at a higher price than we gave it to the Union Pacific for. The instance I have just mentioned, and I might mention as an instance, although we did not feel free in that case, I might mention as an instance the Southern Pacific acquisition, which of course, immediately upon getting together a compact block like $75,000,000, acquired very much higher value than it has as it was held formerly, as market stock. Compact holdings are always worth more than scattered holdings.

Commissioner CLEMENTS. Why are they?

WITNESS. Because they are very difficult to accumulate. It takes a long time, and takes——

Commissioner CLEMENTS. Well, for what purposes are they made more valuable and more desirable than small holdings?

WITNESS. It takes a long time, and takes more skill, and large experience, and a great deal of money and effort to accumulate a compact holding of stock of any property, and if a railroad wishes to invest in a compact holding in a property, that would naturally put a higher value on it.

Commissioner CLEMENTS. That would commend itself to one railroad that wanted to obtain control of another railroad. That is the principal reason, is it not, why a large block like that, that approaches control, would be of more value than stock in smaller quantities?

WITNESS. To other railroads or to groups of individuals acting together.

2032 Commissioner CLEMENTS. You say you were not quite so free in regard to the Southern Pacific. That is, I understand by that, that you were under some sort of obligation to let the Union Pacific have it at the price at which you did.

WITNESS. Yes, we felt morally committed to turn it over to them at cost, less a commission to ourselves.

Commissioner CLEMENTS. In regard to the Northern Pacific and Illinois Central, do we understand you to say, and still adhere to it, that you were absolutely free from any contract or obligation, moral or otherwise, and that you could sell it to one person, as well as to another?

WITNESS. In the case of the Northern Pacific, we felt equally morally compelled to give the Union Pacific every opportunity, the first opportunity and an opportunity to buy it at practically what it cost us.

Commissioner CLEMENTS. Why did you have that feeling?

WITNESS. Because at that time we were directors of the Union Pacific, and we naturally had to maintain due allegiance to them, and we felt that every opportunity we could consistently give to any railroad must first be given to the Union Pacific. Secondly, because in starting on our Northern Pacific purchases, we had it in mind that we would and should offer it to the Union Pacific. Mr. Harriman had to a certain extent encouraged us in the start of those purchases and thought it should be a good thing to do it, and we felt morally bound to offer it to the Union Pacific. But in the Illinois Central we were absolutely free.

Commissioner CLEMENTS. In the Northern Pacific case you were to a certain extent on both sides of the question?

2033 WITNESS. To a certain extent, although we did not vote on the matter when it came before the Union Pacific Board.

Commissioner CLEMENTS. Well, that was a mere matter of form; there were enough votes without yours, and you approved it. You co-operated with the others, didn't you?

WITNESS. But those boards might have been unfavorable, and we might have had that stock left on our hands.

Commissioner CLEMENTS. But as a matter of fact there was no such difficulty?

WITNESS. No, and in fact the Union Pacific made over $60,000,000 out of it.

Commissioner CLEMENTS. You say in that way you were under no obligation to let the Union Pacific have it for what you paid for it.

WITNESS. Yes.

Commissioner CLEMENTS. And to that extent you modify what you said before about it.

WITNESS. Yes.

Commissioner CLEMENTS. And in the case of the Southern Pacific you were under certain obligations?

WITNESS. In both cases, a moral obligation.

Commissioner CLEMENTS. And you now say it was only in the case of the Illinois Central that you were absolutely free from any obligation, and were free to obtain the highest price you could from anybody?

WITNESS. If you put it absolute obligation, yes.

Commissioner CLEMENTS. Well, take out the word "absolute." What inducement was there in that case?

2034 WITNESS. In the case of the Illinois Central none whatever. Mr. Harriman came to me and wished to obtain our stock, and thought that the Union Pacific ought to have first choice, and we simply thought that we should be fair and liberal when we sold it to him.

Commissioner CLEMENTS. So in all those matters that is the only one in which your foregoing this greater profit that you could have made—and which is rather an unusual thing for banks to do, where they are simply banks, pure and simple and are not railroading, as you say your house is not doing now——

WITNESS. I don't believe that. I think that any bank which has been for years connected with a railroad and practically stood by it at its birth and helped it, and has great pride in its development, and has all along done all he could in an official capacity to help it, I think every such banker would give any such railroad in all cases the first choice, and would restrict his profits to what he considers a fair basis.

Commissioner CLEMENTS. Ordinarily, he would give it first choice, and I can see there might be good reasons why that you should sell for less to one man than to another, and we are trying to find what those reasons were.

WITNESS. I think he would go beyond that; I think a banker bearing such relations to a company as we had to the Union Pacific, and having had such transactions with it, I think he would go further and would decline to make large profits out of it. I know he would.

Commissioner CLEMENTS. In all these three matters, the last one you spoke of, the Illinois Central is the only one in which you 2035 were influenced by pure love and affection to foregoing your own profits?

WITNESS. In all of them, I don't think love and affection are the proper words, but I think loyalty and proper allegiance and pride and a proper feeling of delicacy, not to make money out of a corporation where we had the relations we had to Union Pacific—I think those are the motives.

The CHAIRMAN. Do I understand that all the stock of the Southern Pacific which has been acquired by the Union Pacific was procured from and through your firm?

WITNESS. All of it.

The CHAIRMAN. And amounting in the aggregate to how many shares?

WITNESS. Amounting in the aggregate to $90,000,000, excepting the preferred stock, which was directly subscribed by the Union Pacific as a stockholder.

The CHAIRMAN. I do not recall the detail which has already appeared, but how many shares of common stock had been acquired?

WITNESS. $90,000,000 par value.

The CHAIRMAN. And the par value was $50?

WITNESS. $100 a share.

The CHAIRMAN. The Southern Pacific?

WITNESS. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. At some time the Union Pacific issued $100,000,000 of bonds?

WITNESS. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. In order to pay for this Southern Pacific stock and for other purposes?

2036 WITNESS. Yes.

COPY BOUND C
COPY BOUND

The CHAIRMAN. If I recollect, you first arranged to float $40,000,000 of those bonds?

WITNESS. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. That $40,000,000 was offered to all the stockholders of the Union Pacific at par?

WITNESS. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. And about $25,000,000, as you recollect was in fact taken by stockholders other than yourself?

WITNESS. It may have been more or may have been less.

The CHAIRMAN. What commission did you get for selling that $40,000,000?

WITNESS. We undertook to underwrite that $40,000,000——

The CHAIRMAN. And you did underwrite it?

WITNESS. Yes—and no, the stockholders underwrote it, of course, and sixty days intervened before the issue could be issued to the stockholders——

The CHAIRMAN. Never mind about that. How much did you get, in fact, for underwriting the $40,000,000?

WITNESS. We did in fact get a commission of 5 per cent for underwriting the $40,000,000 of bonds.

The CHAIRMAN. So you had 5 per cent——

WITNESS. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. On the $25,000,000 which was taken by the other stockholders?

WITNESS. We had 5 per cent on the whole $40,000,000, which 2037 was only fair. We guaranteed the company that it would get its $40,000,000 for which we received this commission.

The CHAIRMAN. What was there about 5 per cent allowed to the syndicate that bought the bonds?

WITNESS. I say out of the 5 per cent which we received, we gave the syndicate one-half, and one-half we kept for ourselves.

The CHAIRMAN. So when you speak of a 5 per cent., that includes the 2½ per cent. paid directly to your firm?

WITNESS. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. And 2½ per cent paid to the purchaser of the bonds, or the syndicate which purchased the bonds, of which your firm was a member?

WITNESS. Yes, that is right.

The CHAIRMAN. And what had you to do, and what was your compensation, in floating the other $60,000,000?

WITNESS. The other $60,000,000 we had to take practically alone and unaided at that time——

The CHAIRMAN. I was simply asking you——

WITNESS. I am getting to the circumstances of the case. The Northern Pacific transactions at that time necessarily had to be handled with great secrecy. It could not be allowed to come out until it was ready to come out, and the company needed this money, $60,000,000, to pay for it. We could not even have formed a syndicate, because that would attract attention. We had to take the whole responsibility alone and unaided, of guaranteeing to the company $60,000,000 at once——

CLOSE IN CENTER

The CHAIRMAN. I am not asking you about your reasons or questioning the reasonableness of your compensation. I just wanted to know how much in fact you got.

WITNESS. The company paid us the same commission as we 2038 got before, that is, paid 5 per cent on the $60,000,000 which we guaranteed to furnish.

The CHAIRMAN. And which you had a perfect right to divide with those to whom you sold the bonds?

WITNESS. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. So then, the 5 per cent, or $5,000,000 in round numbers, was received by you and those associated with you?

WITNESS. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. For selling $100,000,000 of bonds?

WITNESS. Yes, the $100,000,000 of a new and untried issue of bonds.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Complainant now offers in evidence the following testimony, given by the defendant, Otto H. Kahn, before the Interstate Commerce Commission, at New York, February 27, 1907, as a declaration of said Kahn with reference to a matter which is involved in the issues raised in the pleadings herein, that is, an admission as to the effect in dominating or controlling a railroad corporation of the ownership of thirty per cent of its stock being in one individual or corporation:

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Then you desire the record to show that you sold this Illinois Central stock (amounting to about 29 or 30 per cent of the total outstanding Illinois Central stock), at a loss to yourselves of above two million and a half dollars, below what you could have obtained from some other person whose name you have declined to 2039 disclose, and you let the Union Pacific have it because of your loyalty and affection for that road?

A. I mean to say that the control of what practically amounts to a dominating interest in Illinois Central was worth and could have been made worth to others, 200.

Q. What others?

A. That I don't think it is my business to state.

Q. I want to ask you one other question about the Illinois Central. You considered, did you, when you sold this 105,000 shares, and these other gentlemen sold the 90,000 shares, to the Union Pacific, that that gave the Union Pacific a dominating interest in the Illinois Central?

A. I thought it gave them an interest, which, if it wanted to, would practically amount to a dominating interest, yes.

Q. What you mean by that is this, considering the fact that at stockholders' meetings of a corporation like the Illinois Central, it is never possible to get a full vote.

A. Yes.

Q. And in consideration of the fact that the management can get any proxies, through brokers and others, anyone owning thirty per cent of the stock as the Union Pacific now does, is in a position to control the election?

A. Unless——

Q. Under ordinary, normal conditions?

A. Well, yes; if he can count upon the entire support or neutral attitude of the remaining seventy per cent, if there is nothing to put that remaining seventy per cent into an attitude where they will combine against them.

Q. I understand.

A. Naturally, I think you are right.

Q. Taking things as they ordinarily go, anyone who has thirty per cent of the stock of a large railroad corporation, has control for all practical purposes, in the absence of a fight, or an 2040 organized effort to discharge him.

A. In the absence of any reason which would cause the remaining seventy percent to organize to actively oppose him. Under normal conditions I think you are fairly correct.

Q. So that you figure that the Union Pacific, by the acquisition of this thirty percent was placed in substantially dominating control of the Illinois Central?

A. I wouldn't say control, but I say it would, under ordinary circumstances, give a dominating influence.

Q. What is the difference between them. You mean, dominating influence in the sense that they elect their Board of Directors under ordinary conditions.

A. Under ordinary conditions. That interest would have very substantial influence with the management, and those responsible for the property. Now, dominating influence is not controlled, in my opinion.

Q. But you mean by that, do you not, that having that much stock as a nucleus, in the absence of a very strong organization of the other stockholders, it would always be possible to procure a majority at a stockholders' meeting? Is that what you mean?

Mr. Milburn. Now, your Honor, is that a fact, that is being asked from the witness? Is it evidence as to a fact? Is not that argument? It refers to the position of a railroad with a certain percentage of the stock. It seems to me to be an argument, a legal question.

Mr. Severance. Not at all. It is a matter of experience.

The Chairman. He is asked whether he and those associated with him did not understand that that amount of stock would practically control the Illinois Central?

2041 Mr. Milburn. I did not understand it that way.

The Chairman. I think that is the question.

Mr. Milburn. I did not know what the understanding of it was, but the inquiry, as I understood the questions, was as to a matter of fact. I say that is not a matter of fact, but a matter of argument.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I want to make myself right with Mr. Milburn. I think in the case of a gentleman who is as familiar with corporate transactions, with railroad meetings, as Mr. Kahn is, it is quite proper to ask him, whether in view of his experience, the holder of thirty percent of the stock of a railroad corporation of large dimensions, like this company, is not in a position to control it, as a rule. Under ordinary conditions, I refer to. That is a fact.

The CHAIRMAN. We have understood Mr. Kahn to say that under ordinary circumstances, in the absence of somebody leading the other stockholders, to organize and combine, those who held thirty percent of the stock would ordinarily control an election?

Mr. SEVERANCE. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. I suppose that would be particularly true, Mr. Kahn, where the stock was a good deal scattered, where there was a large number of stockholders.

WITNESS. I don't think I would like to say "control an election," but I would say "exercise a dominating influence," and it would certainly be more so in the case where the stock is very much scattered.

Q. The Illinois Central was scattered?

A. Yes.

Q. They have a great number of stockholders through the west, have they not?

A. Yes, sir.

2042 Q. People with small holdings?

A. Yes.

Mr. LOVETT. In order to dispense with the necessity for proof that Mr. Kahn testified as above set forth, the defendants admit that he did so testify, but that all defendants, except Otto H. Kahn, object to such testimony upon the ground that it was not given in any suit or proceeding to which they were parties, and that it is hearsay and irrelevant.

Mr. SEVERANCE. It is admitted by all parties that, pursuant to a resolution of the Interstate Commerce Commission, passed on the 15th day of November, 1906, at a session thereof in Washington, which resolution reads as follows:

"Whereas the act to regulate commerce provides that the Commission 'shall have authority to inquire into the management of the business of all common carriers subject to the provisions of this act, and shall keep itself informed as to the manner and method in which the same is conducted,' and also requires the Commission 'to execute and enforce the provisions' of said act;

"And whereas it appears to the Commission that consolidations and combinations of carriers subject to the act, and the relations now and heretofore existing between such carriers, including community of interests therein, and the practices and methods of such carriers affecting the movement of interstate commerce, the rates received and facilities furnished therefor should be made the subject of investigation by the Commission to the end that it may be fully informed in respect thereof, and to the further end that it may be ascertained whether such considerations, combinations, relations, community of interests, practices, or methods result in violations of said act or tend to defeat its purposes;

"It is ordered that a proceeding of investigation and inquiry into and concerning the matters above stated be, and the same is hereby, instituted, and that the same be set for hearing at United States court rooms in the city of New York, N. Y., on the 28th day of December, 1906, at 11 o'clock a. m., the further hearing to be continued at such times and places as may be required."

the Commission was engaged in taking testimony at the City of New York on the 27th day of February, 1907, and that the said testimony of Otto H. Kahn was given under oath at said hearing 2043 and that said Kahn and the defendants Union Pacific Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, and Edward H. Harriman were each represented by counsel before the Commission at the time said testimony was given, and that said counsel took part in the proceedings before said Commission, this stipulation being made subject to the objection on the part of the defendants, and each of them, that the facts therein stated are immaterial.

An adjournment was then taken until the afternoon of Tuesday, January 19, 1909, at 2 o'clock.

ROOM 508, CUSTOM HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY,
Tuesday, January 19, 1909, 2 P. M.

By consent of parties, a further adjournment was taken until the morning of Monday, January 25, 1909, at 10.30 A. M., at Room 511, Federal Building, Pittsburg, Pa.

2044 ROOM 511, FEDERAL BUILDING, PITTSBURG, PA.,
Monday, January 25, 1909, 10:30 A. M.

Present: The Special Examiner, Hon. Sylvester G. Williams, and Mr. G. E. Husted.

The EXAMINER. Are you ready to proceed, gentlemen?

Mr. HUSTED. Mr. Examiner, I wish to announce that Mr. Severance, the leading counsel for the Government, is unable to be here this morning. Mrs. Severance was on board the vessel "Republic," which was in a collision outside of New York Harbor, and at last account the passengers had not yet reached New York, and, of course, Mr. Severance has not been able to leave. Judge Lovett, counsel for the defendant, has been advised, and I understand there is no objection to an adjournment until to-morrow morning at this hour. I therefore ask that such an adjournment be taken and the witnesses be excused until that time. I will also state that Judge Buffington has kindly offered us the use of his court room, which is a much better room for our purposes than this, and I therefore ask that the adjournment when taken be to that room, to-morrow morning.

The EXAMINER. The number of that room is 312, is it?

Mr. HUSTED. The number is 312, yes, sir.

The EXAMINER. We will take an adjournment until 10:30 to-morrow morning, to room 312, the Circuit Court room in this building. All witnesses who have been subpoenaed for this morning will return to-morrow morning at 10:30, at the room designated, without further notice. You will be excused until that time.

The hearing was accordingly adjourned until January 26, 1909, at 10:30 A. M.

2045 ROOM 312 FEDERAL BUILDING, PITTSBURG, PENN.,
Tuesday, January 26, 1909, 10:30 A. M.

Present: The Special Examiner, Hon. Sylvester G. Williams, and Mr. Husted.

The EXAMINER. Mr. Husted, have you some statement to make?

Mr. HUSTED. Yes, sir. Mr. Examiner, I have to state that Mr. Severance is not here this morning. He has been unable to leave New York because of Mrs. Severance being in the collision of the "Republic." I had a telegram from him, in which he states that he and Judge Lovett had agreed to an adjournment until to-morrow morning at this hour. Under the circumstances I wish to ask that such an adjournment be taken and the witnesses be excused until to-morrow morning, at this place.

The EXAMINER. Counsel will leave New York to-night?

Mr. HUSTED. Will leave New York to-night, yes, sir.

The EXAMINER. Very well. Under the circumstances we will take an adjournment until to-morrow morning at 10:30 o'clock, the hearing to be resumed in this room.

I would say to the witnesses present that, while it may be a matter of considerable inconvenience and disappointment to you who have responded to the subpoenas to be under the necessity of returning, the occasion is one of those caused by extraordinary matters which could not be avoided by counsel, and it is to be trusted that you will endure this disappointment. It will be necessary for you to return to-morrow morning at 10:30 o'clock, at which time the case will 2046 be taken up for hearing.

Mr. B. H. THOMPSON (a witness). I would like to say to you that it puts the witnesses at a very great disadvantage to come around here. Now, there are several of them who have to go to Chicago to-night. How will you take the witness' testimony?

The EXAMINER. It will be necessary for the witnesses to return. They are under the subpoena of the court, you know.

Mr. THOMPSON. I know; that is all right; but then we have got business to transact, and it is an outrage on the part of the business people to have the postponement right along.

The EXAMINER. Just a moment, sir. I have already expressed myself upon that subject and said all that there is to be said.

Mr. THOMPSON. I believe you, too; but, at the same time, I want to express my views.

The EXAMINER. It is very unfortunate, sir; but you will understand that it is not through any fault of counsel that the accident occurred.

Mr. THOMPSON. I know that; but then the Government has plenty of counsel to take the testimony. You can not controvert that.

The EXAMINER. No. We will accept your remarks in the spirit in which they are intended, and will ask you to return to-morrow morning at 10:30.

Mr. THOMPSON. I do think, with all due respect to the court, that at the same time the counsel and the Government must 2047 remember one thing—that business people in Pittsburg have something to do besides attending court.

The EXAMINER. I think, sir, from my remarks you will understand that I appreciate that.

Mr. THOMPSON. I believe that, too. I want you to distinctly understand how I feel if I leave here to-night to go to Chicago.

The EXAMINER. Of course the witnesses must understand that they are under subpoena and it will be necessary for them to return.

Mr. THOMPSON. I realize that, too. But you can not expect a man to be subpoenaed on the 25th and stay here for three or four days to await the convenience of the court. We have other business to transact besides the court's.

The EXAMINER. Unfortunate as it may seem, you will understand, of course, that it will be necessary to respect the orders of the court.

Mr. THOMPSON. I understand that, too, with all due respect to the court. But, as I said before, we have special business to attend to besides the court's business.

The EXAMINER. For which we are very sorry indeed, sir.

Mr. THOMPSON. As I understand, we are supposed to be here to-morrow morning at 10:30?

The EXAMINER. To-morrow morning at 10:30, yes.

Mr. THOMPSON. All right, sir.

Adjourned until Wednesday, January 27, 1909, at 10:30 A. M.

2048 CIRCUIT COURT ROOM, PITTSBURG, PA.,
Wednesday, January 27, 1909, 10:30 A. M.

The hearing was resumed pursuant to adjournment before the Special Examiner, Hon. Sylvester G. Williams, at the above time and place.

Present: On behalf of the Complainant: Mr. C. A. Severance, Mr. G. E. Husted. On behalf of the Defendants: Mr. R. S. Lovett, Mr. D. T. Watson.

C. O. JOHNSON,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Johnson, where do you live?
A. Pittsburg.
Q. What is your business?
A. Traffic manager of the H. G. Heinz Company.
Q. How long have you been in that position?
A. A little over three years.
Q. What is the business of the H. G. Heinz Company? Of course, I know, but I want the record to show.
A. Manufacturers of table sauces, catsups, pickles; 57 varieties.
Q. Still making 57 varieties, are you?
A. We are making more than that, sir.
Q. To what part of the country do you send traffic?
2049 A. To all parts of the United States; all parts of the world.
Q. Do you ship to the Pacific coast?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Over what lines is your business routed, and has it been routed, since you have been here, to Pacific coast points?
A. We use nearly all of the lines—Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Santa Fe, Rock Island, Northern Pacific, Great Northern, Canadian Pacific.
Q. Are you brought in contact with freight solicitors?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who represents the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific here?
A. Mr. Herring.
Q. Has he employees under him?
A. I beg pardon?
Q. Has he assistants under him?
A. I understand he has, yes, sir.
Q. Do they call on you?
A. I do not know that they do. Mr. Herring is——
Q. Does Mr. Herring call on you?
A. Mr. Herring calls on me, yes.
Q. For what purpose?
A. Soliciting business for his lines.
Q. For which lines?
A. For the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.
Q. Does he solicit for one as against the other, or how does he solicit the business? Take the coast business, the transcontinental business.
A. I do not know that he has ever——
Q. Does he make any endeavor to route it either one way or the other, I mean?

A. No; never in our case—that is, so far as the distinction between the Southern Pacific lines is concerned.

2050 Q. Yes; that is what I mean.

A. No.

Q. What was your business before you came to Pittsburg?

A. I was assistant general freight agent of the Chicago Great Western Railway; resident in Chicago.

Q. And previous to that, Mr. Johnson?

A. Previous to that I was general agent and superintendent of terminals of the same road, at Kansas City, Missouri.

Q. And before that?

A. General agent of the same line; resident at San Francisco.

Q. How long ago were you at San Francisco?

A. Prior to 8 years ago.

Q. And for how long?

A. About two years and a half in San Francisco.

Q. As general agent of this road out there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before that what were you doing?

A. I was general superintendent of the Pacific Coast Railway Company.

Q. Where does that run?

A. From Port Harford to Los Olivos, in California.

Q. During the time you were living in San Francisco was any traffic moved from the east into San Francisco by boat lines?

A. Yes.

Q. What route?

A. In connection with the Canadian Pacific, via Vancouver and the Pacific Coast Steamship Company's line, from Tacoma and Seattle, in connection with the Northern Pacific and the Pacific Coast Steamship Company's line.

Q. What lines from the South? Panama route?

A. And the Panama route, Pacific coast.

2051 Q. How was the Panama route made up?

A. It was made up of shipments of the Pacific Mail and the Isthmus of Panama Railway.

Q. The Isthmus of Panama Railway had their own ships to New York, on the east, had they?

A. On the eastern side?

Q. Yes.

A. I am not familiar with that.

Q. You do not know. Was any traffic moved to California in those days around the Horn or through the Straits of Magellan?

A. Yes; I understand there was.

Q. At the time you were living in San Francisco, which you say was prior to eight years ago, did the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific maintain separate organizations for soliciting business to the east?

A. Yes.

Q. In connection with which one did you work chiefly?

A. With the line via Ogden, in order to connect with our line either at Kansas City or St. Joseph, Missouri.

Q. Was the Union Pacific agency working that line exclusively?

A. The Union Pacific?

Q. Yes.

A. So far as I knew. I never knew of their working any other line.

Q. You had some experience in soliciting traffic, and you are having some experience now in having traffic solicited. What are the principal efforts that are put forth, and what are the advantages that are offered by freight solicitors, in endeavoring to get business generally?

A. The expediting of shipments; prompt care of the same; tracing, in case of delays; advising dates of delivery.

2052 Q. Is anything done in reference to claims for damages?

A. Yes. The prompt settlement of claims is a very important item.

Q. There is no competition now in rates, is there?

A. None that I know of, sir.

Q. So that the competition is otherwise than in rates?

A. Yes.

Q. Does your business move all-rail from here over these various lines that you have mentioned, or do you send some by the Morgan line?

A. To the California coast?

Q. To the coast, yes.

A. We forward only all-rail.

Q. What is your reason for preferring all-rail?

A. The question of the breaking of bulk, and despatch.

Q. And that is a matter of quicker service for you?

A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. From what point do you ship now, Mr. Johnson?

A. We have a number of factories all through the United States; Pittsburg being the principal one.

Q. But your shipments to the Pacific coast, are they principally from Pittsburg?

A. Principally from Pittsburg.

Q. You say that you are solicited by Mr. Herring as the representative of both the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does he indicate any preference as to routes?

A. Not that I know of, sir. I do not remember of his ever having done so.

2053 Q. When you ship over the lines that he represents, which way does the traffic move out of Pittsburg?

A. Out of Pittsburg?

Q. Yes.

A. We use various lines out of Pittsburg; via the Chicago route; sometimes via St. Louis. It is according to what line we want to route to beyond either of those points.

Q. The Union Pacific has no lines east of the Missouri River, has it?

A. None that I know of, sir.

Q. And the Southern Pacific has none east or north of New Orleans?

A. None that I know of.

Q. And your shipments move over other lines not controlled by either of those companies, either to New Orleans or the Missouri River, do they not?

A. That is, east of their eastern termini?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you name some of the principal lines over which your traffic moves from Pittsburg and other points to a connection with the Union Pacific or Southern Pacific?

A. The Baltimore & Ohio——

Q. At what point?

A. From Pittsburg. Speaking of Pittsburg shipments?

Q. Yes.

A. The Baltimore & Ohio to Chicago; and various lines between Chicago and the Missouri River—for instance, the Northwestern, Milwaukee, Rock Island, Illinois Central, Great Western——

Q. Burlington?

A. And Burlington. There are several lines in there—to Omaha. The Union Pacific from there to Ogden; and the Southern 2054 Pacific from there to the Pacific Coast. Or, we may use the lines via Chicago to Kansas City, and give to lines there that can deliver to the Southern Pacific at Ogden.

Q. There are also the Pennsylvania lines out of Pittsburg, too?

A. The Pennsylvania lines. The Pittsburg & Lake Erie, in connection with the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern.

Q. Then the lines to New Orleans.

A. We never use that route, sir, on account of the time.

Q. Then when you ship via the Southern Pacific, where do you reach the Southern Pacific lines? At El Paso?

A. At El Paso, if it were for Southern California. We rarely use that route. We use chiefly the Southern Pacific in connection with the middle California business, delivering to them at Ogden.

Q. You do not use the New Orleans route at all, I believe?

A. We do not use that route at all.

Q. Have these lines that you use in reaching the Missouri River solicitors in this territory?

A. They have.

Q. All of those that you have named have solicitors here, have they?

A. They have.

Q. And they solicit your business?

A. They do.

Q. And all shipments that you send by way of the Union Pacific pass also over the Southern Pacific, do they not, from Ogden, to the California points?

A. Going to California points, yes; that is, unless it were to Southern California; then we would deliver to the San Pedro line at Salt Lake City.

2055 Q. But all shipments to California, that pass over the Union Pacific, go either over the Southern Pacific or the San Pedro line?

A. Yes.

Q. When you were located on the Pacific coast, soliciting for the Chicago Great Western, I believe you stated that you worked via the Ogden Route?

A. Yes.

Q. That is, the Southern Pacific from California to Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. And then either the Union Pacific or Rio Grande east of that point?

A. Yes.

Q. So, in either event, whichever way your traffic moves to California (unless it goes by way of the Atchison), it must pass over some Southern Pacific line, must it not, or the San Pedro?

A. Yes.

Q. You spoke of some water transportation from Puget Sound and Portland to California. You mentioned in that connection the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, I believe.

A. Yes.

Q. The volume of traffic moving from the east that way was not very large, was it?

A. The volume was quite large during the time of the differential in connection with the Canadian Pacific via Vancouver.

Q. Yes, at the time the Canadian Pacific was making the fight for the differential there was considerable traffic moved that way?

A. Yes.

Q. But before and after that time the volume was very small, was it not?

A. I don't remember the conditions before or after, because at the time I was working for the Great Western Railway in San Francisco, the differential was on, my recollection is, all the time.

2056 Q. Do you have personal knowledge of that situation?

A. As to what?

Q. As to the volume of the traffic that moved that way.

A. No, except so far as it might be in connection with the business over our own line. I know that a great deal of dead freight was routed that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I didn't hear that.

WITNESS. A great deal of dead freight, that is, freight on which it was not necessary to have particularly good time, the difference in rate justifying the using of the differential route.

Q. How would your line handle that?

A. From Chicago to Minnesota Transfer.

Q. Do you know anything about the volume of that?

A. Would I have to speak comparatively, or just guess at the number of cars?

Q. In your own way, so as to convey a correct idea of it.

A. Yes, I have known of, for instance, lots of four or five hundred cars of certain commodities.

Q. What commodities?

A. Tin-plate, for instance.

Q. That would move which way?

A. In connection with the Canadian Pacific via Vancouver and the Pacific Coast Steamship Company.

Q. Wasn't that only during the period when the differential fight was on?

A. I am not familiar with the conditions before or after, because the differential was in effect all the time that I represented the Great Western Railway there, if I am correct.

2057 Q. How long was that?

A. About two years and a half.

Q. Do you mean that there were lots of five hundred cars moving practically at one time, or a single lot, or do you mean——

A. No, I mean during the season. Certain commodities have certain seasons in which to move, and we draw the comparison between seasons.

Q. Take it as an average, during the time you were there, do you think it would average ten cars a month?

A. In connection with the Canadian Pacific?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, yes. I would say a good deal more than that.

Q. Can you approximate it?

A. At a rough guess I would say 50 to 60 cars a month.

Q. During the entire period, or a portion of it?

A. I would say during the entire period.

Q. And that was what you term dead freight?

A. Principally dead freight, yes.

Q. Where the time was not of importance?

A. Yes.

Q. During what period was this? You spoke of a period of two years and a half that you were there.

A. My recollection is that it was prior to 1901; 1900 to 1901. I am not positive as to that.

Q. Can you not mention the years? "Prior to 1901" is a good long time.

A. By that I mean ending with 1901 or 1900. My recollection is that I have been away from California seven or eight years—say eight years; so the period to which I have reference would end, then, with 1901.

2058 Q. You spoke of some of the duties of soliciting agents of railroad lines. Is it not also a very important duty of representatives, commercial agents of railroad lines, to work with connecting lines?

A. Very important; very important.

Q. Where the traffic originates in this territory, for instance, the importance of working with connecting lines is a very important duty, is it not?

A. Very.

Q. Wouldn't you say that it was about the most important duty of the soliciting agent, generally?

A. Working with——

Q. With connecting lines on which traffic originates.

A. No, it would seem to me that the principal duty of the representative would be to solicit business for his own lines, retaining a neutral position so far as he possibly could; then after that, would come the importance of working in connection with connecting lines.

Q. In securing traffic for his own line, is not the cooperation of the line on which the traffic originates of vast importance?

A. Very important; very important.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Judge Lovett brought out the fact that there were very considerable shipments by Vancouver during the time there was a differential in by the Canadian Pacific, and you mentioned 50 or 60 cars a month. What did you mean by that—that 50 or 60 cars moved over the Great Western in connection with these other lines, or 50 or 60 cars all together?

2059 A. I would mean that the movement over our line (the Great Western line) in connection with the Canadian Pacific, would average from 50 to 60 cars per month.

Q. Well, you did not state that. That is what I was trying to bring out—whether you meant over your line.

A. Yes.

Q. Was traffic moving over the other lines from Chicago to St. Paul in the same way?

A. Yes.

Q. So this 50 or 60 cars a month was merely the traffic that went over one of the lines?

A. The Great Western Railway.

Q. What lines are there between St. Paul and Chicago that participate in the business between those points?

A. The C., M. & St. P.; the C., B. & Q.—I don't think the Rock Island then had its Minnesota Transfer connection——

Q. Of course I am addressing my question to that time.

A. ——the Wisconsin Central, the Iowa Central in connection with the M. & St. L.; the Chicago & North Western, and the Chicago Great Western.

Q. This traffic was delivered, at the Minnesota Transfer, to the Soo, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Which is a Canadian Pacific line?

A. Yes.

Q. And then moved from there into Canada and Vancouver, and by the long steamship line, down to San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Q. What would be the comparative distance that way, from Chicago, as nearly as you can estimate it, as compared with the line to Omaha, the Union Pacific, the Short Line, and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation to Portland and a boat line down from there?

2060 A. As a rough guess, I would say there ought to be a difference of between 800 and 1,000 miles.

Q. In favor of Portland? The Portland line would be shorter?

A. No, the Ogden line.

Q. No—you didn't understand my question. I say what would be the difference between the line which you said this traffic moved over, made up of some line between Chicago and St. Paul, then the Soo and the Canadian Pacific to Vancouver, thence by boat line to San Francisco, as against a line from Chicago to Omaha, and thence by the Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line and Oregon Railroad & Navigation to Portland, and boat from Portland to San Francisco?

A. As a rough guess, I would say between 400 and 500 miles.

Q. That is, the Canadian line is that much longer?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did this traffic of 50 or 60 cars a month, that you were personally familiar with, originate?

A. In Chicago and the territory east.

Q. You were speaking, in answer to Judge Lovett, about the business moving out of San Francisco—solicited out of there. Did the Southern Pacific solicitors solicit business by the Sunset Route out of San Francisco?

A. They had solicitors for both routes.

Q. For both routes?

A. Yes. There were Sunset solicitors and the Ogden route solicitors.

Q. Working separately?

A. Working separately.

Q. Do you recall what that differential over the Canadian Pacific was?

A. No, I do not.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Of course you do not mean to convey the impression that 2061 any traffic for San Francisco originating in the Chicago Great Western territory would ever move by the route you have described—around by way of the Canadian Pacific and the steamships down to San Francisco, at equal and open rates, do you?

A. I do not know why it should, unless through the personality of the solicitor.

Q. Do you think that the personality of the solicitor would take freight that way?

A. Possibly. Possibly there might——

Q. At equal and open rates?

A. There might be some question of settlement of claims, or something of that kind, by which——

Q. What would be the difference in distance and in time, do you think, that way, as against the direct all-rail route?

A. I would say the difference in the distance was 800 to 1,000 miles, and the difference in time five or six days.

Q. Wouldn't it be more than that?

A. I am simply making a rough guess.

Q. Well, you think that the amount that could be controlled even by the personal considerations for the agent, at equal rates would be extremely small—wouldn't it?

A. It would be very small.

Q. You mentioned the settlement of claims. What kind of claims do you mean—lawful claims, valid claims, or——

A. Oh, yes. Of course they are the only claims that are in existence today.

Q. Is there enough difference in claims of that sort to make any substantial difference in the routing of traffic?

A. No, but I know of cases on the coast where a great differ-
2062 ence had arisen between the railway lines and the shippers as to the proper rate to be applied, or the question of weights, or a question of damage—a claim that would hold over for a year or two. Finally the line would say "It is uncertain as to who is right—whether you or we are; now, we will split the difference; we will do that to get the claim settled right away, if you will give us a little business."

Q. Those differences have largely disappeared, have they not, in recent years?

A. Oh yes; they have to-day.

Q. You spoke of this traffic as having originated on the Chicago Great Western, and in that connection mentioned traffic originating on the Burlington, the Rock Island, and others moving around that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE. No, he said originating at Chicago or east, moving over those lines.

Mr. LOVETT. The point I am trying to reach is this: I understood the witness to state that in addition to the 50 or 60 carloads a month about which he testified, there was a traffic of the same character, moving the same way, originating east of Chicago and on the Burlington, Rock Island, and some other lines that he mentioned.

Q. Do you have any personal knowledge of that—as to what was done on the other lines?

A. No personal knowledge except so far as the statement of other people is concerned.

Q. Did the Rock Island, the St. Paul, the North Western, and the Burlington, so far as you know, ever work any business that way as against the all-rail route?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Work it that way?

A. Yes.

2063 Q. As against the Denver and Ogden route?

A. Yes, oh, yes; simply because they would lose the business if they didn't get it, because the differential was in.

Q. The differential was in?

A. Yes.

Q. This business that you speak of, then, moved that way only during the period of the differential?

A. I said I was not familiar with the movement before or after, so I could not say as to that.

Q. So your whole testimony on that point relates to the period when the differential was in existence?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the arbitration of that differential?

A. I do not.

Q. Or the time of it?

A. I do not.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Judge Lovett has gone into the question of distance with you. Do you know of traffic moving to California points, from around Pittsburg here, by rail to New York, then by the Morgan line around the coast of Florida to New Orleans, or Galveston, and thence to the coast over the Sunset Route of the Southern Pacific?

A. I have no personal knowledge of it. I know that the route can be used.

Q. You know that that is a route that can be used?

A. Yes.

Mr. LOVETT. Because of its extraordinary good character.

Q. And that route is somewhat longer than the direct all-rail routes, is it not?

A. I think it would be very much longer. My judgment would be that it would be very much longer.

Q. That route is as much longer than the all-rail routes
2064 from Pittsburg to San Francisco as the Canadian Pacific route is from Chicago around, is it not?

A. Yes, I would say that the route via New York is even longer than the Canadian Pacific route.

Q. Even longer in comparison?

A. That would be my judgment.

Q. Still that is a route that has been very largely used?

A. I understand so.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, in the case of what you call dead freight, like tin-plate, that doesn't have to move in a great hurry, is the matter of distance very important?

A. I presume it depends entirely upon the dates of contract deliveries and the condition of stock at the far end, but we speak of dead freight as against perishable. Speaking comparatively, the dead freight in that case can take some longer time than perishable freight.

Q. Where did that tin-plate originate, do you know?

A. In the territory east of Chicago. There are a number of mills.

By Mr. LOVETT.

Q. Are you familiar with the Sunset Route from New Orleans?

A. To some extent.

Q. Is it not true that they have three or four sailings a week of their own ships, that go right to the docks of the Southern Pacific at New Orleans and Galveston and load this California freight right into the cars and send it through in special train-loads?

A. I don't know as to "special train-loads." I know the facilities for transferring it at Algiers.

Q. And at Galveston?

A. And at Galveston, yes.

2065 Q. Don't you know that they are about the best in the country, and that the freight is loaded right into the cars and that they are sent through in solid train-lots?

A. I do not know as to the "solid trains," but I know the facilities for transferring there are very good.

Q. And it is under the same management from New York to destination in California?

A. I understand so.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. It is that excellent service that can be performed and could be performed from the time the Morgan line was established, that enabled the Sunset Route to so successfully compete with the all-rail lines, is it not?

A. That would be my judgment.

Q. And because of that excellence of service, they are able to compete at the same rates?

A. Yes.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. The all-rail lines are soliciting business out of Pittsburg for Pacific coast points just as actively as they ever were, are they not?

A. I was not familiar with the conditions prior to three years ago in Pittsburg.

Q. Well, the Atchison, the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific and these intermediate lines—the Baltimore & Ohio, the Pennsylvania, the North-Western, the St. Paul, and various other lines lying between Pittsburg and the Missouri River, have been very actively soliciting business for the Pacific coast ever since you have been here?

A. They have ever since I have been here, yes.

2066 By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. You say that these various lines are all actively soliciting business. You don't mean by that that the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific at this time are soliciting against each other?

A. No.

Q. Mr. Herring is not competing with himself?

A. Hardly.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. They could not very well solicit against each other, since they use the same line, could they?

A. Not unless he might solicit for the Sunset Route as against the Ogden route.

Q. But in either event it would go over the Southern Pacific, wouldn't it?

A. Certainly.

2067 L. C. BIHLER,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Bihler, where do you live?

A. At Pittsburg.

Q. What is your business?

A. My principal job is that of traffic manager of the Carnegie Steel Company.

Q. How long have you occupied that position?

A. Since January 1, 1904.

Q. Prior to that time what was your business?

A. Also with the Carnegie Steel Company, in the same department, as assistant to the former traffic manager, Mr. McCague.

Q. For how many years have you been in the traffic department of the Carnegie Steel Company?

A. Since the first of April, 1895.

Q. Where are the plants of the Carnegie Steel Company located?

A. In various parts. There are about twenty-nine or thirty, scattered all the way from Columbus, Ohio, on the west to Donora on the east and south.

Q. What place east and south?

A. Donora, Pennsylvania.

Q. How far is that from here?

A. About forty miles.

Q. Does that place take Pittsburg rates, or is it regarded——

A. It is a Pittsburg rate point on long-haul traffic.

Q. Do the Pittsburg rate points take the same rate to the Pacific coast by the way of the Morgan line from New York and the steamship line and the all-rail lines, or is there a difference?

A. I cannot answer that question off-hand; I don't know.

Q. Does traffic move, or has it moved, from Pittsburg common points by way of New York, or does that go all-rail?

2068 A. From our company, all-rail.

Q. And do all these points that you have mentioned, at which the Carnegie Steel Company has plants, beginning at Columbus on the west and going down to this other town in Pennsylvania, take the same rate to the coast?

A. On the commodities that we ship, there is a blanket rate which I believe is the same from each of the plants from which we would ship to the coast.

Q. And has that always been the case, that this blanket rate has been in force?

A. As far as I can recall.

Q. Do you make shipments to the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you, during all the time you have been connected with the company?

A. We have had more or less tenders for the coast, each year since I have been with them.

Q. What part of the coast?

A. Usually the principal cities, ranging from Portland and Seattle down to Los Angeles and Southern California.

Q. How have you divided your business during these years that you have been connected with the Carnegie Steel Company?

A. Arbitrarily; trying to give each road what we considered a fair and equitable share of the traffic.

Q. You have divided it equally between what transcontinental lines?

A. We might not perhaps divide it equally——

Q. I don't mean equally, but fairly.

A. We would divide it between all routes into California—combination routes.

Q. All the combination routes?

A. There are any number of combination routes that can be 2069 worked—take a composite route consisting of seven or eight lines.

Q. You spoke of business into the Puget Sound country as well as into California. How does your traffic move to Puget Sound points?

A. In various ways; some via Ogden and the Oregon Short Line, and via the Great Northern or Northern Pacific. It is divided between the more direct routes.

Q. And as to California points, what lines does it move over, west of the Missouri River?

A. Various routes; some via the Iron Mountain, Texas & Pacific, the El Paso, the Southern Pacific, or via the M. K. & T. and Texas & Pacific via El Paso or via the various roads; there are numerous ones which cross the Rockies, like the Colorado Midland, Denver & Rio Grande, to Salt Lake; some via the Santa Fe; some via the San Pedro route.

Q. I suppose before the San Pedro road was constructed they moved over the routes that then existed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Santa Fe carries some of your traffic?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where do you deliver to the Santa Fe? At Chicago?

A. At various points. We do not always give them the long haul; sometimes the short haul—the tail-end haul.

Q. That is, deliver to them how far west?

A. As far west as Pueblo.

Q. Prior to 1901 do you remember whether the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate soliciting agencies here in Pittsburg?

A. As I recall, they had separate offices.

Q. Who was the head of the Southern Pacific office here?

A. I believe Mr. Herring.

2070 Q. And who was the head of the Union Pacific office, do you remember?

A. F. B. Choate.

Q. Where is Mr. Choate now?

A. To the best of my knowledge he is at Detroit.

Q. Do you remember when the Union Pacific agency in Pittsburg was taken out?

A. The amalgamation?

Q. Yes.

A. I have an indistinct recollection of that time; it is rather far back.

Q. You couldn't give the date?

A. I think it was some time in 1901.

Q. And since that time who has represented the two lines here—the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, since the amalgamation?

A. For a short time after the amalgamation, Mr. Choate; later Mr. Herring—he at present.

Q. During the time that you have been with the traffic department of the Carnegie Steel Company, have you had the pleasure of calls from traffic solicitors?

A. Daily—hourly.

Q. And that applies to the agents of transcontinental as well as other lines?

A. Foreign roads as well as home roads.

Q. Prior to this amalgamation of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific agencies in Pittsburg, were you called upon by those separate agencies or their representatives in soliciting business?

A. We were.

Q. Frequently?

A. Yes.

Q. How was the Southern Pacific at that time endeavoring to route its traffic?

A. For California?

Q. Yes.

A. As I recall it then, they were glad to get it either via the New Orleans gateway or via the Ogden gateway.

2071 Q. In soliciting business did they give any preference one over the other?

A. Not that I recall. They were glad to get it any way that we chose to give it to them.

Q. You don't remember that they were trying to route their business via New Orleans, to get the long haul?

A. I can't state that as a fact from recollection. I know that they solicited business by both gateways.

Q. And you don't remember about that?

A. Not that detail.

Q. You simply remember that they tried to get it both ways?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Union Pacific of course merely tried to get it via Ogden?

A. Via Ogden or via Kansas City, or Omaha and Ogden.

Q. Do you remember of any solicitation of business by the Southern Pacific into Portland, Oregon?

A. Via New Orleans?

Q. Either way.

A. I should say that they solicited Oregon business, but we never gave them any via New Orleans.

Q. That is what I mean. They solicited the Oregon business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Southern Pacific agency solicited the Oregon business?

A. I believe at that time they had a line to Oregon via the coast from San Francisco up, and solicited that among other classes of traffic.

Q. The Union Pacific likewise solicited Oregon business, did it not, in connection with their own sublines—the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation?

A. They did.

Q. How does your Oriental business move, if you have any?

A. Our company itself does not have any at the present time. We sell to the U. S. Steel Products Export Company. They market the foreign material.

2072 Q. Do they route it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you familiar with the way it is routed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way does it move to the Orient?

A. At the present time it moves via the Suez route, via the Atlantic seaboard.

Q. Has it at other times moved the other way?

A. I believe so. Some has moved via the Pacific coast.

Q. Do you remember what steamship lines it moved over from the Pacific coast?

A. The business I have in mind moved, I think, via Tacoma or Portland—part of it—and the steamship line allied to the Great Northern Railway and the Northern Pacific Railway; I think it was the Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Q. That is the Japanese line?

A. The Japanese Mail Steamship Company.

Q. Over what transcontinental lines would that move to the coast?

A. I believe the traffic was divided equally between the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern, as near as I can recall it. It is now some years since. I think it was prior to 1901.

Q. Do you remember of any shipments by San Francisco to the Orient?

A. I don't recall any.

Q. Nor by Portland?

A. The shipments that I have just referred to went via Portland and Seattle both, I think, some of the steamers loading at each port.

Cross-examination, by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. The Union Pacific has no lines east of the Missouri River, has it?

A. No, sir.

2073 Q. Nor the Southern Pacific any east of New Orleans?

A. No rail lines; no.

Q. Well, no lines except the Morgan line of steamers to New York?

A. That is all.

Q. Traffic shipped from this territory to the Pacific coast, going over either the Union Pacific or the Southern Pacific, would be carried about how far by other lines, before reaching the Union Pacific or Southern Pacific?

A. Various distances. Some business we would give to the Union Pacific at the Missouri River; other business we would give them further west; some routed via the Southern Pacific we would give them at New Orleans, although a minimum portion; other proportions via El Paso.

Q. About what is the distance from Pittsburg to Omaha and Kansas City, approximately?

A. About 970 miles to Omaha.

Q. And to New Orleans?

A. The short line distance, about 1,140 miles.

Q. And to Kansas City?

A. About 900 odd miles, depending on which line you choose between the Mississippi and the Missouri.

Q. So that traffic from this territory to either of those connections could be handled by any one of a great many lines, could it not?

A. Yes.

Q. How many routes do you suppose, roughly speaking, are in existence from Pittsburg to the Pacific coast? 40 or 50?

A. I should say that I could figure out 40 lawful routes by which rates are published—combination routes; probably more.

Q. Which have established rates to the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir; all the participating lines concurring in the 2074 California tariff.

Q. Practically all of the carriers interested in either of these routes have solicitors in this territory, haven't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Actively soliciting the business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But ultimately it must go either over the Southern Pacific or the Atchison in order to reach Pacific coast points south of Portland, must it not?

A. With the exception that we might use the San Pedro route.

Q. And the San Pedro was opened when, do you remember? 1905, was it not?

A. I should say about that time.

Q. Prior to that time it had to go over either the Southern Pacific or the Atchison?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Atchison and its connections are actively soliciting business from this territory, are they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are familiar with the location of the lines of the Union Pacific?

A. In a general way.

Q. You know the western terminus is at Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it has no outlet to California except the Southern Pacific or the San Pedro?

A. That is my understanding.

Q. And whatever freight is secured by it from this territory to any point south of Portland must go over the Southern Pacific or San Pedro?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think you said that you had never shipped any freight, so far as you could recall, over the Southern Pacific, to Portland, but that you usually took the shorter lines?

A. That is correct. It was not a satisfactory route.

Q. You never shipped any to California points by way of 2075 Portland, either, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever know of any shipped that way?

A. I am not familiar with the business of the others; I can only speak regarding our own.

Redirect examination, by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Bihler, you testified in answer to Judge Lovett, a moment ago, that the only way traffic could reach the coast south of Portland was over the Southern Pacific or the Atchison. It can also reach the coast, can it not, by boat lines down from Portland or Puget Sound points?

A. It can. I was answering the question on the basis of all-rail.

Q. I supposed you were. But the question was not put that way; it was put generally.

A. I will modify my testimony to that extent, if you will permit me.

Mr. LOVETT. I intended "all-rail," because I know the sea is open the other way.

Mr. SEVERANCE. And the boats are running.

WITNESS. Yes, sir; but we don't use them.

Q. You also stated in answer to Judge Lovett that the Southern Pacific route to Portland was not a satisfactory route. What route do you mean by the "Southern Pacific?" The Sunset?

A. I mean the all-rail route from here to New Orleans and Southern Pacific lines thence to Portland—which is three sides of an oblong, and you only need to go one side.

Q. You don't mean the Ogden route to Portland?

A. No, sir. We gave them business via the Ogden route.

Q. That is what I thought. So that your business into 2076 Portland, in the old days, moved both by the Southern Pacific and by the Oregon Short Line, and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation?

A. As I recall it; yes.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I believe you stated that you never had shipped any by the boat line down from Puget Sound or Portland to California points?
A. Correct.
Q. Even if freight were to go that way, it would reach only the coast cities; it could not reach the interior without going over either the Southern Pacific or the Atchison, could it?
A. That is my understanding.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. There are also boat lines up the river from San Francisco to Sacramento and in that region, are there not, doing a large business?
A. I can not answer from my own knowledge. I have never been out there, and we have never had occasion to use it.
Q. I wondered if you were familiar with the situation—from Judge Lovett's question and your answer.
(No response.)

2077 WILLIAM J. BOGERT

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Bogert, where do you live?
A. Over in Allegheny.
Q. How long have you lived here?
A. Since the 10th of May.
Q. Previous to that where did you live?
A. New York City.
Q. For how many years?
A. All my life.
Q. What business are you in here?
A. I am with the San Pedro road.
Q. That is the road running from Salt Lake City to San Pedro via Los Angeles?
A. Yes.
Q. How long have you been with the San Pedro road?
A. Since then; only since the 10th of May.
Q. Previous to that you say you lived in New York. What was your business in New York?
A. I was with the Chicago & Alton Railroad.
Q. How long?
A. About 21 years.
Q. Were you ever with any other line of road?
A. The Pennsylvania Railroad.
Q. How long?

A. About 23 years.

Q. So you have had a matter of 46 years in the railroad business, have you?

A. Pretty nearly.

Q. Also the time from May to the present. In what capacity were you engaged by the Alton?

A. General Eastern Agent.

Q. What were your duties as General Eastern Agent—soliciting traffic?

A. Yes, sir.

2078 Q. Are you acquainted with Mr. Edwin Hawley?

A. Slightly.

Q. Do you remember when he was the General Eastern Agent of the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he competing with you at that time for business with other lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did Mr. Hawley endeavor to route his traffic?

A. By way of New Orleans.

Q. By boat and rail? or both all-rail and boat and rail?

A. I should say both ways, but principally by boat, I think.

Q. From New York. Do you remember who was the General Eastern Agent of the Union Pacific prior to 1901?

A. In New York City?

Q. Yes.

A. Mr. Tenbroeck.

Q. For how many years did he occupy that position?

A. I think about 20 or 22 years.

Q. Did you know him?

A. Quite well.

Q. What was he trying to do there as General Eastern Agent of the Union Pacific?

A. He tried to work everything by way of Omaha, I should judge, and lines north.

Q. He was trying to route all the business he could to the Coast over the Union Pacific, I suppose, was he not? You mean north of the Sunset Route?

A. I mean north of the Sunset Route.

Q. So that General Hawley and Mr. Tenbroeck were in competition with each other for Coast business?

A. They were.

Q. And for how long a period of time did that extend?

A. Mr. Hawley went there, I think, about 23 or 24 years ago. Prior to that he was with the California Fast Freight Line, you know.

2079 Q. Hawley was?

A. Yes.

Q. Who has represented the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific here since you came here?

A. Mr. Herring.

Q. Do you come in contact with Mr. Herring and his assistants in the solicitation of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How is that?

A. We ask his assistance. We don't need it entirely, you know.

Q. You ask his assistance in routing business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, you ask his assistance as the agent of the Union Pacific?

A. That is all.

Q. And you endeavor to get Mr. Herring to forget for the time being that he is agent of the Southern Pacific?

A. That is the idea.

Q. And simply be agent of the Union Pacific with you; is that right?

A. Well, he acts quite neutral.

Q. He is quite neutral?

A. Yes.

Q. That is, as I understand it, Mr. Herring routes, we will say, Union Pacific business out of here, and he is quite neutral between you and the Southern Pacific beyond Ogden and Salt Lake?

A. I think so.

Q. Who is there here, then, that is looking after the business that Hawley used to try to send by New Orleans and the South?

A. I assume it is being done in Mr. Herring's office.

Q. Oh, that is by Mr. Herring's office. They are not neutral as to that?

A. No; I don't know.

Q. I want to find out, if I can, Mr. Bogert, because you are in the business and sort of associated with these people, just how they 2080 divide themselves up between their different routes. Now who is there that represents the Sunset Route here for business all rail and——

A. I presume the same party that represents the Union Pacific.

Q. And this neutrality which they observe as between the San Pedro and the Southern Pacific applies only to the Southern Pacific-Ogden route?

A. That is all.

Q. Do they also show neutrality as between your route and the Sunset?

A. As far as I know.

Q. They don't try to get business away from you?

A. I don't think so.

Q. What are the duties of soliciting agents, and how do they perform those duties? What do they do to get business?

A. Well, to-day they can't do very much but look after the business they do get.

Q. That is it. That is, they cannot offer reduction of rates?

A. No.

Q. Or rebates or anything of that sort. But what are the elements that aid them in competing with each other for business?

A. I think the shippers like to see as many people in the field as it is possible to get there.

Q. For what purpose?

A. To keep competition rife; to make time.

Q. And insure good facilities—quick time?

A. Yes, sir; make quick time.

Q. Prompt settlement of damages?

A. That is the idea.

Q. And those are the representations that you make to shippers——

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That you will give them good service?

2081 A. Perfectly satisfy them in regard to their claims—settle them right away.

Q. When you were living in New York, prior to 1901, what did you know about the competition for passenger business to the coast?

A. I could not say very much about that.

Q. Were you in the freight business yourself?

A. Principally in the freight business. We had a passenger man in New York then.

Q. You had another man—passenger man?

A. Yes, at that time.

Q. Did the different transcontinental lines maintain passenger departments in New York?

A. I think they did, yes, sir. I know they did.

Q. And what were those passenger agents doing—trying to work business by their lines?

A. I think so, yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Whatever business the Union Pacific secured either in New York when you were located there or from this territory, for the Pacific coast south of Portland, had to go over the Southern Pacific ultimately, had it not, prior to the opening of the San Pedro line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Southern Pacific was the only connection of the Union Pacific for the Pacific coast prior to that time?

A. That was my understanding.

Q. When was the San Pedro line opened for business?

A. I should say about three or four years ago.

Q. About May, 1905, wasn't it?

A. Possibly that time. I don't remember exactly when.

2082 Q. You don't remember the exact date?

A. No.

Q. In this neutrality that was referred to, is it not true that Mr. Herring tries to secure the business either for the Union Pacific or the Southern Pacific by the route that will give them the longest haul? Doesn't he work both the Ogden, the Omaha, and the New Orleans routes, or does he—and the El Paso?

A. I should judge they would be obliged to.

Q. He works all of those routes?

A. Yes.

Q. All of those gateways, does he not?

A. I should judge so, yes, sir.

Q. With his various connections?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He does not attempt to interfere with any business that you control, to divert it from your line, does he?

A. No, sir, he does not.

Q. You understand that the Union Pacific owns a half interest in the San Pedro?

A. I have heard that, but they don't help us any at all.

Q. Do they prefer the Southern Pacific?

A. I can't say about that.

Q. There are a great many lines that have established rates from this territory to the Pacific Coast, are there not?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Neither the Union Pacific nor the Southern Pacific extends east of the Missouri and Mississippi rivers?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. And there are a great many lines between Pittsburg and the Missouri and Mississippi rivers that unite in establishing rates to the Pacific Coast?

A. There are.

2083 Q. All of those lines have solicitors in this territory, have they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Actively soliciting the business?

A. They are.

Q. Has not the service to the Pacific coast been very much improved since 1900?

A. I should say it had.

Q. You understand the railroads have been very much improved, don't you?

A. Yes, sir. Competition has forced that.

Q. Both the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, as well as other lines?

A. And the Santa Fe.

Q. Yes; the Santa Fe. The Santa Fe is a very active competitor for that business, is it not?

A. Very much so.
Q. And its connections east of Chicago and the Missouri river?
A. Yes, sir.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Judge Lovett was asking you about the improvements in the railroads since 1901. Have not all the railroads in the country been very largely built over, since 1901, east as well as west?
A. I assume they have. I did not speak of the re-building of the railroads so much as I did of the fact that competition has forced the time on us all.
Q. Take the railroads east of Chicago. Their ability to handle business quickly and satisfactorily has been largely 2084 increased by expenditures since 1901, has it not?
A. I should judge so.
Q. Take the Pennsylvania road running through this state; they have spent enormous sums since then in bettering their roads, haven't they?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. So the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific have no monopoly on the bettering of railroad facilities since 1901?
A. No, sir.
Q. Judge Lovett called your attention to the fact that the Union Pacific has a half interest in the San Pedro. You said you understood that was the fact.
A. I have heard that; I don't know it to be true.
Q. He brought that out in connection with this neutrality of Mr. Herring. You never heard that the Southern Pacific had any interest in the San Pedro?
A. No, I never did.
Q. So that Mr. Herring's neutrality as the agent of the Southern Pacific would not be produced by any stock ownership?
A. No.
Q. There must be some other explanation of that. You were also asked by counsel if it was not a fact that neither the Union Pacific nor Southern Pacific had any lines east of the Mississippi or Missouri rivers, and you stated that was the fact. You did not intend to testify that the Southern Pacific had no boat line east?
A. No, I did not.
Q. They have a boat line from New York to Galveston that does a very large traffic?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know how often these boats have been in the habit of sailing out of New York?
A. Three or four times a week, possibly.
Q. Good sized boats too, are they not?
A. I should judge so.
2085 Q. For where is the traffic bound that they take out of New York?

A. I should say all the way up the Pacific Coast.

Q. Beginning with their first landing at New Orleans and thence on to the Coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Also take traffic into Colorado common points and Utah common points, do they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In connection with the rail lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Union Pacific also reaches those points in connection with the lines to the east?

A. Slightly; only to a slight extent, I think.

Q. When you were with the Alton, your western terminus was where?

A. Kansas City.

Q. Did you handle business into Colorado common points over the Alton in connection with the Union Pacific?

A. We did.

Q. Both the Union Pacific and your road were actively soliciting that business, were they not?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Did the Alton participate in the carriage of California business when you were connected with it, Mr. Bogert?

A. I beg your pardon? I could not hear what you said.

Q. Did the Alton participate in the carriage of Pacific Coast business during the time you were connected with it?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. As all other lines east of the Mississippi and Missouri rivers did?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know of any other railroads in the country that have spent more or made more improvements on their railroads than the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

2086 A. I think the Pennsylvania has done pretty well.

Q. Since 1901?

A. I do not know what has been done in the west.

Q. You have not been over those lines?

A. No, sir, I have not.

2087 A. B. EWER,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Ewer, where do you live?

A. Pittsburg.

Q. What is your business?

A. General freight agent of the Harbison-Walker Refractories Company.

Q. What do they make?

A. They make fire brick; refractory materials.

Q. Is that a large concern, Mr. Ewer?

A. Well, it is considered so, I believe.

Q. I mean it would be considered large anywhere but in Pittsburg, I suppose?

A. Oh, it would be considered large right in Pittsburg.

Q. And where do you do business?

A. All over the country.

Q. Do you do business at the Pacific coast?

A. Some, yes; not a large amount.

Q. You say you make what? I didn't quite catch it.

A. Fire brick, used in the lining of furnaces and cupolas and smelting—anything that comes in contact with heat.

Q. So it goes into the mining country where the smelters are in the West?

A. Yes.

Q. And California?

A. Well, not so far. More around in through the central section of the country. More to the big steel mills and propositions of that sort.

Q. Prior to your connection with that company what was 2088 your business?

A. Contracting freight agent of the Central States Despatch, in Philadelphia.

Q. Central States Despatch?

A. Yes.

Q. What was that, and who controlled it?

A. That is controlled by the B. & O. and the Philadelphia & Reading and their allied interests.

Q. And to what part of the country did you send freight?

A. All over the United States; Pittsburg and the west; anything based beyond 60 per cent points.

Q. Then how would your freight move to the coast over beyond the Missouri River?

A. Any way we could get it.

Q. And from whom did you solicit that business?

A. If it was controlled by consignees we solicited it through the western lines; if by shippers, from the shipper direct.

Q. Suppose the business was controlled by the shipper in the east; how did you endeavor to route it, or were you impartial between the coast lines?

A. It was a question there of a trade-off. If one man had a pointer, and I had one, we would trade it off. If he would give me a pointer, I would give him one.

Q. That is, it was what one of the traffic men called "reciprocity"?

A. Yes. Swapping pointers, as we call it.

Q. Swapping business?

A. Yes.

Q. How many years were you with that freight line?

A. I really cannot recall, but I think about eight or nine years.

Q. You were actively engaged in soliciting business during that time, were you?

A. Yes.

2089 Q. What classes of traffic?

A. All kinds. My principal business was what is known as package freight. I was put on the street for that purpose.

Q. That was in Philadelphia?

A. Yes; but I did not confine myself to that.

Q. At the time you were soliciting business for that line did the Sunset Route of the Southern Pacific have an agency in Philadelphia?

A. They had.

Q. And how were they trying to route coast business?

A. My recollection is that if they found the business going all-rail they left it alone; if they did not, they would take it any way they could get it.

Q. Did they have agents there working their boat and rail line?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Via New Orleans, or Galveston?

A. That I do not recall. My recollection of that is that it would be more between New York or directly through Chicago.

Q. That is, you do not know where the western terminus of their boat line was—whether it was New Orleans or Galveston?

A. No; I did not pay any attention to it; I did not have any interest in it.

Q. Of course you had no interest in it, because you could not participate in that business.

A. That is it. I did not pay any attention to it.

Q. But they were competing with you? They were trying to get business that you were trying to get, to the coast?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. How was that business that they were able to take that way by their boat line handled out of Philadelphia? Where did 2090 it go—to New York?

A. My recollection is that some times it either went all-rail to New York and sometimes Clyde Line to New York.

Q. But it went to New York?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And there took the Morgan Line ships to the Gulf ports?

A. Yes.

Q. At the present time, occupying the position you do, are you called on at times by freight solicitors?

A. Regularly.

Q. What route to the coast does Mr. Herring work now—if you know him—do you know Mr. Herring?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Does he sometimes call on you?

A. Quite regularly.

Q. And what route is he working to the coast?

A. Any business that comes up he generally says he would be glad to get it anywhere he can get it.

Q. He is not particular, so long as it is over one of the lines that he represents?

A. No, because we generally do not go into it that far. He says, "Have you any business going West?" I say, "Yes. Well, we will give it to you where we can."

Q. And he comes to you that way and tries to get the business?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Representing the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific roads?

A. Yes.

Q. He is a very pleasant gentleman, is he not?

A. He certainly is.

Q. Does any of your freight go to the coast by boat and rail?

A. It is not the kind that could.

Q. That is what I was going to ask you. Why is it that you
2091 have to send it all-rail?

A. Well, we do not like to break bulk; and then it is liable to be chipped in rehandling.

Q. So that with you the matter of shipment all-rail, as against boat and rail, is governed by the character of the stuff to be shipped and the service that can be rendered?

A. Yes.

Q. And in your opinion it is better service to load it into a car and take it off to its destination?

A. Yes. That is the only way that—No, except as far as long-haul business is concerned, that is the only way it does go. We occasionally ship into Cleveland by rail and lake, but very seldom.

Q. Into Cleveland?

A. Yes. Of course not into the territory that you are referring to now.

Q. But you do not use the boat-and-rail to the coast at all?

A. Not at all.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. How far is it necessary for your freight to move before it reaches the Union Pacific or Southern Pacific lines, Mr. Ewer?

A. To the Missouri River, I should say.

Q. About how far?

A. I could not give you the mileage. I never thought of it.

Q. There are a great many carriers engaged in this Pacific coast business between the points of origin and the Missouri River, are there not, Mr. Ewer?

A. A great many of them.

Q. And they all have solicitors?

A. All of them.

Q. Actively working for the business?

A. Very actively.

Q. Both in connection with the Union Pacific, the Southern 2092 Pacific, and the Atchison?

A. All lines.

Q. Whatever business you send to California that goes over the Union Pacific must also go over the Southern Pacific, must it not?

A. I think so.

Q. Or the San Pedro line?

A. Yes. There are no other connections there.

Q. I believe you testified that when you were soliciting freight in Philadelphia for the fast-freight line that you mentioned, the Southern Pacific agents were then working the freight by several different routes, did you not?

A. I did.

2093 JAMES E. HENRY,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Henry, where do you live?

A. My residence is in Butler County, about 32 miles from here; but practically all my time is spent in Pittsburg.

Q. What is your business?

A. Traffic manager for the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company.

Q. How long have you been occupying that position, Mr. Henry?

A. I have been traffic manager for a little over a year.

Q. Previous to that what were you doing?

A. I was in the traffic department of the same company.

Q. For how long?

A. Little over two years.

Q. And previous to that what were you doing?

A. I had been with the Pressed Steel Car Company for about four years.

Q. And previous to that?

A. I was with the American Window Glass Company for two years.

Q. All the time in charge of traffic for these—

A. Working in the traffic department and minor positions.

Q. And then before that were you ever with any railroads?

A. For quite a number of years I was with the Pennsylvania system, in different capacities, from messenger boy, rate clerk, claim clerk, and so forth.

Q. Were you also with the B. & O. for awhile?

A. I was with them for about two years.

Q. In what capacity?

2094 A. I was rate clerk in their commercial freight agent's office.

Q. Then, for quite a good many years last past you have been engaged in one way and another in the railroad service, in the traffic end of the service?

A. Practically since I was a small boy.

Q. Since you were a boy?

A. Yes.

Q. Never had anything to do with operation?

A. No; always in the traffic.

Q. Previous to 1901 do you remember anything about competition here for Pacific coast business between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, previous to the time that Mr. Herring was made the agent of both lines, we will say?

A. Just in a general way.

Q. Do you know how Mr. Herring was at that time endeavoring to route his California business?

A. He took it either via New Orleans or Ogden.

Q. Yes, I understand. But do you know how the business was solicited by the Southern Pacific people? Did they try to get the long haul or the short haul?

A. I judge naturally they would take the long haul; if they could not get that, they took the short haul.

Q. The long haul was via New Orleans, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. The Union Pacific was represented here at that time by whom?

A. A party named Lothrop was, I believe, about that time agent here for some time.

Q. How was Mr. Lothrop trying to route traffic to the coast?

A. Via Kansas City or Omaha.

Q. And the Union Pacific?

A. Yes.

2095 Q. Was the Southern Pacific at that time soliciting Portland business by Sunset Route?

A. My recollection is they did to some extent.

Q. How does the business that you have to route now for the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company move to the coast?

A. For California terminals, via the Union and Southern Pacifics, via the Santa Fe, and via the San Pedro route, in connection with the different lines leading up to those lines.

Q. How does your Portland business go?

A. To a great extent via the Northern Pacific and Great Northern roads. Some via the Union Pacific and O. R. & N.

Q. Do those different transcontinental lines—that is, the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern, the Santa Fe, the Union Pacific—each maintain soliciting agencies here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They call on you and solicit business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you find any competition at the present time between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

A. I do not understand your question exactly.

Q. I say is there any competition in the solicitation of business here at the present time between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

A. Mr. Herring and his assistants solicit freight for each line, and they never intimate to me that they have any preference.

Q. They are not violent, at least, in soliciting against themselves?

A. No, sir.

Q. Is there any traffic moving to the coast by the Lakes?

A. Yes, sir.

2096 Q. In summer?

A. That is, to north coast points we have quite a large movement that way.

Q. How do you send it?

A. Mostly via Cleveland or Erie, in connection with the Mutual Transit; also the Anchor Line; some via Buffalo and the New York Central's boat line in connection with the various rail lines leading west from the Lake terminals.

Q. Where does it go—to Chicago or to Duluth?

A. The large percentage of it goes to Duluth, although occasionally we send cars via Chicago.

Q. Suppose it goes via Duluth; how does it move to the coast?

A. Either Northern Pacific, or Great Northern, or C., St. P., M. & O., and Union Pacific, and their connections.

Q. That is, the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha have a line leading from Duluth down to Omaha?

A. Yes.

Q. Where they turn over business to the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And does that route, made up of the boat lines to Duluth, and the Omaha road to Omaha, then the Union Pacific and its connections, compete with the Northern Pacific and Great Northern into Portland?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your business, I am speaking of?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, from Pittsburg?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How was that during the time that you were with the American Window Glass Company? Did they ship that way at all?

A. I do not recall that we did to any extent. Quite a number of the factories are located out in Indiana, and I do not just recall whether we had a differential from there at that time or not.

2097 Q. This summer lake route has a differential, has it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As against the all-rail lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In fact, the lake route always has a differential?

A. Yes. They would not get the business unless they had—at least not on our class of goods.

Q. That did not apply simply to your class of business, but on all classes of business there is a differential, is there not?

A. I should judge so. Of course, I can only testify as to our own.

Q. Has this company that you are with—the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company—more than one factory?

A. Yes, sir; they have three factories.

Q. Where are they?

A. Pittsburg north side, New Brighton—about thirty miles below the city here, on the Pennsylvania lines—and at Louisville, Kentucky. They also had a large factory at Detroit, Michigan, but it was closed up about a year ago.

Q. What does this company manufacture?

A. All kinds of sanitary goods; bathroom fixtures, principally bathtubs and lavatories, and closets of different kinds.

Q. Could you give any idea of the volume of that business; or as compared with any other companies in that line of business what is its volume?

A. Why, their advertisement says they are the largest manufacturers in the world.

Q. Well, you believe any advertisement displayed by your own company, do you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do your shipments go to all parts of the country?

2098 A. All parts of the world; wherever we can sell goods.

Q. How does your stuff move to the Orient?

A. Different ways. It was moving via Pacific coast points; but lately it is moving via Suez.

Q. When it went via Pacific coast points, how did it move?

A. Our export business, I believe, moved principally Union Pacific, although some of it probably Santa Fe. Some of it did move Santa Fe.

Q. And sailed by boat out of San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never shipped by any other lines on the Pacific except the lines coming to San Francisco?

A. No; we never exported any by the northern ports.

Q. What boat lines, if you remember, took the traffic out of San Francisco?

A. The Pacific Mail and the American Hawaiian Line, I believe.

Q. Do you ship any goods to the coast by the American Line of steamships?

A. No, sir; we do not ship via ocean vessels where we can avoid it—on account of the liability of our goods to be damaged from being handled in and out of the holds of the ship. Most of our goods by way of lake are handled on the decks, and do not go into the holds of the ships.

Q. Then the question that determines you in shipping by all-rail rather than by boat-and-rail is the relative service of the two ways?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I suppose the solicitors that come around and talk to you do not hesitate to speak of that, do they?

A. Oh, no. Of course each man works everything he can to influence business for his line.

2099 Q. And what are the principal inducements that they are able to offer?

A. Superior service.

Q. Or at least the promise of it?

A. Yes.

Q. And if you ship over a certain line and get good service you are apt to continue with that line?

A. Yes, sir; everything else being equal.

Q. Well, in your opinion, that is the largest factor in competition, is it not—the superiority of service?

A. At the present time that is practically the only factor.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Have you ever found any better service to California points than the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific, Mr. Henry?

A. No; I cannot say that I have, to California points.

Q. Have the Louisville & Nashville soliciting agents here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Illinois Central?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Queen & Crescent?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Southern?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They all try to work the California business by way of New Orleans, do they not?

A. Yes, sir. We give them some business that way on account of our friendly feeling toward the representatives here.

Q. The Rock Island has representatives?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Burlington?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the North Western?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The St. Paul?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. And practically all of the lines lying between Pittsburg
2100 and the Missouri and Mississippi rivers have representatives here?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. They all work actively for the business to the Pacific coast?
A. Yes, sir; each man is trying to make a showing for his office.
Q. All business going over the Union Pacific that the Union Pacific gets for the Pacific coast south of Portland has always moved over the Southern Pacific from Ogden, has it not, except that which goes over the San Pedro road? That is to say, the Southern Pacific line from Ogden to the Pacific coast is the only outlet for the Union Pacific on the Pacific coast business south of Portland, is it not?
A. Yes, sir, as far as our business is concerned.
Q. The oriental business that you spoke of, you said, I believe, that most of it went by the Union Pacific?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You mean by the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific?
A. Yes, sir, certainly.
Q. I think you also testified—or I understood you to testify—that even prior to 1901 the Southern Pacific agent here worked both routes—that is, by Ogden and by way of New Orleans and El Paso?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. He never indicated any decided preference for those routes, did he, Mr. Henry? Didn't he take it either way he could get it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Naturally, as you said, taking the long haul where he could get it, and if not, taking the other?
A. Yes. Of course he never missed any business, though, on account of that.

2101 Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. You say that he took it as he could get it. Now, is not this about the fact: that the Southern Pacific agents were acting at that time under the orders of Mr. Hawley in New York (I will reduce him to the ranks and call him "Mr. Hawley"), solicited all the business and tried to get it moved by the long haul via New Orleans, and if they could not get it that way, they were glad to get it by the Ogden route, because they would participate in the haul, rather than to have some other line get it away from them entirely. Was not that about the situation?
A. To a certain extent, yes.
Q. You stated, in answer to Judge Lovett, that you routed some business via New Orleans because of your friendly feeling toward the representatives of some of the lines soliciting that business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is an element that enters into getting business, always, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If the roads are represented by men who are square and agreeable, they get business that way?

A. Yes, sir. The personality of a representative nowadays has considerable influence in securing business; that is, his activity in showing his disposition to do what he can to facilitate your shipments and your business in general, in small ways, which he can within the law.

Q. Yes; that is what I thought.

Recross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You are familiar with the requirements of the Inter-
2102 state Commerce Act and the regulations about publishing tariffs, are you not, Mr. Henry?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Don't you understand that the Union Pacific never could have made a rate to California, south of Portland, prior to the construction of the San Pedro, without the consent of the Southern Pacific? That is correct, is it not?

A. I do not understand how they would have any outlet for their goods all-rail.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. I say I do not understand how they would have any other way of reaching it all-rail.

Q. And the concurrence of the Southern Pacific in that rate was necessary, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. They could route traffic to Portland over their own rails, and from there by boat to San Francisco, without asking the consent of the Southern Pacific, if they were independent of the Southern Pacific, could they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The sea was open to the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they had boats there, had they not?

A. I believe they had; although I do not recollect of using them.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You never knew of them to send any that way, did you, Mr. Henry?

A. Of course, I don't know what they did of their own volition. Any concern I was with did not route in that way.

2103 L. T. FOWLER,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Fowler, where do you live?

A. Pittsburg.

Q. And what is your business?

A. Travelling freight agent for the Merchants & Miners Transportation Company.

Q. Just what is that company, Mr. Fowler?

A. It is a seacoast line running between Baltimore and Savannah, Norfolk, Newport News, running north to Boston, Providence and Fall River. We also have a line operating from Philadelphia to the same points.

Q. Do you work in connection with the rail lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Between here and the coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What class of business do you solicit for that route?

A. All classes.

Q. Well, to what points of destination, I mean?

A. Oh! North—Boston, Fall River and Providence are the only points.

Q. You do not participate in any Pacific coast business?

A. No, sir.

Q. Prior to the time you went with that concern, what road, if any, were you with?

A. How far back do you want me to go?

Q. Start in at the time you went with the Merchants & Miners, and work back. I will tell you when to stop.

A. I went with the Merchants & Miners in November, 1894.

2104 Prior to that I had represented the Union Pacific up to August 15, 1893—from February 1st, 1891.

Q. Where?

A. At Pittsburg. Prior to that time I was with the Union Pacific in Philadelphia, from about February 1st, 1888, up to the time I came to Pittsburg.

Q. Go on.

A. Back prior to that? For eighteen years prior to that I was with the Lehigh Valley.

Q. In what capacity?

A. As local agent at one time, and from that to chief clerk of the general freight agent.

Q. That takes you back to 1870?

A. That takes me back to 1870, yes, sir.

Q. Well, I think that is far enough. During all that time, Mr. Fowler, from 1870 on, you have been connected with the traffic department of railroads?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Exclusively?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That has been your business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For nearly forty years. You say that you were the agent of the Union Pacific in Pittsburg?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From 1891 to 1893?

A. From February 1st, 1891, until August 15th, 1893.

Q. When were the two agencies here consolidated?

A. My recollection is along about 1901. I am not certain about that.

Q. Were you with the Union and the Southern both from 1893?

A. No; I never represented the Southern.

Q. You represented the Union?

A. The Union, yes, sir.

Q. Under the direction of Mr. Herring?

A. No, sir; under the direction——

Mr. LOVETT. You have got the dates mixed.

2105 Mr. SEVERANCE. Oh, 1893. I beg your pardon.

Q. This was 1893; not 1903?

A. Oh, no; 1893.

Q. I was mistaken about the year. So you were with the Union Pacific here from 1891 to 1893, and from 1888 to 1891 you were in Philadelphia with the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I understand. And since 1893 you have been with the Merchants & Miners Transportation Company?

A. With the Merchants & Miners Transportation Company, yes, sir.

Q. At the time that you were with the Union Pacific, what were the conditions as to competition between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific for coast business?

A. Very strong.

Q. How was the Southern Pacific attempting to route its business?

A. Well, naturally they would work for the long haul; but if I would succeed in getting a tip on a shipment, I would, of course, naturally, try to get it for the Union Pacific. In that case, Mr. Herring and I would work very close together.

Q. Yes; because he got the haul from Ogden?

A. Because he got the haul from Ogden.

Q. But the efforts of the Southern Pacific were to get it the other way?

A. Yes, of course; naturally so.

Q. Was business worked from here by way of the Morgan line?

A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. Not from Pittsburg?
A. Not from Pittsburg.
Q. How was it from Philadelphia?
A. It was.

Q. In Philadelphia what was the situation as to competition
2106 between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

A. Very strong indeed. They worked more particularly via New York and Morgan line.
Q. How did the stuff move from Philadelphia to New York?
A. It moved sometimes through the canal and sometimes rail.
Q. And the Morgan line absorbed the haul into New York?
A. The Morgan line, of course, naturally absorbed the haul.
Q. At that time when you were in Philadelphia, then, you were in active competition with them for coast business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. As you were here in Pittsburg?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How about business into Portland?
A. From where?
Q. From here, or from Philadelphia.
A. From here. I never knew the Southern Pacific to solicit any business to Portland, that I know of. I have no recollection of anything of that kind at all.
Q. By that you mean the Sunset Route?
A. By that I mean the Sunset Route, yes, sir.
Q. Did you know them to solicit business by the Ogden route to Portland?
A. By the Ogden route?
Q. Yes.
A. Not that I know of.
Q. How about to the coast from Philadelphia?
A. That, of course, they would naturally work via New Orleans.
Q. Did they solicit Portland business from Philadelphia?
A. Not that I know of.
Q. You do not know about that?
A. I do not know about that, no, sir.
Q. What did you know in 1888 and 1889, along there, when you were agent for the Union Pacific, either at Philadelphia or 2107 here, about the boat line from Portland to San Francisco?

A. At that time, in 1888 and the forepart of 1889, the business moved, to a large extent, for San Francisco via Portland and by boat from Portland down to San Francisco.
Q. That is, the Union Pacific business?
A. The Union Pacific business.
Q. Then, at that time you were actively soliciting business for San Francisco by that route, were you?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you succeed in routing a good deal of business that way?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What class of business?

A. Mostly dry goods.

Q. That was in 1888 and 1889?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you living then; in Philadelphia?

A. In Philadelphia, yes, sir.

Q. And the Sunset Route were actively soliciting that same traffic?

A. Sure thing.

Q. Judge Lovett has asked several of the witnesses if it was not necessary for the Union Pacific to get the consent of the Southern Pacific to make a rate into San Francisco or California points. You did not have to ask the consent of the Southern Pacific to make a rate on that rail and boat line, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. You did not use the Southern Pacific line at all?

A. No, sir, not on that. We used the Southern Pacific on some other traffic.

Q. I understand. But this business I am speaking of that was moved by rail and boat, you did not?

A. No.

Q. Do you know of any competition in rates on Pacific coast business in the old days, some years prior to 1901—well, the time when you represented the Union Pacific, was there any competition in rates to the coast between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

2108

A. In the way of allowing concessions?

Q. Yes.

A. I do not know what the Southern Pacific did. I know I had no authority to do anything of the kind.

Q. Do you remember anything about a consignment of trolley poles shipped to San Francisco from Pittsburg in 1892, when there was some difference about the rate, between you and the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes; I remember that very distinctly.

Q. What was the circumstance?

A. The circumstance was the misreading of the classification by myself. Mr. Herring read the classification as iron pipe and I read the classification as trolley poles, because it was nothing more or less than iron pipe with three pieces. When it got to destination it was put together and made a trolley pole.

Q. Were you both trying to get that business?

A. We were both trying to get it, yes, sir.

Q. Who got it?

A. I did.

Q. Then, when you misread that tariff, you read it at a higher rate than did Mr. Herring, did you?

A. I read it at a higher rate, yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Herring managed to read the tariff at a lower rate?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Then you read the tariff at the same rate he did and got the business?
A. I did.
Q. Take that shipment in question, where you and Mr. Herring had this competition in reading tariffs—how was Mr. Herring
2109 trying to route that business?
A. Naturally, I suppose, via the New Orleans route.
Q. Now, Mr. Fowler, all rates being equal to different points, what are the principal elements that enter into the solicitation of business?
A. Personality and service.
Q That is, the personality of the gentlemen who are soliciting the business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And the service they are able to render, or promise?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And what elements are particularly in your mind in the way of service?
A. Well, through cars, close connections, and through trains on the different roads that carry the business.
Q. Time?
A. Time is an object nowadays.
Q. And what service do the soliciting agents perform for shippers?
A. They simply keep calling on the shippers and ascertain if they have any business moving in the direction they represent; and if so, why, of course, they must try to use all the personality they can to get the business on the line they represent.
Q. What service are you principally able to perform for the shippers?
A. Simply to keep track of the shipment in the way of tracing it and keeping them posted as to the movement from time to time.
Q. The soliciting agents also look up rates for the shippers, do they not?
A. Yes, sir; certainly.
Q. And examine the tariffs?
A. Yes, sir; certainly.
Q. Which are very complicated, I suppose, in cases?
A. Yes, sir.

2110 Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Do you perceive any reason, Mr. Fowler, why the attitude of either the Union Pacific or the Southern Pacific in the matter of settling claims, or their treatment of shippers, should be any different now than what it was formerly?
A. Not that I can see.
Q. There is the same inducement for the Union Pacific to settle claims promptly and to treat the shipper nicely now as there was before, is there not?

A. Yes, sir; I should imagine so.

Q. And so with the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Because there are a great many other lines actually competing for business to California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That could be diverted to the Atchison or other lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So there is no reason for any change in their situation in that respect?

A. Not that I can see.

Q. Which way did those poles go when you got them, Mr. Fowler?

A. You mean from the time they left here?

Q. Till they reached destination.

A. My recollection is that they moved via the Baltimore & Ohio and the Chicago & Northwestern in connection with the Union Pacific at Omaha, and in care of the Southern Pacific at Ogden.

Q. So they went over the Southern Pacific at last.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They went over the Union Pacific about a thousand miles and over the Southern Pacific line about 850 miles?

A. Yes, sir.

2111 Q. You testified, in answer to questions by Mr. Severance, that the competition between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific in those days was very strong. You mean the competition of the Sunset Route?

A. It was stronger then than it is now.

Q. Yes. You mean, though, that even then the competition was between the Sunset Route and the all-rail lines of which the Southern Pacific was a part?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Southern Pacific preferring the line where it would have the entire haul——

A. Certainly.

Q. ——from New York, or a longer haul from New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As against the shorter haul from Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the competition that you spoke of?

A. Yes; that was it exactly.

Q. You testified that it was in 1888 and during what time that you used the Portland route?

A. 1888 and the forepart of 1889, my recollection is.

Q. That you used the Portland route for San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did that last?

A. Oh, it lasted only a few months.

Q. It was due to some temporary disturbance, was it not?

A. That is all, yes, as I understood it.

Q. In 1891, 1892, and 1893 you did not solicit via that route, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. You never knew any freight to move via the Portland route except during that short period?

A. No, sir.

Q. The company that you represent now is the fast freight
2112 line, is it?

A. No; it is the water line. It is the Mutual——

Q. Oh, the water line. Where does it operate?

A. It operates between Baltimore and Savannah, Norfolk and Newport News, on the south; on the north, Boston, Fall River, and Providence.

Q. You interjected just now, in answer to one of my questions, the suggestion that competition was stronger in those days when you were representing the Union Pacific here than it is now. Are not all of the rail lines which are represented in Pittsburg actively competing with each other——

A. Yes, sir.

Q. ——through their connections, for the Pacific coast business?

A. Yes, sir; I naturally understand so.

Q. Is there not just as much competition now as there ever was for that business, except in the matter of cutting rates?

A. I would take it so; yes, sir.

Q. The rates being established under the Interstate Commerce law, and open rates, why, then, they are all struggling for the business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is just as active as it ever was?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Unless it be in the matter of concessions of rates, or something of that sort?

A. Yes, sir.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. You did not intend to include the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific competition in your answer to Judge Lovett's last question, did you? They are not competing as actively as they used to be?

A. I did not quite catch that last.

Q. His question was general. It did not exclude the North-
2113 ern Pacific and Southern Pacific. You did not mean to say that they are still competing with each other?

A. No, sir.

Q. In the person of Mr. Herring?

A. No. I thought he still had reference to lines leading up to the line of the Union Pacific. That is the way I took it.

Q. All that you meant to testify to is that there is the same competition between the lines from here to the Missouri or Mississippi river that there ever was?

A. That is the idea.

Q. But not that there is the same competition between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific that there formerly was?

A. Well, I did not understand that question.

Q. And you did not mean to so testify?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. And there is no such competition as there used to be?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. You say your business is that of a water-line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where does your stuff that you get originate—here at Pittsburg?

A. Pittsburg, and what is called Pittsburg territory.

Q. Where do you load it onto the boats?

A. We load it onto the boats at Baltimore or Philadelphia, as the case might be.

Q. And to what points do you transport it from there?

A. If it is going, say, north to Boston, we transport it from Philadelphia or Baltimore to Boston.

Q. Are you in competition with the all-rail lines to Boston?

A. Sure thing.

Q. And are you able to successfully get business?

A. Yes, sir.

2114 Q. And are your rates the same?

A. No, sir.

Q. You have a differential?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Because the cost of handling the business on the sea is cheaper than it is on land?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And by maintaining that differential you are able to keep up and compete with the all-rail lines to these various points along the coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated, in answer to Judge Lovett, that this lot of shipments that you worked via Portland and the boat line, was in 1888 and part of 1889; and Judge Lovett asked you if it was not due to some temporary disturbance, and you said you thought it was. What did you mean by that?

A. As I understood, at that time the temporary disturbance was something in regard to the handling of the traffic delivered to the Southern Pacific at Ogden by the Union Pacific.

Q. Then, it was a competitive measure on the part of the Union Pacific; and the traffic was worked that way as a competitive measure against the Southern Pacific, because of some difficulty about handling traffic at Ogden?

A. Yes, sir, certainly.

Q. So far as you know, the Willamette and Columbia rivers are still flowing into the sea, so that could be done at present?

A. Yes, sir; I understand so.

By Mr. LOVETT.

Q. And they were flowing after 1888, too, were they not, Mr. Fowler?

A. Flowing at that time? I believe so.

Q. But the Union Pacific never found it to its interest to use it after 1888?

A. No, I understand not.

2115 Mr. SEVERANCE. After 1889 he said.

Q. After 1889?

A. After 1889, I understand not.

Q. And they were not using it in 1891 and 1892 and 1893?

A. No, sir.

Q. With reference to the question that Mr. Severance said you did not understand, Mr. Fowler——

Mr. SEVERANCE. No; he said he did not understand.

Mr. LOVETT. Well, it was on your suggestion.

Q. I did not mean it the way that it was finally explained to you. What I meant to ask was this: whether the Atchison and its connections east, and the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific and their connections, do not create a competition and carry on a competition for this traffic to the Pacific coast as active as it ever was? There has been no relaxation in that competition?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. As far as you are able to observe, is it not just as active as it ever was?

A. As far as I am able to observe, yes, sir.

Q. Aren't there a great many lines between here and the Pacific coast that are just as able to create competition for that traffic as the Union Pacific ever was? For example, the Union Pacific was merely an intermediate carrier, operating a line about 1,000 miles in length—that is, from Omaha to Ogden. Now, are there not a great many other lines between here and a connection with the Southern Pacific and the Atchison that are just as able to compete for that traffic as the Union Pacific ever was?

A. Well, the lines out to the Missouri River and the lines from the Missouri River to Denver, or to Utah, or to Ogden, no
2116 doubt are as active in the solicitation for the business by the routes they represent, which, naturally, of course, would cut the Union Pacific out of the haul from the Missouri River to Ogden.

Q. Well, leaving out of consideration for a moment the Union Pacific line to Portland, taking the Union Pacific proper: are not the Denver & Rio Grande, the Burlington, the Rock Island, the Missouri Pacific, the St. Paul, the North-Western, the Baltimore &

Ohio, the Pennsylvania, and all of those intermediate lines, just as effective in that competition to-day as the Union Pacific ever was? Do they not operate as large a proportion, or a larger proportion, of the through mileage, as the Union Pacific did?

A. I should think so.

Q. The Union Pacific never had any rate-making power to the Pacific coast south of Portland, outside of this boat-line that you have just mentioned?

A. Well, at that time those rates were made by the Transcontinental Association.

Q. Yes. And by agreement and by concurrence?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know about the practicability of the Portland route by the Union Pacific as against the direct route of the Southern Pacific?

A. At the present time?

Q. Yes.

A. I do not.

By Mr. SEVERANCE.

Q. Just one other question, brought out by Judge Lovett's last questions. He has asked you if these other lines in the intermediate territory are not still actively competing, and you said they are, for business?

A. That is true, as far as I know.

Q. And, as far as you know, the elimination of competition
2117 on Pacific coast business has resulted from the cessation of competition between two of the lines from the Missouri or Mississippi rivers to the coast—that is, between the Union and Southern?

A. Yes.

Q. And aside from the elimination of that competition, as far as you know, the situation is about as it was before: that is right, is it not?

A. That is the way I understand it.

By Mr. LOVETT.

Q. That competition, with the exception of the extra conditions in 1888 and 1889 that you mentioned, was a competition in which the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific were connecting lines, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. SEVERANCE.

Q. And if the Southern Pacific got the business the way it wanted to get it, it did not send it over the Union Pacific, but sent it over its own lines from New Orleans, did it not?

A. It did.

Q. And if the Union Pacific got the business it participated in the haul?
A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LOVETT.

Q. And still had to send it to the Southern Pacific?
A. Had no other way to do it, absolutely.
(A recess was here taken until 2 o'clock P. M.)

2118 ANDREW PAAR,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Paar, where do you live?
A. Canton, Ohio.
Q. How long have you lived there?
A. Since 1870.
Q. And what is your business?
A. I am with the Diebold Safe & Lock Company.
Q. And what is the business of the Diebold Safe & Lock Company?
A. They manufacture vaults, safes, safe deposit boxes, and so forth; anything in the safe line.
Q. And how many years has that concern been in business? That is, how long have you been connected with it?
A. Since the latter part of 1872.
Q. In what capacity?
A. I have had charge of the shipping for about 25 years.
Q. How does the Diebold Safe & Lock Company compare in size with other manufacturers of similar articles in the United States?
A. Why we are about the largest.
Q. You are the largest, are you not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And have been for a good many years?
A. No; we were not always the largest, but we are now.
Q. For how long have you been the largest?
A. Probably a few years. We have enlarged; a large plant.
Q. But you have done a very large business during all the time you have been with them, have you not?
A. Yes, sir, we always have.
2119 Q. Have you factories at any other place than Canton?
A. No, sir.
Q. To what parts of the country do you ship your product, or have you shipped your product, since you have been with them?

A. Oh, most everywhere in the United States, and some foreign countries.

Q. You have shipped a good deal to the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do your shipments to the Pacific coast move usually? Over what lines?

A. We have shipped by the—do you want the Southern lines or the——

Q. Take all the lines. I mean the transcontinental lines west of the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers.

A. The Union Pacific, the Southern Pacific, and that Los Angeles line——

Q. The San Pedro?

A. The San Pedro; and——

Q. Santa Fe?

A. The Santa Fe, yes, sir.

Q. And for north Pacific coast points, over what lines?

A. Northern Pacific, Great Northern and some by the Southern Pacific.

Q. The Southern?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, you spoke of the Southern.

A. That is, from Portland.

Q. Oh, yes. Have you at any time shipped to California points by way of New Orleans and the Sunset Route?

A. Yes, sir, we have.

Q. How long ago?

A. It is a good while ago. We have made a few shipments recently, but those were routed from the other end.

2120 Q. That is, the consignees?

A. Yes, sir; the consignees send in the routing for it.

Q. Direct it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How is your business routed as a rule—by yourself, or by your consignees?

A. Quite a good deal is by the consignee, and a portion of it I do myself.

Q. Do you use any steamship lines to the coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What line are you using now?

A. Now, the Hawaiian.

Q. How do you send your traffic that goes by the American and Hawaiian line?

A. We send it by way of New York.

Q. Over what line? The Pennsylvania?

A. I do not remember, but I think it is the B. & O. that I have sent the most of it.

Q. It goes over some rail line to New York?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then goes to a Mexican port?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Across Mexico?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And up by steamship?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How do the rates by the American-Hawaiian line compare with the transcontinental rail rates?
A. They are lower.
Q. Do you remember about what percentage they are lower?
A. I think they are about 75 or 80 cents per hundred lower.
Q. What is the rate all-rail from Canton to San Francisco?
A. $1.75.
Q. And the American-Hawaiian rate is about $1.00, is it?
A. I think it is $1.05.
Q. And that line is made up by rail line to New York, steamship line to Mexico, across Mexico by rail, and up from the 2121 west coast of Mexico by ship?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Can you give any idea about the distance that is?
A. No; I can not.
Q. What is the port on the Gulf side of Mexico?
A. I have forgotten that; I do not remember.
Q. Aside from the shipments that you have been making over the American-Hawaiian line, have you ever made any shipments to Pacific coast points part rail and part water?
A. We have, some, but it is a good while ago.
Q. Over what lines?
A. I think it went Southern Pacific and then by the way of New Orleans.
Q. To New York, and around by the boat line?
A. No; we sent it by the Q. & C. and New Orleans.
Q. That is, all-rail then?
A. Yes, that is all-rail.
Q. My question was whether you had shipped any by boat-and-rail other than by the American-Hawaiian line?
A. I think that we only made one shipment, and that was a good while ago, and I do not remember just how it went. It was not satisfactory. Our goods are highly finished, and they were marred, chafed.
Q. That is due to carelessness in handling, is it not?
A. I think handling so often is the cause of that.
Q. You have to handle how many times, when you ship by the American-Hawaiian line?
A. I think it is four or five times.
Q. More handling than it would be to ship all-rail to the north Pacific coast points and down by boat?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. That would be only two handlings?

A. Two handlings.

Q. Do you remember how you shipped to Portland prior to 1901?

2122 A. I do not exactly remember the route.

Q. You shipped over different routes, did you not?

A. Different routes; yes, sir.

Q. Well, to direct the question to one route: do you have any recollection of shipments to Portland by Ogden and the old Central Pacific route?

A. Yes, sir. Yes, sir; we did.

Q. And do you remember how the shipments reached Ogden? whether they went over the Rio Grande or the Union Pacific?

A. I think it was the Union Pacific.

Q. The Union Pacific and Central Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember upon whose solicitation you made those shipments to Portland?

A. I think there was a man by the name of Carney came to see us.

Q. You speak of a man named Carney who came to see you with reference to Portland shipments?

A. Why, I think he worked for the Union Pacific.

Q. Worked for the Union Pacific, yes. How do your shipments go to Portland now, usually?

A. Why the most of them now go Northern Pacific, and some go Great Northern and Canadian.

Q. Do you ship any there by the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line and Oregon Railroad & Navigation?

A. I think we do. Not many, though.

Q. Most of it by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you have any recollection of business moving by rail to Portland and thence by boat to San Francisco, years ago?

A. No; I do not.

Q. How is that?

A. I do not.

2123 Q. You do not remember of any business——

A. No, sir; not from Portland to San Francisco.

Q. Do you remember of any business moving the other way, by boat, between those places?

A. I do not.

Q. I misunderstood you, then, when I was talking with you before you went on the stand. My notes are wrong. You have no recollection of shipments to San Francisco by rail to Portland, and thence by boat?

A. There may have been one shipment gone that way, but that is a long time ago, and I do not remember just exactly.

Q. You do not remember distinctly about it?

A. No.

Q. Prior to 1901, do you remember of being solicited for business to the coast by Union Pacific solicitors and also by Southern Pacific solicitors?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did the Union Pacific soliciting agent live?

A. I think he lived in Cleveland.

Q. And where did the Southern Pacific man live?

A. In Cincinnati.

Q. And which way was the Southern Pacific man trying to move the traffic?

A. Why, he was trying to move it by the way of New Orleans.

Q. And the Union Pacific man, which way?

A. By the way of——

Q. Omaha?

A. Omaha.

Q. Do you have that solicitation now of the Union Pacific against the Southern Pacific?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who represents those lines now, so far as business with you is concerned?

2124 A. Why, Mr. Connor; but there is another gentleman comes to see us; I think his name is Hild.

Q. He represents both lines, does he?

A. Yes, sir. He works for Mr. Connor; he is under his supervision.

Q. Where does Mr. Connor live?

A. In Cincinnati.

Q. Mr. Hild represents the two lines—Southern and Union?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does he indicate which way he wants to route the traffic?

A. Why, he occasionally comes in with other railroad men, and then it does not make any difference to him. He frequently comes in with the North-Western—sometimes with others—but mostly with the North Western.

Q. Then he wants to send it by Omaha by the North-Western?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But when he is by himself?

A. Well, he likes to have it come by the way of New Orleans.

Q. Likes to have it come by New Orleans?

A. But if I tell him I want to give it to someone else, why, he does not object to it.

Q. What do you mean by "give it to someone else"?

A. Why, some other line to Chicago and beyond. Chicago gateway.

Q. How far is Canton from Pittsburg?

A. One hundred miles—or one hundred and one miles.

Q. What rate does Canton take—the Pittsburg common point rate?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What inducements do soliciting agents offer you to get business?
A. They don't offer anything.
Q. Not in cash; but what method do they employ to try to 2125 get business?
A. Sir?
Q. What do they claim for their lines in order to get business? How do they try to get the business? I do not mean cash inducement.
A. One thing is personality—that is, friendship—an agent who has been calling on us for many years. That is one thing. And another thing is that they look after the shipment, trace it, follow it up, and advise us when it leaves the different junction points; that is, when we are in a hurry for a shipment; and we consider that quite a favor.
Q. The more efficient a man is in doing that, the more inclined you are to give him the business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Are your shipments of a character that demand great despatch, or are you usually in no particular hurry?
A. Why, we are usually in a hurry. Not always, but quite often we are in a hurry. Now, of course, when we ship by the way of New York, we are not in a hurry.
Q. I was going to ask you about that. How long does it take to reach San Francisco from Canton, as a rule, by the American-Hawaiian line?
A. Why, as near as I have learned, it takes from 30 to 50 days.
Q. How long does it take to reach San Francisco from Canton, all-rail, under ordinary conditions?
A. From 14 to 17 or 20 days.
Q. How was it in 1907—the time of the great congestion of traffic?
A. Why, it took more than 30 days.
Q. You spoke of the fact that it was undesirable, because of your goods being so highly polished, to transship any more than is 2126 necessary. Do you find that they get pretty good results in that way on the American-Hawaiian line?
A. We are packing them differently now, too, than we did formerly. That makes some difference. But they can almost refinish them out there and save money.
Q. On account of the difference in rate?
A. On account of the difference in rate.
Q. Do you have a plant at San Francisco?
A. We have a large store and warehouse.
Q. You distribute from there, do you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you have warehouses at other places along the coast?
A. At Los Angeles.
Q. Any further north?
A. Portland.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You ship via all lines reaching California, do you not, Mr. Paar—all rail lines?

A. We divide it up.

Q. The Atchison and the Southern Pacific and its connections?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. There are a great many all-rail lines reaching there, aren't there? I mean different combinations. There are a great many combinations of lines from this territory to California, are there not?

A. In connection with the Atchison and the Southern Pacific?

Q. Yes. Ultimately they go either over the Atchison or the Southern Pacific or the San Pedro?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But east of the Atchison and east of the Southern Pacific there are a great many lines as connections of either the Atchison or 2127 the Southern Pacific engaging in that traffic, are there not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And all of those lines have their separate solicitors in your territory, have they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is true, also of the lines reaching New Orleans—the Louisville & Nashville, the Illinois Central, and Queen & Crescent?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They all actively solicit business for California, and ultimately it goes there either over the Atchison or the Southern Pacific or the San Pedro; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir. Not always Santa Fe.

Q. No. I say, in reaching California it must ultimately go either over the Santa Fe or the Southern Pacific or the San Pedro?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All of your California shipments prior to the opening of the San Pedro, that passed over the Union Pacific, also passed over the Southern Pacific, did they not, in reaching California?

A. They did.

Q. About what is the distance by the short rail-lines, or the usual routes, from your place to New Orleans? Do you know about the distance?

A. No, I do not know.

Q. You would approximate it about 1,000 miles, or 1,100 miles would you not?

A. Along there somewhere.

Q. And about how far would you say to Omaha?

A. I have not looked up the mileage; I do not know.

Q. Can you not approximate it, Mr. Paar?

A. Why, I would not like to say; I do not know.

Q. Don't you think it is in the neighborhood of 1,200 or 1,500 miles?

A. In fact, I do not know what it is.

2128 Q. I think my suggestion as to the mileage was perhaps too much, Mr. Paar. Do you know the relative distance from Canton to Omaha and New Orleans—that is, as to which is the greater?

A. Why, New Orleans would be the greater.

Q. Yes. It would be farther to New Orleans than to Omaha?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Prior to 1901 there was solicitation for the business of your company by the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific separately, I understood you to say?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did not the Southern Pacific representative also solicit by way of Ogden, if he could not get it by way of New Orleans?

A. Oh, they would take it, if they could not get it by the way of New Orleans.

Q. They preferred it by way of New Orleans; but if they could not get it that way they would take it by any of the other connections?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As against the Atchison or the Northern lines?

A. Yes, sir.

2129 J. F. TOWNSEND,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Townsend, where do you live?

A. Pittsburg.

Q. What is your business?

A. With the National Tube Company; traffic manager.

Q. How long have you been traffic manager of the National Tube Company?

A. Nearly ten years.

Q. Previous to that what was your business?

A. I was in the railroad business for twenty years.

Q. With what company?

A. Various companies. The Cleveland, Lorain & Wheeling, and the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, and the Wheeling & Lake Erie.

Q. What kind of goods are manufactured by the National Tube Company?

A. Tubular goods. Pipe.

Q. Steel pipe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that one of the largest concerns of that kind in the country?

A. As my neighbor said, we have advertised it to be the largest manufacturer in the world of wrought pipe. We do not any more, but we used to do that. We are a good deal larger than we were then. I suppose it is our modesty.

Q. Assuming that your advertisement was true, and that you have grown since, you have very little doubt that you are the largest concern of the kind in the world, have you?

A. No, I have no doubt of it.

Q. Where are your plants located?

A. The Pittsburg district—we have three plants in Pitts-
2130 burg; one at McKeesport; Versailles, Pennsylvania; Christie Park; one at Syracuse, New York; Youngstown, Ohio; Lorain, Ohio; and Elwood City.

Q. What is the last?

A. Elwood City.

Q. Elwood City, Illinois?

A. Pennsylvania.

Q. Pennsylvania?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Some of those plants are located outside of the district that takes the Pittsburg common point rate, are they not?

A. No.

Q. They all take the Pittsburg common point rate?

A. All take the same rate to the coast.

Q. That is what I mean—transcontinental rate?

A. All the same, yes, sir. We have a plant at Kewanee, Illinois, too, by the way. I forgot that.

Q. I thought you had one in Illinois somewhere.

A. Yes.

Q. What rate does that take as compared with your Pittsburg rate? Just the same to the coast?

A. It is the same to California terminals.

Q. That is what I mean.

A. Less rate to the north coast.

Q. The same rate to California terminals.

A. The same.

Q. Which way do you route your business to the coast, as a rule, from the Pittsburg district?

A. We have about twenty different ways.

Q. About twenty different ways?

A. Twenty different routes, yes, sir.

Q. What transcontinental lines does it move over?

A. It moves over the five transcontinental lines.

Q. The five transcontinental lines?

A. Yes. The Southern Pacific, the Santa Fe, the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern, and the C. P. R. That is all.

2131 Q. And moves over the Union Pacific?
A. Some portion of it.
Q. Some portion of it over the Union Pacific?
A. Yes.
Q. And the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific into San Francisco?
A. Yes.
Q. And the Union Pacific, the Oregon Short Line, and Oregon Railroad & Navigation, into Portland?
A. Well, very recently. We haven't used that line until recently.
Q. What line did you formerly use to Portland?
A. We used the Northern Pacific and Great Northern.
Q. Did you ever move stuff to the coast by New Orleans, Sunset Route?
A. Not much.
Q. Did you, some of your stuff?
A. I do not think we did any.
Q. Do not think you did any?
A. No.
Q. Not from any of your factories?
A. No. That is, via New Orleans you asked me?
Q. Yes. I am coming to the others later.
A. Yes.
Q. You do not remember that you ever sent any via New Orleans?
A. Oh, well, that is putting it pretty strong.
Q. You said, "not any." I understood you to say so.
A. Well, very little.
Q. Oh, very little.
A. Very little. In the old days you know, the consignee had something to say about it.
Q. Have you taken that privilege away from him?
A. No; we have given him more. We are selling delivered and prepaying the freight.
Q. Then you have the routing?
A. Well, as a general proposition we think we do.
Q. At the present time when you sell delivered f. o. b. at the 2132 destination, or however you deliver it there, of course you control the routing yourself?
A. Yes, sir; pay the freight.
Q. Have you sent stuff to the coast by El Paso?
A. Oh, yes; we do now.
Q. You do now?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And over what lines does it reach El Paso?
A. It goes over the Texas Pacific, Rock Island; various routes.
Q. And thence to the coast by the Southern Pacific?
A. The Southern Pacific, yes, sir. That is Southern California business, however.
Q. Southern California?

A. Yes.

Q. Over what other lines—I am speaking of transcontinental lines now west of the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers—do you move traffic to Southern California, aside from the line via El Paso?

A. That is, aside from the Southern Pacific via El Paso? You do not care about the intermediate lines?

Q. You have stated that you move traffic via El Paso, and then Southern Pacific to Southern California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What other transcontinental lines do you use into Southern California aside from that route?

A. We use the Santa Fe and the San Pedro, and the Southern Pacific to some extent.

Q. Do you ever use the Union Pacific at all?

A. No.

Q. You never ship anything over the Union Pacific?

A. To Southern California, not much.

Q. How does the stuff get to the San Pedro that you send to them at Salt Lake City?

A. We send it over the various lines leading up to Colorado
2133 junctions. We have got to give them something, you know.

Q. But you do not give any of your traffic to Southern California to the Union Pacific?

A. Oh, we do some.

Q. And the San Pedro?

A. We do some; but, then, we give them so much more business for other parts of California that we——

Q. You try to divide it up as fairly as you can among the different lines?

A. We want to be fair, of course.

Q. How does your San Francisco business move as a rule?

A. San Francisco?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Over the Santa Fe, over the Southern Pacific, generally.

Q. Does any of it go over the Union Pacific?

A. Some of it, yes, sir.

Q. The Union Pacific, and then over the Southern Pacific from Ogden?

A. Yes. But that does not represent the amount of the Southern Pacific business, what the Union Pacific gets from us; because we give the D. & R. G. and Colorado Midland, those Colorado routes, Southern Pacific, Rock Island, Burlington——

Q. Give them all a share of the business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that at present you are using the Union Pacific route into Portland to some extent, but formerly you did not. Did I so understand you?

A. I did not say that, no.

Q. Oh, I confused you with the other witness, I think.

A. You must have.

Q. How do you ship to Portland?

A. Via the Great Northern and Northern Pacific. Well, I think I did admit that we sent some business up that way now.

2134 Q. That is what I understood you to say.

A. Yes, some of it: very little, though.

Q. Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line, and Oregon Railroad & Navigation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember Mr. Edwin Hawley of New York?

A. Oh, I had a speaking acquaintance with him.

Q. Do you recall the time that he was representing the Southern Pacific?

A. Very well.

Q. Do you remember whether at that time there was any competition between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific for coast business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who represented the Union Pacific interests in that competition?

A. Here?

Q. Yes.

A. I think Choate did at that time, latterly.

Q. Is there any competition now between the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific for transcontinental business?

A. You mean the New Orleans route?

Q. In Pittsburg—that comes under your observation.

A. Well, I suppose not. One through line.

Q. You are called on frequently by gentlemen soliciting traffic, are you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They all come to see you, don't they—the amount of stuff you have to send?

A. I hope they do not pass me up; I do not want them to.

Q. Now, Mr. Townsend, having conceded what you have with reference to the extent of your business, being brought into communication with these gentlemen who are soliciting business, what is 2135 the important element that they urge to get business when they come to see you?

A. Time.

Q. Time?

A. Yes.

Q. Service?

A. Yes, sir. That is the important matter from our standpoint.

Q. And that is what they all claim that they can give you, I suppose, to get the business?

A. Well, no. They are very frank when there is anything the matter with the lines. That is particularly true with the Southern Pacific. If they have got a disability they will let us know about it.

Q. Of course, if there is some disability; but when there is nothing out of order, when nothing has happened, or there has been no accident, or anything of the sort, they all come in and assure you that they will hustle things right through, do they not?

A. They have all got the short line, yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. In the days of Mr. Hawley's connection with the Southern Pacific, I believe you said that there was competition between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific—Mr. Choate representing the Union Pacific. Whatever business the Union Pacific got during that competition for California points went over the Southern Pacific from Ogden, did it not?

A. Yes, sir; as a general proposition.

Q. Was not that always true? There was no other outlet for it, was there?

A. No, sir, I think not.

Q. The competition then was between the Sunset Route, by way of New Orleans, and the rail lines?

A. And the other lines, of course.

Q. Yes. And the rail lines, of which both the Union Pa-
2136 cific and the Southern Pacific were a part?

A. Yes.

Q. And, of course, the Atchison?

A. Yes.

Q. And their connections east?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think you testified also that at the present time you patronize twenty or more lines in your business to the Pacific coast?

A. Yes.

Q. Do all of these lines lying east of the Missouri River engage in that business as connections of the Union Pacific, and Atchison and Southern Pacific?

A. All in the transcontinental line business. Representation here is a good deal bigger than it used to be. There are more agencies here—ten to one.

Q. Solicitation is more active for that business than it ever was?

A. Yes. In the last five years there have been over ten agencies established here.

Q. In connection with the transcontinental business?

A. Yes, sir—agencies that are soliciting it.

Q. You stated in answer to questions of Mr. Severance, Mr. Townsend, that there was no competition as between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific at this time, here?

A. I think Mr. Severance stated that.

Q. Yes; Mr. Severance stated that.

A. Yes.

Q. And you assented to that statement, if I understood you. You had reference merely to the fact that they have a joint agency, had you not?

A. Yes. I might say that the Union Pacific does solicit business in connection with other lines besides the Southern Pacific.

Q. The Rock Island, the Missouri Pacific, the Wabash
2137 interests and various lines reaching down in the southwest and ultimately to a connection with the Texas and Pacific, or with the Southern Pacific at El Paso, are all actively soliciting that business, are they not?

A. Yes, sir. And there are a great many new smaller lines that have some very wide-awake fellows in here looking for business.

Q. And all the various lines are soliciting this business by way of New Orleans, too?

A. Via New Orleans?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I do not know. They do not solicit it much from me that way.

Q. The Louisville & Nashville, and Illinois Central?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. The Queen & Crescent?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They all actively solicit this business?

A. Yes; but I had in mind the El Paso route when I said that—the Colorado gateways.

Q. So this business moves via those various connections to the Southern Pacific, to El Paso, Ogden, and some to New Orleans? I believe you said that you did not send any business via New Orleans to the Pacific coast?

A. Very little. Very little by that route.

Q. But it moves via these various connections with the Southern Pacific. All of the lines in this territory between here and El Paso, for example——

A. Yes.

Q. ——between here and New Orleans and between here and Ogden are actively soliciting for this business now, are they not?

A. Yes.

2138 Q. What is the effect of this solicitation upon the routing of your traffic, Mr. Townsend?

A. The result is that we would naturally give the new routes a chance, give them some business. If they make good, we give them some more. Some of them have.

Q. You have never sent any business to California by way of Portland and the water line down from Portland to San Francisco, have you?

A. We have no dead freight, no, sir.

Q. You have no dead freight?

A. No, sir. Ours is all time freight.

Q. Has any freight ever moved that way, as far as you know?

A. Not to my knowledge. I think I would lose my job if I sent any that way.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Townsend, what was your reason for stating, in answer to Judge Lovett, a moment ago, that I stated that the competition had ceased here? Didn't you say that was so, when I asked you that question? Did you not intend to say what you did say?

A. Well, I assented to your statement.

Q. Well, that was your testimony, wasn't it? I am not under oath. I do not want you to state that I am testifying here, Mr. Townsend. You assented to what I asked you, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. You say the Union Pacific solicit business in connection with other lines than the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. You mean with the San Pedro?

A. Yes.

Q. In connection with the San Pedro?

A. Yes; that is one of them.

2139 Q. Is there any other line reaching the Pacific coast in connection with which they solicit business, except the San Pedro?

A. They will take business in connection with the Santa Fe?

Q. Where do they deliver to the Santa Fe?

A. California.

Q. Will you please state the point in California that the Union Pacific reaches?

A. The Union Pacific?

Q. Yes. You were stating that the Union Pacific solicited coast business in connection with other people than the Southern Pacific. Now, you state at what point in California the Union Pacific can deliver stuff to the Santa Fe?

A. Well, I had the Southern Pacific in mind.

Q. I thought you had. The fact is, is it not, Mr. Townsend, that formerly the Union Pacific had its own soliciting agency here in Pittsburg?

A. Yes.

Q. And they solicited business exclusively in the interests of their own line, did they not?

A. Yes.

Q. The Southern Pacific had its own soliciting agency here and solicited business for its own interest, irrespective of any other line, did it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And now, Mr. Herring represents both of them, does he not?

A. That is it.

Q. You stated that within the past five years there have been as many as ten new soliciting agencies established in Pittsburg?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you aware of any other instance excepting the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, where agencies that were formerly competing with each other have been consolidated?

A. I do not call them to mind.

2140 Q. On the other hand, you do know of ten new agencies that have been put in here?

A. Yes.

Q. It is a fact, is it not, Mr. Townsend, that this Pittsburg district originates more tonnage than any other district in the United States?

A. I believe so.

Q. Do you know Mr. Herring?

A. Very well.

Q. Has Mr. Herring been talking with you about this matter since you were subpoenaed?

A. No.

Recross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Do you know Mr. ——. What is your man's name? What is the Interstate Commerce agent's name?

Mr. SEVERANCE. McKenzie.

Q. Do you know Mr. McKenzie?

A. Yes.

Q. He has talked with you about this, has he not, Mr. Townsend?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whom did he pretend to represent?

A. Why, the Interstate Commerce Commission, I believe—the Government.

2141 F. A. OGDEN,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Ogden, where do you live?

A. Pittsburg—or Crafton, rather, right near Pittsburg—a suburb.

Q. What is your business, Mr. Ogden?

A. General freight agent for the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company.

Q. How long have you been connected with their traffic department?

A. I have been general freight agent for Jones & Laughlin for about fourteen or fifteen years. I was in their shipping department about four or five years prior to that.

Q. What are your duties as general freight agent?

A. Attending to the handling of their railroad matters that may pertain to any of their shipments in or out.

Q. And you have occupied that position for fourteen or fifteen years?

A. About fourteen or fifteen years.

Q. Just for the sake of getting it in the record, will you give us some idea of the extent of the business of Jones & Laughlin?

A. Jones & Laughlin are said to be—and I admit it—the largest independent steel manufacturers in the United States, outside of the U. S. Steel Corporation.

Q. That is the largest concern in the country, outside of the United States Steel Corporation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where are the plants of the Jones & Laughlin Company located?

2142 A. The plants that are in operation today are located in the city of Pittsburg on the south side of the Monongahela River, and on the north side out about a mile from here. And they have a plant which they are now building at Aliquippa; but that is not in operation. That is 18 miles down the Ohio River.

Q. Mr. Ogden, does your firm do business at Pacific coast points?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have they during all the time you have represented them in the traffic business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What class of steel manufacture do you make?

A. Structural steel. All sizes of merchants bars, shafting, cold roll steels, pulleys and hangers, power transmission machinery, plates.

Q. Do you have a large business on the Pacific coast, and have you had for a good many years?

A. Fairly so.

Q. How do you make your shipments to the coast at the present time, chiefly?

A. The shipments are divided between the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe and the San Pedro and Salt Lake for the California points; and to the north coast points between the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific. A car or two, possibly, during a year will go via the Union Pacific and the Oregon Railway to Portland.

Q. And how does the traffic reach Ogden or Salt Lake, from the Missouri River? Over the Union Pacific?

A. We divide the business up. Part of the business to San Francisco goes via the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, and part via the Colorado Midland; part by the Denver & Rio Grande, from Denver, using the Rock Island or "Q.." or some of those lines, up to Denver.

2143 Q. How do your shipments go by the Southern Pacific—the Southern line of the Southern Pacific, how do they move—via New Orleans or El Paso?

A. We do not ship any by New Orleans, and I do not recall but possibly one or two cars in the past year that went by El Paso. The Southern California business moves via the Santa Fe, or via the Union Pacific, or the Colorado Midland, or the D. & R. G., in connection with the San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake. I might add there also, to be strictly straight, that we do send some business by the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific to Los Angeles by the northern gateway; but it is not much.

Q. That goes around via——

A. Via Ogden.

Q. Via Ogden and Sacramento, and down?

A. It goes down that way, yes, sir.

Q. Did you formerly ship some business to California points by the Sunset Route, from New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long ago did you cease shipping that way?

A. Oh, that is eight or nine years ago, I guess.

Q. Have you ever made any shipments to San Francisco by way of the Canadian Pacific and boat lines?

A. Yes; there were shipments made that way during the time of the differential by the Canadian Pacific, Wisconsin Central, Soo line, Canadian Pacific, and the boat line from Vancouver down.

Q. Did you ship a considerable amount that way, or only a little?

A. As I recall it, it was quite a good deal for that day. Business to the Pacific coast has developed wonderfully in the past ten years.

Q. At the present time do you ship any by the American-
2144 Hawaiian line?

A. Yes, sir, quite a little. It is increasing that way.

Q. What is your reason for shipping that way?

A. Differential in the freight rate, and very much more improvement in the time; faster time ever since they have gone over the Tehuantepec Railroad. Formerly the American & Hawaiian line went around Cape Horn and it took about 60 or 90 days. Now they send the stuff over the Tehuantepec Railroad, and the time is about 19 to 33 days from New York.

Q. How long a rail line is that across Mexico, do you remember?

A. I think it is about 180 miles. I am not positive about that.

Q. It is a narrow place down there?

A. Yes; a little neck.

Q. It goes from here to New York by rail, does it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then by boat to the east coast of Mexico, and then across, and then up?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the differential that you get on your shipments?

A. Nine cents a hundred today.

Q. How much?

A. Nine cents a hundred pounds. $1.80 a net ton. The rate via New York and the American & Hawaiian line is 71 cents. By all-rail it is 80 cents.

Q. And what time do you say they make?

A. The fastest time is 19 days from New York, and the slowest time is 33.

Q. How long does it usually take to get the stuff from here to New York and get it loaded on the ship?

A. If you just let it go through the regular course it takes about three or four days to get it to New York. If it is a 2145 rush shipment to catch a vessel, why, you can get it through there in about 36 to 48 hours.

Q. So that if you push things right along you can get a shipment around to San Francisco now by the American-Hawaiian line in a little over 20 days?

A. About 21 or 22 days.

Q. How long does it usually take all-rail from here to San Francisco by the most direct route?

A. From two to three weeks.

Q. So there is very little difference in the time?

A. Very little difference in the time.

Q. Are your goods of a character that are damaged by being transshipped?

A. None of it, except the cold roll steel and power transmission, which is a very small portion of the business that goes to the Pacific coast.

Q. How do you move that?

A. All-rail.

Q. Prior to 1901 do you remember whether the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate agencies here in Pittsburg?

A. Yes, sir, they had.

Q. Do you remember the names of the gentlemen who represented the respective companies?

A. Mr. Fowler and Mr. Lothrop and Mr. Choate and Mr. Herring.

Q. Were they calling on you at that time soliciting business for their respective lines, in competition?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now Mr. Herring represents both lines, does he not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does he and his assistants call on you now for business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do they give any preference for one line over the other, as far as you can observe?

A. No, sir.

2146 Q. What services are there that these soliciting agencies of the various railroads perform for shippers, so far as you have observed? Aside from inducing you to give them the business, what do they do for you in the way of looking after your traffic?

A. Why, it is the personality of the agent who calls on them, and the services that he has to offer in behalf of his company—such as the tracing of freight, investigation of claims, loss, over-charge and damage, the taking up of the questions of irregularities, if there are any, or, you might say, too high a classification of material before the classification committee—have his company take them up, give attention to them and see if they cannot be corrected, and better equalization of classification in rates of the different commodities.

Q. Mr. Ogden, from your experience, which has been very considerable, apparently, do you regard these agencies as useful to their lines in getting traffic?

A. A very important adjunct to the railroad.

Q. They secure the routing of a great deal of traffic, do they not?

A. Yes, sir. They are a great help to the shippers.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Mr. Ogden, do you know of any reason why a joint agent in the matters which you have mentioned, should not serve the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific as effectively as separate agents could?

A. I know of no reason, sir.

Q. You are familiar with the location of the lines of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific. Do you know of any 2147 reason why they should have separate agencies here?

A. Well——

Q. I ask for your judgment about that?

A. Do you want my judgment on that?

Q. As a man experienced in tariff matters. Has it an influence on you in the routing of your traffic?

A. I am for the agents. I want to see all the agents in Pittsburg I possibly can; but I do not see that—that is a pretty tough question to answer.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I guess you had better give that up, Judge.

Mr. LOVETT. No, we will not. We want his judgment on that.

Q. Let me add something to that question, Mr. Ogden. Cannot Mr. Herring or any other joint agent trace your shipments and settle your claims and do everything for you that separate agents of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific could? Or, to put it in another way, if it is too much for one man, could not two joint men, both representing the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, do just as much for you in your transcontinental business as two separate men could?

A. Yes; as far as in relation to that is concerned I would say yes, every bit.

Q. You absolutely control the routing of your own business, do you not, Mr. Ogden?

A. All except the power transmission machinery.

Q. What governs that?

A. The only competition we have on that is Chicago, and we sell it on Chicago basis.

2148 Q. Still, that is controlled by your——

A. No; the shippers on the Pacific coast generally route that business themselves.

Q. Oh, yes. You are familiar with the location of the Union Pacific lines, are you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Extending from Omaha and Kansas City to Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And connecting there with the Southern Pacific and the San Pedro?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whatever shipments you send via the Union Pacific to California points go ultimately either over the Southern Pacific or the San Pedro, do they not, Mr. Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has the Union Pacific always been without any rate-making power in transcontinental rates—just merely an intermediate carrier?

A. We always have so considered it.

Q. Take the North-Western line, for example, between Chicago and Omaha, and the St. Paul. They are intermediate carriers in this transcontinental business too, are they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Isn't it true that in this transcontinental business the Southern Pacific can get along very well without the Union Pacific, but that the Union Pacific could not get along without the Southern Pacific?

A. That is true.

Q. In this separate solicitation that existed here prior to 1901 between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, did not the Southern Pacific's agent try to get business by way of Ogden when he could not control it by way of New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir: he would try to get it by any gateway he could get it.

2149 Q. New Orleans, El Paso, or Ogden?

A. Or Ogden.

Q. He would prefer New Orleans, because he would get a longer haul, and, presumably, more revenue out of it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are not the Texas Pacific and the Rock Island and connections—eastern connections of the Texas Pacific and the Rock Island—actively working for this California business by way of El Paso?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the result of their work inures to the benefit of the Southern Pacific as against the Atchison, does it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the St. Paul, the North Western, and the various lines reaching the Missouri River, are all actively working for that business, too, are they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that ultimately inures to the benefit of either the Southern Pacific or Atchison; it ultimately goes over one or the other of those lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Union Pacific also?

A. Yes, sir.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Judge Lovett asked you whether it would not be possible for Mr. Herring, or any other able gentleman who is acting as soliciting agent for two different roads, to trace claims and that sort of thing. That, of course, could be done, could it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But if there are two lines reaching the Pacific coast, of one of which the Union Pacific forms a part of a thousand miles, from the Missouri River, and the other runs from the Mississippi
2150 River to New Orleans to the Pacific coast, so that there are two ways to reach the coast—one by the Union Pacific turning over the business to the Southern at Ogden; the other going the whole distance over the Southern Pacific—can you see any way that Mr. Herring or any other man (no matter how able he might be) can work one of those lines as against the other, for business?

A. No; not in his present position.

Q. That is what I thought.

A. No.

Q. You said that you were in favor of as many agents as you could have here in Pittsburg. Now, that is because you find that they are useful to the shippers, is it not?

A. They are; yes, sir.

Q. And to the railroads that they represent?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Useful to the shipper in performing these services, and useful to the railroads in securing business?

A. Yes, sir.

Recross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Another joint man with Mr. Herring would suit your purpose just as well as——

A. That is just a personal opinion of my own, you know. I think that is a good thing. Perhaps other people might disagree with me.

Q. You think what is a good thing, Mr. Ogden?

A. To have more agencies here. Other people might disagree with me on that subject.

Q. But so far as your purposes are concerned, two men of equal ability, joint men representing the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific, would be just as good as two separate men, would they not?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. Suppose that there were more agencies here: would that 2151 secure more of your business, Mr. Ogden?

A. For the——

Q. Suppose now, as a business proposition, the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, acting upon your view of this matter, should establish a separate agency here; do you think that you would give the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific any more of your business than you now give them?

A. No; I do not think I would.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. But if the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific had separate agencies here at work, each agency made up of efficient men like Mr. Herring, each one solicitous for business, and coming and calling on you for business, it might make a difference in the distribution of the traffic as between those two ways to the coast, might it not?

A. No—if the Union Pacific was represented here separately, and the Southern Pacific separately——

Q. That is what I am speaking of.

A. ——I would give a certain amount of the freight that I was going to give to the Southern Pacific to the Union Pacific, and a certain amount of the freight, as I do now, to the Colorado Midland and the D. & R. G., who would take it up to Salt Lake, or Ogden, and give it to the Southern Pacific there. The Southern Pacific portion would be the same as it is now.

Q. You think it would?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Hawley testified in New York that when he was the general eastern agent of the Southern Pacific he worked all the business that he could by way of New Orleans, so that they could get the long haul.

A. Oh, yes. I am talking now about the two agencies working on the same route.

2152 Q. Well, that is not what I am talking about.

A. No; I see what you are after.

Q. I am talking about one agency that is working, as Hawley said he did work, for the Sunset Route, and the other agency working for the Union Pacific.

A. Oh, that possibly might make a difference.

Q. Yes; that would make a difference in the distribution of traffic.

A. I see what you are after. Yes; that would make a difference.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. What is it that would make a difference?

A. The Southern Pacific, I think, could rightfully demand of us, if they had representation in this territory, that they were entitled to some of the long-haul freight, and we would have to give it to them, I guess.

Q. What do you mean by long haul? By way of New Orleans?

A. Via New Orleans.

Q. How far would it have to go before it would reach the Southern Pacific that way?

A. From us?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, about a thousand miles; a little over a thousand miles.

Q. The shippers are not interested in the division of the rates between railroads, are they?

A. No, sir.

Q. You do not care whether the Southern Pacific gets more revenue one way than it does another, do you?

A. Well, that is a question that comes up in the traffic departments of an industrial concern, very much, in the methods of doing 2153 business between the railroads and the steel manufacturer. It is coming more and more into use every day.

Mr. SEVERANCE. What do you mean by that?

WITNESS. I mean by that a case of reciprocity between the railroads and us.

Mr. SEVERANCE. That is, you prefer the companies that buy their supplies from you?

WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, coming back to the main question, Mr. Ogden: Would the establishment of an agency here by the Southern Pacific change in the least your policy of the routing of your traffic as to the Southern Pacific?

A. As compared with New Orleans and Omaha, do you mean?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir; not to San Francisco and the Northern California points.

Q. Would it change it in any way as between the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific?

Mr. SEVERANCE. He was about to state, when you interrupted him.

Mr. LOVETT. I did not mean to interrupt him.

WITNESS. It all depends upon how much pressure the Southern Pacific would put upon me.

Q. What pressure could they put on? We would like to know.

A. They are users of material that we manufacture; and in view of the fact that they buy from us as well as from other people, they are entitled to a share of our business; and if they would come to us on a proposition of that kind, why, I would be in duty bound to recognize that.

Q. Do the solicitors have anything to do with the purchasing of material?

A. Well, if a solicitor comes in and asks me for business,
2154 and his road is not buying anything from us, I politely tell him that there is not much doing for him just at present.

Q. You think that might work around, do you?

A. It does.

Q. Has it in our case?

A. In your case?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir. The Southern Pacific have always been very good friends of ours.

Q. And the Union Pacific, too, have they not?

A. Well, the Union Pacific are located out in a territory which the Colorado Fuel & Iron Company are in, and I think they are more partial, probably, to people out there than they are to people here.

Q. How would that consideration be altered at all by the fact that they have a separate agency? The Union Pacific and Southern Pacific are both represented here and they are competing with other lines for this traffic, and how could the purchase of material enter into that, if the Southern Pacific had a separate agency here, any more than it does now? That is the point I want to make clear. In other words, is not the question of reciprocity as much open now as it would be if they had a separate agent?

A. I think so.

Q. So, after all, then, there would not be any advantage to either you or the Southern Pacific, as far as you can see, in having a separate agency here, would there?

A. No, I don't really—outside of my own opinion that I would like to see the agencies here, and the more people you have working for you in that respect, on your shipments, why, the better. But Mr. Herring, representing the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, as it is now constituted, practically represents one line, and he can himself do what the other two men would have 2155 to do—he and the man that was representing the Union Pacific.

Q. They are desirable people to have around; but so far as you can see, two joint men would be just as good as two separate men?

A. I do not see the necessity of two joint men. One is good enough.

Q. You do not see the necessity of two separate men, do you?

A. Consulting my own feeling in the matter, I would like to see the agencies here.

Q. But you cannot specify anything they could do if they were here?

A. No.

Q. What a single man would do, a joint man would do?

A. No. I think Mr. Herring fulfills all the requirements.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Judge Lovett has introduced a rather interesting topic this last time. Let us pursue it a little further. You say that business is governed more or less by the spirit of reciprocity?

A. To some degree, yes.

Q. It is quite proper that it should be, is it not?

A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Now, assuming that the Union Pacific had not bought the control of the Southern Pacific at all, that they were as they used to be before 1901—entirely separate; not only having separate agencies here, but separate in interest; and the Southern Pacific, as Mr. Hawley testified he did, in New York, endeavored to work all the business to the coast by way of New Orleans for the benefit of the Southern Pacific—the Union Pacific, on the other hand, having no interest in the Southern Pacific, trying to work everything, of 2156 course, by Omaha or Kansas City—both of those companies being consumers, to some extent, of steel rails and other things that you manufacture, do you not think this principle of reciprocity might figure a little in the distribution of your traffic as between these two outlets to the coast?

A. As far as the Union Pacific is concerned, they would not get anything, under the present basis of reciprocity, because they buy very little from us. But the Union Pacific to-day is getting some business by that gateway because they are a through line, as we might say, in connection with the Southern Pacific, and are furnishing fast time and good train service; and that is an argument in their favor; while, on the other hand, the Colorado Midland and the D. & R. G., not being heavy purchasers, but purchasing some for their requirements, we give them some of the business that the Union Pacific would get if they were heavy purchasers from us.

Q. The fact is, then, that that is a weapon that railroads can use? I do not mean weapon in an offensive way, but it is an argument that railroads can use to get traffic, is it not?

A. It is a fair argument.

Q. And the Southern Pacific can use as an argument with you, if they were fighting for business, as they used to by New Orleans, that they are buying steel rails of you, can they not? That is proper.

A. We do not make rails; we make bars.

Q. Well, whatever you make.

A. Whatever we make.

Q. Whatever you do make, that is a fair argument for them to put up to you, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To get traffic to the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On the other hand, if the Union Pacific was independent
2157 of the Southern Pacific, and would come to you and buy stuff from you, that would be a fair argument for them to put up to get business routed that way, would it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that there would be some little difference produced, perhaps, by the separate ownership, instead of having one man who would say which one of the companies shall buy of you and which one shall buy of another man, and so on, if they were entirely separate and apart? It might make some difference in the movement of traffic through this principle of reciprocity?

A. Yes, sir; it would have its bearing.

Q. All the lines that are competing for transcontinental business out there west of the River are trying to get your business upon the theory that they give good service, are they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Santa Fe claim they give good service?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Try to give it, I suppose?

A. Yes.

Q. The Union Pacific?

A. The Union Pacific.

Q. In connection with the Southern or the San Pedro?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the El Paso route, and all of them, try to give good service to Southern California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does your traffic move to Southern California by the San Pedro and the Southern Pacific to some extent?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And also moves there by the El Paso gateway?

A. No, sir.

Q. Not to Southern California?

A. No, sir.

Q. The New Orleans gateway?

A. No, sir. The Santa Fe, San Pedro and Southern Pacific.

Q. You did not move anything to Southern California by 2158 the Sunset Route or any part of it?

A. No, sir; none that we controlled; and I am not positive that——

Q. I thought you said that through the connection at El Paso you moved stuff. Perhaps I misunderstood you?

A. We did in former days, not now.

Q. You have done it, though?

A. We have done it in times past, yes. We don't do it now.

Q. Well, what is the reason for that?

A. The old question of reciprocity.

Q. That is the same thing, is it? Reciprocity takes it over the other roads?

A. The lines between here and El Paso are not lines that are very heavy purchasers. Whether they are users of our material to any great extent or not, I do not know; but they are not heavy purchasers, and we do not ship by that gateway.

Q. How about between here and New Orleans?

A. The Illinois Central is the line that we would favor if we would ship by New Orleans.

Q. Do you ship some that way?

A. We ship to New Orleans that way, but not to the Pacific coast.

Q. Not to the Pacific coast?

A. No, sir.

Q. I think you gave in detail the way you do ship to the coast, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you ship some over the Canadian Pacific?

A. Not now.

Q. Not now?

A. Not into this country. If it is going into the Canadian Pacific coast, why, we do not control the routing on that. That is export material.

Q. Does your export stuff go by the Pacific or go by the 2159 Suez, destined to points across the Pacific?

A. Why, the biggest portion of our export shipments that we have made to Japan has gone by Seattle.

Q. By Seattle?

A. The Great Northern Railroad.

Q. Have you shipped anything by San Francisco?

A. Maybe a small box of samples, or something like that. I do not know of anything else.

Q. Chiefly by the Great Northern?

A. Chiefly by the Great Northern.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I wish to pursue a little further that interesting subject that Mr. Severance opened up. I understood him to suggest, and you to assent to it, that if the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific were entirely separate in their relations—that is, had no relations—that possibly through reciprocity the Southern Pacific might get a larger share of California business than it now gets, as against the Union Pacific. Now, Mr. Ogden, you don't mean to say that the Southern Pacific——

Mr. SEVERANCE. That is not what I asked him.

Mr. LOVETT. What did you ask him, then?

Mr. SEVERANCE. I asked him whether, if they were separate and distinct and each one working this reciprocity business, it might make a difference from time to time in the distribution of the traffic. You did not say which way.

Mr. LOVETT. Oh, yes. Well, that is in substance the same, I think.

2160 Q. I understood you to assent to that statement. Do you mean to suggest that the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific separately would buy more material than they do under their present relations, that they would use more?

A. No, I don't say that. They might buy more of us, though.

Q. Why?

A. Because I would eliminate the Union Pacific Railroad out of it altogether.

Q. Well, the Union Pacific does not buy from you now, and I understand you have eliminated it.

A. No, we have not eliminated them altogether. We give them a share of our business because they make the time.

Q. You do that notwithstanding the fact that they do not buy from you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you say if the Southern Pacific were separated from the Union Pacific and were to buy from you, you might give them more of the business.

A. The slow freight, the freight we did not have any hurried movement for, yes.

Q. What greater inducement could there be for the Southern Pacific to buy from you if separated from the Union Pacific, than now, Mr. Ogden?

A. Because, as I have just said, the freight to the coast that we are not in a hurry for, that is slow, would take the longer route via New Orleans.

Q. Take the longer route via New Orleans?

A. Yes.

Q. How long since you shipped any that way?

A. Why, there may be a car or two that escapes my memory, but as for general movement in that territory I suppose it has been seven or eight or nine years.

Q. Does the Southern Pacific buy from you now?

A. Yes, sir.

2161 Q. Well, don't you reciprocate now?

A. You bet; yes, sir.

Q. How?

A. Well, as I say, we give them some of the business via the Union Pacific railroad, and we give them some of the business via the other lines, the D. & R. G. and the Colorado Midland, but most of our business lately ——

Q. Why don't you reciprocate by way of New Orleans?

A. Because the time via the western gateway is much better than the time via New Orleans.

Q. How about this freight where you say time is not a consideration?

A. The dead freight, the slow freight?

Q. I don't know what kind of freight it was; the kind you said you would give them by way of New Orleans if they would buy more from you.

A. Well, we give that to them at Ogden. They get a good piece of it.

Q. You do that now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you probably would do that even if they bought more from you, wouldn't you?

A. Under the present circumstances, yes, or under the old time.

Q. What do you mean, then, by saying if they bought more from you, you would give them more by way of New Orleans?

A. We could do that, but at present they are hooked up with the Union Pacific, and we consider that one line to the Pacific coast, to San Francisco.

Q. The Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you give your business to San Francisco, then, at Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Patronizing the Denver & Rio Grande and other lines
2162 east of Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you do not give the Union Pacific any except where you have to on account of time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Their superior service. If they were separated, and the Southern Pacific should buy more from you, the only difference would be that you think you would give them more freight by way of New Orleans?

A. We did in times past.

Q. How long past?

A. We used to ship pretty heavy via New Orleans.

Q. How long ago?

A. About eight or nine years ago.

Q. Did they buy more from you then than now?

A. They bought through our agency or representative then on the coast, that carried our material in stock. Now, since the formation of that concern into a much larger concern, they do not represent us. We only have an office on the coast. Now they buy direct from us.

Q. Why, doesn't the Southern Pacific buy from you on the Pacific coast now?

A. Yes, they buy direct through our San Francisco office.

Q. In other words, there has been no change in that method of buying, has there?

A. Well, for a long time their name would not appear on our books. Now their name appears on our books since we have dispensed with the old Geo. W. Gibbs Company, and latterly the Pacific Hardware & Steel Company. Now the Southern Pacific buy directly from us and their name appears right on our books.

Q. Aren't their purchases satisfactory?

A. Very much so.

2163 Q. Why don't you ship by way of New Orleans, then? Why don't you reciprocate?

Mr. SEVERANCE. He has explained. You have got only one line now.

Mr. LOVETT. We have got two lines—we have got three.

WITNESS. You have got a good line via Omaha, Union Pacific and Ogden, and we are shipping that way now because you make the time.

Q. If we would buy more wouldn't you ship that way?

A. Ship what way?

Q. By way of Ogden, the way you are now doing?

A. Yes.

Q. What I want to understand is the reason why you say you would ship by way of New Orleans if we would buy more.

Mr. SEVERANCE. No, he said he would buy more if you were disassociated from the Union Pacific; that is what he said.

Mr. LOVETT. Now, Bro. Severance, let the witness answer.

WITNESS. I don't know but we are both arguing from two different points of view.

Q. I want to get your reason for saying if the Southern Pacific would buy more of your products that you would ship by way of New Orleans.

A. I didn't say if they would buy more. They are good buyers of ours, and for that reason we are favoring their route.

Mr. STUBBS. What he said was that if they bought more they would ship more.

Mr. SEVERANCE. He said if the two lines were separate, the way they used to be, they would get more business.

WITNESS. I didn't say if they would buy more, because the 2164 Southern Pacific, I must admit, is a very good purchaser of Jones & Laughlin.

Q. You do not mean to be understood as saying, then, that if the Southern Pacific should buy more of you that you would ship more by way of New Orleans?

A. Oh, no, no, not as a problem of the present.

Q. Well, I do not think you answered the question.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Let him finish his answer.

WITNESS. Not the way the situation is now.

Q. What is that?

A. Not the way the situation is now. Of course if the Southern Pacific would come to us and demand of us, on account of their purchases, that we ship via New Orleans, it would have to have consideration at our hands. They could do that to-day.

Q. But they are satisfied now, you mean, with your shipments by way of Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is immaterial to them whether you ship by way of Ogden?

A. It is immaterial how we send it to them.

Q. So you send it over their line either at Ogden, New Orleans or El Paso?

A. I think so, yes, sir; they get it at some of the junction points.

Q. Are they indifferent about your shipments over the other lines instead of the Union Pacific to Ogden?

A. Mr. Herring is a very active man. He wants the business for his line whichever way he can get it, the long or the short haul, naturally; and he is after the business as against everybody else, and every body else is against him.

2165 By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. I think you and Judge Lovett were, as you said, figuring from different standpoints. Let me see if I understood you correctly. What you meant to testify and what you did testify was that under present conditions the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific having amalgamated, you regard it as immaterial to the Southern Pacific whether you send the stuff via Ogden or via New Orleans—as the thing is now?

A. Yes. They will take it either way.

Q. And what you said was that if they had continued separate they might have diverted traffic via New Orleans by coming to you and asking for it as against the Union Pacific?

A. Well, they could come to us and demand it that way, possibly.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Now I do understand you. What has the amalgamation of the Union Pacific to do with it, inasmuch as you don't ship over the Union Pacific anyway?

A. Oh, we do ship some.

Q. Only what you have to in the matter of time. You ship over the competitors of the Union Pacific to Ogden.

A. We consider that that is one direct route and under the same control.

Q. That is just exactly the way you would ship if the Union Pacific was off the map, isn't it. You would ship by way of Ogden?

A. No, we have the Santa Fe. We don't have to ship over the Union Pacific to Ogden.

Q. I know that, but what has the amalgamation of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific to do with your shipments there
2166 inasmuch as you don't ship over the Union Pacific except as you have to on account of the time?

A. What has it to do with it?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't understand you, Judge.

Q. I understood you to state in answer to Mr. Severance, that inasmuch as the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific have been amalgamated, as you say, that you do not ship by way of New Orleans because you turn it over to the Southern Pacific at Ogden. Now, when it goes that way it does not pass over the Union Pacific; so I want to see what the amalgamation has to do with it. What influence has it? What has it to do with it at all?

A. The reason why we ship by the Union Pacific, as I said before, is on account of the service—the through train service.

Q. But I am asking you why you don't ship by the Union Pacific but ship over the Rio Grande and its connections.

A. Because those people are here soliciting that business in competition.

Q. So it goes to the Southern Pacific at Ogden anyway?

A. The Southern Pacific is bound to get the business.

Q. But as the Union Pacific doesn't get any of it, I want to know the reason why you say the amalgamation has anything to do with that.

Mr. SEVERANCE. He didn't say they did not get any of it, Judge.

Mr. LOVETT. Let the witness answer.

Mr. SEVERANCE. He says they don't get any of that except what is sent over the Union Pacific on account of the time.

2167 (The question was read.)

A. The Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific I consider one through line from here to San Francisco, say. We give them the business that we are absolutely in a hurry for and want to make time on; it is quite considerable—has been in times past—for the reason that the mills have been behind in their orders two and three months, and we had to get the stuff there as quick as we possibly could after it was shipped. The other little lines in Colorado—the D. & R. G. and the Colorado Midland—buy some material from us; they have some representation here, some very nice, active young men who solicit us for this business, and we give them a share of it. We consider that if it goes over the D. & R. G. or the Colorado Midland it has got to go to the Southern Pacific and the Southern Pacific gets the car. The combined total of the business that we ship over the Colorado Midland and the D. & R. G. and the Union Pacific makes up what we consider a fair share of our business for the Southern Pacific railroad. Now, as I say, if the Southern Pacific would come to me and demand that we should give them some of the business to New Orleans, we would have to give it consideration; no doubt about that. Whether we would give them much business or not afterwards would be determined at that time, for the reason that we would rather ship it via the Ogden gateway, as better time is made that way than via New Orleans and via El Paso.

Q. That does not operate as any restraint at all on your business—the fact that they do not demand the shipment via New Orleans, does it?

A. No, they have not asked us for it.

2168 Q. You would rather send it the way you do send it, of course?

A. If I had nothing to consider except the service to be rendered in my shipment, I would give it to the Union Pacific at Omaha always.

Q. You can ship it by way of New Orleans if you want to, can't you?

A. Yes, but the delay in getting the business to the market, or in the shipment en route, might seriously interfere with our sale of that material.

Q. So it might be a disadvantage to you for the Southern Pacific to insist upon shipments via New Orleans?

A. It would be. I said that would be a matter of consideration when they would come.

Q. And you reciprocate the Southern Pacific's trade, then, by sending by way of Ogden over these various lines?

A. By the different routes.

Q. And not over the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific, although you consider them practically one line?

A. Practically one line.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. In the old days, when Mr. Hawley was the general eastern agent, he worked very hard to send all the traffic he could by way of New Orleans, didn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at the present time Mr. Herring is not working very hard to send all the traffic via New Orleans, is he?

A. No; Mr. Herring is working to get the business at any junction point that he can get it.

Mr. LOVETT. And Mr. Hawley's work was to the disadvantage of the shipper, then, if it went by way of New Orleans?

2169 WITNESS. We found it so.

Mr. SEVERANCE. But under the principle of reciprocity you harkened to Hawley, did you, and his line?

WITNESS. No. In those days we did not control the business.

2170 JOHN F. LENT, being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Camplainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Lent, where do you live?

A. Pittsburg.

Q. How long have you lived in Pittsburg?

A. Practically all my life.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am a traffic manager for shippers.

Q. What shippers?

A. There are a number of large industries and two associations of manufacturers that I am traffic manager for.

Q. Would you mind putting those on the record?

A. I will.

Q. What are they?

A. I am traffic manager for the National Paving Brick Manufacturers' Association and the Pennsylvania and Western New York Brick Association; then, of the individual companies, the Carbon Steel Company, the Hussey & Binns Shovel Company, the Pittsburg Steel Foundry, the Mack Manufacturing Company, the Independent Brewing Company, the Republic Rubber Company, the United Engineering Company. I believe those are all.

Q. Are the plants of those various companies located at Pittsburg, or Pittsburg common points?

A. In Pittsburg and surrounding districts.

Q. Is it in the district that takes the Pittsburg-Buffalo common point rates?

A. Yes, sir, many of them.

Q. I don't suppose you would be able to tell anything about 2171 the output of those various concerns, by carloads?

A. No, I would not.

Q. In the aggregate it amounts to a very large tonnage, doesn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been in that business?

A. In the business of representing these various companies a little short of four years.

Q. Previous to that what was your business?

A. I was traffic manager of the Union Steel Company.

Q. Is that a large concern here?

A. It was a large corporation, a $25,000,000 institution, that sold out to the U. S. Steel corporation.

Q. And up to what time did you represent them—up to 1904?

A. I represented them in 1901 and 1902.

Q. Previous to that time what railroads, if any, were you connected with?

A. I was commercial agent for the Pere Marquette system for between two and three years.

Q. What years?

A. In 1899 and 1900, as I recall it.

Q. Previous to that were you in the railroad service?

A. Yes.

Q. With what company?

A. I was with the Pennsylvania lines.

Q. For how long a period of time?

A. I started in 1889, as messenger, and continued through the offices to chief clerk in the division freight office.

Q. Do you remember when the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific had separate agencies here in Pittsburg?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you acquainted with the agents?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were their names?

2172 A. For the Southern Pacific, Mr. Herring; for the Union Pacific, I knew Mr. Fowler as the first agent of my knowledge, and then Mr. Lothrop, Mr. Choate, and subsequently Mr. Herring.

Q. Was Mr. Choate the last agent of the Union Pacific prior to the time the two offices were consolidated?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you remember when they were consolidated?

A. I think it was in 1901, but I am not sure of the date.

Q. Since then Mr. Herring has been the agent of both lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When these offices were separate what was the condition as to competition between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific for transcontinental business?

A. The agent for each line solicited the business, in the interests of his road.

Q. Which way was the Southern Pacific endeavoring to work its business to the coast?

A. The Southern Pacific seemed to contend for the long haul.

Q. Via New Orleans?

A. Via New Orleans.

Q. Was there competition between the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific for business to Portland at that time?

A. There may have been, but not to my knowledge. I don't recall any.

Q. You don't remember as to Portland?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was there at any time a movement of traffic by the Morgan line from this region?

A. It has not been practicable from a rate standpoint, from the Pittsburg district.

Q. It is only from points east of Pittsburg?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that the movement from the Pittsburg district, so far as the Morgan line is concerned, is practically nothing?

2173 A. Exactly.

Q. Were there any occasions that you remember when those rail rates were absorbed as far west as Pittsburg by the Morgan line?

A. For coast business, I believe there was no time, in my knowledge.

Q. Was there for any other class of business except coast business?

A. For a very short period the Morgan line was a factor on Texas business from this territory, due to the application of the seaboard rates from Pittsburg district, but for a very limited time.

Q. Did that extend beyond Texas—extend into Colorado?

A. I believe not.

Q. So that the Morgan line has not been effective in the Pittsburg district?

A. I understand it has not.

Q. That is what I understood. When you were working with the Pere Marquette, where did you endeavor to route transcontinental traffic?

A. The Pere Marquette was not much of a factor on transcontinental business.

Q. Their western terminus is Chicago, isn't it?

A. At that time they had not gotten into Chicago.

Q. Oh, I see. Then, of course, they were not?

A. They had to work it across the lake——

Q. Across to Manitowoc—through that way?
A. Yes, from Luddington over to Manitowoc.
Q. Then they did not figure very much?
A. They did not figure.
Q. Had it been the custom of the transcontinental lines, prior to the amalgamation of the agencies of the Southern Pacific
2174 and Union Pacific, to maintain commercial agencies in Pittsburg—all the transcontinental lines?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did the Canadian Pacific have an agency here?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The Northern Pacific?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The Great Northern?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The Santa Fe?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What are these agents doing for these different lines?
A. The solicitation on their part seems to be more in the matter of advocating the service that the road is capable of giving, and supplying rates and tariffs, and giving such information as helps the shipper out on matters that the shipper can not have as intimate a knowledge of as the agent.
Q. Do you regard these agencies as efficient and useful to railroads in securing business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And in offering these various bits of assistance to the shippers, I suppose it is for the ultimate purpose of getting the business for the road represented by the solicitor, is it not?
A. That seems to be the motive.
Q. Now, since 1901, when the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific agencies were consolidated, has there been any competition between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific for transcontinental business, as far as you have observed?
A. No, sir.
Q. Does the personal element enter into the ability of commercial agents to get business?
A. It does.
Q. That is, the personal friendship with the shippers?
A. Yes, sir.
2175 Q. And personal relations with them?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You think that is effective in securing business, do you?
A. I have always regarded it so.
Q. And you think this assistance to shippers that you have mentioned is effective likewise?
A. I do; yes, sir.
Q. Do you remember of any time that business has been carried to coast points by the Canadian Pacific and by boat from Vancouver?

A. Yes, sir; I have known of such.
Q. When was that?
A. I had knowledge of that probably eight or nine years ago.
Q. What kind of traffic moved that way, do you remember?
A. I think I sent some nails and wire that way; not much freight though.
Q. To where—San Francisco?
A. San Francisco.
Q. How did that move—first by Chicago, or did the Canadian Pacific get it up north here some place?
A. It has been so long ago that my recollection of the routing that was used between here and Portland is rather indefinite.
Q. Do you remember the existence of the boat line from Portland to San Francisco?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you ever make any shipments that way?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What kind?
A. That is this shipment I speak of.
Q. I didn't ask you about that. You didn't understand. I asked you about shipments by the Canadian Pacific and Vancouver. You are speaking about shipments from Portland, are you?
A. I am speaking about shipments from Portland to San Francisco.
Q. That was some nails and wire?
A. Yes.

Q. Do you have any recollection of any shipments from here
2176 or points near Pittsburg to Vancouver by the Canadian Pacific and then down by boat to San Francisco?

A. I have never used that route.
Q. Do you know of any oriental business going from Pittsburg by the Pacific coast?
A. I do not.
Q. Do you know of any that has moved that way in the past?
A. Yes, sir; I know that shipments have moved that way.
Q. Do you know over what lines they have moved to the coast?
A. I have not had any shipments of my own.
Q. You merely know of them from your knowledge——
A. Hearsay.
Q. You only know of them from your knowledge of the traffic. Well, they have come to your knowledge, have they, as a traffic man?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you remember what kind of stuff went that way?
Mr. LOVETT. He says that all he knows about it is hearsay.
Mr. SEVERANCE. He is competent to testify.
Mr. LOVETT. I object to that as hearsay.
Q. You keep familiar with the movement of traffic out of here, don't you—try to?
A. Yes, sir; try to.

Q. It is part of your business, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, if you recall what shipments you learned of that were made to the Orient via San Francisco——

Mr. SEVERANCE. Do you want to object to it?

Mr. LOVETT. Yes. The defendants object to that upon the ground that the witness has already stated that all he knows about it is hearsay.

Q. You may answer the question, Mr. Lent.

A. I could not indicate intelligently any particular class of business.

2177 Q. Do you remember the route over which it moved to the coast—what transcontinental route west of the Missouri River?

A. I have no specific knowledge of the route.

Q. I don't remember whether I asked you this question or not—I intended to: Do you know of any time, years ago, when business moved to Portland, Oregon, by the Ogden gateway and Central Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever make shipments that way yourself?

A. No, sir.

Q. Since you have been familiar with conditions here have there been any shipments around the Horn or by the Panama route to the coast?

A. I have shipped by the Panama route.

Q. What steamship line did you use from New York?

A. The Panama Railroad and Steamship Line.

Q. The Panama Railroad itself owns the steamship line from New York to Colon, doesn't it?

A. We so understand it.

Q. Operated with the railroad?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From Panama north to San Francisco what line did it go over—the Pacific Mail?

A. We were not informed as to that. They made the arrangement for the through rate, and it was immaterial to us.

Q. How long ago was that?

A. Within the past six months.

Q. Previous to that had you also shipped that way?

A. I have had shipments that way; yes, sir.

Q. Always, ever since you have been in the business, have you—off and on?

A. Yes; at long intervals however.

Q. That route has always been open?

A. Yes, sir.

2178 Q. How are the rates on that route, and how have they been, compared with the transcontinental all-rail rates?

A. There is a substantial differential prevailing.

Q. How do the rates on that route compare with the American-Hawaiian line across Tehuantepec?

A. The Hawaiian line usually gets a little better rate. Their service is a little better.

Q. The Hawaiian line gets a higher rate than the Panama?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Because the service is better?

A. I think that is the general rule.

Q. In what respect is the service better? Quicker, you mean?

A. Quicker, yes, sir, by the Tehuantepec route.

Q. Do you remember of shipments by the American-Hawaiian line before the Tehuantepec route was opened?

A. Via the Horn?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there considerable traffic moved out of here over that route?

A. I can not answer as to the extent. I had a shipload or a large cargo that went.

Q. The route that way was a very long route, but most all sea route?

A. Yes.

Q. The tariff was less?

A. The rates were very attractive then.

Q. Did you ever know of any shipments—did you ever control any shipments yourself from territory east of Pittsburg and Buffalo by the Morgan line?

A. East of the Pittsburg district?

Q. Yes.

A. Not east of the Pittsburg district, no, sir.

Q. But you have shipped from the Pittsburg district by the 2179 Morgan line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?

A. Not to California points.

Q. That is what I mean. Not transcontinental?

A. No, I haven't; not transcontinental.

Q. You said you did to Texas points, I believe?

A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You keep informed of the changes in transcontinental rates generally, don't you, Mr. Lent?

A. I try to.

Q. And you are familiar with the method of filing them under the interstate law?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are, I suppose, familiar in a general way with the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act regulating rates?

A. In a general way, yes, sir.

Q. That is the business of these traffic agents of shippers, is it not—to keep posted on those matters?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And inform their employers or principals? There are a great many different routes open from this district to the Pacific coast, are there not—routes that embrace either the Atchison or the Southern Pacific ultimately?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Various lines leading from this territory, and lying between this territory and the Missouri River and the Rocky Mountains?

A. Yes.

Q. As connections of the Southern Pacific or Atchison form through routes on this Pacific coast business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All of these routes are open to shippers, are they not?

A. They are.

Q. Shippers here who wish to ship to the Pacific coast may 2180 go, if they prefer, via the Southern Pacific route via New Orleans, or via El Paso, or via Ogden, or via the Atchison; all of these lines are open to them?

A. They are, yes, sir.

Q. And have been all along?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that has been true ever since the days of Mr. Hawley, too, hasn't it?

A. Yes. I don't know the gentleman.

Q. You know of him, do you not?

A. I know of him.

Q. During the days when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate agents here, the Union Pacific agent worked for the Ogden route, the Southern Pacific agent worked preferentially for the New Orleans route, didn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But if he could not get it that way as against the Atchison, for example, and could get it by way of Ogden, he would work via Ogden, would he not?

A. He would, yes, sir.

Q. Or via El Paso?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In other words, he preferred the route that afforded him the longest haul?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But if he could not get that, he would take what he could?

A. Exactly.

Q. But if a shipper preferred either one of those routes, he had a right to take it, did he not? They were all open to him?

A. They were all open, yes, sir.

Q. That has always been true?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Such business as the agent of the Union Pacific controlled for the Pacific coast went ultimately over the Southern Pacific, didn't it, from Ogden west?
A. Yes, much of it.
Q. All of it, didn't it? all of that going south of Portland?
A. Yes.
2181 Mr. SEVERANCE. You mean all-rail business?
WITNESS. The all-rail.
Q. The all-rail business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The great bulk of it went that way, didn't it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you ever know, besides this shipment of nails, any freight to go to San Francisco by way of Portland from this territory?
A. No, I have no knowledge except of this one shipment that I speak of.
Q. And when was that made?
A. Probably six or seven years ago.
Q. You can not fix it more definitely?
A. I can not fix the date, though.
Q. And you never knew of any traffic moving to San Francisco by way of Portland except the shipment to which you refer?
A. No, I have no specific knowledge of anything else.
Q. How did that shipment that you referred to move, do you remember?
A. Up to Portland?
Q. Yes.
A. I can't recall just the routing which was used.
Q. Do you know whether it went over the Union Pacific or the Northern Pacific?
A. I am not prepared to say just how it went.
Q. So you cannot recall at all the route up to Portland?
A. No, sir.
Q. What line carried it from Portland to San Francisco, do you know?
A. A steamship line the name of which I don't recall.
Q. That was a very exceptional shipment?
A. It was in my experience. We didn't use it much.
Q. Are you positive even about that shipment, Mr. Lent? You don't remember the routing at all up to Portland? Are you positive about that?
2182 A. My recollection is rather faint, but I feel sure that we had a shipment.
Q. Are you sure it went by steamer or by rail from Portland?
A. By steamer from Portland.
Q. You are sure of that, are you?
A. Yes; I feel sure of that much.

Q. With the exception of that shipment, all shipments controlled by the separate agents of the Union Pacific here, as far as you know, destined to California, went over the Southern Pacific?

A. The Southern Pacific; yes, sir.

Q. From Ogden. Now do you see any reason why, in view of the relations of the Union Pacific merely as one link in this transcontinental rail line, assuming that it is a preferred connection of the Southern Pacific—do you see any reason, from the standpoint of the shipper or from the standpoint of the railroad company, why a joint agent could not represent both the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific interests as well as separate agents could?

A. With the same activity that two representatives would give, I see no reason why.

Q. There is competition enough by the Atchison and its connections to stimulate activity, isn't there?

A. There is.

Q. All of these eastern connections, lines east of the Missouri River, lines east of Ogden, Kansas City and El Paso, the Texas & Pacific and its connections, the Rock Island, and these various other lines lying between here and the Missouri River and as far west as the Rocky Mountains—that is pretty active too, isn't it?

A. In this territory it is very active.

Q. Although it ultimately goes over either the Southern Pacific or the Atchison?

A. Exactly.

2183 Q. There is no disadvantage to shippers in having all these lines open; that is, the fact that you may ship via New Orleans or El Paso or Omaha is no disadvantage to you, is it?

A. No, sir.

Q. And all of those gateways have been kept open, I believe you have stated?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If the Southern Pacific had an agent here, separately, actively soliciting against the Union Pacific line, his line would not be an advantageous one, would it, by way of New Orleans, as compared with the all-rail line?

A. From the standpoint of service, no.

Q. Well, from any other standpoint?

A. Unless in the matter of reciprocal relations, that one of the other witnesses spoke of.

Q. In the matter of buying supplies, etc.?

A. Yes. I would not be interested in that, however.

Q. Well, you don't see any reason why it could not reciprocate just as much now, do you?

A. From the business that my companies have it is not a factor.

Q. Well, the competition of the Atchison for California business, and these other lines, is enough to stimulate the spirit of reciprocity in the Southern Pacific, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don't see how the Union Pacific, if separate, could stimulate that any greater, do you, as it is dependent on the Southern Pacific anyway for its outlet west?

A. So far as my own knowledge goes, I don't see that it could be much improved.

2184 By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. You have spoken about the consolidation of these agencies here in Mr. Herring, and Mr. Lovett has asked you a number of questions with reference to it. When the agencies were separate, the agent of the Union Pacific, Mr. Lothrop or Mr. Choate, was trying to get business exclusively via that route, wasn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The agent of the Southern Pacific (Mr. Herring) was trying, if possible, to get business via the Southern route?

A. Exactly.

Q. So that there was active competition between the two, wasn't there?

A. There was.

Q. For Pacific coast business. And it was only when a party insisted on sending his stuff via a northern route, either the Santa Fe or the Union Pacific, and refused to send it around by New Orleans, that the Southern Pacific man would try to get it via Ogden; that is true, isn't it?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, Judge Lovett says that there is other competition; that the Santa Fe man is enough to stimulate competition.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Suppose the Santa Fe should be represented by the same man that represents the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific; suppose Mr. Herring should spread himself out a little further and take in the Santa Fe; can you then see how there would be any competition in these through routes to the Coast, between the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific?

A. The competition would be eliminated.

2185 Q. Therefore when Mr. Herring takes in two of those three routes, competition is eliminated between those two and only exists between the two together and the Santa Fe?

A. That is correct.

Q. That is true, isn't it?

A. As I understand it.

Q. Now, the rates have been the same via all the routes, haven't they?

A. The all-rail rates; yes, sir.

Q. All-rail rates; that is what I mean.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By all the routes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For many years?

COPY BOUND

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know anything about the divisions among connections?

A. No, sir. There was a time when I did.

Q. You remember, don't you, that they have been stable?

A. Yes, sir; I believe they have.

Q. They were established many years ago, and have never been changed?

A. I believe they have been unchanged.

Q. So that the Union Pacific was free to go in and get all the business it could, without any fear of losing any part of its divisions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it did hustle actively for the business?

A. It did.

Q. And its agency worked exclusively for that line, didn't it?

A. It did.

Q. And what was done here by the consolidation of the agencies was to do away with the Union Pacific agent and put Mr. Herring, who had been competing with the Union Pacific agent, in charge of both lines?

A. He was placed in charge of both lines.

2186 By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Now I wish to split these hairs with Bro. Severance once more. Isn't there this vital difference between the situation of the Atchison and the Union Pacific: that the Atchison has its own lines to California points, and, through its own lines and its connections east, is an active competitor of the Southern Pacific for California business, whereas the Union Pacific cannot get to California except in connection with the Southern Pacific? Isn't there that difference in the two systems.

A. That is a statement of fact.

Q. It is a very material statement, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Isn't it also true that the Union Pacific could never make a rate to California without the concurrence of the Southern Pacific?

A. That would be true.

Q. You don't suppose that the Southern Pacific, controlling the line from Ogden to California points, would permit the Union Pacific to make a rate to California or to cut the rate to California, do you, if it knew it?

A. The Southern Pacific would be the ruling factor.

Q. Yes. It controls that situation so far as the Union Pacific is concerned?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Necessarily. Now in this matter of divisions, you said that they are largely stable. You see no reason why, if the Union Pacific or any other line attempted to manipulate its revenue by giving concessions from it, and if the Southern Pacific discovered that, that it should not change those divisions, do you? You know of no reason why it should not do it?

ND CLOSE IN CENTER

A. No, sir.

2187 Q. In other words, the division is not so fixed that the Southern Pacific could not change it or cut off the connections altogether with the Union Pacific, if it wanted to?

A. Exactly. The division is a matter between the roads.

Q. Now this competition that you said existed between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific, that Mr. Severance again asked you about, so far as the Southern Pacific was concerned it was a contention for the most revenue; that is, the preference of either one of three routes that it controlled?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that it was seeking to get the traffic over that route and at that gateway that afforded the longest haul and the greatest revenue. That is true, isn't it?

A. That was the effort, yes, sir.

Q. And when the Union Pacific got the traffic, the Southern Pacific got it also, though not quite as much revenue perhaps as if the Southern Pacific took it the other way?

A. Exactly.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. The Southern Pacific didn't have anything to do with making the rates on that shipment that you sent by Portland and thence by boat, did it?

A. They would not have.

Q. And that route was always open to the Union Pacific, which had a line from the Missouri river to Portland, wasn't it? The Union Pacific through its sub-lines, the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railway & Navigation, reaches Portland, doesn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And had a boat line down to San Francisco?

A. That route was open.

2188 Q. That route was open, and that route was open to be used by the Union Pacific if the Southern Pacific attempted to claim an unfair division, wasn't it?

A. I don't know how they used it.

Q. Well, I say it was open to be used?

A. It was open at least.

Q. For competitive purposes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, the Southern Pacific cannot make a rate of itself, from Pittsburg to California, can it?

A. They can not.

Q. It can only make a rate in connection with connecting lines?

A. Yes, sir.

COPY BOUND C

Q. That is the way the railroad business is always done, isn't it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The rates are made through the bureaus?
A. Concurrence through the bureaus.
Q. They are all made by agreement, aren't they?
A. By concurrence, yes, sir.
Q. And the rates being fixed in that way, by concurrence of the various lines interested, no one line controls it; they all have to concur, don't they?
A. That is correct as far as the rates go.
Q. And if the rate should be changed tomorrow, the other lines would have to meet it, wouldn't they; otherwise they would go out of the traffic?
A. It depends on which way the change was.
Q. If one line between two competing points should change the rate, the other lines would have to meet that rate or go out of the business?
2189 A. It depends on which way the change is. If it is reduced——
Q. I mean if the rate was lowered.
A. If the rate is lowered, the other line would have to meet it.
Q. And if the rate was put up, the other lines would be glad to meet it, wouldn't they, naturally?
[The witness laughs.]
Q. But the fact is that in the nature of the business, the rates between all these points that are competitive, over all the lines, must in the nature of things be the same?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And they have been maintained the same, except in periods when the law was violated——
A. Yes, sir.
Q. —and cut rates were put in?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. So that the competition which has existed for many years—the legitimate competition which has existed for many years—has been competition in service and competition in solicitation of business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. That is all, isn't it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And in soliciting business, the soliciting agent has used the various means of inducing traffic to go via his line, that have been stated here on the stand?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, prior to the amalgamation of these agencies here in Pittsburg—the agencies of the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific, that competition, the only competition that can legitimately exist, was in existence between the Union Pacific route and the Sunset Route, as you have testified?
A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Now let me make an application of Mr. Severance's theory.

2190 Mr. SEVERANCE. I have no theory. I was asking questions.

Mr. LOVETT. Yes, you have a very good one. I think it is sound.

Q. Isn't there this difference between the case that he assumes and the case that exists so far as the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific are concerned: that if there was a disagreement between the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific as to divisions or as to tariffs, at Ogden, that the Union Pacific would have no outlet for transcontinental business except by way of Portland and the boat line, if that be considered one, whereas the Southern Pacific might have forty, in that it could establish rates with the Denver & Rio Grande——

A. Exactly.

Q. ——with its connections at El Paso, the Texas & Pacific, the Rock Island, and with the various lines that it connects with in Texas and at New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In other words, its lines are so situated and have such connections that if the Union Pacific should antagonize it, it would be open to do business perhaps almost as well as it could with the Union Pacific, whereas the Union Pacific would be shut out of the California business except in connection with the Southern Pacific? Isn't that true?

A. That is true. The theory on which you are arguing seems to be from the standpoint of divisions.

Q. Yes; and joint rates.

A. And joint rates; yes, sir.

Q. That is, suppose that they were to terminate there.

A. Yes. If the divisions were not satisfactory the rates would not be put in.

2191 Q. Now the next point. Suppose that the Union Pacific attempted to work this route via Portland over which you shipped nails to San Francisco—suppose that it attempted to work that route on California business as against the Southern Pacific, to coerce divisions, or for some purpose of that sort—which I think has been suggested by Mr. Severance; could not the Southern Pacific retaliate and injure the Union Pacific vastly more than the Union Pacific could possibly injure it by using the Portland route, by the Southern Pacific transferring its business to the Denver & Rio Grande at Ogden? In other words, as it is, the Union Pacific is the preferred connection of the Southern Pacific. Suppose the Union Pacific were to disrupt that by using the Portland route; don't you think, from such knowledge as you have of the railroad business that the Union Pacific would be in very much worse condition if it attempted to use the Portland route, by the Southern Pacific favoring the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. I would so regard it, because of the fact that the Southern Pacific would control the larger tonnage.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Now let us see about that last statement. Where does the Union Pacific start—the eastern end of it?

A. At Omaha.

Q. What lines are there that are feeding business into the Union Pacific at Omaha?

A. The North-Western and St. Paul.

Q. Let me suggest some and see if I am right. You said the North-Western and the St. Paul?

A. Yes.

Q. The Illinois Central?

A. The Illinois Central.

Q. The C. B. & Q.?

A. The C. B. & Q.

2192 Q. The Wabash?

A. The Wabash.

Q. The Chicago Great Western?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Rock Island?

A. The Rock Island.

Q. Do you think it would be an advantageous thing, in the case that my friend has just suggested, for the Southern Pacific-Ogden route to antagonize all these lines that are sending business over the Union Pacific and thence over the Southern Pacific to San Francisco?

A. Wouldn't it be good policy to antagonize them?

Q. No, to antagonize all those lines that are gathering up business, taking it to Omaha, and then sending it out to Ogden over the Union Pacific?

A. It certainly wouldn't be good policy to antagonize them.

Q. Consequently, when you get to talking about the Southern Pacific refusing to do the decent thing, irrespective of the fact that the law requires them not to discriminate against the Union Pacific, they could not afford to do that in view of this enormous traffic that is controlled by these lines east of Omaha, could they, in which that traffic could be sent by the Santa Fe or the Northern routes or by the Union Pacific around by Portland and by boat? If they got into a warfare of that kind it would disorganize the whole situation out there, wouldn't it?

A. That would be a correct statement, with the modification that the shippers are a factor in selecting the route.

Q. They are, yes; certainly they are. But what I am getting at is, that each one of these lines, the Southern Pacific and the 2193 Union Pacific—each one has certain elements of strength in its position, in order to get the other to do justice by it.

A. Yes.

Q. And they have lived along for a great many years, most of the time harmoniously, under a substantially uniform division, as you have stated?

A. Yes, sir; I believe so.

Q. And, as a matter of ordinary business and common sense, such a situation as Judge Lovett has suggested would not be apt to occur, would it—of trying to freeze the Union Pacific out of a reasonable proportion of the through rate?

Mr. LOVETT. If the Union Pacific had common sense management it would never try to use the Portland route.

WITNESS. I would like to sanction that—with the addition that we have the eastbound business to keep in mind, originating on the Southern Pacific.

Q. Certainly. We have the eastbound business; very true. The fact is that the Southern Pacific was in a good position to compete with the Union Pacific, wasn't it, for business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Union Pacific, because of its eastern connections, and because of its being a short line across, and because of its having a line up to Portland and a boat line down, was in good position to compete with the Southern?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And each one was competing with the other, until Bro. Stubbs took possession and put Mr. Herring in here all by himself, in Pittsburg. Isn't that about right?

[The witness laughs.]

By Mr. LOVETT:

2194 Q. Isn't it true that every one of these lines that Mr. Severance mentioned as feeding the Union Pacific at Omaha can just as well feed the Denver & Rio Grande and send their business to the Pacific coast over the Denver & Rio Grande and the Southern Pacific at Ogden?

A. To parts of the Pacific coast?

Q. All? Can't they reach everything south of Portland?

A. Without the use of the Southern Pacific did I understand you?

Q. No; you misunderstood my question. Mr. Severance named a number of lines that he said were feeders of the Union Pacific at Omaha.

A. Yes.

Q. My question is, Is it not true that every one of those lines can just as well feed the Denver & Rio Grande at Denver and Pueblo and points there, and reach the Southern Pacific that way, without going over the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Every one of them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that they are not dependent on the Union Pacific to reach the Southern Pacific?

A. No, sir.

Q. Isn't it true that a good many of those lines that he mentioned do reach the Southern Pacific over the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. I can not answer as to that.

Q. Now, another thing. Mr. Severance asked you a general question here. Suppose that the Union Pacific were to attempt to use the route up to Portland, and then a boat line down to San Francisco; do you not think, from such knowledge as you have of the movement of the traffic of the country, that these connections of the Union Pacific and the Denver & Rio Grande, that Mr. Severance named, would naturally use the Denver & Rio Grande and the Southern Pacific, rather than to attempt to work the Union Pacific around that way—as a business proposition?

2195

A. Yes, sir; as a business proposition I would not regard it as so good a route.

Q. The Southern Pacific has a good many lines in the interior of California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So, even if they were to use the Portland route and get down there, they would still have to use Southern Pacific lines to get to the interior?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Severance asked you, in his sweeping proposition, whether the Southern Pacific, by reason of originating this large amount of business, was in a position to compete with the Union Pacific. Don't you mean by that, that the Southern Pacific, originating that business, could send some of it by the Southern Pacific and some of it over its own line to Ogden, and thence over either the Union Pacific or the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. The eastbound business?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. That is, the Southern Pacific is in very good position to compete with the Union Pacific on eastbound traffic, because it can route it by the Sunset Route?

A. They control the traffic largely out there.

Q. Well, they control the unrouted traffic, we will say?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe it has been developed in this matter that there is certain traffic that the shippers are still allowed to control?

A. Yes.

Q. I think you mentioned that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But the unrouted traffic can be sent either way by the Southern Pacific?

2196

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that they are in an excellent position, with their Sunset Route, to exclude the Union Pacific from that unrouted traffic to the east?

A. They are.

Q. And that would be regarded as an act of competition between the Sunset Route and the Southern Pacific, would it not?

A. If they were operated separately that would be——

Q. That is what I am speaking of. Suppose that they were operated separately?

A. Yes. That would be the natural tendency.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Mr. Severance is fond of showing that it is impossible for Mr. Herring and Mr. Stubbs each to compete with himself. Is it not impossible also for the Southern Pacific to compete with itself? It controls both of these routes, doesn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE. It is not impossible for the Union Pacific to get business out there and get it routed that way, via Ogden, through its own efforts?

WITNESS. If they were separated?

Mr. SEVERANCE. Yes.

WITNESS. Yes, sir.

An adjournment was then taken until the morning of Thursday, January 28, 1909, at 10.30 o'clock, at the same place.

2197 CIRCUIT COURT ROOM, PITTSBURG, PA.,
Thursday, January 28, 1909—10.30 a. m.

The hearing was resumed, pursuant to adjournment, before the Special Examiner, Hon Sylvester G. Williams, at the above time and place.

Present: On behalf of the complainant: Mr. C. A. Severance, Mr. G. E. Husted. On behalf of the defendants: Mr. R. S. Lovett, Mr. D. T. Watson.

THOMAS SNAPE,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Snape?

A. At East Liverpool, Ohio.

Q. How long have you lived there?

A. About 25 years.

Q. What is your business?

A. Bookkeeper and routing agent for the C. C. Thompson Pottery Company.

Q. What kind of pottery do they make?

A. They make white tableware, Rockingham, and yellow ware.

Q. Is it an establishment of considerable size?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To what parts of the country do you ship your products?

A. All over the United States.

Q. Do you ship to the Pacific coast?

A. We have, but in combination cars with other potteries.

2198 Q. You know Mr. Wells, of West Virginia, do you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you shipped with him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. Herring?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. Lothrop and Mr. Choate?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember, years ago, those gentlemen calling on you soliciting shipments?

A. Yes, sir; they used to come about once a month.

Q. Which way was Mr. Herring soliciting shipments?

A. For the Southern Pacific.

Q. And Mr. Choate?

A. For the Union Pacific.

Q. Did you attend to the routing of your product then?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you send it?

A. We sent it in combination cars, sometimes with Knowles, Taylor & Knowles, and the Homer Laughlin China Company.

Q. Where are those people located?

A. They have one of their factories on the East Liverpool side, and the other on the Newell side—West Virginia (the Laughlin), but our cars were with the ones on the East Liverpool side. They have three plants.

Q. What route did those cars take to the coast?

A. I could not say. They had the shipping of them.

Q. Mr. Wells attended to that?

A. Mr. Wells and Knowles, Taylor & Knowles had the shipping of them.

Q. Since 1901 have your shipments been solicited by Mr. Herring?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For which route, if either, or for both?

A. He represents both.

2199 Q. He expresses no preference between the two?

A. No.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. When your shipments went by the Union Pacific, in response to the suggestions of Mr. Choate, which way did they go?

A. We never made any shipments of our own; they were invariably made in conjunction with the other potteries.

Q. What route did they take?

A. I could not say. They had the ordering of the cars and the shipping of them. We simply had to load our goods and turn the car over to them.

Q. But you do know that whatever shipments went to the Pacific coast over the Union Pacific would also pass over the Southern Pacific from Ogden west?

A. That I understood.

Q. How is that?

A. I could not say how they shipped.

Q. Are you familiar with the location of the Union Pacific lines and the Southern Pacific lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You know, do you not, that the Union Pacific connects with the Southern Pacific at Ogden, Utah?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that that was the only outlet for the Union Pacific south of Portland?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that whatever shipment went to any point south of Portland, over the Union Pacific, would necessarily pass over the Southern Pacific from Ogden west?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In soliciting business, when they had separate solicitors, if Mr. Herring could not get the shipment by way of New Orleans, he would seek to get it either by El Paso or Ogden, would he not?

2200 A. Well, when they came to us soliciting, I invariably told them that we had not the shipping of the car. Then, of course, they did not express any opinion of any routing. I simply told them who had the shipping, and then they went to them; so they had no occasion to express any ——

Q. So you don't know, then, what method——

A. No, I don't know what the other potteries——

Q. You simply knew that one was a Southern Pacific representative and the other a Union Pacific?

A. That is all.

Q. Do you know the different routes to the Pacific coast by which shipments are made of your products?

A. No, I do not.

Q. You don't know how many lines there may be over which it can move to the Pacific coast?

A. If we were shipping to the coast I should know; but not having to do, why——

Mr. SEVERANCE. They turn it all over to Mr. Wells.

2201 W. E. WELLS,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Wells, where do you live?
A. At Newell, West Virginia.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am secretary of the Homer Laughlin China Company, manufacturers of white tableware.
Q. You know Mr. Snape, who was just on the stand, do you not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You are the Mr. Wells he was speaking of?
A. I presume so. I could not hear his testimony.
Q. He was speaking of Mr. Wells routing their traffic to the coast years ago.
A. I presume he referred to the office with which I am connected. Personally I did not do it.
Q. But you remember of shipments being made in cars in which your product and theirs were both loaded, do you not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How many potteries has your company?
A. There are two separate plants.
Q. Where are they located?
A. One at East Liverpool, Ohio, the other at Newell, West Virginia.
Q. Who has had charge of the shipments or the routing, so far as the routing is left to your company?
A. On coast shipments?
Q. Yes.
A. They are always routed by the consignee.
2202 Q. They are always routed by the consignee?
A. Invariably.
Q. They are now. How was it formerly?
A. Always, as far as I recollect, for twenty years. I have never known it any other way.
Q. You have never had the routing?
A. No.
Q. Were you familiar with the routes over which the stuff moved?
A. Prior to ten years ago I gave that matter personal attention.
Q. Which way did the cars move, prior to ten years ago?
A. I can recall using every transcontinental line.
Q. First striking the transcontinental lines at the Missouri or Mississippi River, did some of the cars go by New Orleans?
A. Occasionally there was a car by New Orleans—the Southern Pacific at that point.
Q. El Paso?
A. I do not recall using that connecting point in any routing.

Q. Is there any other point at which you reached the Southern Pacific and the South, excepting New Orleans?

A. I have no recollection of any other.

Q. Did you ship over the Santa Fe?

A. Frequently.

Q. The Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Northern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Great Northern?

A. The Great Northern.

Q. This business you say was routed by the consignees?

A. Always.

Q. Who were the consignees—wholesale merchants?

A. Principally, but not always.

2203 Q. Where were they located in the Pacific coast country?

A. At Los Angeles, Sacramento, San Francisco, Portland, Tacoma, Seattle.

Q. All along the coast?

A. All along the coast.

Q. Do you know Mr. Herring?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know Mr. Choate?

A. Never personally.

Q. Did you know any of the Union Pacific agents in the old days, when they had a separate agency?

A. I cannot recall having known any of them personally.

Q. Did you ever see them in your office soliciting business?

A. I can only assume that I did; I don't remember.

Q. Are there any other potteries that ship in connection with your company, except Mr. Snape's company?

A. Yes. I know there have been enclosures in our cars from other potteries, but I do not distinctly recall what ones. I know there have been quite a number.

Q. You knew Mr. Herring years ago, you say?

A. I have known Mr. Herring for nearly twenty years.

Q. In the days when the Union Pacific had its own agency, which way did Mr. Herring solicit traffic?

A. My recollection is that Mr. Herring solicited traffic via the Southern Pacific.

Q. By New Orleans, you mean?

A. Of that I am not clear.

Q. Your recollection is indistinct about that?

A. It is. It is a matter of not much importance to us, and I never charged my memory with it.

Q. And the Pacific coast business has always been routed by 2204 the consignees, as you remember?

A. Always.

Q. Therefore you had no special reason to remember, I suppose, about the——

A. For several years past our business in California has been done with one wholesale firm. They have two leading houses, one at San Francisco, and the other at Los Angeles. Their consignments have been routed via the Union Pacific for San Francisco, and via the Santa Fe for Los Angeles, for as many years back as I remember. That is their standing routing.

Q. For how many years have they been your sole customer out there?

A. Since, I think, about 1898.

Mr. LOVETT. Such shipments as passed over the Union Pacific went also over the Southern Pacific from Ogden to San Francisco, did they not?

WITNESS. Necessarily.

2205 WILLIAM C. WATSON,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Watson, where do you live?

A. I reside at East Liverpool, Ohio.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am employed by the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles Company, manufacturers of earthenware, as superintendent of sales, order and transportation.

Q. How long have you been connected with that firm, Colonel?

A. Thirty years.

Q. In the same capacity?

A. No.

Q. How long have you had charge of their shipments?

A. It has varied. When I first went there I went from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as shipping clerk, and I served in that capacity for six years; then I traveled four months in the year for about ten years, but had an assistant during that time as shipping clerk, that is, a man to make out the bills of lading, and so forth, while I was absent. The last eight years I have been superintendent of the department and constantly in the office. All mail orders and shipping business went through my hands during the last eight years.

Q. Are you acquainted with Mr. Herring?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Herring?

A. I have seen the gentleman and met him for a great many years.

2206 Q. You have known him a long time?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember of the time when Mr. Herring was agent of the Southern Pacific, and the Union Pacific had a separate agency here in Pittsburg?

A. I remember when Mr. Herring was agent of the Southern Pacific Railroad alone, yes, sir.

Q. Did you know Mr. Choate?

A. I met him. I don't know as I knew him.

Q. Did he use to call on you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was Mr. Choate doing when he called on you? What was he trying to get?

A. He was after freight, like the rest of them.

Q. He was the agent of the Union Pacific, was he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he was soliciting business that way?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way did Mr. Herring solicit business for the coast?

A. In early days they solicited freight by New Orleans.

Q. Did you ever make any shipments via New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you occasionally see Mr. Herring nowadays?

A. See him once in a while, but see Mr. Corfield, his traveling man. Mr. Herring stays in Pittsburg. He has a traveling man that comes down to see us.

Q. He has an assistant who comes to see you?

A. Yes, Mr. Corfield.

Q. Do they also write to you at the present time with reference to shipments?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Complainant's Exhibit 112. Does Mr. Herring or his assistants ever send or give you postal cards of that character?

A. I believe they do, yes, sir; that is, they send to my assistant; passes through my hand. Yes, sir.

2207 Q. In making shipments, do you fill out the blanks, or have you used any of those postal cards?

A. We use them once in a while, but we don't pay much attention to it. This card here is a card that they send us—the Union Pacific Railroad Company, Oregon Short Line, and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, the Southern Pacific Company, the Houston & Texas Central Company, and so on; and if it is very important that they rush the car, we use the card—tell them that we shipped car number so and so over their line or the connecting line with them, and they send us back a little notice that they will rush it through, or something like that. It don't amount to much—they don't do it.

Q. On this postal card is the heading: "Union Pacific Railroad Company, Oregon Short Line Railroad, The Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, Southern Pacific Company, Houston & Texas Central Railroad, San Antonio & Aransas Pass Ry.," and at the bottom it says: "Kindly designate through routing."

A. I didn't notice that.

Q. I wanted to ask you whether you ever fill out these postals and send them back, designating the routing, or whether you ignore that suggestion of Mr. Herring?

A. Well, we don't pay much attention to these. We treat them politely when they come in, and they give us a Pittsburg stogie, and that is about all there is to it.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I offer in evidence Complainant's Exhibit 112 (Watson).

Complainant's Exhibit 112 is (Watson) as follows:

On address side of postal card is printed the following:

"UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD CO.
Mr. G. G. Herring, General Agent,
Park Building. Pittsburg, Pa."

Q. Do any of these gentlemen that call on you from Mr.
2209 Herring's office, have visiting cards with them?—A. Yes, sir. Mr. Corfield usually leaves his visiting card each time.

Q. Have you any of them with you?—A. This is the gentleman's name [producing a card which was marked Complainant's Exhibit 113 Watson].

Q. I show you complainant's Exhibit 113. Is that a card which was left in your office by Mr. Corfield?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whose handwriting is the pencil memorandum in, if you know?—A. That is my own.

Q. When did you put that on—at the time he was there?—A. No, sir, shortly after he was there. I rubbed it out afterwards.

Q. That is just a memorandum that he represented Mr. Herring?—A. That was a memorandum to me that he represented Mr. Herring.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I offer in evidence Complainant's Exhibit 113 (Watson.)

Complainant's Exhibit 113 (Watson) is as follows:

"J. E. CORFIELD,
Traveling Freight Agent.
708 Park Building.
Pittsburg, Pa.

Union Pacific Railroad Co.
Oregon Short Line Railroad.
Oregon Railroad & Navigation Co.
Southern Pacific Co."

On back of card is a small map, same as Complainant's Exhibit 116.

Q. Do they write you any letters soliciting shipments?—A. 2210 Yes.

Q. Have you any of them with you?—A. Here is one from the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Oregon Short Line and Southern Pacific [handing paper to Mr. Severance].

Q. I show you Complainant's Exhibit 114. Is that a letter from Mr. Herring?—A. Do you want me to read it?

Mr. SEVERANCE. The witness would like to keep the letter. If you have no objection, he may just read it in?

Mr. LOVETT. I have no objection.

Q. Read the letter, printed matter and all.

A.—

"Union Pacific Railroad Company

KNOWLES, TAYLOR & KNOWLES,
East Liverpool, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN: Understand the Pacific Crockery & Tinware Company, Los Angeles, have ordered from you carload or crockery and have requested routing of same via Chicago and Atchison, M. K. & T., T. & P., care of Southern Pacific at El Paso. Would appreciate your advice whether or not this order has yet shown up, and if you can kindly arrange to respect the consignee's wishes in regard to the routing of same, and greatly oblige,

Youry truly,

G. C. HERRING, General Agent."

Q. What is the date of that letter?—A. It is dated January 19, 1909.

The EXAMINER. Pittsburg, Pennsylvania?

WITNESS. Yes, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania.

2211 Mr. SEVERANCE. By consent, the witness may keep the original letter, it having been read into the record.

WITNESS. This car has not gone out yet; I would like to keep this original letter.

Q. In what way do you make your shipments to Portland, Oregon? How are they divided?—A. They are usually routed by the customer, and they go over the Northern Pacific line with the connecting lines from Chicago, for Portland.

Q. Does any of the business move over the Great Northern to Portland?—A. Yes sir.

Q. Does any of it move over the Union Pacific to Portland?—A. Well, to that question I would say no. Probably one car of goods would go that way in ten years.

Q. Most of your business goes over one or the other of the Northern roads?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. To Portland, I mean.—A. To Portland, yes, sir; Portland, Seattle, Tacoma and those points.

Q. Do you remember years ago of shipments to Portland moving by way of Ogden and the Central Pacific?—A. How many years ago?

Q. Any time since you have been in business?—A. Thirty years is a long time to remember anything like that.

Q. I don't care about your fixing the date, but I want to know if you know of shipments going over that route.—A. To Portland over what?

Q. Via some route as far as Ogden—either the Union Pacific or Rio Grande, or some route—and then by the Central Pacific.—A. The best answer I can give to that is, that I do not remember.

Q. Are any shipments made from your plants by the Mor-
2212 gan line of steamships to the coast, or have there been?—A. There have been shipments made up.

Q. How long ago, Mr. Watson, if you remember?—A. To San Francisco?

Q. Yes; any coast points.

A. Not the Morgan line. We made a shipment about fifteen years ago to R. R. Burns & Company, of San Francisco, California, in that way—not by the Morgan line, but by rail to New York, and a sailing vessel from New York to San Francisco.

Q. Oh, around the Horn?

A. Around the Horn, yes, sir.

Q. But you never shipped any by the Morgan line of steamers?

A. Yes, we have, but I cannot recall any particular shipment, because it has been some years ago.

Q. Does your place where your plants are located take the Pittsburg and Buffalo rate to the coast?

A. Why, we understand so, yes, sir.

Q. You are in the Pittsburg common points?

A. We are supposed to be, or at least we understand that we are in the Pittsburg district.

Q. How does your business to San Francisco move at the present time, as far as the continental lines are concerned?

A. You mean to San Francisco alone, or to the coast points?

Q. Say to coast points generally, then. You have already testified as to Portland; but take the points south of Portland.

A. To Los Angeles at the present time, we ship by the—to give a short answer, we ship by the Southern Pacific at El Paso; and to the same point (I am talking about Los Angeles) by the Atchi-2213 son, Topeka & Santa Fe either at Chicago, care of the Chicago & Alton, and thence wherever they connect. Sometimes different routes, you know. Most of our freight to Los Angeles is routed by the—you did not ask the question, but I might as well say—is routed by the customer.

Q. Does any of it go by the San Pedro route?

A. Very little.

Q. Does some of it go that way?

A. We probably ship a little that way in less than carloads.

Q. That goes by the Union Pacific and the San Pedro, does it not?

A. Why, it must of necessity go over the Union Pacific, too.

Q. How does your San Francisco business move?

A. They seem to divide it up. It goes by the Southern Pacific, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, from the different gateways. Sometimes it goes over the Rock Island; sometimes over other roads down through the south there to El Paso; and other times we ship it over the Rock Island, C. M. & St. P., and other roads that run into Ogden.

Q. With connections at Ogden?

A. With different connections, yes, sir.

Q. Does some of it go by Omaha—the Union Pacific?

A. Oh, yes; once in a while there is a carload goes that way.

Q. Then it is pretty generally distributed among the different lines, is it?

A. Yes.

Q. And routed, as you say, almost entirely by the consignees?

A. Nearly so, yes, sir. Since the Interstate Commerce Commission is looking after things, and since the rate is the same, you know, there is not much left for me to do.

2214 Q. Do you remember in the old days when efforts were being made by the Southern Pacific to send goods via the New Orleans route?

A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. And there was competition between them and the Union Pacific people, who tried to send it by Omaha?

A. Well, I never got anything out of it; but I know they were always hustling for it.

Q. Each one was hustling to get the business?

A. Yes. Harry Passavant used to come down to see me there.

Q. Who?

A. Mr. Passavant. I said "Harry"—but, Mr. Passavant.

Q. Passavant?

A. Yes.

Q. Which line did he represent?

A. He represented the Union Pacific. That is, earlier—before you were born.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. When did Mr. Passavant solicit the business, Mr. Watson?

A. That is a long time ago. I could not tell you the date of it. Maybe Mr. Herring could; I cannot.

Q. You could not approximate about the date?

A. Oh, away back when I was a boy. If you want an approximate date, it must have been fifteen or twenty years ago, was it not, Mr. Herring? About that time. Mr. Choate came after the Passavant boys.

Q. When they solicited freight and secured freight for California points to go over the Union Pacific, you understand that that would also go over the Southern Pacific, do you not, Mr. Watson?

A. No, no. It went over the Union and Central Pacific.

2215 Q. Well, the Southern Pacific operates the Central Pacific.

A. Now they do, yes.

Q. But all that went over the Union Pacific for California points also went over the Central Pacific?

A. At that time, yes, and now.

Q. So after all, it did go over a portion of the Southern Pacific line; it would go over the Southern Pacific line a portion of the way, assuming that the Southern Pacific operates the Central Pacific?

A. Now, or then?

Q. Now.

A. How do you want me to answer that?

Q. Now, and then.

A. What?

Q. I want you to answer it in accordance with your understanding of the fact, of course, as you will do.

A. In those days we thought we were shipping by a competing line when we shipped by the Union Pacific and the Central Pacific.

Q. You thought you were shipping over a line——

A. In those days, yes.

Q. ——that was competing with the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, or any other lines.

Q. But you did not know in those days that the Southern Pacific controlled the Central Pacific?

A. No. I am not up in stocks.

Q. But, nevertheless, all shipments that passed over the Union Pacific for California points went over what you understand to be the Central Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the point I want to establish. During the time that Mr. Herring was soliciting for the Southern Pacific, and 2216 the Union Pacific had a separate agency, Mr. Herring, I understood you to say, tried to induce the routing of the traffic by way of New Orleans, but if he could not get it that way, wouldn't he also try to get it by way of El Paso or by way of Ogden?

A. Mr. Herring or any of his representatives represented to me that they represented the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and they were after business, and they did not name any particular point that they wanted that business at. They were after business—just like the rest of those gentlemen do.

Q. They wanted the business wherever they could get it.

A. If I understand your question, you are referring to back before they absorbed the Union Pacific?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, he was soliciting freight for his railroad, just like any other man would do.

Q. There are other lines soliciting freight for the Pacific coast, are there not, Mr. Watson?

A. Other lines?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir. The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe man is down once in a while.

Q. Does the Rock Island system solicit it?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Does the Missouri Pacific?

A. The M. K. & T.? Yes; they come around once in a while.

Q. And the Texas & Pacific?

A. Well, I am not acquainted with their man, but he comes in there once in a while, or writes in.

Q. And the Missouri Pacific: did you answer as to that?

A. Well, the M. K. & T.; that is the Missouri Pacific. Yes.

Q. No, it is not.

2217 A. The M. K. & T.? Oh, the Missouri Pacific? Yes, they come in.

Q. The Missouri Pacific, and the M. K. & T.?

A. Yes.

Q. The C. B. & Q.?

A. The C. B. & Q., yes.

Q. The North-Western?

A. Yes, Chicago & North-Western, yes, sir.

Q. And the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul?

A. Yes.

Q. And the Louisville & Nashville?

A. Well, yes.

Q. The Illinois Central?

A. Yes. All of them.

Q. All of them solicit business?

A. All of these railroads. They bother you to death.

Q. If the Southern Pacific had no solicitor at all, does not the result of the work of the Rock Island, the Missouri Pacific, the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, and all of those other lines, except those that directly connect with the Atchison, accrue to the Southern Pacific?

A. I presume it does.

Q. Whatever the Missouri Pacific would get for California points would ultimately go over the Southern Pacific, would it not?

A. If they make a certain rate, or agree to a certain rate and a certain time, it does not make any difference to me how they put it through.

Q. Yes, but the point I am trying to develop is this: The question is, if it is not true that even without any representative of the Southern Pacific here at all, by virtue of its location on the Pacific coast, its lines west of Ogden and west of El Paso, all of these intermediate carriers, in soliciting, would, in a large measure, solicit for the Southern Pacific Company, because that is their western connection.

A. Usually all those fellows attend to their own business.

2218 Q. Take the case shown by the letter that you produced: there is traffic going over the Chicago & Alton, the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, and Texas Pacific. The lines which you say have representatives here, in working for that business, necessarily work for the Southern Pacific, do they not?

A. They do not say anything about it. I shall have to give you the same answer—they look after their own business.

Q. Is not their only outlet to the Pacific coast the Southern Pacific?

A. That might be.

Q. Do you know whether it is or not? Are you familiar with the lines out there?

A. I am familiar with the main lines by virtue of shipping, and, as a boy, traveling over them.

Q. It is true, is it not, that prior to the opening of the San Pedro line in 1905, all traffic for the Pacific coast south of Portland had to go over either the Southern Pacific or Atchison?

A. Prior to when?

Q. Prior to 1905. I mean all-rail traffic. I do not mean the shipments around Cape Horn or the Panama route.

A. Well, I do not want to make that statement under oath, as to dates.

Q. Well, prior to the opening of the San Pedro line, then, without reference to the date?

A. As far as my recollection serves me, the statement is correct. Without date, now, understand. I cannot remember as to the day.

2219 JOSEPH M. BELLEVILLE,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Belleville?

A. Pittsburg.

Q. How long have you lived here?

A. About eight years—no, ten years.

Q. What is your business?

A. Traffic manager of the Pittsburg Plate Glass Company.

Q. How long have you been in that position?

A. Since February, 1898.

Q. Previous to that what was your business?

A. I was for about fourteen years agent of the P. C. C. & St. L. Railway Company, at Wheeling, West Virginia.

Q. To what place does the Pittsburg Plate Glass Company ship its product in general?

A. All over this country.

Q. Do you have a large or a small amount of shipments to the Pacific coast?

A. Rather large.

Q. Have you had for a long time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During all the time you have been with the company?

A. Ever since I have been connected with the company, yes, sir.

Q. How has that product moved to the coast; over what transcontinental lines?

A. There have been very few of the transcontinental lines that have not had some share of it. One or two of them that have had a majority of it.

Q. How has it moved?

A. I will name them in the order of their prominence, al-
2220 though I have not paid such particularly close attention to the Pacific coast movement, for the reason that all of our sales to the Pacific coast are made f. o. b. factory, and we make the shipments as directed by the consignee, all shipped to one firm, W. P. Fuller & Company, who are the largest glass operators on the coast.

Q. Where are they—at San Francisco?

A. They have warehouses at San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland, Seattle, Spokane, and they may have one or two more. That is all that I recall just now. The business for Los Angeles goes very largely by the Santa Fe. It is divided between the Santa Fe and the San Pedro, and some of it by the Chicago & Northwestern in connection with the Union Pacific.

Q. How does the San Francisco business move?

A. The San Francisco business, the large majority of it for some time past, has been moving by the Union and the Southern Pacific, via Ogden.

Q. How was it prior to 1901, if you remember—the first three years you were here?

A. Prior to 1901? I think it was pretty fairly divided.

Q. How?

A. Probably the Union Pacific got a little more. They probably got more than half of it.

Q. How did the rest of it go?

A. And the lines by New Orleans probably got a quarter of it, and the rest of it was divided among two or three different routes.

Q. You know Mr. Herring, do you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know Mr. Choate?

A. Yes, sir; I know him.

Q. Do you remember when Mr. Choate represented the Union Pacific here?

A. I do.

2221 Q. Were those gentlemen competing with each other for coast business then?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you were in the railroad business, did you have anything to do with securing, or helping to secure, transcontinental traffic?

A. Not exactly that. If you mean if I had anything to do with the routing—I often did.

Q. Did you with the routing?

A. Yes, sir. That is, in the early days along from 1878 to, probably, 1885, three-fourths of the business for western points and for Pacific coast points that came to us, came to us unrouted.

Q. Up to 1885.

A. So that at that time the terminal agent was more important than he is today.

Q. How was it from 1885 to 1898?

A. The shippers got gradually more and more to specifying routing. I think after 1884 or 1885 it was a rare thing; but prior to that, four out of five of the bills of lading that came to us would have no routing on whatever.

Q. What function do these soliciting agents perform in getting business? It seems that the various lines keep up commercial agencies.

A. Very much the same as the traveling salesman for a commercial house.

Q. The same thing—going around trying to dispose of his transportation?

A. Yes.

Q. And what arguments, in general, do they put up to get the business? The rates are all the same, and therefore what——

A. That they need the business. That is about the argument.

Q. They need the business, yes.

2222 A. It is the personal equation to-day more than anything else.

Q. You think that has more than anything else to do with it?

A. I think it has.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Such business for California points as you moved over the Union Pacific always went over the Southern Pacific west of Ogden, did it not, Mr. Belleville?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The only outlet for the Union Pacific to California points?

A. That is my understanding.

Q. Mr. Choate, or other agent, in soliciting for the Union Pacific, then, was necessarily soliciting for that portion of the route of the Southern Pacific, was he not?

A. I presume so; though he did not talk about the Southern Pacific.

Q. That was the effect, however, of his solicitation?

A. Yes.

Q. Then the solicitation by Mr. Herring, or other separate representative of the Southern Pacific, was, you say, for the New Orleans route, by way of New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And by way of El Paso?

A. Mainly via New Orleans. But his solicitation came as a result of information from the coast representatives; and generally when he came soliciting business he had advice from his coast representative that W. P. Fuller & Company had sent us certain orders which they had asked us to route in a certain specific way, and if they asked to have it routed by El Paso, why, that is the way he solicited it; and if they asked to have it routed by way of New Orleans, 2223 that is the way he solicited it.

Q. If he could not get it by way of El Paso or by way of New Orleans, he tried to get it by way of Ogden, did he?

A. All he wanted to know of me was if I would respect the routing of the consignees.

Q. He did not solicit it himself, did he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't he try to get it by way of Ogden, if he could not get it any other way?

A. I have no recollection of that.

Q. You have no recollection of that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know of any reason why he should not try to get it that way?

A. No, I do not, except that the other was the longer haul.

Q. Yes; but if he could not get the long haul, he would rather get the short haul than none at all?

A. Undoubtedly.

Mr. SEVERANCE. That is purely speculative.

Mr. LOVETT. Well, I want him to speculate about it.

Q. His solicitation was really against the Atchison, was it not, Mr. Belleville?

A. No; I think it was against the Union Pacific as well as the Atchison. The Union Pacific was the strong competitor at that time for the Pacific coast business, much stronger than the——

Q. Competitor for what?

A. Particularly in the early days, from 1898 to 1901.

Q. You have had some experience as a railroad man, in addition to traffic manager for shipments?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that the strong competitor was the Union Pacific. You mean competitor for what?

A. Competitor of the Southern Pacific for coast business.

2224 Q. Was it any stronger than the Santa Fe?

A. I regarded it so at that time. That was in 1898.

Q. Don't you mean that the line made up of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific was the strong competitor, the strong line for California business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is what you mean, is it not?

A. Yes, sir. It was at that time the strong line.

Q. Well, is it not to-day?

A. No; I think the Santa Fe is equally strong.

Q. You think it is equally strong to-day with the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you speak of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific being competing lines, you do not mean to testify that the Southern Pacific could compete against itself, holding both ends of the line, do you?

A. No, sir. I was speaking rather of the agents than of the roads?

Q. So far as the Southern Pacific is concerned, is it not a question purely of division, as to whether it will get more revenue by way of New Orleans than by way of Ogden?

A. Certainly.

Q. That is true, is it not?

A. Certainly.

Q. And it was trying to work the traffic the way that afforded it the most revenue?

A. Undoubtedly. The agent wanted to make the best showing for his agency that he could, and he made the best showing by sending it via New Orleans rather than to get it at Ogden.

Q. He had to work for the gateway that afforded the Southern Pacific the most revenue, and no matter which way it went,
2225 if it did not go over the Atchison, it would go over the Southern Pacific; that is true, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The public is not interested in the matter of divisions of through rates as between carriers, is it, Mr. Belleville?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. There are a great many other lines in here soliciting business for the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All the lines lying between here and El Paso and connecting with the Texas & Pacific between New Orleans and El Paso, and the lines reaching the Missouri River and the Rocky Mountains, are all actively soliciting that business, are they not?

A. Yes, sir; very strong.

Q. The Texas & Pacific?

A. Well, not very much.

Q. The Missouri Pacific?

A. Yes, sir, the Missouri Pacific.

Q. The Missouri Pacific and Texas Pacific have a joint agency, have they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They work together?

A. They work together.

Q. Is the Rock Island soliciting it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Burlington?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Chicago & North Western?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The St. Paul?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Denver & Rio Grande?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All of those lines are actively soliciting business for the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Such business as they get ultimately goes over the Southern Pacific, does it not—the lines that I have named?

A. I can not say that that is true with regard to all of them, but I presume it is.

2226 Q. Is it not true of the Texas Pacific?

A. No, it is not. On some of the lines running out of Chicago and out of St. Louis, the business moves in connection with the Santa Fe.

Q. Yes; but none that I have named?

A. Possibly not.

Q. Do not the Texas & Pacific and the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, and the Rock Island, send theirs through El Paso?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Except such as the Rock Island takes to Denver and turns over to the Denver & Rio Grande to go to the Southern Pacific at Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does not the Burlington get the long haul by working with the Southern Pacific?

A. I presume so. I have not followed that up very closely, for the reason, as I say, we are not definitely interested in the terminal route.

Q. But from such general knowledge as you have of the railroad situation with respect to traffic for the Pacific coast, that is true, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You know that the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy runs to Denver, do you not?

A. I do.

Q. And that the Rock Island runs to Denver and Colorado Springs?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that the Missouri Pacific has a Denver line?

A. Yes. I know their natural outlet is over the Southern Pacific.

2227 Re-direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Lovett asked you if it was not a fact that in case the Union Pacific secured business for San Francisco or California points, it would have to go over the Southern Pacific from Ogden to the coast to get there. That is true, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But if the Southern Pacific agency here in Pittsburg was successful in sending business by the New Orleans route, the Union Pacific did not share in that business, did it?

A. No, sir.

2228 WILBUR B. EVEREST,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Everest, where do you live?
A. Wilkinsburg, Pa.
Q. Where is your office?
A. At East Pittsburg, Pa.
Q. What is your business?
A. Principally traffic manager for the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company.
Q. How long have you occupied that position?
A. About nine years.
Q. The Westinghouse Company has business in various parts of the country?
A. In all parts of the country, yes, sir.
Q. And likewise abroad?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is their business in general?
A. The manufacturing of electrical machinery and appliances.
Q. That company and the General Electric Company are the two largest companies in that line of business, are they not?
A. They are.
Q. They are the principal companies in that business in the United States?
A. They are.
Q. How long have you been traffic manager of the Westinghouse Company?
A. My appointment as traffic manager was at some time in September of 1900.
Q. Previous to that what were your duties?
A. I was for a short while general freight agent.
Q. In the traffic department?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Of the same company?
A. Yes, sir.

2229 Q. And what are your duties as traffic manager, or what were your duties as general freight agent?

A. My duties were varied at that time. The title and the duties that went with it I did not hold very long; it was only a matter of a few months. I had, for some year or two prior to that, charge of the stores, making requisitions for materials, and of the shipping; but the matter of shipping was only incidental; I did not pay very much personal attention to it.
Q. Since September, 1900, you have devoted your attention to that?
A. Exclusively devoted my attention to the traffic of the company.
Q. In shipping electrical machinery (we will confine our matters to the Pacific coast country for the present), who routes the traffic? Do you do it, or is it done by the consignees?

A. We route almost all of our traffic, the only exception being sales that are made f. o. b. our works for direct shipment. Most of our coast business is handled through our warehousing operations, and we ship in carload lots to those points before the distribution takes place.

Q. Where do you have your warehouses?

A. At Los Angeles and San Francisco, in California.

Q. Do you have them farther north along the coast?

A. We have one in Seattle.

Q. None in Portland?

A. I believe they are carrying a small stock there, but nothing that is regular.

Q. Do you remember, when you first became the traffic manager, that Mr. Choate was here representing the Union Pacific?

A. I remember Mr. Choate. I do not remember him having 2230 solicited me for Union Pacific business.

Q. You do not remember about that?

A. No, sir.

Q. You know Mr. Herring, of course?

A. I know Mr. Herring.

Q. Do you remember of his soliciting business of you prior to the time that he represented both roads?

A. I have no clear recollection of that.

Q. You do not remember that?

A. I did not become acquainted with the representatives of the railroads until about, or shortly after, 1901, when I understood the consolidation took place.

Q. How is your traffic moved to the coast?

A. By all of the various routes.

Q. Take business to San Francisco; just detail the transcontinental lines it goes over. I do not care about the eastern connections.

A. We divide it between the Union and Southern Pacific route, and the Santa Fe, by their various connections.

Q. Does any of your business, or has any of your business, moved by New Orleans?

A. Not of late.

Q. Did it formerly?

A. There was a period, the exact date of which I do not recall—it is several years past—that a congestion of all the lines at the river was in effect, and at that time we sent considerable business over the Illinois Central and the L. & N. and connections at New Orleans with the Sunset route.

Q. The congestion along the Northern lines enabled that line to give you better service to the coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To get your stuff through quicker?

2231 A. That was our understanding and our reason for our routing.

Q. But ordinarily your shipments were divided between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific beyond Ogden, and the Santa Fe on the other?

A. Yes, sir, and their connections.

Q. Do you use the San Pedro route at all?

A. To Los Angeles we have used it frequently.

Q. And what other lines do you use to Los Angeles?

A. The Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific.

Q. The Santa Fe which way—by New Orleans or El Paso or Ogden?

A. No; Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.

Q. That is——

A. We use the direct route.

Q. ——you ship the three ways to Los Angeles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific from Ogden, the Union Pacific and the San Pedro road from Salt Lake, and the Atchison?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You use those three lines into Los Angeles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do you ship into Colorado and Utah common points?

A. By the direct lines from Chicago—either the North Western or the Union Pacific or the Rock Island.

Q. And have you shipped to Colorado and Utah common points by New Orleans?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. You do not remember any such shipments?

A. I do not remember.

Q. Have you ever used the Morgan line of steamers?

A. For Mexican business only, that I recall.

Q. For Mexican business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But not for coast business?

A. Not for coast business.

Q. How does your Oriental business go?

2232 A. Principally by way of New York. Our Oriental business is all consigned at New York—taken out of our hands at that point.

Q. Does that move by Suez, usually?

A. I so understand, although I do not route the Oriental business, for the reason that the company is represented by Takata & Company in their Oriental operations, and Takata & Company assumes the property at port.

Q. Have you ever made Oriental shipments by the Pacific coast?

A. There have been Oriental shipments by the Pacific coast.

Q. Which way did they move?

A. Sometimes to southern coast ports and sometimes to the north, as directed by Takata & Company.

Q. What ports do you mean? You say the southern coast ports and northern coast ports.

A. San Francisco is the only one I recall for the southern coast port.

Q. And others?

A. Vancouver is the only other I recall.

Q. You do not recall Seattle, either?

A. No, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Prior to the opening of the San Pedro line, all business that you routed over the Union Pacific for California passed over the Southern Pacific also, did it?

A. I think so. I do not see how it could——

Q. Didn't it necessarily?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I believe you stated that you also sometimes shipped by way of El Paso—or do you?

A. We would not choose that route, except where the customer had purchased f. o. b. our works and requested it.

2233 Q. You testified also that you sometimes shipped by way of New Orleans?

A. I recall that we did ship that way, for the reasons stated.

Q. All those routes have been open, rates have been in that way, and you could have shipped by any of those gateways——

A. Yes, sir.

Q. ——at any time since you have been traffic manager?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had the option to ship either of those routes that you, wanted to?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you found generally the Union Pacific-Ogden-Southern Pacific route more satisfactory for San Francisco shipments?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. There is very active solicitation by all of the intermediate carriers—that is, the lines lying between Pittsburg and New Orleans and El Paso and the Missouri River and Rocky Mountains—for that California business, is there not?

A. Yes, sir, very active.

Q. And if the Southern Pacific had no solicitors in this territory at all, much of that business controlled by its eastern connections would necessarily go over its lines, would it not?

A. I do not see how it could be otherwise.

Q. You understand that the shipper is not interested in the division of the through rate as between the different carriers participating in it, do you not, Mr. Everest?

A. I would see no reason for interesting myself, if the rates were equal.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

2234 Q. Mr. Lovett has asked you whether the Southern Pacific would not get some business through its eastern connections if it maintained no commercial agency here at all. Undoubtedly that is true, it would not. But your experience has shown you, has it not, that all the railroads regard it as essential in their business to keep agencies at large shipping points like Pittsburg? They all have agencies here, have they not, soliciting business?

A. They do, yes, sir.

Q. I suppose if the Westinghouse Company should cease to work for business, they would get some business because they are a big concern?

A. The case is parallel, I believe.

Q. But they would get more business if they worked for it?

A. Exactly.

Re-cross examination, by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. The Texas Pacific and the Missouri Pacific have joint agents here, haven't they, Mr. Everest? Aren't they represented by a joint agent?

A. I know of the Missouri Pacific agency. I did not understand that the Texas Pacific had an agency here.

Q. Is not the Missouri Pacific agent a joint agent for the Texas Pacific?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Such business as the Texas Pacific might get for the Pacific coast would go via the Southern Pacific from El Paso, would it not?

A. I should say so, naturally.

Q. And so with the Missouri Pacific, either by way of El Paso or by way of the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. Unless there were other specified routes and connections.

Q. But that is the natural route for the Missouri Pacific?

A. Yes, sir, I should judge so.

2235 Q. And that is true also of the Rock Island, is it not? It would get the long haul to El Paso, wouldn't it?

A. For California business.

Q. And the Burlington?

A. And the Burlington, yes.

Q. And the North Western?

A. And the North Western.

Q. The St. Paul?

A. Yes.

Q. Such traffic as all of those lines secure by their solicitation, the natural outlet for it is the Southern Pacific, is it not?

A. I should judge so, because they feed the Southern Pacific.

2236 DENNIS CROWLEY,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination, by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. What is your business?

A. I am employed by the Carnegie Steel Company as a salesman.

Q. Previous to your connection with the Carnegie Steel Company, what was your business?

A. I was with the Southern Pacific Railroad.

Q. In what capacity?

A. Part of the time as a stenographer, and part as a freight solicitor.

Q. During what period of time were you freight solicitor with the Southern Pacific?

A. About five years prior to 1901.

Q. Were you with the Southern Pacific up to the time the separate offices of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific were maintained here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were your duties as soliciting agent for the Southern Pacific?

A. Soliciting freight for the Southern Pacific Railroad via the different gateways.

Q. Which way did you endeavor to route the freight? What was your first endeavor?

A. The preferred route was the Sunset Route; that is, via New Orleans.

Q. How would the traffic move from here to New Orleans?

A. It moved over the different lines leading out of Pittsburg; by way of Cincinnati, some of it; some of it moved via St. Louis,—not a great deal; Illinois Central.

Q. Did you solicit traffic from any manufacturers or other
2237 persons having freight to send, whose plants were located east of here, so that it went by the Morgan line?

A. No.

Q. You did not solicit any Morgan line traffic?

A. No.

Q. It was entirely all-rail?

A. That is, for California.

Q. That is what I mean.

A. No, it was all-rail from here.

Q. You solicited all-rail. At that time was the Union Pacific represented separately here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was their agent?

A. Mr. Choate was their agent, I believe, shortly before the consolidation.

Q. I believe you said that you were with the Southern Pacific for four or five years prior to that?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall who else represented them, aside from Mr. Choate?

A. I believe Lothrop was with them for——

Q. Did they also have soliciting agents working under the direction of Mr. Choate and Mr. Lothrop?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember their names, or how many there were of them?

A. I think Mr. Toymbee was a soliciting freight agent at that time.

Q. In what way were those gentlemen endeavoring to route traffic to the coast?

A. They solicited the business via Ogden; that is, their line up to Ogden.

Q. By the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From either Kansas City or Omaha?

A. I am not very familiar with that. I could not say just what the details of the routing were.

Q. You know that the Union Pacific comes to the River at both Kansas City and Omaha?

A. Yes.

2238 Q. They did not represent anybody but the Union Pacific, though?

A. Not that I know of, no, sir.

Q. Did you also solicit business for Portland, Oregon?

A. We did not get very much business for Portland.

Q. How did you send such business as you were able to get?

A. I don't remember having secured any Portland business.

Q. At all?

A. At all; no, sir.

Q. What did you know about the competition existing then on passenger business to the coast?

A. I did not have anything to do with the passenger business; they had a separate man looking after it here.

Q. Who did?

A. The Southern Pacific.

Q. Did the Union Pacific have a passenger man here?

A. Yes, I think they did.

Q. Were they advertising here at that time the passenger routes to the coast?

A. Yes, sir; they advertised the route.

Q. The separate lines advertised?

A. I do not know anything about the Union Pacific advertisement.

Q. Did the Sunset Route advertise here?

A. The Sunset Route advertised their train.

Q. What is the nature of the efforts put forth by freight solicitors to get business?

A. They call on the shippers regularly; they look after the details of freight rates, offer them any assistance they can in looking after the material en route, see that it gets to destination in proper time, trace the shipment.

Q. Do you think the personal relations between the shippers and the solicitors have anything to do with getting business
2239 for the roads?

A. Yes, it has some effect.

Q. From your experience, would you say that it is a useful adjunct to a railroad, to maintain commercial agencies, in getting business?

A. Yes.

Q. When you were soliciting traffic, did you solicit Oriental traffic?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. Which way did you send it?

A. What we secured we sent by way of San Francisco, if I recall correctly.

Q. How did you send it from here to San Francisco?

A. We sent it via the Sunset Route as a preferred route. The business on which time was an important factor went via the Ogden gateway.

Q. And then it went to the Orient by boat from San Francisco?

A. By boat, yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I believe you testified that when you were soliciting for the Southern Pacific Company, New Orleans was the preferred gateway?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And, if you could not get it that way, you then sought to get it by way of El Paso and Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Naturally you preferred the gateway that afforded you the longest haul?

A. The long haul; yes, sir.

Q. Whatever traffic the Union Pacific agent secured here for California, during that time, necessarily passed over the Southern Pacific, did it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Southern Pacific, then, got a haul of about 850
2240 miles out of the traffic——

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —destined to San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether the Texas & Pacific and the Missouri Pacific have a joint agent here now, or are the agencies separate, or has the Texas & Pacific any representation at all?

A. I do not know.

Q. The Missouri Pacific has a representative, has it not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And always has had since you have been here?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Such traffic for California as may be controlled through the solicitation of the Texas & Pacific, the Missouri Pacific, the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, the Rock Island, the Burlington, the Denver & Rio Grande, the North Western, the St. Paul—the natural outlet for that traffic would be the Southern Pacific, would it not?
A. Yes, as a rule.
Q. Are all of those lines actively soliciting in this territory?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And always have been since your connection——
A. To my knowledge; yes, sir.
Q. I believe you testified that you did not solicit business from this territory for California points by way of the Morgan line from New York?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You say that you did not?
A. No, we did not solicit California traffic via the Morgan line from this territory.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Judge Lovett asked you whether the traffic that might be solicited by a number of different agencies here in Pittsburg
2241 would not naturally reach the coast over the Southern Pacific, and you said it would?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. He enumerated a large number. Among the rest, he enumerated several lines that go no farther than Omaha, like the Milwaukee & St. Paul, the North Western so far as coast business is concerned, the Illinois Central, the Chicago Great Western, and the Wabash. Now, those lines, on transcontinental business, can carry it no farther than Omaha, then they would have to turn it over to the Union Pacific, to reach Ogden, would they not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. So that while those lines were working for the Southern Pacific, they would likewise be working for the Union Pacific?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Judge Lovett has apparently endeavored to minimize the importance of the Union Pacific somewhat, in connection with transcontinental business. But you would regard a link of a thousand miles from the Missouri River to Utah, when there are only four or five lines reaching across the continent, as rather an important link, would you not?
A. I should think so.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. There are a good many other important lines, too, are there not?

A. Yes, there are quite a number.

Q. The Union Pacific is merely an intermediate carrier?

A. Yes.

Q. It is practically without any rate-making power, so far as transcontinental business is concerned, is it not?

A. We consider it as an intermediate line.

2242 Q. Like the North Western or the St. Paul?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. These lines that Mr. Severance mentioned as being required to turn over their traffic at Omaha to the Union Pacific, such as the North Western, the St. Paul and several others—there is no reason, is there, why they could not turn over such traffic as they had for the Pacific coast, to the Burlington, the Rock Island or the Missouri Pacific, at Omaha, and let those lines take it to Denver and turn it over to the Denver & Rio Grande? They are not dependent on the Union Pacific, are they?

A. No; it is not compulsory to turn it over to the Union Pacific.

Q. No. They have other lines that they could interchange with?

A. Yes.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. The Rock Island and Burlington are in competition with those lines, east of Omaha, are they not?

A. In competition with what lines?

Q. With the Milwaukee, the North Western, the Illinois Central, and others?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Therefore the Burlington, reaching out to Denver, or the Rock Island, reaching out to Denver, would naturally itself work for the long haul on coast business, would it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Therefore, you would not say that those lines terminating in Omaha could exchange business as favorably with lines that run clear out to Denver as they could with the Union Pacific,

2243 which reaches Omaha, would you? That is a better connection for them in the way of interchange of business, is it not?

A. I am not familiar enough now with the details to say very much about that.

Q. Well, in answer to Judge Lovett, you said they could exchange as well with these others. Now, as a matter of business they could not, could they?

A. As a matter of policy I should think that they——

Q. Policy—that is what I mean?

A. Yes. They would not change with them, as they would have their long haul—take it out.

Q. They would naturally rather exchange with the Union Pacific?

A. They would take their long haul.

Q. Certainly. Well, I am speaking of the lines reaching Omaha. Take the Milwaukee & St. Paul, the Great Western, the Illinois Central, the Wabash, the North Western: none of those lines reach Colorado points or the points that Judge Lovett mentioned in his question?

A. No.

Q. They do not reach Denver. The Rock Island and the Burlington do reach Denver; and, of course, they are looking out naturally for the long haul. Now would you say that it would be as good business for those lines that terminate at Omaha to turn business over to their competitors which reach Chicago and also out to Denver, as it would be to turn it over to the Union Pacific?

A. No, I would not consider it.

Q. No. The Union Pacific would be a better road to exchange with, because it comes clear through to Omaha; would it not?

A. Yes, sir.

2244 Q. Another question that Judge Lovett asked you was whether the Union Pacific wasn't only an intermediate carrier, and he suggested that it was like the St. Paul or the North Western; and I think you assented to that. In doing so you did not reflect that the Union Pacific owned its own line to Portland, with a boat-line to San Francisco, did you? Don't you think that a railroad owning a line from the Missouri River to tide water, with ships on the sea connecting San Francisco and other points, is in a different position than the North-Western or the Milwaukee & St. Paul, that stop at the Missouri River?

A. I had in mind the business going to the California terminals. When I said that we considered it in an intermediate line, I had in mind the California terminal business, not the North Pacific Coast.

Q. Now, business moves to California terminals, in the first place, around Cape Horn, does it not?

A. Yes, some of it did go that way.

Q. Yes. It moved by Panama?

A. Yes.

Q. Two sea voyages and a short land voyage. It moves by the American-Hawaiian line across Mexico, with two sea voyages and one land voyage, does it not?

A. Yes.

Q. It moves by the Morgan line—a long sea voyage around the Florida coast and up to Galveston and New Orleans, and thence by the Sunset; you know that, do you not? I do not mean Pittsburg business, but Atlantic coast business.

A. You are not speaking of business from Pittsburg district?

Q. No; from the Atlantic seaboard territories.

A. Generally speaking, yes. I have no personal knowledge of any of the business east of here—how it moves.

2245 Q. But as a railroad man you know that that line is open and is carrying a very large tonnage in competition with the all-rail lines, do you not?

A. I understand it is open, yes.

Q. Now, if all those lines—some of them very long, around Cape Horn or by Panama, can carry business into San Francisco in competition with the all-rail lines, do you not think the Union Pacific could carry business in there with its all-rail line to Portland and the short haul by sea from Portland to San Francisco?

A. The sea part of it is an objectionable feature of the route.

Q. Is it any more objectionable in the case of the line from Portland to San Francisco than in the case of the Panama route or the Tehuantepec route—where you have two sea voyages, one on each side of Mexico?

A. There is not much business that I am aware of that moves via the Horn or via the Panama route.

Q. Is there a great deal of business that moves by the Tehuantepec route?

A. I don't know.

Q. Can you see any reason in the nature of things why the route by the Union Pacific to Portland and thence by boat to San Francisco would not be fully as desirable a route as the route by Panama or by Mexico or by the Morgan line——

A. Oh, yes.

Q. —where you have a sea voyage in each case and a rail haul in each case, and you have only one transshipment at Portland as against two by Mexico or two by Panama?

A. Yes, I should say it would be.

Q. It would be what?

A. As desirable.

2246 Q. As desirable. That is what I thought.

(No response.)

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. The lines by Cape Horn, by Panama, and by Tehuantepec get business by making the low rates, do they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they can cut and slash rates pretty much as they please, I suppose, without much opportunity on the part of the Southern Pacific to retaliate, can they not?

A. I have always found it so in soliciting.

Q. Is there not this important difference between the situation of those lines and the Union Pacific: that the Union Pacific has a thousand miles of railroad lying between the Missouri River and Ogden that is very largely dependent on the Southern Pacific from Ogden to the Pacific coast as a connection for business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever known of any substantial shipments to California terminals by way of the Union Pacific and Portland and then by water down?

A. No, sir.

Q. You never knew of any shipments of any substantial quantity that way?

A. No.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Judge Lovett just asked you whether the Panama route, among others, could not get business by cutting and slashing rates, while the Union Pacific, with the Southern Pacific connection, could not do that, and I think you assented to that suggestion?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you aware of the fact that the Southern Pacific
2247 Company owns a majority of the stock of the Pacific Mail?

A. I knew they had some interest in it when I was with them. I do not know what the condition is to-day.

Q. Do you not know that for quite a number of years they have owned a majority of the stock——

A. No.

Q. ——so as to control it?

(No response.)

Q. Are you aware of the fact that the Panama route is made up of ships of the Panama Railway and the Panama Railroad itself to Panama; that is, ships from New York to Colon, the Panama Railroad to Panama, and then the Pacific Mail to San Francisco?

A. Do you mean at the present time?

Q. Yes, and for a long time past. That is the Panama route, is it not?

A. I couldn't say. I don't know whether it is or not.

Q. If it is and the Southern Pacific controls the line from Panama to San Francisco, how can they cut and slash rates any more down there than they can along the line from Ogden to San Francisco? It is a similar situation, is it not?

A. Well, in my experience the steamer lines always seem to be able to make whatever rate they please.

Q. Did the Panama route make whatever rate it pleased?

A. They apparently took business. We couldn't get it at the regular rates.

Q. That must have been a case such as Judge Lovett thinks impossible, then, of the Southern Pacific competing against itself, must it not? If the Pacific Mail was competing with the rest of the Southern Pacific system; you can not account for that, can you?

A. No, I can't.

2248 By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Are you also aware of the fact that since the Government got control of the Panama Railroad and the steamers on the Atlantic, they have established rates with the tramp steamers, and that the business on the Pacific coast, carried by the Panama route, is largely carried by foreign ships?

A. No, I am not familiar with that.

Q. You never heard of the Southern Pacific controlling the clipper ships around Cape Horn, did you?
A. No, sir.
Q. Nor the Tehuantepec route—you never heard of the Southern Pacific controlling that, did you?
A. No, sir.
(A recess was here taken until 2 o'clock p. m.)

2249 S. P. WOODSIDE,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Woodside, where do you live?
A. In Ben Avon, Pa., a suburb of Pittsburg.
Q. What is your business?
A. General freight agent of the West Side Belt and the Wabash-Pittsburg Terminal Railroads.
Q. How long have you been in that position?
A. Since July 1, 1907.
Q. Prior to that, what was your business?
A. Traffic manager for the Pittsburg Coal Company, the River Coal Company, and allied interests.
Q. For how long?
A. Four years and eleven months.
Q. Previous to that time what was your business?
A. General agent of the Erie Railroad, for fifteen years, in this city.
Q. In what year did you cease to represent the Erie here?
A. I left them on July 31, 1902.
Q. You had been with them fifteen years prior to that?
A. From August 1, 1887.
Q. Are you acquainted with Mr. Herring?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Have you known him a long time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you know Mr. Choate?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was Mr. Choate doing when you knew him?
A. Mr. Choate was general agent of the Union Pacific road
2250 here, to the best of my knowledge and belief.
Q. Did you know Mr. Lothrop?
A. I remember the name, but I cannot recall the man.
Q. Did you know Mr. Passavant?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was his position?

A. He was either contracting freight agent or traveling freight agent of the Union Pacific road.

Q. During the time prior to 1901, when the offices of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific were consolidated here in Pittsburg, were the representatives of those roads competing with each other for coast business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any competition between them for business to Colorado and Utah points?

A. I cannot answer that positively, Mr. Severance, but I think there was.

Q. How did the Southern Pacific Colorado and Utah business move—all-rail or Morgan line?

A. I can't recall as to the Colorado and Utah business.

Q. Did you know of traffic moving by the Morgan line at the time when Mr. Herring represented the Southern Pacific exclusively?

A. I know that we had an occasional car by way of New York for the coast.

Q. That was when you represented the Erie?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you would ship it from this district, somewhere in here, to New York, care of the Morgan line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Coast business?

A. Coast business.

Q. Did you get any part of the haul or traffic that went by New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To what point did you take it?

2251 A. Cincinnati or Louisville. That would be the gateway—the Ohio River gateway.

Q. And did you participate in the business that the Union Pacific took over their line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you take that—to Chicago?

A. To Chicago or East St. Louis; whichever way it was routed.

Q. What way did Mr. Herring endeavor to route his traffic when they were competing with each other?

A. My recollection is that the Cincinnati route was the preferred route.

Q. By way of what Southern Pacific gateway?

A. New Orleans.

Q. And then it would move over your line to Cincinnati?

A. To Cincinnati, yes, sir.

Q. And then by what road—the Louisville & Nashville?

A. The Q. & C., or the L. & N., or, later on, by the Illinois Central by way of Louisville.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I think, from one of your answers, that you misunderstood a question asked you by Mr. Severance. He asked you whether any business moved, during your connection with the Erie, from this territory by the Morgan line, and you said there was some. Did you mean that it moved to New York and thence by boat to New Orleans, or did you mean all-rail to New Orleans?

A. I meant that there were occasionally cars that moved by way of New York city on which we gave bill-of-lading to New York
2252 only. They were consigned in the care of the Morgan line, and sometimes in care of the Clyde line from there. Where they went beyond that, I know not.

Q. At what points did such shipments originate?

A. I think there were a few cars of nails and wire from Rankin, Pennsylvania, about eight or ten miles south of here.

Q. South or east of Pittsburg?

A. South or east of Pittsburg. There were only semi-occasional cars.

Q. You knew of nothing moving from Pittsburg that way, did you?

A. There may have been a few cars from parties located in Pittsburg proper on the P. & L. E. tracks.

Q. Do you recollect any?

A. No, sir, I cannot positively.

Q. There may have been, but you do not recollect any?

A. I could not say positively at this time.

Q. I think you said that the Erie handled freight from this district for the Pacific coast, carrying some of it to Cincinnati?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And carrying some of it to Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way did you try to route that? Which way did you prefer to route it—to give it the long haul?

A. While I was with the Erie road, our position was that of a neutral line. In a very large majority of cases the freight came to us routed, and we were known all through the territory as a line that would absolutely respect routing. At irregular intervals we would get a car that was not routed, but they were very few and far between; and then we tried to divide it up among the different connecting lines.

Q. Didn't you try to get the long haul out of it?

A. Where we could, yes, sir.

2253 Q. You didn't understand that the Erie line to Cincinnati and the Erie line to Chicago were competing lines in any proper sense, did you? In other words, were you not doing what Mr. Herring of the Southern Pacific was doing—trying to get the haul for his long line, wherever he could, and otherwise take it for the short haul?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is substantially what Mr. Herring was doing, was it not?

A. That is what I believe he was doing, yes, sir.

Q. And you never supposed that by having two lines, one towards Cincinnati and another towards Chicago, that those two lines were competing with the Erie—the Erie's own lines? It was not competing with itself, was it?

A. There were two strings to the same bow. That is the way I considered them.

Q. Well, that is about the situation.

A. I had no preference.

Q. That was about the situation with the Southern Pacific line, was it not—two or three strings to its bow?

A. It would appear so to me, yes.

Q. This competition that, in answer to Mr. Severance's question, you stated existed between Mr. Choate and Mr. Herring, was not that after all freight for the Southern Pacific line? In one way it would get the long haul, and in the other way it would get the short haul? Whatever the Union Pacific got went out by way of the Southern Pacific, did it not?

A. It went out by the way of the Central Pacific from Ogden, depending on the ownership of the Central Pacific road.

Q. In other words, everything that the Union Pacific got 2254 for the Pacific coast, south of Portland, went over the Central Pacific to destination?

A. So I believe, yes, sir.

Q. A great many other lines in the territory lying between Pittsburg and the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers and the Rocky Mountains, are actively soliciting for that California business, are they not?

A. Yes, sir; I believe more today than ever.

Q. And all of the lines lying in that territory are engaged in that business and actively solicit for it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They all have agents here, have they not, and have had during all this time?

A. I would say that a majority of those lines have, yes, sir.

Q. Some try to work it by way of New Orleans, some by way of El Paso, some by way of Denver, and some by Omaha and Kansas City, do they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Each trying to get the longest haul and the most revenue?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Of course, as to any traffic that Mr. Herring was able to send via New Orleans, the Union Pacific did not participate at all, did it?

A. No, sir.

Q. So that the competition that you spoke of, between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, was, on the part of the Southern Pacific, an endeavor to get a part of the through haul, and on the part of the Southern Pacific, to get the entire haul from the river, by the Sunset; that is the competition that you meant?

A. That was the competition, yes, I believe.

2255 By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. And the Southern Pacific got a part of the haul either way?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how far is it from Pittsburg to New Orleans by the ordinary rail lines?

A. I would state, roughly, about a thousand miles; I think between a thousand and 1,100 miles. I have not the exact mileage; that is my recollection.

Q. As a railroad man you do not understand that the shippers are interested in the division of through rates as between the carriers, do you?

A. I do not.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. The shippers are interested in good service and in having their shipments looked after by the representatives of the road?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If delayed for any purpose——

A. And proper equipment furnished, and the goods go through in good shape.

2256 J. H. BLACKBURN,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Blackburn, where do you live?

A. Salem, Ohio.

Q. How long have you lived in Salem?

A. 25 years.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am with the W. H. Mullins Company.

Q. What is the business of the W. H. Mullins Company?

A. They manufacture architectural sheet-metal work, pressed steel boats, fireproof windows.

Q. To what part of the country do you ship your product?

A. Practically all over the world.

Q. Is your establishment a large concern of its kind?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it an old concern?

A. About 40 years, in the architectural end. The boat business is practically a new business; it has been established about ten years.

Q. Your factories are located at Salem, Ohio?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far is that from Pittsburg?

A. 70 miles.

Q. Does it take the Pittsburg rate?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your position with the firm?

A. Purchasing agent. I look after the routing of the shipments also.

Q. You say you ship all over the world. Do you ship a good deal to the Pacific coast?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you in times past?

A. Not a great amount, no, sir.

2257 Q. You have had some shipments to the coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You know Mr. Herring?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember when he was the agent of the Southern Pacific road, before the amalgamation of the agencies here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Herring call on you to solicit shipments for transcontinental freight at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By what route?

A. By the Southern Pacific.

Q. Which way did he endeavor to route it?

A. At that time, usually by New Orleans.

Q. That is the way he solicited it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How does your business move to the coast now, that formerly went by New Orleans?

A. By all the lines. We have no particular line to follow.

Q. Do you still ship by New Orleans?

A. Some, yes, sir.

Q. And what other lines? You say by all the lines.

A. By the Santa Fe and through Denver; over the lines from there.

Q. By the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is for California business?

A. Yes.

Q. How does your Portland business move?

A. By the Great Northern and Northern Pacific.

Q. Any of it by the Union Pacific?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you have any Oriental business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Does that move by the coast or by New York?
A. By New York.
Q. When Mr. Herring was soliciting business exclusively for the Southern Pacific, did the Union Pacific have a solicitor
2258 in the field?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where did he come from?
A. I don't know whether he came from Pittsburg or Cleveland. I do not remember.
Q. What were the arguments that these gentlemen used to get business?
A. Prompt service and tracing cars.
Q. The Union Pacific man urged that for his route, and Mr. Herring for the New Orleans route?
A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Mr. Herring solicited preferentially for the New Orleans route, I believe you said?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When he could not get it that way, wasn't he glad to get it by way of Ogden or El Paso?
A. I don't remember.
Q. Whatever business moved to California over the Union Pacific also went over the Southern Pacific from Ogden, did it not?
A. It naturally would, yes, sir.
Q. Was not approximately all of the business you sent by way of New Orleans to Mexico export business, Mr. Blackburn?
A. A large part of it. Of course we had some coast business, but the majority of the business was for Mexico.
Q. That which you had for the coast was for Lower California or Southern California?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You seldom shipped that way to San Francisco?
A. Some shipments would go that way.
Q. Very few, or many?
A. Comparatively few.
Q. Your San Francisco shipments usually went by direct railroad?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. All the lines between Pittsburg and New Orleans and the 2259 Missouri River and Rocky Mountains solicit your business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. They have, right along?
A. Yes, sir, all the time.
Q. And you send it by various lines?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are not interested in the division of through rates as between the carriers, are you?
A. No, sir.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. The carriers are, are they not?
A. I presume so, yes, sir.
Q. Judge Lovett asked you about shipments to Mexico. The Union Pacific did not solicit shipments to Mexico, did they?
A. I don't remember.
Q. Your testimony with reference to the competition for business between Mr. Herring's New Orleans route and the Union Pacific had reference to coast business?
A. Yes, sir.

2260 J. S. MURRAY

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct-examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Murray, what is your business?
A. I am with the Aluminum Company of America.
Q. What is their business?
A. The manufacture of aluminum.
Q. What product of aluminum do they make?
A. They make the metal from the clay.
Q. Oh, they make the metal?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You don't make up the metal?
A. We make up the metal into cable and sheet, in various forms.
Q. Where are your plants located?
A. We have plants at New Kensington, Pa.; Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Massena Springs, N. Y.; East St. Louis; Bauxite, Arkansas; Cave Spring, Ga.
Q. How long have you been with that company?
A. About five years.
Q. What was your business before that?
A. I was connected with four small subsidiary companies of the Apollo Iron & Steel Company, and the water, gas, electric light and telephone business.
Q. You were not in the traffic business?
A. No, sir.
Q. Does the Aluminum Company ship to the Pacific coast?
A. Some, yes, sir.
Q. How does that business move?
A. Most of it moves from Massena, New York.
Q. In what part of the State is Massena?

2261 A. Massena Springs, in the northern part of New York state, near Ogdensburg. It is on the R. W. & O. division of the New York Central road.

Q. Over what transcontinental lines does it move?

A. It moves from Massena via the New York Central and Grand Trunk lines to Chicago; from Chicago, the various lines, such as the Atchison; and then the various lines to Omaha; the Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, San Pedro or Salt Lake route via Ogden.

Q. Does it also move over the Northern Pacific and Great Northern for Portland and that region?

A. Yes, sir; it also moves around—shipments via New York.

Q. By the Morgan line?

A. By the Morgan line, yes, sir, to the coast.

Q. Could you give any idea of the way the business is divided, the percentages?

A. No, I could not. The routing of shipments that comes under my head is only shipments where we sell delivered, and there are very few of them.

Q. The consignee usually determines the routing?

A. The consignee usually determines the routing.

Q. But your stuff moves by all those routes that you have mentioned?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you make shipments to Colorado common points?

A. We have made shipments, yes, sir.

Q. By what route?

A. We have made shipments via Morgan line into Galveston.

Q. And thence up to Colorado?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. Herring?

A. I do.

Q. Do Mr. Herring and his assistants solicit business from you?

A. Yes, sir.

2262 Q. For what lines?

A. For the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific.

Q. Do they make any distinction between the two?

A. No, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. When were the shipments made to Colorado points by the Morgan line?

A. Within the last two or three years, various times.

Q. Since 1901, were they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have no knowledge of shipments prior to that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Since 1901 you have shipped to Galveston and thence up to Colorado points?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The shipments for California, that go over the Union Pacific go also over the Southern Pacific, do they not, except those that go over the San Pedro?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They go over the Southern Pacific west of Ogden?

A. West of Ogden, yes, sir.

Q. Are the various railway lines lying between your territory and the Rocky Mountains and El Paso, solicitors of your freight?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All of these different routes are open to you, are they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have been all along?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are not interested in the division of the through rate between the different railroad companies, are you?

A. No, sir.

2263 R. H. THOMSON,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Thomson, where do you live?

A. At Crafton, Pa.

Q. What is your business?

A. Traffic manager of the Oil Well Supply Company.

Q. How long have you been with them?

A. It will be nine years the first of July.

Q. Previously to that what was your business?

A. I was with the Chamber of Commerce for about two years and six months; prior to that I was commercial agent here of the Vandalia.

Q. Where does the Vandalia run?

A. It is part of the Pennsylvania system now, running from Indianapolis to St. Louis—the main line. I might say that I was joint agent of the Illinois Central and Vandalia, for a few years, until the Illinois Central pulled away from us here. They pulled away from the joint office here in Pittsburg after I was representing them for about two or three years.

Q. And put in an office of their own?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What kind of commodities does the Oil Well Supply Company manufacture?

A. Everything that is used in the drilling, operating, and so on, of oil wells, pipe lines, etc.; manufactures boilers, engines, and all machinery.

Q. It is a large concern of the kind?

A. The largest in the world.

2264 Q. Where do you ship your product?

A. Wherever there is any gas or oil.

Q. In the world?

A. Yes, sir; Russia, Japan; every place.

Q. I believe there is some oil in California?

A. Yes, I guess there are a few gallons over there.

Q. Do you have a good deal of freight for California?

A. Yes, sir, we have eight branches there.

Q. Do you consign your goods to some branch and then distribute from the branches?

A. Yes, sir; and also direct to our customers.

Q. Where are your California branches located?

A. San Francisco, Orcutt, Bakersfield, McKittrick, Los Angeles, Maricopa; I believe those are all of them.

Q. Is Maricopa in California or in Arizona?

A. In California. I think its old name was Monarch.

Q. And you ship to these branch houses and distribute from those, as well as direct to customers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You sell to most of the oil companies that are doing business in California, do you?

A. Yes, sir. Of course we have competitors in the field.

Q. But you endeavor to sell all you can to all of them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. These competitors do not constitute you their agent, do they, to sell for them?

A. No, sir.

Q. What way does your freight move to California?

A. It moves via all lines. It depends largely on where it is moving from.

2265 Q. That which goes to the branch houses that you have there is routed——

A. When I speak of "from," I mean our manufacturing plant. We have a boiler works at Oswego, N. Y., where we manufacture all our boilers; and that usually moves by way of Chicago, and if it is going to our Los Angeles branch it usually moves via El Paso; sometimes via the Union Pacific, Salt Lake, and the Southern Pacific.

Q. Sometimes by the Santa Fe?

A. No; not now. It used to.

The last answer of the witness was read by the reporter.

WITNESS. If you will allow me, I would like to correct that.

Q. Certainly.

A. Where I say that it moves via El Paso, the Southern Pacific, and then Union Pacific, and the San Pedro.

Q. When it is moved to San Francisco, how do you route it?

A. It sometimes moves by way of the Southern Pacific long haul, by way of El Paso, and other times by way of Salt Lake and Ogden—the Union Pacific.

Q. You say that the Atchison does not get any of it?
A. Not now, not to the Los Angeles field.
Q. Does it to any of the fields?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Bakersfield?
A. Yes, sir. We are located locally on their tracks there.
Q. I know they go through Bakersfield.
A. Yes. Up until about a year ago we did give the Santa Fe all of our Los Angeles business, but since that it goes to the Southern Pacific on account of our being located on their tracks at that destination.

2266 Q. Have you changed your location at Los Angeles?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. From the Atchison to the Southern Pacific?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. At whose suggestion?
A. Our own. We purchased ground there.
Q. And since then all your business to Los Angeles goes over the Southern Pacific?
A. That is, now, to Los Angeles, unless——
Q. That is what I am speaking about.
A. —— unless, of course, there is congestion, such as we had here something like a year ago; we sent a great deal of our material in there by way of the San Pedro, for the simple reason that we could make better time.
Q. Now, you spoke of sending some by New York?
A. No, I didn't.
Q. I misunderstood you. I thought you did.
A. No, sir, I didn't. We would never send anything by way of New York and water.
Q. You never do?
A. No, sir, unless it is specially requested by our customer.
Q. What is the objection to that, from your standpoint?
A. Our tubular goods, casing and so on, are very apt to be damaged, crushed; and if you have a certain amount of material that you are sending to a customer for a well, and you are one joint short, you might as well be short the whole lot—if he is out in the field and can not fix it up. The boilers, of course, could not be handled on steamers as well.
Q. You load them on cars and unload them at destination?
A. Yes, sir.

2267 Q. So that for your purposes the all-rail routes are preferable?

A. Always the best.
Q. Have you shipped at all by the Morgan Line—not to your branch houses, but to your customers?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What character of goods?

A. Some tubular goods; but with the distinct understanding, while we made delivery of the goods, that they would stand all loss or damage.

Q. What is the important consideration that governs you in distributing your business between the different lines?

A. Well, usually we are located on some tracks, right-of-way, but in the far West we have our own property.

Q. Is there anything else that interests you?

A. Sometimes when a man buys a few dollars worth of goods, we give him the pull on it.

Q. That is, if some railroad company happens to buy a few goods, you give them a little freight?

A. We give them the haul, yes, sir, on his goods.

Q. The Southern Pacific are in the oil business indirectly in California, are they not, as you have heard?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That gives them a little pull on your business?

A. It did a while ago; they got the haul via New York, but they requested it that way. In other words, if you rub my back we will rub your back.

Q. Well, that is polite. Then, these shipments that went by New York, although you did not regard that as being as good a route for you, were made at the solicitation——

A. Request.

2268 Q. ——of the Southern Pacific?

A. At the request of the Southern Pacific, or any person else who would request it that way—we would ship it that way.

Q. Now, in that case, was the Southern Pacific Oil Company the consignee, or was your branch house the consignee?

A. No, it would be a direct shipment.

Q. A direct shipment to whom?

A. To the consignee.

Q. If it was a direct shipment to the consignee, I do not see that the matter of selling goods to them could have any influence.

A. If you would sell a bill of goods delivered at destination, it would, wouldn't it?

Q. Yes, but that I did not quite understand.

A. Yes.

Q. That is what I want to know. You were paying the freight, were you?

A. We were paying the freight. We would make the delivery at the other end. But if you would come to us and say, "We would like to have a carload of freight delivered at a certain point—will you send it over a certain line?" it is to our interest to do it.

Q. Then, as I understand it, the Southern Pacific being the consignee under its relation with some company that bought the stuff from you, requested you to ship by the Morgan line, the boat line, from New York, and you did so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Although you appreciated that there was danger of your goods being damaged in transit?

A. Yes, sir. But let me say that these tubular goods that are going move from the seaboard territory.

Q. Yes, I understand that.

A. They do not move from this territory.

2269 Q. I understand that. They go from the seaboard territory.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The rates are just the same by the Morgan line as by the all-rail lines. But for the solicitation of the Southern Pacific people that you send this consignment via New York, you would have sent it all-rail?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For your own convenience?

A. To make a safe shipment of it.

Q. Well, you regarded that as perfectly legitimate competition——

A. Yes, sir.

Q. ——on the part of the Southern Pacific as against the Union Pacific and all other all-rail lines, did you not?

A. Why, it is their own business.

Q. Certainly, their own business, except that you pay the freight.

A. Of course we pay the freight, yes, sir.

Q. And you sell the product delivered at the California point?

A. At the California point, yes, sir. Our price includes the delivery of it.

Q. Have you ever shipped goods by way of New Orleans?

A. We have, yes, sir.

Q. Not by boat, but by rail?

A. All-rail, yes, sir.

Q. From where?

A. From Reading Mills, and from Pittsburg.

Q. Do you still ship that way?

A. Some, yes, sir.

Q. As much as you used to?

A. No, sir.

Q. What made the change?

A. Don't like the New Orleans gateway.

Q. Did you use to like it better?

A. No, sir, not very well; for the simple reason that they 2270 do not make the time across the river there.

Q. How did it happen that you formerly shipped more that way than you do now?

A. We didn't.

Q. I misunderstood you. I thought you said you did.

A. No. I said we shipped some; and we still ship some, but we don't ship very much there.

Q. Do you ship as much as you ever did?

A. I do not think we do.

Q. What happened to make you decrease your shipments by that route?

A. Nothing special, any more than we wanted to make some changes—divide it up.

Q. Do you remember when Mr. Herring was agent of the Southern Pacific alone?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did he solicit your coast business then?

A. He naturally solicited it for the long haul.

Q. By New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are on very good terms with Mr. Herring, are you not?

A. I have known him for a good many years—25 or 30 years—and we are still good friends.

Q. He is a friend of yours, isn't he?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And for that reason you were very willing to give him business if you could, weren't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was not Mr. Herring's solicitation, when he was working that route exclusively, largely responsible for the fact that you shipped more then by the New Orleans route than you do now when he has a divided allegiance?

A. I believe it was.

Q. Did you know Mr. Choate?

A. Yes, sir.

2271 Q. And Mr. Lothrop?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they use to solicit your business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever ship Oriental traffic by way of the Pacific coast?

A. No, sir. We have a New York office that attends to that branch.

Q. Has any of it ever gone that way, that you remember?

A. I think we had one car, shortly after I went with our people, that moved by way of San Francisco. It was only one car. It all goes to New York.

Q. And then the other way—by the Suez?

A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. With reference to this pipe and other oil well supplies that you testified about as having been sold to the Southern Pacific or some oil company in which the Southern Pacific was interested, and which was shipped by the Morgan line—how far was that carried from the point of origin to where it reached the Morgan line?

A. I do not know the exact mileage; but it was Reading, Pa.

Q. Can you approximate it roughly?

A. It is not 200 miles.

Q. It is less than 200 miles, is it not?

A. Yes, less than 200 miles.

Q. To have gone all-rail it would have had to have gone one thousand or fifteen hundred miles, or two thousand miles, before reaching the Southern Pacific line, would it not?

A. The nearest would be New Orleans; fully 1500 miles.

Q. And fully 1500 miles before it would reach even the 2272 Union Pacific too, is it not?

A. Worse than that.

Q. More than 1500 miles?

A. No, I will take that back.

Q. It is about 1500 miles?

A. Possibly that.

Q. Approximately 1500 miles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, you would not think it very surprising that the Southern Pacific should want to get the longest haul out of it, would you?

A. Why, it is strictly business. I would think it very funny of a man buying goods, if he got a chance to haul them himself, to let somebody else haul them, and pay the other fellow.

Q. So should I. So would Mr. Severance.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Certainly I would. Good business.

Q. When Mr. Choate and Mr. Lothrop were soliciting business for California, such business as they got went ultimately over the Southern Pacific, did it not?

A. It was the only way it could get there. The Salt Lake line was not in operation then.

Q. I suppose that all the lines reaching from your plants to the Mississippi and Missouri rivers and Rocky Mountains actively solicit this business, do they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are not interested in the division of the rates between the carriers, are you?

A. All we are interested in is the total amount of the rate that we have got to pay.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. And of course you are interested in having good service?

A. Certainly.

Q. And it is clear to you, is it not, that if there are 2273 different lines in competition for the business between your factory and a given point, that would have a tendency to keep up the service?

A. I would admit that. But you will find our people in Pittsburg divide up their business very largely, when they find out that there is congestion at certain of your large centres. That is why we have traffic men to look after those things. And these representatives, such as Mr. Herring or any of the rest of them here, keep you posted all the time as to where it is.

Q. That is what they are for, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You regard a man in Mr. Herring's position as very useful to the shipper, do you not—commercial agents?

A. I should say so. If you would get in the business for a little while, you would very soon find out.

Q. That is what I understand. They are very useful. And as far as you know, the various lines have independent solicitors, independent agencies, most of them?

A. Yes.

Q. Does the Canadian Pacific have an agency here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Great Northern?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Northern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Santa Fe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They are all separate from each other?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific used to be?

A. Yes, sir. But, if you will allow me, I would like to say this, that——

Q. Anything that you can say that will help Mr. Herring, just say it; it is all right.

A. I was going to say that Mr. Herring solicits just as 2274 strongly to me to-day for the Union Pacific as it was prior to his taking hold.

Q. I do not doubt it. He solicits just as strongly for both of them, does he not?

A. Yes, sir; and he gives us just as good service, too.

Q. Now, let us see about that—as long as you wanted to say this for your friend. Mr. Herring solicits just as strongly for the Union Pacific now as he used to solicit for the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir; that is, to me. I am talking about myself.

Q. I am talking about you; that is the only one, you know. Does Mr. Herring solicit just as strongly for the Southern Pacific as he used to?

A. I believe so, yes, sir.

Q. In the old days, when Mr. Herring was soliciting, you said he endeavored to route his traffic via New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And does he try now, when he is working for the Union Pacific in this vehement manner that you have testified to, to send the stuff to New Orleans?

A. I am not talking about New Orleans. I am talking about the Southern Pacific road.

Q. Is he working hard now to send stuff by New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir; he is asking for business for New Orleans, too.

Q. Is that when he is working for the Union Pacific?

A. No, sir.

Q. How can you tell when you see Mr. Herring walking down the street whether he is coming to you to solicit for the Union Pacific route or the Southern Pacific route?

A. Mr. Herring does not usually come down the street to 2275 meet me on the street and ask me for business. He usually comes to my office.

Q. How can you tell when you see him walking in the door? Does he look different when he is coming after Union Pacific shipments to the coast than he does when he is coming after Southern Pacific?

A. No; he has got about the same style of smile on, but when he pulls out his papers I can tell you what he is after.

Q. So you don't know what sort of a talk is going to be made when he comes in?

A. No. But I find out. I have to wait until he gets through.

Q. And sometimes he comes in when you have a lot of shipments to make, and says, "I want to get those by the Union Pacific," or words to that effect?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And sometimes he says, "I want to get them by Southern Pacific?"

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But he does not try at the same time to get them by both the Sunset Route and the Southern Pacific, does he?

A. That all depends on where he gets his tips.

Q. I say, does he try at the same time to get them for both the Southern Pacific and the New Orleans routes?

A. No, sir. He couldn't very well.

Q. I didn't think he could. That is what I wanted to bring out. That is the reason I examined you after you made that voluntary statement.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You don't care which one he is soliciting for, do you?

A. No, sir.

2276 Q. You have the choice of all the lines that he represents?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I am not in the advertising department of these lines. But, with reference to service, does not the line composed of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific west of Ogden give about as good service as any line to the coast?

A. I do not see why they shouldn't. What we have is all right.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

A. Except sometimes when they are congested, you say?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Then you use other routes?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And when the other routes are congested you use that one?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you are glad that there is more than one route?
A. I certainly am.
Q. You would be very glad to see them operated independently, so that everybody would try to keep them open, one as against the other?
A. I wouldn't want to say that.
Q. Oh, you would rather there would not be any operated independently, would you?
A. As far as I can see, there is no harm in it.
Q. You would just as soon they would all be under one management, including the Santa Fe, the San Pedro, the Northern Pacific, and the Great Northern?
A. I did not so state.
Q. You say you do not see any harm in it?
A. I do not think I ought to answer that question.
Q. It is in response to a remark made by our friend here.
Mr. LOVETT. No; I beg your pardon.

Mr. SEVERANCE. You were asking about the service over 2277 this joint route.

Q. Do you prefer not to answer that?
A. Yes, sir.
Mr. LOVETT. When there is congestion on the Union Pacific and the Central Pacific line, you can go to other lines? You can go to the Southern Pacific at El Paso or New Orleans, or the Atchison, or the various gateways, can you not?
A. Yes, sir.

2278 E. L. McGREW,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. McGrew, where do you live?
A. Crafton, Pa.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am purchasing agent for the Standard Underground Cable Company.
Q. Where is that company located?
A. Their general offices are here; their factories are in Pittsburg, Perth Amboy, New Jersey, and Oakland, California.

Q. Do you manufacture in Oakland, or do you ship the finished product out there, and distribute from there?

A. We partly manufacture it there. It is partly manufactured at the eastern factories and completed at Oakland, that is, a certain class of our material; the balance is shipped there and distributed to customers—sort of a warehouse for a part of our product.

Q. What kind of cable do you manufacture?

A. We manufacture wire and cable for all kinds of electrical service.

Q. I see your company is called the Underground Cable Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you manufacture overhead cables as well as underground?

A. Everything. That name is a little misleading.

Q. Then your factories are in Pittsburg and Perth Amboy, with a finishing plant at Oakland, as I understand you?

A. Yes, sir.

2279 Q. Where is your business, so far as the distribution of your products is concerned?

A. Do you mean the point of destination?

Q. Yes.

A. All over this country.

Q. Is it a large business?

A. Yes, for the kind of business.

Q. As large as any of that class, is it not?

A. I think there are two others as large. There are three large companies; the others are small.

Q. How long have you been with them?

A. Since April, 1900.

Q. All the time as traffic manager?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you during all that time had shipments to the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How does the stuff move to the coast—how has it during that time?

A. Do you mean at all times?

Q. No, go back to the time you started in, in 1900.

A. In the early days we sent it via the Santa Fe and the New Orleans gateway principally.

Q. Up to what time?

A. I don't know; four or five years ago, or a little longer, perhaps. I don't recall.

Q. How does it go now?

A. It is pretty equally divided between the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific. We give the Southern Pacific their proportion, divide it up pretty equally among the lines centering at Ogden—the Union Pacific, Colorado Midland, Denver & Rio Grande.

Q. Do you divide equally between the Denver & Rio Grande, the Midland, and the Union Pacific?

A. No, I do not say equally, I say we give them all a portion of that business. Probably the Southern Pacific gets a little the largest 2280 proportion; I think they do.

Q. How about the Union Pacific?

A. I meant the Union Pacific. I think I said "Southern."

Q. Have you decreased the amount you ship by New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you send that which way now?

A. Ogden.

Q. By Ogden?

A. The Southern Pacific portion of it, yes, sir.

Q. Do you ship any by New Orleans now?

A. No, sir, not all-rail.

Q. How long ago did you stop sending all-rail by New Orleans?

A. Probably five or six years ago.

Q. How did you happen to do that?

A. Well, one of those psychological events, perhaps.

Q. Who happened on the ground at the time that psychological phenomenon occurred?

A. Everything seems to be blamed on Mr. Herring.

Q. Then the diversion was because of the difference in the attitude of Mr. Herring, was it not? Instead of wanting to send the stuff by New Orleans, he wanted to send it by Ogden?

A. I think mainly so.

Q. You have a factory at Perth Amboy, you say?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do your shipments to the coast, if any, go from that factory?

A. The same way, that is, carload shipments.

Q. By all-rail?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Union Pacific, usually, or some of the other lines, and the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does any of it go by the Morgan line?

A. Yes, sir, L. C. L. shipments.

2281 Q. All L. C. L. shipments?

A. Not all of them, no, sir. We do not have many, in fact, since I come to think of it, because that is mostly distributed from the Oakland factory—when we are speaking of transcontinental shipments. The Morgan line we use generally for Texas business, in through there.

Q. So that your carload shipments usually go all-rail?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you distribute locally from your place at Oakland?

A. Yes. We do not like to break bulk, on account of the character of the freight.

Q. Do you remember when the Union Pacific had a separate agency here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was their agent, if you remember?

A. Well, I have a recollection of Mr. Choate. It is not as clear as I ought to have, perhaps. I do not think that he solicited our business as strong as Mr. Herring did, because I did not know him so well. I learned to know him better later, though.

Q. At that time Mr. Choate and Mr. Herring were soliciting business in competition with each other, were they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Herring was successful in getting your business, as a rule, I think you have testified, out by New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And later on, when he was employed by both the Union and the Southern Pacific, he diverted the business, as far as he could, by the Union Pacific and Southern—the Ogden route?

A. It was diverted.

2282 Q. I say as far as he was able he secured its diversion?

A. Yes.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Mr. Herring never indicated any preference for the Omaha-Ogden route as against the New Orleans route, did he? He did not care which way you sent it so you sent it over the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific, did he? I am speaking now of the time this change occurred.

Mr. SEVERANCE. You are speaking of the time of this psychological event?

Mr. LOVETT. Yes.

WITNESS. Prior to 1901, is that what you mean?

Q. No, I am speaking of the later years. Does Mr. Herring now ever indicate any preference for your shipments by way of Omaha and Ogden as against New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Rather have it go that way?

A. I don't know whether he does or not, but I imagine he does.

Q. Does he ever say so? Did he ever indicate to you in any way a preference?

A. He has at times asked, when we said that a shipment had been promised another way, "Can't you give that to the Union Pacific"?

Q. Has he ever asked you to give any to the Southern Pacific, under those circumstances?

A. Oh, yes. Yes, he is a Southern Pacific man.

Q. He will take it either way if he can get it, won't he?

A. He has always seemed willing to get it at Ogden if he couldn't get it at Omaha.

2283 Q. And he also would be willing to take it at New Orleans, would he not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the point I was making. He has never solicited for Omaha as against New Orleans, has he?

Mr. SEVERANCE. You forget the psychological event.

Mr. LOVETT. No, I am just trying to develop that psychological event.

WITNESS. I am sure he knows that we prefer the Omaha route.

Q. Yes—you prefer it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is immaterial to him, so long as he gets it at Omaha—that satisfies him. Now, another thing in reference to that psychological moment. Did not the source of your supply have something to do with that? Did you not, prior to five or six years ago, ship most of your supplies from Perth Amboy?

A. Most of it goes from there at all times.

Q. Has that always been true?

A. That has always been, yes, sir.

Q. And no change in that respect had anything to do with this change of routing?

A. No, sir. I might modify that statement a little. I will add to that, after the erection of the Perth Amboy plants, which I think was probably along about 1889. Prior to that time we shipped only from Pittsburg, of course. That was before my time, however.

Q. That was back in 1889, was it?

A. Yes, I think our factories over there were erected along about that time.

Q. When you were solicited by separate representatives of the Union Pacific (Mr. Choate or Mr. Lothrop) which way did the traffic move that was given in response to their solicitation?

A. To the Union Pacific, of course, at Omaha.

2284 Q. And then over the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All the business that they got from you for California went ultimately over the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I suppose all other lines still solicit your business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If, during the days when there were separate agencies, Mr. Herring could not get your shipment by way of New Orleans, did you ever know him to try to get you to send it by the all-rail route by way of Ogden?

A. Yes, sir. As I have already testified, Mr. Herring is always willing to take the short haul when we will not give him the long haul. That was true then.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Since he has represented both the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific he has apparently regarded the Omaha-San Francisco route as a long haul, hasn't he?

WITNESS. Yes, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE. You so understood it from him?
WITNESS. Yes, sir.
Mr. LOVETT. From where?
WITNESS. From Omaha.
Mr. LOVETT. The long haul from——
WITNESS. I think you [Mr. Severance] said a long haul, didn't you?
Mr. SEVERANCE. Yes; one of the long hauls that he was willing to get.
WITNESS. Yes.
Q. Doesn't that apply to shipments from Perth Amboy, too?
A. Yes, sir. We ship from both points.
2285 Q. You do not mean that from Perth Amboy to San Francisco the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific line by way of Omaha and Ogden would be the long haul as against New Orleans, do you?
A. No, sir. My understanding is that it is a longer haul for the Southern Pacific from New Orleans than from Omaha. I do not know positively.

2286 S. B. DEPUEY,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination, by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Dupuey, where do you live?
A. At Munhall.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am with the Safety Armorite Conduit Company.
Q. How long have you been with that company?
A. Four years.
Q. What are your duties in connection with it?
A. Part of them, as traffic manager.
Q. What kind of goods does your company manufacture?
A. Steel conduits for electric wiring.
Q. Where is your market?
A. All over the United States.
Q. Have you a large concern?
A. About the largest there is in the country of that character.
Q. Do you ship to the Pacific coast?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How do your California shipments go?
A. Southern Pacific via El Paso; Santa Fe, Union Pacific, and Southern Pacific at Ogden.
Q. Do you know Mr. Herring?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Does he solicit your business?

A. He and his assistants.
Q. For which route?
A. Any way they can get it.
Q. They do not express any preference as between the Union Pacific and the El Paso routes?
A. No, sir.
Q. Do you ship to Portland?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How does your Portland business go?
A. Northern Pacific and Great Northern.
2287 Q. Do you give any of that to the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line?
A. We have. But that Portland business is always routed by the consignee.
Q. And the Northern lines get most of it, do they?
A. The Northern lines get almost all of it; all that I know of within two years, with the exception of one car.
Q. And how did that go?
A. That went Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line.
Q. Where are your factories?
A. At West Pittsburg; 45 miles north.
Q. You say that you do not route any business to Portland yourself?
A. Not to Portland.
Q. Do you get advices from the consignee as to the way to ship?
A. The routing always comes in with the order.
Q. What is that?
A. The routing always comes in on the order.
Q. Do the representatives of the Union Pacific, the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, occasionally come in to check up those orders?
A. Every time there is an order that comes in from the north or the northwest, which ever way the routing is, you will find the agent around to check it up.
Q. He is advised from the other end?
A. He is advised from the other end.
Q. And he comes around to make sure that you respect the routing, does he?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. That is one of the functions of these eastern commercial agents for western lines?
A. Yes, sir.
Mr. LOVETT. You say you have held your position two years?
A. Two years.

2288 W. G. HARD,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination, by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Hard?
A. Salem, Ohio.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am traffic manager for the Buckeye Engine Company.
Q. How long have you been with that company?
A. Since 1890.
Q. What kind of engines do they manufacture?
A. Stationary, steam and gas engines.
Q. Is it a large concern?
A. Fairly large, yes, sir.
Q. To what parts of the country do they ship their product?
A. Pretty well scattered over the United States.
Q. Do they ship it abroad, too?
A. To some extent, yes, sir.
Q. To what foreign countries do you ship?
A. We have a number of engines in Japan, some few in Russia, New Zealand, South America, Central American points, Mexico.
Q. Are your plants located at Salem?
A. At Salem, Ohio, yes, sir.
Q. And no other place?
A. No other place.
Q. Prior to 1901 did you ship engines to the Pacific coast?
A. We have a few engines on the Pacific coast. Our business on the Pacific coast never was very large.
Q. Did you make shipments over there prior to 1901?
A. I remember of handling possibly half a dozen shipments since 1890.

Mr. LOVETT. From 1890 to date?

2289 WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. Herring?
A. I do, yes, sir.
Q. Did he ever solicit your business?
A. He has.
Q. Did he solicit your business before he represented the Union Pacific as well as the Southern Pacific?
A. He did.
Q. For which gateway?
A. I do not know that I can recall that phase of his solicitation. I would naturally suppose he would solicit by way of New Orleans. I know we have made some shipments that way.
Q. Did you make shipments in response to his solicitation, by way of New Orleans?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was anybody calling on you at that time, representing the Union Pacific and soliciting shipments?

A. I remember a man by the name of Carney, who I think was soliciting for the Union Pacific.

Q. Where was his headquarters, do you remember?

A. I cannot tell you that; I do not remember.

Q. Do they come to see you now—Mr. Herring or his representatives?

A. Mr. Corfield I believe has been to see me once or twice, perhaps. I do not know the man. He has not been often enough so that I know him, but I found his card on my desk.

Q. You do not remember to have seen him?

A. I do not remember that I have seen him; I may have.

Q. Do you ship to Portland at all?

A. I have no shipments to Portland that I know of.

Q. How do your Oriental shipments go? You spoke of having engines in Japan?

A. By way of New York and the Suez Canal.

2290 Q. And New Zealand the same?

A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I understood you to say that you thought you had placed as many as half-a-dozen engines on the Pacific coast since 1890?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were they all shipped by way of New Orleans, or did some go by way of Ogden?

A. I cannot recall that.

2291 JAMES A. HENDERSON, called on behalf of Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Captain?

A. In Pittsburg, Pa.

Q. How long have you lived here?

A. All my life.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am president and general manager of the Pittsburg & Cincinnati Packet Line.

Q. What kind of business is carried on by that packet line?

A. The handling of freight and passengers between Pittsburg and Cincinnati, and, in connection with other lines of boats, from Cincinnati to New Orleans, Memphis, St. Louis, Nashville, and various other river points.

Q. You have a line of boats from here to Cincinnati?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you had that line?

A. I have been connected with it for about 25 years.

Q. Has that been in active operation during that time?

A. During the season of navigation; except when there is low water or ice.

Q. How many months in the year is the river open?

A. About eight months on the average.

Q. Has there been in existence at any time a pro-rate by which your packet line participated in Pacific coast business out of Pittsburg?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Up to what time was that in force?

A. You mean a through rate?

2292 Q. Yes.

A. I was always interested in the rate to Cincinnati. There or at other points the railroad would take it up and make a through rate.

Q. But the rates were so adjusted that shipments could go by your packet line to Cincinnati and then on, either by boat or rail, to the coast, were they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had what is called a pro-rate on that business, had you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you still?

A. No, sir.

Q. When was that taken out?

A. Along about 1890 or 1891.

Q. 1890, or 1900 do you mean?

A. 1900; and 1901, lastly.

Q. During the time when that pro-rate was in existence did you handle any coast business out of Pitt-burg?

A. Yes, sir; out of East Liverpool I recall.

Q. How did that move?

A. (Referring to a memorandum.) I have a memorandum of a transaction. It moved from Pittsburg to Cincinnati, from Cincinnati to Chicago, thence by the Chicago & North Western and Northern Pacific railroads beyond. That shipment moved to Portland, Oregon.

Q. Did you ever have any business move by New Orleans?

A. To the Pacific coast?

Q. Yes.

A. None that I recall.

Q. Did you ever have any business moving to Colorado points part way by boat?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did that move?

A. To New Orleans.

Q. And thence over what line? The Southern Pacific?

A. The Southern Pacific.

Q. Was there a considerable amount of coast business
2293 that moved by the boat lines out of here, or out of these other towns by your line, while that pro-rate was in existence?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how it happened to be taken out?

A. Why, the railroads refused to pro-rate with the river lines, with the water lines, about 1900.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. That shipment that went by New Orleans—do you remember more than one?

A. No. I recall it because of the peculiarity of the route.

Q. Yes. It was one carload of candles, was it not?

A. No; of nails.

Q. Of what?

A. Wire nails.

Q. That is the only shipment you have ever known to go that way, is it not?

A. From Pittsburg to New Orleans and thence to Colorado points?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir; in that route.

Q. Did it go all the way down to New Orleans by boat?

A. The shipment originated at Salem, Ohio. It went from Salem, Ohio, to East Liverpool, and from East Liverpool to Cincinnati, and thence to New Orleans by boat. We took it by boat from East Liverpool to Cincinnati, and there we turned it over to the Southern Pacific Railroad. The reason I recall it is because of the peculiar route it took. It made a sort of a triangle.

Q. That is the only shipment of the kind you ever knew?

A. Yes, sir.

2294 Q. Did that go by the Southern Pacific or the Texas & Pacific from New Orleans?

A. The rate was made in connection with Mr. Herring, so I presume it went by the Southern Pacific from New Orleans.

Q. What did I understand your answer to be as to freight moving that way to California points?

A. Via New Orleans?

Q. Yes.

A. We had very little that I can recall. We may have.

Q. You cannot recall any, can you, Mr. Henderson?

A. Not specifically, no.

Q. None of it moved that way to California points, that you can recall?

A. No, sir, not via New Orleans.

Q. With reference to this business on which you had a pro-rate, you carried that, as I understand, as far down the river as Cincinnati?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there it was taken up by rail lines, who made the through rate——

A. No. You mean by New Orleans.

Q. No; I have left the New Orleans business now. I am speaking of this business that you took from points up the river to Cincinnati, and on which you were allowed a pro-rate by the rail lines out of Cincinnati?

A. Yes.

Q. California business?

A. Portland, I refer to.

Q. Portland?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Over what line did it go from Cincinnati?

A. The C. H. & D.—Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton.

Q. And then by the Northern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that, you said, was destined to Portland?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you ever have any shipments to California?

A. No.

2295 Q. Oh, you never handled any shipments destined to California, then, by way of Cincinnati?

A. We may have. We have handled with the railroads that tap the Ohio River and the Mississippi River for almost every western point.

Q. But you do not recall any to California?

A. No, sir.

Q. You never had any published rates by your line to California, had you?

A. No, sir.

Q. You never made a rate to California, so far as you know?

A. No, sir; not quoted a rate direct to California.

Q. You could not without acting in conjunction with railroad lines, of course?

A. Not since the Interstate Commerce Commission went into effect.

Q. Well, you never had any at any time in connection with the railroads to California, had you?

A. No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE. That concludes our testimony today, your Honor.

The EXAMINER. We will have no further witnesses examined today, and will take a recess for fifteen minutes.

Mr. SEVERANCE. You may excuse any witnesses who have not been called.

The EXAMINER. Any witnesses present who have not been called will be excused.

(A short conference was then held between the attorneys.)

2296 The EXAMINER. We will now take an adjournment until Tuesday, February 9, 1909, at 10:30 o'clock a. m., at the office of the United States Marshal, Cincinnati, Ohio.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL'S OFFICE,
FEDERAL BUILDING, CINCINNATI, O.,
Tuesday, February 9, 1909, 10.30 a. m.

Counsel for the respective parties appeared before the Special Examiner, Hon. Sylvester G. Williams, at the above time and place, and thereupon proceeded to Room 322, Federal Building, where the hearing was resumed as follows:

Present on behalf of the Complainant: Mr. C. A. Severance, Mr. G. E. Husted. On behalf of the Defendants: Mr. R. S. Lovett.

STEPHEN GANO,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Gano?
A. Cincinnati.
Q. How long have you lived in Cincinnati?
A. Born here.
Q. That is not definite.
A. Well, I have lived here all my life, except from 1874 to 1879.
Q. What is your business?
A. Freight solicitor, G. R. & I. Railroad.
Q. That is a branch of what system?
A. Pennsylvania.
Q. How long have you occupied that position?
A. Since November, 1896.
2298 Q. Previous to that what was your business?
A. I was with the Addyston Pipe & Steel Company.
Q. For how long?
A. About 18 or 19 months.
Q. And previous to that?
A. With the Union Pacific Railroad.
Q. In what capacity?
A. Clerk, principally.
Q. Were you ever freight solicitor for that road?
A. Why, the last two years I was with the company, I was city freight solicitor.
Q. Who was the general agent of the Union Pacific during the time you were with them?
A. James D. Welsh.
Q. Do you remember up to what time Mr. Welsh was the agent of the Union Pacific here?
A. No, I could not tell you the time of his retirement. He was sick the last two years of his life, and I do not know what date he severed his connection with the company.

Q. What year did you sever your connection with the Union Pacific?

A. 1894.

Q. And Mr. Welsh was at that time their representative?

A. At that time still in the employ of the company.

Q. And did he continue to be for some time after?

A. Well, he was sick for two years.

Q. Who succeeded him as general agent of the Union Pacific?

A. W. H. Connor, I believe. Now, just a moment there: I am in doubt about who succeeded Mr. Welsh. There was a man named Smith, I think, who had charge of the office for a short time, but for how long, I do not know.

Q. At any rate, in 1894, when you severed your connection with the Union Pacific, Mr. Welsh was their general agent?

2299 A. Was their representative here, yes.

Q. And was he your superior officer?

A. He was.

Q. During all the time you were employed by that company?

A. During all the time I was employed by the Union Pacific.

Q. At that time who represented the Southern Pacific Company here?

A. W. H. Connor.

Q. Are you acquainted with Mr. Connor?

A. I am.

Q. He is still here, is he not?

A. He is in the room.

Q. And what is his position now?

A. General agent of the Union and Southern Pacific, as I understand it.

Q. During the time when you were with the Union Pacific was there any competition between that company and the Southern Pacific for transcontinental business?

A. Decidedly.

Q. And to what points was that competition directed—that is, to what coast points?

A. All the Pacific coast.

Q. How far north?

A. Portland, Seattle, Tacoma and Puget Sound points.

Q. And all the California points?

A. And all the California points.

Q. What way was the Southern Pacific working transcontinental business?

A. Via New Orleans and El Paso.

Q. And which way did the Union Pacific work business?

A. Through Missouri River, Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Omaha and Ogden.

Q. Which way was the Portland business worked by the Southern Pacific?

A. Why, they had two routes. They had a steamship route from San Francisco to Portland, and they had an all-rail route by 2300 what they call the Shasta line, from Sacramento to Portland.

Q. How did the business move to reach the Sacramento route?

A. Via New Orleans, when the Southern Pacific secured the business.

Q. And then up by the Shasta route?

A. Sent it either way they wanted, I presume. The Shasta route in wintertime, of course, was sometimes out of use, on account of snow; then, I presume, they used the steamship route.

Q. Did the Southern Pacific have that steamship route, or did the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company have it?

A. I think it was controlled by the Southern Pacific, is my recollection.

Q. Are you sure about that?

A. No.

Q. But the Southern Pacific worked Portland business via New Orleans, did they?

A. They worked Portland business via New Orleans.

Q. And how did the Union Pacific work Portland business?

A. By the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company.

Q. Was there any competition at that time for passenger business to the coast?

A. There was.

Q. Active or otherwise?

A. Very active.

Q. What way was that carried on?

A. How do you mean?

Q. How did they work to get the business?

A. By personal solicitation. People that they heard were going to the Pacific coast, their representatives, passenger men, would go to see them.

Q. That is, the Southern Pacific?

2301 A. Both Southern Pacific and Union Pacific had passenger men in the territory.

Q. And which way did the Southern Pacific endeavor to work its passenger business to the coast?

A. Well, that was optional with the passenger. It depended on how he wanted to go. There were numerous routes to the Pacific coast. To illustrate: a man might want to go by way of New Orleans-San Francisco, to include the Southern California points; he might want to return by way of Ogden and Union Pacific; he might want to continue his route up to Portland. He would come back Northern Pacific, or he could come back Union Pacific.

Q. Which way did they endeavor to send the coast business?

A. Who endeavor to send?

Q. The Southern Pacific.

A. Via New Orleans.

Q. Where is your office at the present time, Mr. Gano?

A. 42 East Fourth Street.

Q. Where is that with reference to Mr. Connor's office?

A. Directly across the street.

Q. Did you ever notice the signs on Mr. Connor's window?

A. Yes.

Q. What are they?

A. I made a memorandum of them this morning. I can read them to you if you want me to.

Q. Well, read them to me.

A. (Referring to memorandum.) They have two windows. On the east window it says "Union and Southern Pacific"—Oh, wait a minute. Over the door extending over both windows there is a large white and blue sign which says "Union and Southern Pacific."

On the east window it says "Union Pacific;" and it has the 2302 Union Pacific shield. "Overland Route" it says in the shield.
Underneath the shield it says "Oregon Short Line. Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company." On the west window it says "Southern Pacific;" a shield, with "Sunset Route" in it. "Houston & Texas Central; Southern Pacific steamship lines between New Orleans and Havana." On the transom it says "Occidental & Oriental Steamship Company; Pacific Mail Steamship Company." And then they have got some Japanese—I don't know what this is—"T-o-y-o" it looks like, and "K-i-s-h-e-n," I think it is. Under that it says "Portland & Asiatic Steamship Company."

Q. What means were used by the representatives of these competing lines, in the days when they were in competition, to get business from each other?

A. Why, they had freight and passenger solicitors traveling through the territory.

Q. And what arguments did these men make?

A. I do not know. I was not there.

Q. You were not here. But do you remember how many men were employed by the respective lines?

A. I know who were employed by the Union Pacific. I could not tell you who were employed by the Southern Pacific.

Q. How many men did the Union Pacific have?

A. J. D. Welsh was the Cincinnati representative; A. G. Sherman looked after the Cleveland territory; T. C. Hirst traveled in the Columbus territory; H. C. Smith, the Cincinnati territory. I was the clerk in the office.

Q. And you say for several years you were also freight solicitor?

A. The last two years I was with the company I was 2303 on the street in Cincinnati soliciting freight and passenger business.

Q. Do you remember the names of the Southern Pacific organization, outside of Mr. Connor?

A. No, I could not tell you but three of them—Mr. Connor, Mr. Shinkle, and Mr. Drake. Mr. Drake, I think, was a stenographer.

Q. Do you remember when it was that Mr. Connor became the joint agent?

A. No; I have no means of knowing.

Q. You do not remember that?

A. I do not remember.

Q. Did these roads at that time work Oriental business?

A. Passenger business, they did; that is, the Union Pacific worked for Oriental passenger business.

Q. By what route did the Union Pacific work Oriental passenger business?

A. Via Ogden-San Francisco.

Q. And what steamship line?

A. I could not tell you from memory. I have drawn prepaid orders on the agents at San Francisco, but I have forgotten the names of the steamship lines now.

Q. How did the Southern Pacific endeavor to work Puget Sound business?

A. Freight, or passenger?

Q. Well, take freight.

A. Puget Sound business they would work either by the Shasta or the steamship line to Portland, Tacoma or Seattle.

Q. And how did it move by rail, when it went by rail only as far as San Francisco?

A. There was only one rail route from Sacramento to Portland, and that was the Shasta line.

Q. No; I mean moving from the East to——

A. Moving from Cincinnati?

2304 Q. Yes.

A. It moved to New Orleans via the L. & N., or Q. & C.

Q. And thence to San Francisco?

A. Then to Sacramento.

Q. And then either by rail or boat to Puget Sound?

A. Then by rail or boat to Puget Sound, if it went by rail; and to San Francisco, if it went by steamer.

Q. And by steamer to Puget Sound points?

A. To Puget Sound points.

Q. Do you remember the name of that steamship company to Puget Sound points?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Which way did the Union Pacific work that business to Puget Sound points.

A. Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, via Portland.

Q. And how did they work it from there up to Puget Sound—from Portland?

A. That would depend on destination. The steamers run from Portland and Seattle to points in Puget Sound.

Q. There were rail lines there, too?

A. No rail lines that I remember of. We only handled water routes from Portland for Puget Sound points. The Northern Pacific may have touched a few there that we could work with them north of Portland.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You are familiar with the location of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific railroad lines, I suppose, Mr. Gano?

A. Geographically, only. I have never been over them.

Q. That is what I mean. The Union Pacific lines lie between——

2305 A. The Missouri River and Ogden to San Francisco.

Q. Extend from Kansas City and Omaha to Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. And then the Oregon Short Line and Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company?

A. From Green River to Granger, and from Umatilla to Portland.

Q. And the Southern Pacific lines extend from New Orleans around through Texas and Arizona?

A. From New Orleans to San Francisco, yes.

Q. Up that way?

A. Yes.

Q. And thence on up the coast to Portland?

A. To Portland.

Q. Then it has a line extending from San Francisco eastwardly to Ogden?

A. To Ogden.

Q. In soliciting freight during the time that the Union Pacific had separate solicitors here, for California points or points south of Portland, Oregon, such freight as was secured by the Union Pacific for those points, moved over the Union Pacific either from Kansas City or Omaha to Ogden?

A. To Ogden.

Q. Thence over the Southern Pacific to the Pacific coast?

A. Yes.

Q. And such freight as the Southern Pacific's solicitors secured moved, if they could, by way of New Orleans, you say?

A. Via New Orleans.

Q. Or Texas junctions?

A. El Paso.

Q. El Paso, or Ogden?

A. Well, they used the Ogden route. The Southern Pacific would sometimes solicit freight via the Ogden route when they could not get it via the New Orleans route.

2306 Q. That is the point I wanted to develop. They preferred——

A. They preferred the Southern Pacific route on account of revenue.

Q. Then if they could not get that, they would take the Ogden?

A. They would use the Ogden route.

Q. So far as the Southern Pacific was concerned, it was a question of division, was it not—that is, of revenue?

A. Division of the rate. They got a greater percentage of the rate via New Orleans than they did via Ogden.

Q. And naturally they preferred the route which afforded them the most revenue?

A. They wanted the longer haul and the greater revenue.

Q. If they could not get that they would then take the Ogden route?

A. Yes.

Q. The competition that you testified about in answer to questions by Mr. Severance, as existing between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific at one time, was, so far as business south of Portland was concerned, competition between the all-rail lines—that is, the Union Pacific from the Missouri River to Ogden, and the Southern Pacific from Ogden to the Pacific coast—was it not, on the one part, and the competition by the Sunset Route on the other?

A. The representatives of each line worked by their respective routes, if I understand your question.

Q. Yes. The question is whether that competition was not the competition as between the all-rail line by way of Omaha and Ogden, on the one hand, and the Southern Pacific Sunset Route and its connections, on the other?

2307 A. All-rail route from and to where?

Q. From here to San Francisco.

A. Why, there was competition to the Pacific coast by the all-rail routes between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, yes.

Q. Of which the Southern Pacific was a part?

A. The Southern Pacific was a part, from Ogden to the Pacific coast.

Q. The Union Pacific could not reach, and never did reach, the Pacific coast south of Portland for this traffic that you controlled——

A. Never.

Q. ——except in connection with the Southern Pacific?

A. Except in connection with the Southern Pacific, is correct.

Q. The Union Pacific could not make a rate to any point on the Pacific coast south of Portland without the concurrence of the Southern Pacific, could it?

A. It could not get there.

Q. It was their only outlet?

A. It was their only outlet.

Q. Whichever way the freight went it must ultimately go over the Southern Pacific if it did not go over the Atchison?

A. It had to.

Q. The Union Pacific line and the Ogden line of the Southern Pacific were really competing against the Atchison, were they not?

A. Oh, very decidedly. The Atchison had representatives in this territory.

Q. The various lines extending from this territory westward, and also south and southwestwardly were competing for that traffic, were they not?

A. They were then, as they are now.

Q. They are still competing for it?

A. Oh, decidedly.

Q. The Louisville & Nashville, the Queen & Crescent, and 2308 the Illinois Central, are seeking to move traffic by way of New Orleans, are they not?

A. Via New Orleans.

Q. They were then, and are now?

A. They were then, and are now.

Q. And the Union Pacific——

A. And Wabash and Chicago & Alton.

Q. And Wabash and Chicago & Alton, and the Rock Island system?

A. The C. B. & Q., the North-Western, and the St. Paul.

Q. They are all competing for this traffic?

A. They are all competing for that traffic.

Q. They have solicitors in this territory, haven't they?

A. They have.

Q. And the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, and other lines reaching to the southwest?

A. I am not well posted on that M. K. & T. route at the present time. I do not have anything to do with working that business, and have not had for years.

Q. Is the Texas & Pacific soliciting in this territory, or is it working with the Missouri Pacific?

A. I do not know how the T. & P. R. are really working the business. You see, I have not worked that business for fifteen or eighteen years.

Q. Such business as the Louisville & Nashville, the Queen & Crescent and the Illinois Central secure from this territory for the Pacific coast necessarily goes over the Southern Pacific, does it not, Mr. Gano?

A. Not necessarily, no. The Illinois Central have a Chicago outlet.

Q. So it has. It could send it over the Union Pacific?

A. It could send it over the Union Pacific.

Q. But even then it would have to go over the Southern 2309 Pacific?

A. It would have to go over the Southern Pacific and they would short-haul themselves.

Q. To carry it that way?

A. To carry it via Chicago.

Q. According to the ordinary principles of railroading New Orleans would be their natural outlet?

A. New Orleans would be their natural outlet, on account of revenue.

Q. And then it would have to go Southern Pacific?

A. Then it would have to go Southern Pacific.

Q. Such business as the Rock Island and its connections secure from this territory would also naturally go over the Southern Pacific, would it not, unless they short-hauled?

A. At the present time, or before they had their outlet—let me see: They have got a route which runs southwest there, some place through Colorado down.

Q. El Paso. They connect with the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes; the El Paso. The Rock Island have got the El Paso route now, which they did not have when I was with the Union Pacific.

Q. So now the Southern Pacific would be the natural outlet for the Rock Island?

A. For the Rock Island, via El Paso.

Q. And even before, wasn't it, Mr. Gano—for the reason that they would get the long haul by interchanging with the Southern Pacific rather than with the Atchison.

A. Who?

Q. The Rock Island.

A. When I was railroading, the Rock Island's western terminal was Denver or Pueblo.

Q. But they would then turn it over there either to the Union Pacific or Southern Pacific——

A. No.

2310 Q. ——or the Denver & Rio Grande, would they not?

A. No; they would turn it over to either the Union Pacific or the Denver & Rio Grande.

Q. That is what I say.

A. You see, there were two routes from Pueblo to Ogden: The Union Pacific, via Cheyenne, and the Denver & Rio Grande had their own route. The Southern Pacific got the business at Ogden.

Q. But when either the Union Pacific or the Denver & Rio Grande got it they had to turn it over to the Southern Pacific at Ogden?

A. To the Southern Pacific at Ogden.

Q. So ultimately it passed over the Southern Pacific?

A. Southern Pacific.

Q. That was true also of the Burlington, was it not?

A. The Burlington, and all the other trans-Missouri lines.

Q. So all of those lines extending from this territory to New Orleans and to the southwest and to the Missouri River and the Rocky Mountains——

A. Were feeders for the Southern Pacific.

Q. ——were feeders for the Southern Pacific? And there was no other way that that traffic could get to or from the Pacific coast——

A. No other route.

Q. ——south of Portland, except the Southern Pacific or the Atchison?

A. Or the Santa Fe.

Q. And as between the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific, they would get the long haul by interchanging with the Southern Pacific, would they not?

A. Who would get the long haul?

Q. These intermediate lines.

A. The lines that extended west of the Missouri would get the long haul.

Q. You did not quite understand my question, I think, Mr. Gano. I did not make it plain. The question was this: These various 2311 lines——

A. When you say various lines, I do not understand what you mean. Chicago & North-Western, St. Paul, Rock Island, Missouri Pacific and Alton—all those lines that run from Chicago west?

Q. Yes; and from this territory west.

A. All right.

Q. Take all of these lines extending from this territory westwardly to the Rocky Mountains, or southwesterly to El Paso and connections with the Southern Pacific lines east of El Paso, or southeast, to New Orleans: Now, the question was, whether those lines would not naturally prefer the Southern Pacific to the Atchison, because they would get the long haul by interchanging with the Southern Pacific, whereas most of them would short-haul themselves if they interchanged with the Atchison.

A. They would not interchange with the Atchison, because they were competitive with them out of Chicago.

Q. Yes; that is right. There were then, and are now, a great many lines by which traffic can move from this territory to the Pacific Coast, are there not, Mr. Gano?

A. A great many of them.

Q. These that I have mentioned, and perhaps others?

A. Yes. There are a great many that you have not mentioned, especially the lines from here to Chicago and Mississippi River points.

Q. The shipper from this territory can send by way of New Orleans, or he can send through the various gateways west of New Orleans?

A. He can.

Q. As far west as El Paso. He can then ship westwardly and reach the Atchison or the Southern Pacific west of the Missouri River?

A. Most certainly.

Q. All of those gateways have been kept open, have they not,

2312 Mr. Gano?

A. Yes; and they are all represented in this territory.

Q. The shipper can select any one of those routes?

A. He can select his own route.

Q. That has been true ever since 1901, as well as before, has it not, Mr. Gano?

A. Ever since I have been railroading. Ever since 1880.

Q. And all of those lines are actively working for business?

A. Actively working, and have solicitors on the street.

Q. What is the chief function of a railroad soliciting or commercial agent, Mr. Gano?

A. To get all the freight he can find.

Q. What does he do to get it? Does he keep the shipper informed? I mean a general agent of a railroad company; does he keep the shipper informed as to the rates, and look after his shipments and trace his shipments for him?

A. Yes; those are about his duties. He has general supervision of all business moving from his territory that his line would be interested in.

Q. And accommodate the shipper in those matters by keeping him informed as to the amount of freight——

A. Expedite the movement of his freight and advise him of its delivery at destination; rates.

Q. And in the adjustment of claims?

A. Well, the general agent does not have much to do with the adjustment of claims, except to secure the information necessary to transmit to the general office.

Q. I understood you to say, in your direct testimony, that 2313 the Southern Pacific had at one time a line of steamers up the coast from San Francisco to Portland or Puget Sound points?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you not mistaken about that?

A. I do not think so. I do not think so, from the fact that it runs in my mind there was a $20-rate there between the points. I may be wrong about that, but I am almost positive that they handled business from San Francisco to Portland via steamer, when the Shasta line was in trouble with snow.

Q. But there were steamers running up there?

A. There were steamers running.

Q. But as to whether they were controlled by the Southern Pacific or not——

A. I do not know who controlled them.

Q. You have no personal knowledge?

A. I think they were operated in connection with the Southern Pacific.

Q. You have no personal knowledge of that, have you?

A. None at all. I would not want to swear to that, because I do not know.

Q. I think you are mistaken.

A. As I said, I do not even remember the name of the steamship company.

Q. The Union Pacific worked business for Portland and Puget Sound over the Oregon Short Line?

A. The Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company.

Q. And from Portland to Puget Sound how, did you say?

A. By water. Steamers operated from there to most of the points. The Northern Pacific touched a few.

Q. And you do not know whether it also interchanged business at Portland with the Northern Pacific to Puget Sound, do you?

2314 A. No; I could not say as to that.

Q. You never knew of any freight moving from this territory to San Francisco over the Union Pacific on the Short Line and then by boat down that way, did you? Did you ever attempt to work business that way?

A. Freight or passenger?

Q. Either.

A. Yes; passenger business was moved that way.

Q. By boat?

A. By boat—if the passenger wanted to go that way.

Q. By boat from Portland to San Francisco?

A. By boat from Portland to San Francisco, if the passenger requested it.

Q. Did you ever attempt to move freight that way over the Union Pacific?

A. No; I do not think they ever used that route for freight, unless it might have been some special case where there was some freight they had to get through in a hurry, and the Shasta line was blocked by snow.

Q. I am speaking now of the Union Pacific.

A. I understand. You are speaking of the Union Pacific via the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company to Portland, making the destination San Francisco?

Q. Yes.

A. Freight business as a rule was not handled that way except in an emergency case.

Q. I think you have already testified that all of the San Francisco and other California freight from this territory you worked in connection with the Southern Pacific at Ogden?

A. The Southern Pacific via Ogden.

Q. You did not attempt to work freight by way of Portland?

A. Oh, no; we had no way of working that way. The Union

2315 Pacific had no lines running down to connect with the Southern Pacific via New Orleans.

Q. Nor by way of Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I guess he does not understand you.

Mr. LOVETT. I do not think you quite understand the latter question.

Q. I said was it not true that the Union Pacific from this territory worked all California business by way of——

A. Of Ogden.

Q. ——Ogden, and not by way of Portland?

A. Not via Portland. That is freight business. For California.

Q. Yes, for freight business. But you think that they did work some passenger business——

A. If the passenger wanted to travel that way.

Q. ——to San Francisco——

A. To San Francisco.

Q. ——by way of Portland?

A. By way of Portland, and steamer.

Q. You were asked by Mr. Severance about the movement of passenger traffic from this territory—about competition between the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific for that passenger business. I suppose practically all of that business moved on special rates, did it not—excursion rates?

A. Well, they had a Pacific coast round-trip rate that went into effect—now, wait a minute—no: I guess the Pacific coast rate was good the year round; and the passenger had the option of selecting his own route, and paid an additional rate, or a lesser rate, according to the route he traveled.

Q. And how many options do you suppose he had? A great many, hadn't he?

A. He probably had five or six different routes, or possibly more than that.

2316 Q. He could leave on any line from this territory?

A. And go to Chicago.

Q. And go to Chicago?

A. Any line from Chicago through to St. Paul; over the Northern Pacific from St. Paul to the Pacific coast. He could go any route he wanted from Portland or Seattle to San Francisco, or down to Los Angeles, including San Diego and Santa Barbara, and come back Southern Pacific; or he could come back via Ogden and Union Pacific.

Q. Or he could go the other way?

A. Or go vice versa.

Q. By way of New Orleans to Texas points?

A. Yes.

Q. Or Atchison?

A. Yes. The rates were made up to accommodate the passenger by any route he wanted to travel.

Q. The competition, so far as that passenger business was concerned, was really in the matter of service, was it not, Mr. Gano?

A. Yes; in most cases. Of course it would be optional with the passenger. There were no special inducements to get a person to go a certain route, unless it was in the way of sleeping car accommodation or through trains; something of that kind.

Q. Well, scenery and attractiveness of the route in that respect?

A. I have never seen the line, except what they tell us in our folders.

Q. They talked about that, did they not?

A. Oh, most assuredly. The Southern Pacific would take advantage of the Union Pacific and say it was a snow-route in the wintertime. The Union Pacific would talk about the sandblasts and sandstorms in the South during the summertime.

2317 Q. But they were all advertising the advantages of their lines, but all these routes being open to passage for the same——

A. All the routes were open. They could go to suit themselves.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. You were saying that the Union Pacific called attention to the sandstorms along the Sunset Route, and the Sunset solicitors called attention to the snow blockades on the Union Pacific?

A. On the Union Pacific.

Q. And both the Sunset Route and the Union Pacific overland route had publications showing the beauties of the lines, did they not?

A. Certainly. The folders covered that.

Q. The folders; and they also had newspaper advertisements?

A. Yes.

Q. And magazine advertisements?

A. Yes; and periodicals, magazines.

Q. And the effort of the solicitors for the Southern Pacific was to send the passengers, if they could, via the Sunset Route?

A. Via the New Orleans route.

Q. And the effort of the Union Pacific was to send them by the Overland?

A. By the Ogden route.

Q. Judge Lovett called your attention to the fact that business moving to San Francisco over the Union Pacific had to pass over the Southern Pacific from Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. The business that moved by New Orleans, the way you said the Southern Pacific endeavored to work it, did not move at all over the Union Pacific, did it? The Union Pacific got no part 2318 of that haul?

A. The Union Pacific could not go via New Orleans.

Q. They got no part of that haul; they have no line down there?

A. They have no line, according to my recollection.

Q. You spoke of the different western lines having soliciting agencies, or traffic agencies, in this territory. Did the Northern Pacific and Great Northern have agents here?

A. They had.

Q. Were the Northern Pacific competing for business into Portland?

A. Certainly.

Q. Actively?

A. Very.

Q. And the Great Northern likewise?

COPY BOUND

A. I do not remember about the Great Northern in my time. I do not remember what their route was. That was back in 1896.

Q. Was the Canadian Pacific competing for coast business in those days?

A. I think they had a representative here.

Q. Do you know anything about the time that the Canadian Pacific had a boat line and a differential into California points?

A. No, I do not.

Q. You do not know anything about that?

A. No.

Q. You were also asked by Judge Lovett if it was not true that all the lines are now actively soliciting business, and you said they were. You do not understand, do you, that the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific are now soliciting against each other?

A. I have not worked that business for years. I do not know how the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific are soliciting their Pacific coast business.

Q. You are aware of the fact that Mr. Connor represents them both?

2319 A. Represents them both. Mr. Shinkle is their street man.

Q. So, in the nature of things, you do not see any way, do you, that Mr. Connor or Mr. Shinkle, could very actively solicit against themselves—that is, as to one road against the other, as they represent them both?

A. I do not know how they solicit that business now. I know that Mr. Shinkle is soliciting the business, because I meet him on the street. I met him a week ago.

Q. But you do not know whether he is trying to send it by the Sunset Route or by the Union Pacific route?

A. I do not.

Q. And you have not run across any instances where Mr. Shinkle was trying to send it by both routes, have you?

A. I do not solicit the Pacific coast business now.

Q. They have no separate representative here at the present time?

A. None that I know of.

Q. You were speaking about the soliciting agents accommodating shippers by tracing shipments, and that sort of thing. They are paid by the railroad company, are they not?

A. They are.

Q. And they are employed to get business for the lines they represent?

A. They are.

Q. And they do these things for the shippers to help them get the business?

A. As an inducement.

Q. As an inducement to get business. You spoke about a time that the boat line was used between San Francisco and Portland, when the Shasta route was troubled with snow?

A. With snow.

ND CLOSE IN CENTER

Q. You remember that, do you?
A. I do.

Q. When the Southern Pacific business for Portland was 2320 sent by boat from San Francisco because the Shasta route was in trouble by snow?
A. I do.

Recross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Mr. Severance asked you if you could see how Mr. Connor or Mr. Shinkle could compete with himself. You do not see how the Southern Pacific Company could compete with itself either, do you, Mr. Gano?

A. How the Southern Pacific could compete with itself?

Q. Yes. The Southern Pacific has several gateways—two lines at least—for reaching the Pacific coast?

A. Yes.

Q. And if the Southern Pacific, having these two lines, and as all the traffic the Union Pacific gets for the Pacific coast south of Portland must pass over the Southern Pacific, the Southern Pacific would be competing with itself, would it not, if——

A. Well, I do not know what route they would send their business, or what their preference is—whether they have any preference for one route or the other.

Q. Even if they have a preference, it is just a matter of division, is it not, whether they get the long haul or the short haul out of it?

A. They get the long haul by way of New Orleans.

Q. And the short haul by way of Ogden?

A. By way of Ogden.

Q. And they get some of it, no matter which way it goes?

A. Provided the Santa Fe does not get the freight, yes, sir.

Q. But as against the Santa Fe, they get some of it, do they not?

A. Or the Rock Island.

2321 Q. Well, the Rock Island does not get the Pacific coast business?

A. The Rock Island gets to El Paso, does it not?

Q. Yes; but it would be Southern Pacific from there?

A. Oh, it would be Southern Pacific from there, oh, yes.

Q. That is what I said: the Southern Pacific gets some of it, no matter which way it goes.

A. It does not make any difference which way it goes, if it does not go Santa Fe.

Q. And it gets some of all that the Union Pacific gets?

A. Bound to.

Q. It gets a good share of the revenue, does it not—or do you know what that is?

A. I do not know what their revenues are. I do not know how they are divided now.

Q. So the Southern Pacific, by reason of its ownership or operation of the line from Ogden to San Francisco, is really a connection with the Union Pacific, rather than a competitor, is it not, so far as that line is concerned? It is impossible for that line——

A. They are an outlet for the Union Pacific.

Q. Are they not the only outlet for the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, the only outlet. The only outlet for the Union Pacific on California business.

Q. And it is a connecting line of the Union Pacific? That line from Ogden to San Francisco is not a competitor of the Union Pacific?

A. Not a bit.

Q. It is a connecting line?

A. It is the only way the Union Pacific could get their freight to California.

Q. So far as the passenger business is concerned, both of these lines are very extensively advertised, are they not?

2322 A. Oh, yes.

Q. The Ogden route and the Sunset route?

A. They are.

Q. So far as you have observed, are they not as extensively advertised as they ever were?

A. I have seen some of their advertisements lately. They are very expensive; very elegant.

Q. With reference to this diversion of freight by the Southern Pacific to Portland on account of the snow blockade on the Shasta route, is that a matter of your personal knowledge, Mr. Gano, or can you be positive about that, or not?

A. I remember of cases that moved that way.

Q. By boat from San Francisco to Portland?

A. Yes; where they could not use the Shasta line.

Q. Do you know when that was?

A. Oh, my, no. You are going back about twenty-nine years now, since I went with the Union Pacific road, and it is about fifteen years since I left them.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. One thing, Mr. Gano: you are testifying with reference to the days when you were with the Union Pacific, when you said they had only one outlet to the coast from Ogden?

A. No; I did not say they only had one outlet to the coast.

Q. Well, to California.

A. Oh, California?

Q. Yes.

A. The Union Pacific had only one outlet via Ogden.

Q. You are aware there is another route there—the San Pedro route, the Salt Lake route?

A. Yes. There is a line down through there, but what the route is I do not know.

Q. And that was built since you were with them?

A. Since I left the Union Pacific road.

2323 E. E. WILLIAMSON,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Williamson, where do you live?

A. Cincinnati.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am commissioner of the Receivers' and Shippers' Association.

Q. How long have you occupied that position?

A. Five years.

Q. Previous to that what was your business?

A. I was traffic manager of the Macon, Dublin & Savannah road, at Macon, Georgia, for two years and a half.

Q. Previous to that what was your business?

A. I was connected with the traffic department of the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific Railway Company, or the Queen & Crescent route.

Q. During what years were you connected with that company—the Queen & Crescent?

A. I think I took service with the company in 1886, according to my recollection, and I left the service, I think, in the early part of 1901.

Q. About fifteen years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What position did you occupy with that company?

A. I was rate clerk, correspondence clerk, and finally chief clerk for the traffic department.

Q. And where were you located?

A. Cincinnati, Ohio.

Q. Can you state whether prior to 1901 the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific were in competition for business out of this territory to the Pacific coast?

A. I would say that they were.

2324 Q. And which way was the Southern Pacific endeavoring to route the traffic?

A. In connection with the New Orleans route.

Q. Did the Queen & Crescent participate in that business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To what point—to New Orleans?

A. From Cincinnati to New Orleans.

Q. What Pacific Coast business did the Southern Pacific attempt to work by that route? How far north did it extend on the Coast?

A. So far as business moving over the Q. & C. is concerned, there was very little of it, as I recall, that moved very much farther north than San Francisco. We did occasionally handle a Tacoma shipment or a Portland shipment, but there was not much of that, if I recall it; the bulk of it was San Francisco or Los Angeles and such California terminals.

Q. Most of it California terminals?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Occasionally some as far north as Puget Sound—Seattle?
A. Yes, according to my recollection.
Q. Which way was the Union Pacific moving that business so far as they could handle it?
A. I suppose they took the long haul to Ogden; I suppose that was the way.
Q. That would be on California terminal business?
A. Yes.
Q. Of course to Portland they had their own line—sub-line?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, was that competition between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific for coast business active or otherwise?
A. Well, as a Q. & C. man, the competition was very active, because if it would go via the Union Pacific we would not have any haul on it at all; and, considering the whole route, I would 2325 say that it was an active competition as between routes, the Q. & C. route to New Orleans, and the Southern Pacific, and other lines leading from here in connection with the Union Pacific—between the two routes.
Q. If you remember, who were the general agents of the Union Pacific here in Cincinnati during the time you were connected with the Queen & Crescent?
A. Mr. J. D. Welsh.
Q. During all the time?
A. According to my recollection, yes, sir.
Q. And who represented the Southern Pacific?
A. The first representative of that company I was acquainted with was Mr. Asa Kellogg. He was succeeded by Mr. W. H. Connor as commercial agent.
Q. And Mr. Connor is now agent of both companies here?
A. I understand so.
Q. Were you acquainted with Mr. Welsh and Mr. Connor?
A. Both of them, yes, sir.
Q. Did they have men working under their direction?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you know those men?
A. I knew some of them.
Q. Will you state the names of the gentlemen that you knew? And give the roads they were connected with.
A. I knew Mr. Shinkle, working under Mr. Connor; and, if I recollect correctly, there was a Mr. Lyon Liston, working under Mr. Welsh; and I think Mr. Harry R. Smith at one time worked under Mr. Welsh; and I was familiar with the fact that Mr. Stephen Gano, who has just testified, also worked for the Union Pacific.
2326 There were others, but I do not recall their names at this time.
Q. In the old days what were the means taken to get traffic by these respective routes?

A. Each route would have its solicitors, making an active canvas for the business.

Q. And whom would they call on—the shippers?

A. The shippers, yes, sir.

Q. What representations did the solicitors make? That is, what arguments were put forward with reference to the service, or otherwise, to get business?

A. Well, I did not do any of the soliciting myself, but in a general way the instructions to the soliciting men were to indicate to the shipper the service, the character of the service that could be performed, by quoting rates and also by endeavoring to settle claims promptly; and of course praise up the merits of the line in many ways.

Q. Are the solicitors able to assist shippers in getting through cars at times?

A. At times, yes, sir.

Q. That is one element that enters into the soliciting, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And tracing cars?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Endeavoring to secure prompt deliveries?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember whether the other transcontinental lines—the Atchison and the Northern Pacific—had representatives here?

A. In a general way, yes, sir.

Q. And the Great Northern?

A. In a general way only. I do not recall the names of their representatives, but I knew that some of those companies did have agencies here.

Q. Do you remember the Santa Fe agent?

A. I don't know whether it was a Mr. Gunip or not.

2327 Q. Now, in working for the Queen & Crescent, you worked exclusively, I suppose, with the Southern Pacific, didn't you, on transcontinental business?

A. Exclusively, yes, sir.

Q. That was your connection?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was the principal competitor for that business? I mean the principal transcontinental line competing for that business?

A. Well, we of course felt the competition more or less by the different routes, but the principal competitor at that time was, I would say, the Union Pacific, or the routing in connection with the Union Pacific.

Q. Of course the Union Pacific on San Francisco business delivered its business at Ogden to the Southern Pacific?

A. I presume so.

Q. But the Southern Pacific agents here were working the business all they could by New Orleans?

A. Yes; taking the long haul by New Orleans.

Q. And what are your duties in connection with the Shippers' & Receivers' Association, Mr. Williamson?

A. I have general supervision of the work of the Association, looking after the interests of the members of the Association. It is composed of shippers, and it is endeavoring to adjust any differences of whatever nature between the shippers as a whole and the carriers.

Q. In a general way, who are the members of your Association? That is, what lines of business are they engaged in?

A. Oh, they are engaged in practically all lines of business—jobbers of clothing, manufacturers, and almost all the lines we have here—distillers.

Q. Do you have to do with the matter of rates? Are you
2328 brought in connection with the question of rates, I say?

A. Oh, yes, all the time.

Q. That is what I supposed. In the matter of getting satisfactory rates or getting rates adjusted, you represent the members of the Association?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether, since the time Mr. Connor became the representative of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, there are any separate solicitors for the two lines, or do they have one set of solicitors for both?

A. As far as I know, only one set.

Q. Are you brought in personal contact with those solicitors?

A. Why, I meet them occasionally only.

Q. Are you personally advised as to the way they endeavor to route the traffic out of here?

A. I am not.

Q. You don't know about that?

A. No.

Q. I didn't know but it might have come to your knowledge in connection with this Association.

A. No, I have not looked into that question at all.

Q. Are you able to state from your experience with the Association as to the way the traffic chiefly moves to California points now as between the Union Pacific and the New Orleans gateway?

A. No. We do not undertake to familiarize ourselves with the way that the traffic of our various members moves; that is a matter that they handle exclusively.

Q. You don't keep any statistics?

A. We keep no statistics of that character. They handle that matter exclusively.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. What is the short rail line between Cincinnati and New 2329 Orleans?

A. The Queen & Crescent Route.

Q. About what is the distance via that route?

A. I think it is 827 miles.

Q. About what is the distance from Cincinnati to Omaha?

A. I have never figured on what that distance was.

Q. Can you approximate it fairly well?

A. Something like 340 from here to East St. Louis and some 400 miles from there to the Missouri River.

Q. 400 miles from there to where?

A. From there to Kansas City or the Missouri River.

Q. I asked from Omaha.

A. I don't know what that distance is from the Mississippi River.

Q. Would it go by Chicago to get to Omaha?

A. It may be the short line is that way: I never figured the distance there.

Q. How far is it from here to Chicago via the short line?

A. About 287 miles, I think, by the C. C. & L. Railway.

Q. Do you know about how far it is from New Orleans to San Francisco by the Southern Pacific?

A. No, not the exact mileage. I have never figured it. It might be, in round figures, something like very nearly approximating three thousand miles.

Q. You don't know the distance from Cincinnati to San Francisco by way of the Union Pacific and Ogden route, do you?

A. I never figured it.

Q. You do understand, don't you, that the route via New Orleans to San Francisco from Cincinnati is much greater——

A. It is, yes, sir.

Q. ——than by way of Omaha and Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Very much greater?

A. How much more I don't know, but it is greater.

2330 Q. Now, I understood you to testify, in answer to questions by Mr. Severance, that the Queen & Crescent in connection with the Southern Pacific was actively competing for San Francisco and other California business at the time of your connection with the Queen & Crescent?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you mentioned the Union Pacific as one of your competitors for that business.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All lines out of here were competing for that business, weren't they, Mr. Williamson?

A. More or less, yes, sir.

Q. Take the lines competing for it by way of New Orleans at junctions with the Southern Pacific. What were they?

A. The L. & N. competed to New Orleans and the Illinois Central to New Orleans. Those were the principal competitors through New Orleans.

Q. Further west by way of Texarkana and El Paso.

A. They were the lines that lead from here to St. Louis, and thence via the lines leading from St. Louis into Texas.

Q. The Missouri and Iron Mountain?

A. The Missouri and Iron Mountain and those roads.
Q. The St. Louis & San Francisco, the Missouri, Kansas & Texas?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And the Rock Island system?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And then I suppose all of the lines leading westwardly to the Missouri River, and their connections, were actively competing for it, weren't they?
A. I would judge so, yes, sir.
Q. Well, during the time of your connection with the Queen & Crescent, aren't you sure that they were?

A. My attention was specially directed to the business mov-
2331 ing by the New Orleans route, and in a general way I know that there was competition by those routes. Just how much there was by each route I could not tell.

Q. But you recognized the Union Pacific as one of the competitors?
A. Yes, sir, and as one of the strongest.
Q. In speaking of the Union Pacific in that connection, do you mean the Union Pacific alone, or do you mean the line of which the Union Pacific was part?
A. I would say the line of which the Union Pacific was a part.
Q. And that was made up how?
A. Made up by various roads up to the eastern terminus of the Union Pacific, and thence by the Union Pacific and any road that it might enter California by.
Q. Well, did it have any other road than the Southern Pacific from Ogden west?
A. I understand not.
Q. The line, then, was made up by the Southern Pacific from the Pacific coast to Ogden, the Union Pacific from Ogden to Omaha and Kansas City?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And then the various lines connecting with the Union Pacific at Omaha and Kansas City, extending eastwardly toward this territory?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And when you speak of the competition between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific and the Queen & Crescent, that is, when you speak of competition between the Queen & Crescent and the Southern Pacific, on the one hand, and the Union Pacific on the other, you mean the line that has just been described—the line of which the Union Pacific is a part?

A. Yes, sir.
2332 Q. And the Southern Pacific from Ogden to San Francisco is also a part?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. The Atchison was also competing for that business, wasn't it?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever been over that line to California, the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific line?

A. None of them.

Q. Have you ever been on the Pacific coast at all?

A. Not at all.

Q. Then you are not familiar at all from personal observation?

A. No, sir.

Q. According to your understanding of the location of the lines, the only outlet for the Union Pacific for California business was over the Southern Pacific from Ogden?

A. Yes, sir; that is my understanding.

Q. Except that since 1905, what is called the San Pedro line has been opened from Salt Lake, down?

A. Yes. I am not testifying to that time.

Q. I was speaking of the conditions prior to that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never knew of any freight to be sent to California terminals over the Union Pacific to Portland, and then by boat down, did you?

A. I have no way of knowing that. I never investigated it.

Q. You never knew of such a case?

A. I never knew that. It may have been.

Q. One way or the other?

A. One way or the other. I have no knowledge.

2333 Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Williamson, Judge Lovett asked you whether the competition which you mentioned was not between the line made up of the Union Pacific and other lines on the one hand, and the Sunset Route on the other.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or something to that effect.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now you stated that was a fact—that they had to turn their business over to the Southern Pacific at Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But the work that was done to get business to move by that route, so far as the work was done by a transcontinental line—I mean a line west of the Missouri River—was done by the Union Pacific, wasn't it, by their solicitors?

A. Largely; yes, sir.

Q. And the Southern Pacific, so far as they could control the business, sent it by New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Recross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I don't think you quite meant what I understood you to say, Mr. Williamson, in answer to the last question. As I understood the question Mr. Severance asked, it was this: If the work to get the business over the Ogden route was done by the solicitors and only by the solicitors of the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I said so far as the lines west of the Missouri River were concerned.

Q. So far as the lines west of the Missouri River were con-
2334 cerned?

A. Yes.

Q. Didn't the St. Paul, west of the Missouri River?

Mr. SEVERANCE. West of the Missouri River; that is what I asked.

Mr. LOVETT. You didn't mean to ask with reference to lines east of the Missouri River?

Mr. SEVERANCE. No.

Q. I will ask that, then. Didn't the St. Paul actively work for that business?

A. Well, how active I couldn't say. They may have had solicitors for it.

Q. Didn't all of the lines leading from this territory to a connection with the Union Pacific, including the Chicago & Northwestern, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, the Burlington, the Rock Island, the Chicago Great-Western, the New York Central lines, the Big Four, and all those lines, didn't they all actively work for that business?

A. Yes; but I understood Mr. Severance's question to be west of the Missouri River and what was handled by Union Pacific. That was my answer to his question.

Q. You did not mean to say that the lines west of the Missouri River were not actively working for California business; for instance, the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. Oh, I didn't mean that at all.

Q. The Denver & Rio Grande actively works for it, doesn't it?

A. I so understand it; yes.

Q. And the Burlington, and the Rock Island, and the Missouri Pacific and the various companies that do operate lines west of the river actively work California business, do they not?

2335 A. I so understand; yes.

Q. And always have, so far as you know?

A. So far as I know.

Q. And that business must go over the Southern Pacific west of Ogden, must it not, to get to California?

A. Yes, sir.

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where you you live, Mr. Buchanan?—A. Cincinnati.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am the manager of the freight department of the Proctor & Gamble Company.

Q. What is the business of the Proctor & Gamble Company?—A. Manufacturers of soap, chiefly; cottonseed oil, glycerine, candles, red oil.

Q. Is that a large concern, Mr. Buchanan?—A. One of the largest of its kind in the country—perhaps the largest of its particular kind.

Q. And how many years has it been established?—A. Since 1837.

Q. To what part of the country does the Proctor & Gamble Company ship its product?—A. To all parts.

Q. How long have you been the traffic manager of the Proctor & Gamble Company?—A. I commenced my ninth year with them the first of this month.

Q. Previous to that what was your business?—A. I was assistant general freight agent of the Big Four Railroad.

Q. And where were you located?—A. For seven years of the time that I was assistant general freight agent I was at Cincinnati and for about two years up on the Michigan division, with head-
2337 quarters at Benton Harbor, Michigan. However, I was with the Big Four for eleven years. I was for two years as general agent before I was assistant general freight agent.

Q. Did you go immediately from that connection to the Proctor & Gamble Company?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where has the Proctor & Gamble Company establishments or plants?—A. Here, at Kansas City and at New York.

Q. You stated that they shipped to all parts of the country. From what plants do their shipments to the Pacific coast usually move?—A. Since the establishment of the Kansas City plant, almost exclusively from there.

Q. How long ago was that plant established?—A. Four years.

Q. Previous to that time from what plant did the shipments to the Pacific coast move?—A. From here, our Ivorydale plant.

Q. What brands of soap do they make? what are their best known brands?—A. The best-known brands are "Ivory," of course, Lenox; those are the two best-known brands. We actually make about twenty-five different brands.

Q. But they make "Ivory" soap?—A. They are manufacturers of Ivory soap.

Q. That is sold very largely everywhere?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you acquainted with Mr. Connor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the time when the Union Pacific had a separate representative here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was their general agent?

A. Mr. James D. Welsh.

Q. Do you remember up to what time he was their agent?

A. Well, he was on the retired list for several years. I think I know when he was succeeded.

2338 Q. Who succeeded him?

A. A gentleman by the name of Clifford succeeded him, I think about the latter part of 1901.

Q. And up to what time did he continue in his office?

A. Well, I don't believe he was there more than six or eight months; about the first part of 1902, I should say.

Q. And then what happened?

A. Then Mr. Connor represented both companies.

Q. The offices were consolidated?

A. Yes, as I understand it.

Q. Previous to that time, for about how long had Mr. Connor been the representative of the Southern Pacific only?

A. I should say Mr. Connor personally had been in there about three years before that.

Q. And did you know his predecessor?

A. I did, sir.

Q. Who was he?

A. Mr. Kellogg.

Q. How long was he there?

A. I think about two years; he died in office.

Q. Did you know his predecessor?

A. No, sir. I can't go back that far.

Q. Now, previous to 1901 do you remember whether the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific were competing for Pacific coast business out of this territory?

A. They were.

Q. Which way did the Union Pacific representatives seek to work that business? Take California terminal points.

A. Via the Ogden route.

Q. And which way did the Southern Pacific agency seek to route it?

A. Via New Orleans preferably; also El Paso, as I understand it.

2339 Q. Did those representatives call on you, soliciting business?

A. Now, you are asking the question since I have been with Proctor & Gamble?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I have come personally very little in contact with the actual solicitors, but I would say that they solicited us at that time.

Q. When you were with the Big Four were you familiar with the competition that existed?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the Big Four participate in this transcontinental business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did the traffic move over the Big Four to the coast?

A. Their preference was via Chicago or St. Louis or Peoria in connection with the Union Pacific or Santa Fe. They could take the business via New Orleans, but it was not a preferred route by any means.

Q. How did it move to New Orleans?

A. It could move via Cairo and Illinois Central, that way, or Mobile & Ohio. They practically did not solicit that business, though, via New Orleans.

Q. You tried to work it by the Union Pacific gateway?

A. Union Pacific or Santa Fe.

Q. Union Pacific or Santa Fe, through the Missouri River gateway?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How does the business of the Proctor & Gamble Company move to the coast? Take that part of the coast south of Portland.

A. South of Portland?

Q. Yes; California terminals or——

A. Why, it moves via the Union Pacific or Santa Fe. You
2340 are speaking now from Kansas City, as I understand it?

Q. Yes, sir. The Union Pacific or Santa Fe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And does any of it move via El Paso?

A. No, sir; not that we route.

Q. Do you route most of your goods?

A. Practically all.

Q. How was it prior to the time of the establishment of your Kansas City plant? How did you route the shipments?

A. Then we routed quite a good deal of our business via New Orleans from here.

Q. And the balance of it went what way?

A. The balance of it went by the Union Pacific or Santa Fe in connection with the intermediate roads.

Q. I will confine my question now to the time when you had no Kansas City plant. How did your business move to Portland and Puget Sound points?

A. By the northern gateways—the Great Northern principally, or the Northern Pacific.

Q. How about Portland?

A. I am speaking——

Q. Oh, you are speaking of Portland and Puget Sound?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ship any over the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line and Oregon Railroad & Navigation?

A. Some; not much.

Q. Mostly over by St. Paul?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that business solicited by the Union Pacific?

A. Well, yes, I might say it was solicited. Of course Mr. Connor has always been strongly attentive to our needs when requests have been made of him. If you ask if he solicited me personally, I will say it is very seldom that Mr. Connor ever asked me for a particular car. Of course, I knew he wanted the business, but we tried 2341 to divide the business up between those roads as we thought their importance to us warranted it.

Q. And that is your practice, is it not?

A. That is our attitude with all roads.

Q. Now, in the days when Mr. Connor and Mr. Shinkle represented the Southern Pacific, and Mr. Welsh and Mr. Clifford represented the Union Pacific, and you say there was competition between the routes to the coast, was that an active competition?

A. Well, it was during Mr. Clifford's administration. I think for several years prior to that, owing to the unfortunate state of health of Mr. Welsh, that you could hardly call the Union Pacific competition very active.

Q. He had solicitors under him, had he not?

A. Yes, he had solicitors under him.

Q. And they were working for the business?

A. Yes, they were working for the business.

Q. Now at present Mr. Connor represents both lines. How does he and how do his subordinates endeavor to route Pacific coast business, if you know?

A. Now I will have to answer entirely for him because I really do not come in contact with the gentlemen under him.

Q. Well, for him then.

A. Is your question how does he endeavor to route?

Q. Yes; how does he endeavor to have the business move to the coast, representing the New Orleans route and the Union Pacific route? Which way does Mr. Connor endeavor to route business from this territory, if he discriminates at all?

A. Well, I don't think he discriminates.

2342 Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Mr. Connor's solicitation is more especially as against the Atchison, isn't it, Mr. Buchanan?

A. Yes, I suppose you would say so. That is, on California business.

Q. That is what I mean—California business. Just what do you mean by the Union Pacific route being a competitor of the Southern Pacific for California business?

A. Up to Ogden at least.

Q. Up to Ogden from where?

A. Well, from the Missouri River.

Q. From the Missouri River?

A. Yes.

Q. And from Ogden?

A. Southern Pacific from there on. We understand that the Southern Pacific gets part of the haul on all of that business.

Q. You understand that on all the California business the Union Pacific got, or at least on all it got up to 1905, when the San Pedro line to Los Angeles was opened, that the Southern Pacific got a haul from Ogden——

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To the Pacific coast terminal, to destination?

A. Yes, sir, that is my understanding.

Q. The competition, then, was the all-rail line made up of the Southern Pacific line from the Pacific coast to Ogden, the Union Pacific from Ogden to the Missouri River, and the rail lines extending from the Missouri River eastwardly to this territory?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, with reference to the situation that existed prior 2343 to the establishment of the Kansas City plant of your company .I believe you stated that your company frequently shipped by way of New Orleans to California.

A. Yes, sir. There were several reasons for that. We might want to give traffic to the L. & N. or the Cincinnati Southern road, and that gave them the longest haul; also gave the Southern Pacific the longest haul. We might be influenced more for the purpose of giving it to the L. & N. or the Cincinnati Southern than to the Southern Pacific.

Q. Now, that was the long route to California, of course, by way of New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you send any now by way of El Paso?

A. Not from Kansas City, no, sir, nor from here.

Q. You ship westwardly from Kansas City?

A. Yes, sir, via the Santa Fe or Union Pacific.

Q. All the lines extending from this territory westwardly were actively soliciting California business during the whole period about which you testified, weren't they?

A. I take it you mean representatives of the "Q.," the Northwestern, the Milwaukee & St. Paul?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Yes, sir, they certainly were.

Q. The Northwestern, the St. Paul, the Burlington, the Rock Island and the Missouri Pacific?

A. Yes, all of them.

Q. And then the lines leading out of Cincinnati?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I believe you said that when the Big Four secured that business to the Pacific coast from Cincinnati, for example, it would naturally prefer the Chicago route for it?

A. Or St. Louis.

2344 Q. Or St. Louis. What is the general direction of the Big Four line out of Cincinnati?

A. It runs from Cincinnati to Chicago, to Peoria, to St. Louis—like the three fingers of your hand.

Q. You have no direct line from Cincinnati to St. Louis, have you?

A. Oh, yes, certainly; its own rails from here to St. Louis, through Indianapolis.

Q. The general course of that line is northwesterly from Cincinnati, isn't it?

A. St. Louis is almost west. The general tendency is a little northwest.

Q. I may be a little confused in my geography, but Indianapolis is northwesterly from here?

A. A trifle northwesterly, yes, sir.

Q. What is the distance?

A. 110 miles by the Big Four.

Q. And Chicago is northwest, or a little north of west?

A. Yes, sir. Of course they had the Peoria, and Peoria was another route practically half way between Chicago and St. Louis.

Q. The general course of the Queen & Crescent is southerly from Cincinnati, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir; directly so.

Q. Out of Cincinnati, then, for a considerable distance, the Queen & Crescent and the Big Four run in opposite directions, do they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Substantially opposite?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Both of those lines or systems were competing for this California business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Carrying it in opposite directions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Practically all lines in this territory have always com-

2345 peted for this business, haven't they, Mr. Buchanan?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So, by competition in the sense that you meant it in your answer to Mr. Severance, practically all lines, even though running in opposite directions, in this territory, were competing for the Pacific coast business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is true, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What other line out of Cincinnati—that is, of which Cincinnati is the southern terminus—runs north and northwesterly from here? The Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, is that one?

A. The Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, the Pan-Handle, this new Chicago Short Line.

Q. All those lines participate in that business when they can get it?

A. Yes, sir. They participate in it as initial roads here.

Q. And then there are a good many other roads that compete for it as intermediate roads?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Like the Northwestern and St. Paul?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never knew of any business from this territory to California terminals, that is, for any point on the Pacific coast south of Portland, to be routed over the Union Pacific by way of Portland and then by boat down the coast?

A. No, sir.

Q. It would seem to follow, then, Mr. Buchanan, that whatever traffic Mr. Welsh or other agents of the Union Pacific secured in this territory for California points or Pacific coast points south of 2346 Portland, would ultimately go over a portion of the Southern Pacific as well as the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. You mentioned Mr. Connor as being the gentleman who has called on you in reference to business. Without desiring to make Mr. Connor blush, he being here, he is a very useful and efficient railroad man, isn't he?

A. I certainly so regard him, sir.

Q. And a man of that character, who is engaged actively in working for a line of railway, is able to get a considerable amount of business through his personal standing and personal solicitation, is he not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that Mr. Connor, as representing the route to the coast by way of New Orleans, if he was working with his undivided attention to that route, would be able to get a considerable amount of business for his line?

A. I should say Mr. Connor would be successful for any route that he worked for.

Q. But at the present time you say that he is not discriminating as between the Union Pacific, on the one hand, and the Sunset Route on the other?

A. No. Practically he knows that we are going to route the business as we see fit, anyhow, and he is glad enough to get it.

Q. But he does not endeavor to get you to route one way or the other?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever ship anything to the coast from your New 2347 York plant?

A. No, sir, I don't recall—well, we have lately.

Q. And over what route does that move?

A. That would move by the Panama.

Q. By the Panama route?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever sent anything by the Morgan line of steamships to New Orleans or Galveston, and thence to the coast?

A. I do not recall that we have.

Q. You control the routing from that plant as well as from the one here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have used the Panama line?

A. We have in several instances.

Q. Now, over what line of ships does that traffic move?

A. The Panama Steamship Company, I think; I am not sure.

Q. Well, the steamships belong to the Panama Railroad as far as Panama, on the Atlantic side, don't they?

A. Yes.

Q. As far as Colon, rather?

A. I don't remember the name of the steamship company.

Q. Do you remember which line of steamers took the traffic from Panama and the Pacific coast up to San Francisco?

A. No, I don't; I can't tell you.

Q. How long ago did you route that way?

A. Oh, quite recently. I did not personally handle the shipment, I was not familiar with it, and for that reason I am not able to tell.

Q. You have always been aware that that route was open for transcontinental business from the Atlantic seaboard, haven't you?

A. Yes.

2348 Recross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. So far as your business is concerned, Mr. Connor can represent both the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific efficiently, can't he?

A. He has.

Q. Would you be in any better situation, Mr. Buchanan, if you had two men, one for the Union Pacific and one for the Southern Pacific?

A. I would like to know who would be back of Mr. Connor, how far they would be separate above him.

Q. Suppose they were separate all the way back.

A. Well, we haven't had any cause to complain yet, but I don't know. You are raising quite a point there, Judge.

Q. You wouldn't like to say, then, that conditions could not arise——

A. I would not like to say—that it would be more important to us to have separate representation.

Q. Well, whatever the Union Pacific got would have to go over the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. You understand the Union Pacific could not make a rate to California without the consent of the Southern Pacific, don't you, under the Interstate law?

A. Yes, without the concurrence of the Southern Pacific.

Q. So far as its separate solicitation is concerned, the Southern Pacific would be for the long haul as against the short haul by way of Ogden, wouldn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You, as a shipper, are not interested in the division of the rates between the different railroads, are you?

A. No, sir.

Q. It is no concern of yours?

2349 A. As long as the through rate is established.

Q. So long as the through rate is established, it is no concern of yours whether the Southern Pacific gets more out of it one way or another?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or any other carrier participating in it? I say it is a matter of no interest to you?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Judge Lovett asked you whether Mr. Connor had not been a satisfactory representative of the two lines, as far as you are concerned. By that you mean that so far as the personal services that a general agent might perform for a shipper, in tracing cars and getting cars and that sort of thing, Mr. Connor has been efficient, do you not?

A. Oh, yes, and in a much broader field than that—the question of rates, the payment of claims, and classification.

Q. Has he made rates for you?

A. He has not made rates, but we have discussed rates.

Q. Has he been instrumental in getting changes in rates for you?

A. Well, I don't recall immediately that he has, but we have discussed changes in rates—contemplated changes.

Q. Isn't it a fact that your transcontinental rates are higher now than they were seven or eight years ago?

A. They are on two of our commodities, recently so.

Q. Which two?

A. Soap and cottonseed oil.

Q. Then, the rate on Ivory soap is higher now than it was several years ago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that Mr. Connor's efforts, if they were exerted in 2350 the way of reducing rates, have not been successful on transcontinental business.

A. We have not made any particular point asking him not to advance those rates. As a company we are not opposed to a reasonable advance on the part of railroads.

Q. I was trying to find out what the nature of the service was that Mr. Connor performed for you.

A. You touched on it—in tracing our shipments, handling our claims, keeping us advised of the movement of our shipments, when they arrive at destination, and all that sort of work.

Q. Now, if that service—that efficient service—performed by Mr. Connor, was performed for the Southern Pacific line alone, and they were still in competition with the Union Pacific, as they used to be when there was a separate agency here, the chances are that it might result in an increase of traffic for the line by New Orleans; isn't that true?

A. Possibly so.

Q. So that while Mr. Connor from the standpoint of the Proctor & Gamble Company may be as efficient, he is certainly not a factor in competing for business for the New Orleans route any more as against the Union Pacific, is he, because he represents them both?

A. No; I should say that was correct.

Q. How is that?

A. I think that is correct.

Q. Now, Judge Lovett endeavored, I judge by one of his questions, to get you to testify that you don't think that 2351 your company, or any company, would be any better off with a separate representation of roads, but you did not seem inclined to wholly agree with that. You are not of the opinion, are you, that it would be as well for the shippers if all the transcontinental lines from the Missouri River to the coast had one set of officers and representatives?

A. No, sir.

Q. If the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific, the Santa Fe, the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, were all under the jurisdiction of Mr. Stubbs, for instance, the incentive to better the service on one line or another, give quicker time and all that, would be more or less taken away, wouldn't it?

A. Well, if it had to be, I don't know any man we would rather have it under than Mr. Stubbs; but I don't know that I would like to see it that way.

Q. That is, if you had to have an autocrat, you can not imagine a better one than my friend, Mr. Stubbs?

A. Yes, Mr. Stubbs.

Q. But you would prefer a more divided authority?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Just on that point, Mr. Buchanan. The Atchison and the Southern Pacific are competitors on the Pacific coast, are they not? They have lines in position to compete?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern have lines reaching to the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you don't believe that it would be a good idea for 2352 competing lines to be consolidated and have one agent, do you?

A. Now, are you asking me about competing lines, or shippers?

Q. I am asking you about competing lines. You don't believe it from the standpoint of the shipper?

A. I do not, sir.

Q. But in the case of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, isn't there a very radical difference?

A. I think they are about as little objectionable as most shippers could wish.

Q. Isn't there this radical difference as between the Union Pacific and the lines mentioned by Mr. Severance—that the Union Pacific is merely an intermediate carrier, operating a line a thousand miles in length, from Omaha to Ogden, and is dependent on the Southern Pacific for an outlet to the California points, whereas these other lines are——

A. There is that distinction.

Q. Isn't that a substantial one?

A. Well, to a certain extent. There is that distinction. How far it would mitigate any interest the shipper might have is another question.

Q. Now, as Mr. Severance suggested, Mr. Buchanan, you seemed to hesitate in answer to my previous question as to whether the interest of the shipper could be better served by a separate representative of the Union Pacific from the Southern Pacific than by a joint or two or more joint agents. If you are prepared to answer as to that I would be glad if you would answer, because I am curious to know how——

A. Let me see if I understand your question.

2353 Q. Well, may I state it over?

A. Certainly; I would be glad if you would.

Q. The question was, whether the interest of your firm as a shipper, or any shipper, could be better served in any way, so far as you can see by two men, one representing separately the Union Pacific, and the other separately the Southern Pacific, than by one man or two men, if you please, jointly representing the two lines?

A. You are making your question on the basis—say Mr. Connor and another man—that there would not be any higher traffic officials?

Q. Men of equal authority I speak of.

A. All the way through?

Q. Yes.

Mr SEVERANCE. You mean separate organizations?

Mr. LOVETT. Separate management.

Q. In other words, let us assume that the Union Pacific does not own any stock of the Southern Pacific and that it is entirely separate in its ownership and management from the Southern Pacific, and that it has its own representatives here in the field, we will say, as it had before, and the Southern Pacific has its representatives.

A. Own separate higher traffic officials?

Q. All the way through—separate organizations. And it may be that two men can do the work better than one. So my question is not as to the number of men but as to whether they represent the two interests separately.

2354 A. Separate organizations from a traffic standpoint at least?

Q. Yes.

A. I think I understand your question. I think we would prefer the separate organization.

Q. Why, Mr. Buchanan?

A. I think a shipper in a case of that kind, where there are two separate and distinct systems, would stand a better chance of getting liberal, reasonable rate-legislation than they would from the one organization.

Q. Are you keeping in mind in that answer the physical connection and location of the Union Pacific with reference to the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes. That would be perhaps less so with them than with some other systems, but I think even with them my answer would be it would be better that they be separate.

Q. Isn't it true there cannot be any competition between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific line west of Ogden?

A. Well now, perhaps you or Mr. Stubbs can answer that better than I.

Q. Well, do you know of any?

A. I should think there was and could be again more competition between the Ogden route and the Southern Pacific direct.

Q. There never was any competition between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific line extending from Ogden to the Pacific coast, was there?

A. No.

Q. You mean there was competition between the line thus formed——

A. Up to Ogden at least.

Q. You mean there was competition between the lines thus formed and the Sunset Route of the Southern Pacific; but the 2355 Southern Pacific owns and operates the line from Ogden to California——

A. I understand.

Q. ——and the Sunset Route.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Thus having two lines—one to New Orleans and the other to Ogden. Now, as I understand, you have testified that as far as the division of the revenue is concerned, the shipper is not interested?

A. No.

Q. That is, as to whether the Southern Pacific gets more revenue by way of New Orleans or by way of Ogden is of no interest to the shipper?

A. Yes, sir; provided through rates are established.

Q. Provided through rates are established. Now, in view of that situation, that the Southern Pacific operates this line between the Pacific coast and Ogden, and that there cannot be any competition as between that particular line and the Union Pacific since they physically connect and form one line, how can separate representation of the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific benefit the shipper?

A. Well, if you are correct that there can be no real, actual competition as between the Southern Pacific from New Orleans, we will say, and the Southern Pacific from Ogden, in connection with its roads east from there, there might be less reason for it than as between some other systems.

Q. Well, isn't that your view—that there cannot be any competition as between the Union Pacific and that portion of the Southern Pacific at least running from Ogden to the Pacific coast, in view of the fact that the concurrence of both of them is necessary to make the through rate?

2356 A. I should think there might be a little competition there.

Q. How, Mr. Buchanan?

A. I understand, of course, that the Southern Pacific would have to concur in any through rate made, we will say, by the Union Pacific, but if the Union Pacific could show a clear necessity for the justice of making a certain rate by the Ogden gateway, I doubt if Mr. Stubbs, representing the Southern Pacific from Ogden on, would refuse to make it, refuse to be a party to it and concur in it.

Q. Well, I know, but his concurrence in the Southern Pacific would be necessary; of course, as a matter of fact, it does concur, it does constantly. All the traffic of the Union Pacific moves that way.

A. Yes.

Q. But that still does not get away from the necessity of the concurrence by the Southern Pacific, does it?

A. No. The necessity is there under the law. I think it might be given in some cases.

Q. What I am trying to develop, Mr. Buchanan, really, is any reason that you may have, not generally as between competing lines, but as betwen the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, considering their relations at Ogden—how a shipper could be any better served by two men representing the two companies separately than by two men representing them jointly.

A. Well, I don't know that the shipper here would be particularly benefited by Mr. Connor representing only one road. But I am not prepared to say that the shipper would not be better off if the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific had separate traffic organizations.

Q. But are you prepared to state in what respect he could be 2357 better served by separate traffic organizations?

A. I think he would be better served; he would be less likely to have unreasonable rate legislation, unreasonable advances, unreasonable rules and regulations. I think that he would be apt to get a fairer, quicker hearing on a matter of that kind than if they only had one. As I say, we have had no reason to complain of this organization on our part at all. It has been entirely satisfactory to us so far. You are asking me a somewhat theoretical question in the beginning, as I understand it.

Q. Yes. It is asked to develop, if possible, any instance where he could be better served since these lines physically are on the ground, forming a part of a through line, the Southern Pacific operating about 850 miles, the Union Pacific about 1,000 miles, the Union Pacific being intermediate and having no other outlet than the Southern Pacific, and being dependent on the concurrence of the Southern Pacific in any lawful rate that it makes, and in view of that situation my whole purpose has been to develop how possibly——

A. It is somewhat theoretical with me, I will say, but that is the way I feel about it.

Q. Well, let us take a concrete case. The Denver & Rio Grande system, until recently, as I understood, operated a line from Denver to—what is it? Grand River Junction?

Mr. SEVERANCE. Grand Junction.

Q. To Grand Junction, and then the Rio Grande Western operated from Grand Junction to Salt Lake City and Ogden. They 2358 were recently consolidated. Being connecting lines, they were consolidated. That situation, as I see it on the ground, is parallel to the situation of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, except in the length of the two lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Well, what about the Sunset Route?

Mr. LOVETT. I don't know. Wait until I state this question, and then you will have your turn. Now, how could the shipper be any better served by those two companies, the Rio Grande and Western and the Denver & Rio Grande—having separate men?

A. Well, isn't that forming more of a continuous line than the other?

Q. Why? If you look at the map you will observe that the other is a straight line, practically, from San Francisco by the Southern Pacific to Ogden, and by the Union Pacific from Ogden to Omaha?

A. Well, if that is a parallel case, I would still think that the shipper might be served better with a separate organization.

Q. Could you specify in what respect? I don't want to annoy you with any unnecessary questions.

A. Well, I will have to reiterate what I have said. I think where there are strong systems that are separate the shipper stands a better chance—I think it is obvious that he would even with the best intentions on the part of the traffic managers of the larger systems—that he stands a better show of getting a fairer hearing on any question that he will bring up, less chance of an unreasonable rate, or unreasonable rules and regulations.

Q. According to your opinion, then, the shipper would be better off—or that is, that it is not against the interest of the shipper to consolidate or bring under common management even connecting lines?

2359 A. Not always, where they are actually connecting, forming part of a continuous system. It is a big question.

The EXAMINER. Gentlemen, do you think you will finish with this witness before recess?

Mr. LOVETT. I think I am finished now.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I want to ask Mr. Buchanan a few questions.

The EXAMINER. Then we will adjourn until 2 o'clock.

A recess was thereupon taken until 2 o'clock P. M., at which time the witness was recalled and examined as follows:

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Just before recess Judge Lovett was questioning you with reference to the advantage possessed by the Southern Pacific in preventing competition between the Union Pacific and the Sunset Route by reason of controlling the line from Ogden to San Francisco, thereby having a great influence in making the through rates. How are the transcontinental rates made—by whom?

A. I don't know that I am competent altogether to answer that question, but they are made, as I understand it, by the roads who are members of the Transcontinental Association, chiefly, I would take it, the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific, and the Santa Fe.

Q. And those different lines all maintain the same rates, don't they? That is, they meet in the transcontinental meetings and make up the rates, and they are all put in effective over all lines, from this territory?

A. Well, I don't know the details of that. Certainly the same rates are published by all roads.

2360 Q. Published on all tariffs, aren't they, with the names of all the roads printed on them?

A. As I understand, yes.

Q. Now, you are aware, are you not, that the Union Pacific, through its ownership of the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation, have a through line from the Missouri River to tidewater at Portland?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have had for many years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are also aware, are you not, that the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company for many years has had a line of steamers from Portland to San Francisco?

A. I am not familiar with that.

Q. Are you aware of there being a boat line there? Has that been brought to your attention?

A. In an indefinite way I am.

Q. In your judgment, would not the ownership of this through line from the Missouri River gateway to Portland give the Union Pacific a greater voice in the adjustment of through rates than it would possess if its line stopped at Ogden?

A. Do you mean in the adjustment of rates to what points?

Q. To the coast points.

A. To California?

Q. To California, yes, sir.

A. I should think it would exercise some influence, of course.

Q. You are aware, are you not, that the Pacific Coast Steamship Company has a line of boats from Puget Sound to San Francisco?

A. I believe I so understand.

Q. And has handled traffic in connection with the Great Northern and Northern Pacific to San Francisco?

A. I am not familiar with that.

Q. You don't know about that?

A. No, sir.

2361 Q. Would the fact that such a line of steamers exists in your opinion give the Great Northern and Northern Pacific an influence in the adjustment of through rates from the east to California?

A. It might have an influence.

Q. You are aware that the Canadian Pacific reach tidewater at Vancouver, are you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know that they have at times maintained a boat-line from Vancouver to San Francisco?

A. I am not familiar with that fact.

Q. Do you know that the Pacific Coast Steamship boats start from Vancouver for San Francisco?

A. I believe I can say that I know they have a line there at times.

Mr. LOVETT. That who has the line?

Mr. SEVERANCE. The Pacific Coast Steamship Company.

Q. Did you testify before luncheon that you had made shipments by the Panama route, or was that another witness?

A. No, I testified to that.

Q. I thought you did.

A. From New York, you mean?

Q. Yes, the Atlantic seaboard. In your opinion would the existence of the Panama route have an influence on transcontinental rates?

A. I think it would.

Q. Are you familiar with the American-Hawaiian Steamship line?

A. No, sir.

Q. Judge Lovett asked you if shippers had any interest in the divisions of a through rate. You testified that they did not. Now, assuming that a through rate is in force from the Missouri
2362 River gateway to the coast, which applies over the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific by way of Ogden, and the Union Pacific desired to reduce the through rate, it would be very easy for it to communicate to the Interstate Commerce Commission the fact that they were willing to take for the haul from Omaha to Ogden less than the amount of the division that they had had theretofore, and ask to have that through rate reduced to that extent, without touching the Southern Pacific division.

A. I don't know whether that could be worked that way or not.

Q. You don't know about that?

A. No.

Q. Assuming that the Commission had jurisdiction over joint rates, it could, couldn't it?

A. As I understand your question, if the Union Pacific were desirous of reducing their division of an already-established through rate, that the Commission would see to it that that was done?

Q. Well, I guess I did not make myself clear. Judge Lovett was trying to draw out from you that it was impossible for the Union Pacific to compete with the Sunset Route because the Southern Pacific own the line from Ogden to the coast. Now, take a concrete case. Suppose that the through rate from the Missouri River to San Francisco is 50 cents, the Southern Pacific getting 30 and the Union Pacific 20, or however it may be divided. If the Union Pacific wanted to reduce that through rate, and its general influence on rates by reason of having the line to Portland, and by reason of having a voice in the Transcontinental Bureau, was not sufficient, because the Sunset Route was owned by the Southern Pacific, and they stood there and refused to allow that rate to be reduced, 2363 it would be very easy, wouldn't it, for the Union Pacific to go to the Interstate Commerce Commission and offer to take 15 cents instead of 20 and make the through rate 45 cents?

A. Certainly, it would be very easy for them to go to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Q. You haven't heard of the Commission refusing to put in——

Mr. LOVETT. He hasn't finished yet.

Q. Pardon me.

A. It would all depend on the view that the Commission would take of it, as to the reasonableness of the through rate and the divisions of the rate. I should think if it was a reasonable rate and a reasonable division, the Commission might look on it with favor.

Q. But irrespective of that, the fact that the Union Pacific had a through line and there is a boat-line, and these other lines have a through line, the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe go through, and all these roads unite in these rates, it is not possible for any one road to dictate what the rate shall be, is it?

A. I should think not.

Q. Counsel was asking you whether the acquisition of the Rio Grande & Western from Grand Junction to Ogden by the Denver & Rio Grande was not a parallel case to the acquisition of the Southern Pacific line from Ogden to San Francisco by the Union Pacific. There is a marked difference in the two, is there not, in the fact that the Southern Pacific has the Sunset Route, which was in active competiton with the Union Pacific while the Rio Grande had no other line in competition with it on transcontinental business?

2364 A. I think there is a difference.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. In reference to the last question asked by Mr. Severance: it isn't any more possible for the Southern Pacific to compete with itself than it is for the joint agent to compete with himself, is it? Doesn't the Southern Pacific, by reason of its control of the line from Ogden to San Francisco, have the decision as to what the rail rate to or from California shall be as against everybody except the Atchison?

A. They undoubtedly have a decided influence. Whether it is controlling I am not prepared to say.

Q. Now take the case that Mr. Severance suggested. Assuming that the Union Pacific would be satisfied with a less percentage of the through rate to California than it actually gets, and should apply to the Interstate Commerce Commission for a reduction of the through rate, taking the reduction out of its proportion. Did you ever hear of a case of that sort, Mr. Buchanan?

A. I do not recall having heard of a case of that kind, no, sir.

Q. Don't you know from your experience as a railroad man, from your knowledge of rates, that if the Union Pacific were to attempt to do as foolish a thing as that, that the Southern Pacific would at once increase its share of the through rate, or cancel the through rate?

A. If they were permitted to do so, yes.

Q. Well, do you know of any reason why they are not permitted to do so?

2365 A. I think everything would depend upon the reasonableness of the rate that the Union Pacific desired to put in, and the divisions of that rate.

Q. Well, you don't understand, do you, that the Union Pacific could put in a rate to California without the concurrence of the Southern Pacific?

A. Not initially.

Q. How is that?

A. Not initially.

Q. Then, if it cannot do it initially, can it lawfully reduce it without the consent of the Southern Pacific?

A. Not until it obtained, either voluntarily or otherwise, the concurrence of the Southern Pacific.

Q. Well, as a railroad proposition, and in taking the action of ordinary people, wouldn't you say that if the Union Pacific were to make such an application as Mr. Severance suggests, that the Southern Pacific would at once increase its proportion of the through rate——

A. I think they would.

Q. ——or cancel the rate altogether?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Denver & Rio Grande also connects with the Southern Pacific at Ogden, and extends then eastwardly to Denver, and the testimony of its president and agents shows that it has suffered by reason of the relations of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific. It has in joint rates with the Southern Pacific. Do you know of any reason why it should not do what Mr. Severance suggests the Union Pacific might do as effectually as the Union Pacific could?

A. No.

Q. If it were a practicable proposition, as Mr. Severance suggests, any connection that was discriminated against by reason of this relation between the two, would probably resort to it, don't you think, Mr. Buchanan?

2366 A. If there were a proper remedy?

Q. Yes.

A. I should think so.

Q. I think in answer to the first question asked by Mr. Severance since the noon recess, as to how rates to the Pacific coast were made, you stated that they were made by the Transcontinental Association—was it?

A. I stated that I did not feel altogether competent to answer that question; as I understood it, they were made by the roads members of the Transcontinental Association.

Q. And principally, I think you said, by the Atchison and the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, isn't it principally by the Atchison and the Southern Pacific, being the only lines reaching the coast with their own rails?

A. I don't know but I am willing to amend to that extent.

Q. The Union Pacific, aside from its relations to the Southern Pacific through the ownership of stock and common officers, etc., has no more power in that respect than the Denver & Rio Grande or any other intermediate carrier, has it, Mr. Buchanan? Or, in other words, the Atchison system and the Southern Pacific system have the lines on the Pacific coast, and eastwardly they have various connections?

A. Yes.

Q. The Union Pacific being one of them, the Denver & Rio Grande another, the Burlington and the Rock Island and various other lines being others. Now, in fixing rates to the Pacific coast, the Union Pacific has no more power, as far as you can see, and no reason why it should have any more power, than the Denver & Rio Grande, 2367 or the Burlington, or the Rock Island, has it?

A. Well, I should think it had, and ought to have.

Q. Why?

A. Reaching with its own rails the Missouri River straight to Ogden, with direct connection with the Southern Pacific, I should think it would be stronger than the D. & R. G., or even stronger than the Rock Island or the "Q" in having a voice in the making of through rates. I think it is a more prominent, stronger system.

Q. Is it on account of the physical condition of its road, or on account of its location?

A. I think it is a stronger road—I would regard it at least as a stronger road, reaching from the Missouri River to Ogden, than the D. & R. G., say from Denver or Pueblo, to Ogden.

Q. Take the D. & R. G. in connection with the Burlington or the Missouri Pacific?

A. Then you split the ownership up. Here is one road, under one ownership, from the Missouri River to Ogden.

Q. But I am asking this question aside from the ownership of the Union Pacific by the Southern Pacific, treating it as if it were entirely separate.

A. I was trying to answer along those lines.

Q. You think the fact that it owns a line of a thousand miles from Omaha gives it a greater influence than the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. I should think it would.

Q. Well, how about the Rock Island that owns lines from Chicago to Denver and to El Paso?

A. I should think they would be more in position than the D. & R. G.

Q. Be more in position than the D. & R. G.?

A. Yes.

2368 Q. Why?

A. Because they are not a through road from the Missouri River to a direct connection at Ogden or other points with the Southern Pacific.

Q. Do you think the fact that the Union Pacific directly connects with the Southern Pacific gives it an advantage over the Rock Island; is that it?

A. And reaching from an important territory like the Missouri River.

Q. Well, the Rock Island reaches from the Missouri River and also from Chicago.

A. Yes, but it only goes to Colorado.

Q. And to El Paso?

A. Well, to El Paso. It ought to be stronger with the El Paso route.

Q. Well, is there anything in the fact that the Union Pacific line happens to be located from Omaha to Ogden, with no connection beyond Ogden except the Southern Pacific for California points—in what respect can that give it any advantage over any other line forming a link?

A. Well, I would say that the obvious advantage it would have is that it is one road; if it were under one management, having its own rails from the Missouri River to Ogden, it ought to have a more important voice in rate-making than would the D. & R. G. or the Rock Island.

Q. Can you give any illustration at all to distinguish it?

A. Because I think it is more important.

Q. You think it is 1,000 miles as against a line of 500 miles?

A. Not only its actual mileage, but the territory it serves, its connections at the Missouri River.

Q. Now, take the Burlington, that has a through line from Chicago to Denver in connection with the Denver & Rio Grande.
2369 That is considerably longer than the Union Pacific line from Omaha to Ogden. Now, is the Union Pacific more important in that situation than the Burlington?

A. I would still think that the Union Pacific would have a more important voice.

Q. Why?

A. For the very fact that, as I have said before, the Union Pacific reaches from the Missouri River, with all the important connections there, clear through to Ogden. I am only giving, of course, my personal opinion of it.

Q. And the Burlington reaches from Chicago, with its important connections there, to Denver?

A. Yes; but it stops there.

Q. Well, the Union Pacific stops at Omaha, eastwardly?

A. The Union Pacific?

Q. The Union Pacific doesn't extend east of Omaha?

A. Well, Omaha and Kansas City; yes.

Q. And the Burlington extends from Chicago, where it has many important connections, to a connection with the Denver & Rio Grande at Denver.

A. Yes.

Q. And so does the Rock Island. But you still think the Union Pacific would have a more important influence?

A. I do, on the fact that it is one road—one management.

Q. There is a great deal of value in that, you think, Mr. Buchanan?

A. I have found it so in my railroad experience.

Q. Don't you think that also operates for the Southern Pacific, too, it having the only western outlet of the Union Pacific?

A. It certainly does.

Q. Under what conditions can the Union Pacific have any voice in making transcontinental rates as against the Southern Pacific? Can you conceive of any conditions under which it would 2370 have any voice in making rates to California without the consent of the Southern Pacific?

A. It would have to have the consent of the Southern Pacific: yes.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. There is a difference between the situation of the Union Pacific and the Denver & Rio Grande, for instance, is there not, in the fact that the Union Pacific reaches Portland?

A. That would be an additional reason.

Q. And the lines of road centering at Omaha control a very large traffic that they turn over to the Union Pacific at that point, do they not?

A. I think so.

Q. And that is a traffic that the Southern Pacific must take into account in adjusting the through rate to the coast, isn't it?

A. I should think so.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. That traffic would have to go over the Southern Pacific to get to the coast, wouldn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

2371 JOSEPH KEAVY,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Keavy?

A. Indianapolis.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am commissioner of the Indianapolis Freight Bureau.

Q. How long have you occupied that position?

A. Since June, 1906.

Q. Previous to that time what was your business?

A. I was in the service of the railroads, in the freight traffic departments.

Q. Just give your railroad experience, if you please?

A. Beginning in 1872 or '3, I was in the service of the Michigan Central road, at Saginaw; chief clerk in the general freight office of one of its divisions. Following that I was commercial agent for the Fort Wayne & Jackson Railroad. Following that I was local agent for the Detroit, Lansing & Northern, at Detroit. Then with the C. H. & D. Railroad as general agent, located in Michigan. After that, with the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, as commercial agent in the territory of Michigan. That brought it up to 1892, when I entered the service of the Big Four Railroad as general agent in Michigan, located at Grand Rapids. From 1896 to 1898 I was division freight agent of that road, located at Benton Harbor. January 1st, 1899, I moved to Indianapolis, still as division freight agent, and in 1901 I was 2372 appointed assistant general freight agent, which position I held until I resigned in November, 1905.

Q. Your railroad experience, then, has all been in the traffic department—not in the operating?

A. In the freight traffic department; yes sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. Connor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Connor?

A. I should say eight or nine years, or thereabouts.

Q. Did you know him at the time he represented the Southern Pacific Company, before he became the joint agent of the Southern and Union Pacific?

A. I did.

Q. Was Indianapolis within his jurisdiction?

A. Yes, sir; as I recollect it.

Q. Did the Union Pacific have a separate representation in that field?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the fact as to whether there was competition for transcontinental business between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific, prior to 1901, in that district?

A. It was quite well understood that there was that competition between those two routes; in other words, when dealing with the representative of the Southern Pacific, it was known that you were treating with a rival of the Union Pacific, and vice versa.

Q. Which way did the Southern Pacific agents, Mr. Connor and his subordinates, endeavor to route their transcontinental traffic?

A. Via New Orleans.

Q. And the Union Pacific?

A. By the Missouri River gateway.

2373 Q. By the Missouri River gateway you mean Kansas City and Omaha, do you not?

A. And St. Joe.

Q. And St. Joe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the fact as to whether competition continued between those two lines after Mr. Connor became the joint agent?

A. I could not testify as to any specific incidents or grounds giving me direct knowledge on that point, other than the impression that the reorganization and joint agency and representation in the districts naturally would tend to lessen the aggressiveness of the separate representation which existed before.

Q. Not only lessened it, but eliminated it, didn't it?

A. Well, that would bear on a little different line of thought. Its tendency would be to eliminate any actual competition.

Q. Now, in competing for that business, prior to this amalgamation, what way did that competition manifest itself?

A. In the solicitation of the representatives of the two distinct routes.

Q. Was that active or otherwise?

A. I always considered it quite pronounced and active.

Q. Do you know any time when the through rates differed by different transcontinental lines?

A. I can not say that I have any such knowledge, for the reason that in my position during that period the representatives of the Pacific coast lines, if there were any differences in rates, did not communicate them to me.

Q. They were private differences, if any existed?

2374 A. Well, if any existed, they would deal with the shipper or consignee directly.

Q. The published rates were always the same?

A. Always the same; yes sir.

Q. And the competition that existed was in the way of solicitation, as you say?

A. All that I observed or have knowledge of.

Q. Now, what is the fact as to the kind of service rendered being a factor in the competition?

A. That is always a factor.

Q. And what elements of service do you take into account?

A. Why, the despatch usually, and the facilities for getting information promptly, and the treatment of questions like claims; such matters as that.

Q. The supply of cars?

A. The car supply is a very important element, although there are features of that that are in the hands largely of initial roads.

Q. Isn't it a fact that transcontinental lines at times work their equipment in different parts of the territory east of the Missouri River for the purpose of getting return business?

A. Why, I understand they always endeavor to provide a fair quota of their equipment for traffic as an aid in securing it.

Q. As an aid in securing business?

A. Yes.

Q. And particularly in times of congestion, when the traffic is very heavy, isn't the ability to furnish cars an important item in getting business?

A. Do you mean in times of congestion or shortage of car supply?

2375 Q. That is what I mean—shortage of car supply because of congestion of business.

A. Yes, ability to furnish cars promptly then would be pretty sure of securing traffic.

Q. Well, isn't it a fact that at all times that has been a recognized form of conducting competition?

A. That is one strong element in competition—the facilities for caring for the traffic.

Q. Do you regard the personality of the general agent or soliciting agent as of importance in getting business for the lines the agent represents?

A. In many instances I have known that to be of great potency and influence.

Q. Over what routes did the business to Portland and Puget Sound points chiefly move from your Indianapolis territory, previous to 1901?

A. There were several routes open for that. It would move naturally via the Union Pacific or the northern routes in preference to the long route through New Orleans.

Q. Did any move by Ogden and Sacramento?

A. I am not familiar with that. I do not know how the lines distributed or routed their traffic in that respect.

Q. You merely know the geographical location of the lines?

A. Yes, and the routes.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. In what territory did you observe this competition between the representatives of the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific, Mr. Keavy—this territory?

A. In Indiana.

2376 Q. In Indiana?

A. I was in charge of the Michigan division, running from Benton Harbor down to Louisville; and later, still having jurisdiction of that division, was given the Indianapolis division, running eastwardly from Indianapolis to the state line—to Union City.

Q. That is the Big Four?

A. Yes; that covered the gas belt, and there was a good deal of traffic there and a good deal of activity in solicitation.

Q. Did your line have any choice as to routing, as to whether it would go by way of Ogden or New Orleans?

A. No, sir.

Q. It was immaterial which way it went, I suppose?

A. Quite so.

Q. Over what lines to New Orleans did this traffic secured by Mr. Connor and other representatives of the Southern Pacific, from this territory, move?

A. It could move through Louisville or through Cairo.

Q. Over what lines?

A. Illinois Central, through Cairo, Illinois Central through Louisville, or the L. & N. It would not go via Cincinnati from the Indianapolis territory, very likely.

Q. It could go that way?

A. It could, and I don't know but what portions of it did. I am not familiar now with just how the divisions ran.

Q. It did move over the Illinois Central and the Louisville & Nashville, and could have moved over the Queen & Crescent from this territory to New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And thence over the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

2377 Q. Were the Louisville & Nashville and the Illinois Central and the Queen & Crescent soliciting that traffic?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Soliciting it by way of New Orleans?

A. Yes.

Q. Over what lines would traffic from the same territory, secured or routed by the Union Pacific, move from point of origin to Omaha or Kansas City?

A. Through St. Louis, Peoria, or Chicago, and thence through the Missouri River gateways.

Q. By all the various railroad lines operating in that territory?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Louisville & Nashville does not extend north of the Ohio River, does it?

A. They have a division running to St. Louis from Evansville.

Q. And the Queen & Crescent does not extend north of Cincinnati, does it?

A. No, sir.

Q. The Illinois Central and the Louisville & Nashville and the Queen & Crescent run in a southerly direction from this territory, don't they?

A. Yes, southerly and west.

Q. Which direction from the Ohio River, or from what connection with the Queen & Crescent or the Louisville & Nashville does the Big Four run?

A. It runs westerly and northwesterly.

Q. And the Pennsylvania has lines from Cincinnati, Ohio, running northerly, doesn't it?

A. Yes, sir, and in connection with the Vandalia westwardly.

Q. And the C. H. & D. running from Cincinnati northerly and westerly?

A. They run westwardly from Indianapolis.

Q. The C. H. & D.?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I spoke of from Cincinnati—it runs northerly and north-
2378 westerly?

A. It runs north-westwardly to Indianapolis, and due westward from there to Springfield, Illinois.

Q. To Chicago it runs in connection with the Monon, doesn't it?

A. That is one of its connections. I don't know whether it is a traffic route or not. It is a strong connection.

Q. Then, the Chicago, Cincinnati & Louisville was one of the lines mentioned as extending northerly?

A. The Chicago, Cincinnati & Louisville runs directly from Cincinnati.

Q. Runs from Chicago to Cincinnati?

A. To Cincinnati. It doesn't run to Louisville. Just Cincinnati to Chicago.

Q. It and the C. H. & D., and other lines in this territory, solicited that business to the Pacific coast, didn't they?

A. Well, the C. C. & L. are a newcomer in the field, up in the gas-field or in the territory of the whole. The C. H. & D., within the last few years, have acquired lines west from Indianapolis. But now they would solicit from Indianapolis and interior Indiana. Wherever their lines reach they would solicit this business.

Q. These lines I have mentioned would solicit from Cincinnati and Ohio River points?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And points in Southern Ohio?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As against the lines leading to New Orleans, wouldn't they?

A. Certainly.

Q. And they would seek to move it northwesterly or westerly to a connection with the Union Pacific at Omaha, or the Atchison?

A. Yes, sir; that would be their route.

2379 Q. And they would be competing with the lines south of the Ohio River?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The lines to New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Although running in the opposite direction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are familiar with the location of Union Pacific lines, are you not, Mr. Keavy?

A. Yes, sir, I know the lay of their system.

Q. Such business as the agents of the Union Pacific secured from this territory about which you testified, for California points, would have to go over the Southern Pacific from Ogden to the Pacific coast, wouldn't it?

A. West from Ogden? Yes, sir, that would be their route for California.

Q. The Southern Pacific was the only outlet for the Union Pacific for California business, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir, that was until the San Pedro route was opened.

Q. Up to that time the Southern Pacific was the only outlet for the Union Pacific for California business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The various lines from this territory to the Missouri River and westwardly, including the B. & O., the Pennsylvania lines, the Rock Island, the Missouri Pacific, the Atchison, the Union Pacific, the Burlington, the Chicago & North-Western, the St. Paul, and perhaps others, have all the time been actively soliciting this California business in this territory, haven't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe you testified, in answer to questions by Mr. Severance in reference to the importance of car supply. The car supply is practically in the hands of the initial line, isn't it?

2380 A. No, I don't think I testified it was practically. I said sometimes the question would rest with them and not be a burden wholly upon the Pacific coast road to furnish their own cars, because there are various intermediate lines, or the initial road itself might have equipment which they would be willing to supply; but the large special equipment was a factor, whoever supplied it.

Q. The initial line will always furnish cars, if it has them, in order to get the traffic, won't it—either its own or some foreign car moving in that direction?

A. As a general thing, yes, sir. They place some limitations upon their own large equipment at times.

Q. At times?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Keavy, one or two things I forgot to ask you about on direct examination. Do you remember the time when the Canadian Pacific had in a differential to California points by boat-line from Vancouver?

A. No, sir, I cannot recall specifically any such basis of rates.

Q. You don't remember that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember of traffic moving that way to California points by the Canadian Pacific to Vancouver, and thence by boat?

A. I could not testify that I have such knowledge, no, sir.

2381 JOSEPH G. McDOWELL,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. McDowell?

A. Indianapolis.

Q. What is your business?

A. I have been traffic manager for the Atlas Engine Works.

Q. For how long?

A. About thirty years.

Q. What kind of product does the Atlas Engine Works manufacture?

A. Engines and boilers.

Q. What kind of engines? I don't mean technically, but in general what kind of engines?

A. The ordinary stationary steam engine.

Q. How is that concern as to being a large or small institution?

A. Well, sir, it has been one of the largest institutions of the country, perhaps the largest.

Q. Do you know Mr. Connor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To what parts of the country has the Atlas Engine Works shipped its product?

A. All over the United States, sir.

Q. You have considerable shipments to the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To what points in California do you ship?

A. Principally to Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Q. Do you ship to jobbers or to agents?

A. Ship to agents.

Q. Who has controlled that routing?

2382 A. Well, that is a little mixed. Sometimes the agent did, and sometimes it was shipped without any suggestion from them; sometimes they requested special routing; perhaps in the majority of cases they did not, and it was controlled at the point of shipment.

Q. And that was controlled by you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the time when Mr. Connor represented the Southern Pacific and did not represent the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew him then, did you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who represented the Union Pacific in your territory at that time?

A. My recollection is not very clear. I think it was Mr. Liston—I think it was; I am not entirely clear on that.

Q. You recall that they had a separate soliciting agency?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that time did you receive calls from Mr. Connor or his subordinates and from the representatives of the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were those two lines competing with each other for business then, for shipments out of Indianapolis?

A. Well, by competing do you mean offering——

Q. I mean soliciting business against each other.

A. Soliciting business against each other, yes sir.

Q. And which way did Mr. Connor and his subordinates endeavor to route the traffic that they secured?

A. Southern Pacific.

Q. Via what gateway?

A. Via New Orleans.

Q. New Orleans?

2383 A. New Orleans or sometimes El Paso; they preferred it via New Orleans.

Q. And which way did the Union Pacific endeavor to route their traffic?

A. By the Missouri River gates.

Q. Do you make shipments to Portland, Oregon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Over what routes?

A. Sometimes Union Pacific, sometimes Great Northern, sometimes Northern Pacific. That business is very largely controlled by the consignees.

Q. Did the business that went over the Union Pacific go to Portland over the Oregon Short Line, or was it divided at Ogden?

A. I think it went over the Oregon Short Line; that is my recollection of it, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Connor endeavor to secure business into Portland from you?

A. Well, I cannot answer that, sir; it has been so long ago that I am a little rusty.

Q. Do you receive calls from Mr. Connor now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or have you since he became joint agent?

A. He occasionally comes to see me.

Q. Has he any subordinates who come to see you?

A. Mr. Liston sometimes calls in.

Q. Which way do they solicit coast shipments now?

A. Well, I can't recall that they express a preference.

Q. That is, they express no preference between the Southern and the Union?

A. Yes.

Q. They express preference between themselves and the Northern Pacific, for instance, and the Santa Fe, don't they?

A. Oh, yes, yes. I am speaking of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific.

2384 Q. They do not express any preference between those two. I understood that was what you meant. I didn't mean to be jocular. I simply wanted to make clear what you meant by your answer.

A. Mr. Connor usually comes in and makes himself very agreeable for a few minutes, and goes out.

Q. Well, you are very glad to give business to a company or a combination of companies that has so charming a representative, aren't you?

A. Yes.

Q. As a matter of fact, Mr. McDowell, the ability and the personality of the soliciting agent has a good deal to do with securing business, hasn't it?

A. That is my experience.

Q. Since Mr. Connor has represented both lines, which way has the most of your business moved to California points, that is, the business that went over the Union Pacific or the Southern Pacific?

A. You mean as divided between the two lines?

Q. Yes, sir. Since he has represented both lines, how does the bulk of your business move? Which way does the most of it move?

A. I should say over the Southern Pacific and via New Orleans.

Q. Still moves that way?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How was it before the——

A. Now, perhaps I should qualify that, sir. We have done more business in Los Angeles than we have in San Francisco, and a more natural route for Los Angeles would be over the Southern Pacific rather than for San Francisco over the Southern Pacific.

2385 Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You understood, I presume, Mr. McDowell, that such business as was secured by the representatives of the Union Pacific, before the agencies were consolidated, for California, moved ultimately over the Southern Pacific, did you not—that is, from Ogden westward?

A. Yes, I think so, sir.

Q. That is to say, you understood that the only outlet for the Union Pacific to California points was by way of Ogden over the Southern Pacific or Central Pacific line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I presume all of the lines reaching your territory solicit business actively for California points, do they not?

A. All westbound lines.

Q. And southerly lines? Doesn't the Illinois Central, the Louisville & Nashville, the Queen & Crescent, and the Missouri Pacific lines actively solicit that business?

A. Yes; they were always glad to get it.

Q. The Illinois Central and——

A. The Illinois Central at that time, you know, were not represented with us and were not very active in their solicitation.

Q. They were not?

A. No, sir.

Q. The Louisville & Nashville?

A. More so than the Illinois Central.

Q. The Queen & Crescent?

A. I never encouraged the Queen & Crescent business, going that way.

Q. How about the Missouri Pacific?

A. They were very glad to get it via T. & P. and El Paso.

2386 Q. And by way of Denver, too, weren't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They had the two lines. And the Rock Island system?

A. I never did much business with the Rock Island on the coast business.

Q. Did their solicitors ever call upon you?

A. Yes.

Q. And the Burlington's, I presume?

A. I never did very much business with the Burlington.

Q. Did they have solicitors in your neighborhood?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. I am not speaking of those you did business with, but I am speaking of those who were soliciting business.
A. Yes, sir. The Burlington solicited.
Q. And the North-Western?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The St. Paul?
A. Yes.
Q. And practically all of the important lines extending from your territory, lying between Indianapolis and the Rocky Mountains and New Orleans?
A. You are speaking now prior to 1901, are you?
Q. Yes, sir, and since.
A. Well, there hasn't been very much since.
Q. They have not been as active in recent years?
A. No, sir.
Q. You mean none of the lines has been? or all of them? How is that?
A. Well, I don't want to make any very distinct statement. My statement is that they have not been. Just in a general way.
Q. They have been less active in solicitation?
A. Less active.
Q. I am not speaking merely of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, but of all lines in your territory?
A. I think it would be true to say that all of them have been less active.

2387 CHARLES S. BARKER,

sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Barker?
A. Indianapolis.
Q. What is your business?
A. Traffic manager of E. C. Atkins & Company.
Q. What is their business?
A. Saw manufacturers.
Q. Is that a large concern?
A. Yes, sir; it employs about 1200 men.
Q. How long have you been traffic manager for that company?
A. I have been connected with the company 23 years, and had the office of traffic manager for about eight or nine.
Q. Previous to that what was your position?
A. Shipping clerk.
Q. Are you the gentleman that solicitors call on in soliciting traffic?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long have they done that?

A. Well, only since the office of traffic manager has been established.

Q. To what parts of the country do you ship?

A. From the Atlantic to the Pacific seaboard, and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, and export.

Q. And export?

A. Yes.

Q. You have one of the largest saw manufactories in the country, have you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. Connor?

A. I do, yes, sir.

Q. Does he call on you, looking after business?

2388 A. Occasionally.

Q. You know that he represents both the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, do you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does he express any preference for one route over the other, or endeavor to route the traffic one way or the other?

A. No, sir, I don't know that he does.

Q. Were you traffic manager in the old days when Mr. Conner represented the Southern Pacific, and the Union Pacific had separate representatives?

A. I do not think I was. I think the merger has been since then.

Q. That is, you took your position about the time of the merger?

A. Yes, sir, about that time.

Q. So that you do not know anything about the former solicitation of business?

A. No, sir, I could not say as to that.

(No Cross-Examination).

2389 H. H. BEAN,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Bean?

A. Springfield, Ohio.

Q. How long have you been in Springfield?

A. Since my birth, in 1859.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am a manufacturer of farm machinery.

Q. What is the name of the company?

A. Thomas Manufacturing Company.

Q. Is that an old concern?

A. Yes.

Q. What kind of farm machinery do you manufacture?

A. We manufacture machines for cutting and gathering hay, seeding machines and harrow machines for harrowing, grain drills and seeding machines.

Q. In what parts of the country is your product used?

A. All parts of the United States pretty generally.

Q. Do you ship to the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been doing so?

A. Oh, for a good many years.

Q. How long have you been with the company?

A. Thirty-three years. I went with the company in 1877, when quite a boy.

Q. What connection have you had with the routing of traffic?

A. Well, I have been in touch with it more or less. The solicitors generally come to see me. I rather direct the move-2390 ment of the freight to a certain extent.

Q. Are you acquainted with Mr. Connor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Connor?

A. For quite a long time; I don't know exactly how many years.

Q. Did you know him when he represented the Southern Pacific before he represented also the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he use to come to see you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Often?

A. Yes, rather frequently during the shipping season, when the movement was active in our line.

Q. Did he come to see you to solicit business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way did he endeavor to route Pacific coast traffic?

A. By the Southern Pacific, New Orleans.

Q. Did the Union Pacific Railroad Company also have a soliciting agency in this field at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how did they endeavor to route their traffic?

A. Through the Missouri River gateways—Omaha and Kansas City.

Q. How was the competition between Mr. Connor and his agency and the Union Pacific agency for this coast traffic? Was it active or otherwise?

A. It seemed to be quite aggressive, particularly on Mr. Connor's part.

Q. Particularly on Mr. Connor's part?

A. Yes, sir. The other side as well, I may add. They were both aggressive in the business.

Q. Do you remember of some years ago when Mr. Connor took over the agency of the Union Pacific also?

A. Yes, I recall the time.

2391 Q. The fact, I mean.

A. The combination, yes.

Q. You recall the fact?

A. Yes.

Q. Since then has he been to see you about traffic?

A. Well, I think in person he possibly may have been up once. I don't recall. He has an assistant who solicits business.

Q. Who is that?

A. Mr. Sigbee, I believe, is his name.

Q. What is it?

A. Sigbee.

Mr. CONNOR. Sigler.

WITNESS. Yes, Mr. Sigler.

Q. Now, since this joint agency was established does Mr. Sigler express any preference between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific route by New Orleans on Pacific coast business?

A. No, I can't say that he has ever expressed any preference as between the two routes.

Q. In what way, if at all, do you regard freight solicitors as of value to the shippers?

A. Well, I think that they are important in the sense that they bring you in direct contact with the railroad. You have that personal contact that is always effective in business transactions. And then they are generally men who are looking out for the interest of their lines, and in that way trying to benefit the shipper all they can, in the way of good service, and in many ways they are very useful to both sides; in fact, we could not get along very well without them.

Q. Do you think they are useful to the railroads as well as to the shippers?

A. I most assuredly do.

Q. Are they useful in the way of getting business for the railroads?

A. Decidedly—decidedly.

2392 Q. What is the important element in competition between railroads, to your mind?

A. The rates being equal, I think the first element is service; that is to say, the line that seems to be freer and in position to carry your freight with the best despatch, particularly when you are in a hurry; they would be more apt to get the business. But, all conditions being equal, I think the personnel of the solicitor has considerable to do with it.

Q. I think you have already stated that the solicitor is valuable in securing good service?

A. Yes.

Q. And in that way securing business for his line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you shipped over both routes to the coast, both by New Orleans and by Ogden?

A. We formerly shipped via New Orleans, but of late we have not shipped much of anything that way.

Q. You have not been importuned by Mr. Connor to do that as much as you used to be?

A. I can't recall that he has—you mean since 1901?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I can't recall that we have been importuned to ship either way specifically.

Q. But you were before that?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. How did you formerly ship, during the days of active competition?

A. I think during Mr. Connor's period with the Southern Pacific, if he happened to come along at the right time he had a good chance to get the business, everything else being equal.

Q. Well, he had a good chance, and he got it in many cases, didn't he?

2393 A. Yes. We aimed to divide our business, naturally, with all the lines.

Q. But at the present time you do not ship by New Orleans?

A. No.

Q. How do you ship to Portland and vicinity?

A. Our coast business to a certain extent is routed by the buyer. Where he leaves it open we use our own judgment. To Portland we would have the option of the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern—the Northern Pacific chiefly—the Union Pacific, and the O. R. & N., from Ogden up.

Q. Do these various lines have agents who call on you and solicit that traffic?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. So all the Portland business is solicited by three, is it,—by Mr. Connor's agency, the Northern Pacific, and the Great Northern?

A. Well, I don't know whether the Great Northern solicit Portland business. They solicit Seattle business more particularly, because that is their terminal, I believe. But the Great Northern, of course, solicit Portland.

Q. You mean the Northern Pacific, don't you?

A. The Northern Pacific, yes; and the Burlington also in connection with the Northern Pacific, and also the Union Pacific with their connection from Ogden up.

Q. I don't know whether I asked you, but it is a fact, is it not, that your company is one of the large companies of the kind?

A. Well, we are one of the old companies. We are not as large as some and not as small as some others.

Q. You are much larger than some others, aren't you?

A. Oh, yes, I should say possibly.

2394 Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You never shipped to Portland by way of New Orleans and the Southern Pacific, did you, Mr. Bean?

A. Not that I can ever recall.

Q. You stated in answer to Mr. Severance that you had not been importuned for shipments by Mr. Connor since 1901. You have been solicited by his assistants?

A. Oh, yes. We have had letters from Mr. Connor, chiefly containing routing requests that they have gotten from the Pacific coast. It is quite customary out there to be solicited, and then get the routing instructions and then send them on to the factories.

Q. Mr. Connor has more assistants working for him since 1901 than he formerly had?

A. I don't know as to that. I would suppose he would have to have, with a larger business to look after.

Q. You have seen assistants of his since then?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Who have solicited your business?

A. His solicitor comes to us very frequently.

Q. In your statement you did not mean to say you had not been solicited at all?

A. Oh, I don't think I said that.

Q. No; you said you had not been solicited by Mr. Connor.

A. Not by Mr. Connor in person, that is what I meant. Possibly he has been up once or twice to pay a social visit, as far as I can remember.

2395 Q. The routes via New Orleans and El Paso and all these different gateways are still open, aren't they?

A. As far as I know they are, yes.

Q. You can ship by any of these routes that you want to.

A. If we choose, yes.

Q. Such business as was secured by the agents of the Union Pacific or as shipped by the Union Pacific in the days before the merger, so-called, moved by way of Kansas City or Omaha to Ogden, did it not?

A. Generally.

Q. And thence over the Southern Pacific.

A. Well, if it went down into California, of course it would have to go that way.

Q. All business south of Portland had to go over the Southern Pacific?

A. Prior to the building of this new road from Salt Lake.

Q. The San Pedro?

A. Yes.

Q. Prior to that?

A. Yes, as far as I know; I don't know as they ever shipped it up by way of Portland.

Q. You never knew of it to be carried?

A. I never knew of any to my knowledge.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Pardon me, I did not hear the last. I was interrupted by Mr. Husted speaking to me.

Mr. LOVETT. He said it all had to go over the Southern Pacific prior to the construction of the San Pedro line unless it went round by way of Portland, and by boat, and he never heard of any going that way.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

2396 Q. In the old days, when Mr. Connor was soliciting for the Southern Pacific, did he in connection with the Union Pacific or the Denver & Rio Grande ever attempt to get business into Portland by the Sacramento gateway—from Ogden to Sacramento and over the Shasta route?

A. Well, that has been so long ago I do not know as I could recall it if he ever solicited business that way.

Q. Do you remember business moving from your plant that way?

A. I can't recall it at this time.

2397 S. D. MAYER,

sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Mayer, where do you live?

A. Hamilton, Ohio.

Q. How long have you lived there?

A. I have lived there since 1891.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am assistant treasurer and office manager of the Mosler Safe Company.

Q. How long have you been with the Mosler Safe Company?

A. Since 1889. Prior to our removal to Hamilton we were located here in Cincinnati, and moved to Hamilton in 1891—1889 was the year I went with them.

Q. And you were then located at Cincinnati?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And moved to Hamilton in 1891?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Two years afterward?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you charge of the traffic?

A. It comes under my supervision, yes, sir.

Q. And how long have you had charge of the movement of their traffic?

A. Well, ever since I have been—well, not ever since. I will modify that. Prior to 1895 we had a traffic manager. He is no longer with them. When he stepped out it was thrown upon my shoulders.

Q. So you have had charge of it for 14 or 15 years?

A. Yes, sir.

2398 Q. As compared with other companies in the business, what is the size of the Mosler Safe Company?

A. Well, I do not want to say that we are the largest; but we are one of the largest in the manufacture of safes and vaults.

Q. Your company and the Diebold Company are the largest, are you not?

A. I would say, yes. I think they rank about equal in capacity.

Q. They are the two leading companies in that line of business?

A. I would say so—that is, in capacity. I would not say in quality of goods; I would not want to——

Q. Well, I am speaking about the capacity.

A. Yes, in capacity; output.

Q. To what part of the country does your output go?

A. The entire United States. We do quite a business in Mexico, some little in London, and some little in Canada; but our biggest field is the United States and Mexico.

Q. Do you send safes to the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been in that field—from the time you have been with them?

A. Yes.

Q. Is your business exclusively the manufacture of safes and vaults?

A. Exclusively, yes, sir; that is, bank vaults and deposit boxes; everything that appertains to a bank outfit, in the steel and structural part of it.

Q. Are you acquainted with Mr. Connor?

A. I am, sir.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Connor?

A. I could not specify the number of years. I guess I have known him ever since he has been on the street.

2399 Q. Did you know him prior to the time that he represented the Union Pacific?

A. Prior to the time he represented the Union Pacific?

Q. Yes; when he represented only the Southern Pacific.

A. I did, sir.

Q. You knew him then, did you?

A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember when the Union Pacific had a separate agency here?

A. I do, sir.

Q. Was your business solicited by Mr. Connor?

A. Not personally. I do not remember of——

Q. Well, by his agency?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And also by the Union Pacific agency?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way did Mr. Connor's agency, when he represented only the Southern Pacific, endeavor to route traffic to the coast?

A. By the Southern gateway; New Orleans.

Q. And the Union Pacific, by the Missouri River gateway?

A. Sure.

Q. How was the competition between these two companies at that time; was it active or otherwise?

A. It was very active.

Q. Did other lines also solicit your business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which other transcontinental lines?

A. The Santa Fe.

Q. Since the amalgamation of the offices here under Mr. Connor, have they called upon you for business?

A. His representative has.

Q. That is what I mean—his representative.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does he express any preference as between the two routes?

2400 A. I think he has in one or two instances: he asked for the shipment via New Orleans.

Q. Was there some special reason for that, do you know?

A. Well, to get the long haul. That is the only reason I would know of.

Q. Do you remember on any other occasions that he has expressed any preference one way or the other?

A. No. It is quite natural that a representative wants to get the longest haul possible. I could not specify just what case, but I know that he has expressed a preference. Of course if he cannot get it that way he would take it the other.

Q. Do you remember whether that was since the offices have been consolidated?

A. Oh, yes, recently.

Q. Oh, recently?

A. Prior to the consolidation, I wish to state that we did very little shipping by the Southern gateway; in fact, I do not think that we gave the Southern Pacific anything unless it was routed that way by the purchasers.

Q. But they were after it?

A. Oh, yes; they solicited the business. Also their intermediate lines—the L. & N., and lines leading from Hamilton, south.

Q. How does most of your business go to the coast?

A. The most of it goes the northern gateway—that is, the Missouri River route.

Q. Which way?

A. The Missouri River, or through the Chicago gateway.

Q. Do you ship by the Union Pacific?

A. Do we ship?

Q. Yes.

Mr. LOVETT. The gateways, he said. He did not say via the Missouri River.

Q. Oh, the Missouri River gateways?

A. Yes.

2401 Q. That is what confused me. I did not catch it. Most of it goes by the Missouri River gateways?

A. Yes.

Q. And how do you ship to Portland?

A. At the present time?

Q. Yes.

A. We ship over the Iowa Central now, and the Minneapolis & St. Louis, and the Great Northern, and the Seattle, Portland & Spokane—that is a new route recently opened.

Q. That is what is called the North Bank route?

A. I don't know what it is called.

Q. That is the new line.

A. Prior to that we used to ship by the Chicago & North-Western and the Union Pacific, and often over the Northern Pacific, but principally over the Union Pacific.

Q. Did you know Mr. Liston?

A. I do, sir.

Q. Before the amalgamation of these offices, which company did he represent?

A. The Union Pacific.

Q. Did he use to call on you for business?

A. He does yet.

Q. He does yet?

A. He is the only gentleman that does call.

Q. But before that he represented the Union Pacific, while Mr. Connor represented the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. Now Mr. Liston, with Mr. Connor, represents them both?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT. What was that last answer?

The following answer was read by the reporter:

"He is the only gentleman that does call."

WITNESS. I mean of that line.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

2402 Q. You are actively solicited by representatives of all the lines, are you?

A. Of all the lines, yes, sir.

Q. For your California business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe you testified that you have been actively solicited by lines leading from your plant to New Orleans?

A. By the intermediate lines, yes, sir.

Q. Such as the Louisville & Nashville and Illinois Central?

A. And the Illinois Central.
Q. And the Queen & Crescent?
A. Q. & C.
Q. And their connections?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. That is true also of the lines leading toward El Paso, I presume?
A. Well, not so much.
Q. The Rock Island and the Missouri Pacific?
A. Yes, the Rock Island and the Missouri Pacific.
Q. The Missouri, Kansas & Texas?
A. The M. K. & T. never entered into the competition much, but the Chicago gateway lines did, and the Chicago & North-Western, and the Burlington.
Q. The Atchison?
A. The Atchison.
Q. The Burlington and Rock Island?
A. All of these lines have representatives.
Q. The Denver & Rio Grande?
A. Well, the Denver & Rio Grande has not anybody here that calls on us; but they work in connection with the Missouri Pacific. Their representatives, of course, solicit that freight.
Q. Such shipments as your company made to the Pacific coast south of Portland, over the Union Pacific, always passed over the Southern Pacific west of Ogden, did they not, Mr. Mayer?
A. Oh, yes.
Q. It was the only outlet prior to the opening of the San Pedro line?
A. At that time, yes, sir.
2403 Q. You never attempted to ship to California by way of Portland and boat down, did you?
A. No, sir; never shipped anything by water—that is, in this country.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Do your goods require any particular size or kind of cars?
A. Yes, at times. That is, the large safes, or large vestibules, such as are used in banks, require an extra high and wide door.
Q. Is the movement of traffic sometimes affected by the ability of one road or another to furnish a particular kind of equipment?
A. Oh, yes. There are some roads that have not large equipment; they have to borrow it, or steal it, as they call it, and use it.
Q. In working for your business is that one element that the solicitors offer, or one thing they endeavor to do—to secure for you particular kinds of equipment when you need them?
A. Oh, I do not think they hold out that inducement. Of course we are located principally on the Pennsylvania tracks, and we look to the initial line to keep us furnished. I do not know where they get their equipment, but there may be times when some of these soliciting gentlemen come around and they know that we are going to give them a shipment, and they have a car in Cincinnati, and they will ship it up there to save using the local car—save that mileage. They may say "We have got a car down in Cincinnati just to suit this shipment, and we will run it up to you."

Q. That is what I want to get at.—A. Yes; they do that.

2404 Q. They do that at times to secure business?—A. They do that, yes, sir.

2405 PAUL NICHOLS,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly called, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Nichols?—A. Hamilton, Ohio.

Q. What is your business?—A. Traffiic manager for the Long & Allstatter Company.

Q. What is the business of that company?—A. Manufacturers of power punchers and shears, and agricultural implements.

Q. Is that a large company? Does it do a large business?—A. Yes, I should say so.

Q. To what parts of the country do their products go?—A. We do not have very much western business. Mostly Eastern States, Southern States and Central States.

Q. Do you ship some to the coast?—A. We ship occasionally to the Mare Island Navy Yard, and western railroad shops.

Q. That is, California railroad shops; shops in California?—A. No; not that far out.

Q. So your coast shipments are not very important?—A. Well, we do not have very many of them.

Q. That is what I mean; you have not very many of them. Do you known Mr. Connor and Mr. Liston?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do they ever call on you and solicit coast shipments?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Via what line?—A. They do not have any preference. If we want to give them the business, we can send it whichever way 2406 we want.

Q. That is, over either of their lines?—A. Either via New Orleans or via the western route.

Q. Have you any of their business cards?—A. Yes, sir.

Witness hands two cards to Mr. Severance, which were marked "Complainant's Exhibit 115 (Nichols)" and "Complainant's Exhibit 116 (Nichols)."

Q. I show you Complainant's Exhibit 115: Is that Mr. Connor's business card?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Complainant's Exhibit 116: Is that Mr. Liston's business card?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I will offer Complainant's Exhibits 115 and 116 in evidence, and particularly include the map on the back of Petitioner's Exhibit 116, which shows the San Pedro route with the rest of your system.

Mr. LOVETT. No objection.

Said Complainant's Exhibits 115 (Nichols) and 116 (Nichols) are as follows:

2407 COMPLAINANT'S EXHIBIT 115. (Nichols.)

W. H. CONNOR,
General Agent,
Union Pacific R. R.
Oregon Short Line R. R.
Oregon Railroad & Navigation Co.
Southern Pacific Company.
53 East Fourth Street,
Cincinnati, Ohio.

COMPLAINANT'S EXHIBIT 116. (Nichols.)

LYON LISTON,
Traveling Freight Agent,
Union Pacific R. R.
Oregon Short Line R. R.
Oregon Railroad & Navigation Co.
Southern Pacific Co.
53 East Fourth Street,
Cincinnati, Ohio.

On the reverse side of Complainant's Exhibit 116 is the following map:

2408 Q. You were not traffic manager of that company, were you, Mr. Nichols, at the time that Mr. Connor and the Union Pacific had separate agencies here?—A. No, sir.

Q. What is your opinion as to the usefulness of freight soliciters to shippers, in your experience?—A. Well, they can assist you in getting your stuff through; furnish you special equipment, quote you rates; things along that line.

Q. You think they are useful to shippers, then?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And by reason of being useful to shippers they are able to get business for their lines?—A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Both Mr. Connor and Mr. Liston have served your purpose, so far as solicitors are concerned, for both the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, have they not, Mr. Nichols?

A. Well, as long as I have known them they have represented both lines. That has been eight years or so.

2409 HARRY C. SMITH,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Smith, where do you live?

A. Hyde Park, Cincinnati.

Q. What is your business, Mr. Smith?

A. I am in the mill and factory supply business.

Q. How long have you been in that business?

A. About four or four and a half years.

Q. Were you ever in the railroad business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you begin, and with what company, and state fully your railroad experience—that is, with the companies with which you were engaged.

A. Well, sir, I have always figured it out, since I left the railroad business, that all the time I spent in the railroad business was that much time wasted, and necessarily and consequently I am trying to forget. I commenced with the old Dayton Short Line, as a messenger, when it first entered Cincinnati, in 1872, May 1st. I worked through different positions with that company until I became bill clerk—local bill clerk—and my health failed and I went east to my relatives for a year and a half, and I came back here and took the same position that I left, and staid about three or four months, if I remember correctly, and was then made chief clerk of the C. H. & D. I was with the C. H. & D. three years. From that I went to the Union Pacific.

2410 Q. What year did you go with the Union Pacific?

A. That I really cannot remember, what year it was.

Q. Can you give us within——

A. It was somewhere about 1884, I think.

Q. How long did you continue with them?

A. I continued with the Union Pacific up to about nine years ago, I think it was.

Q. About nine years ago; that would be about the year 1900, then?

A. Somewhere along there. Then after I left the Union Pacific—they consolidated the offices here and let me out—I then went with the Big Four in Chicago as traveling freight agent; and then they sent me back to Cincinnati to open up the office of the Lake Shore, Lehigh Valley Fast Freight Route. That was my last railroad experience, when I resigned to go into business.

Q. What were your positions with the Union Pacific during the fifteen years?

A. Traveling freight and passenger agent.

Q. And you were with them, you say, from about 1884 to about 1900—about sixteen years?

A. Something like that, yes sir.

Q. As traveling freight and passenger agent what were your duties, Mr. Smith?

A. I traveled around through Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, part of Pennsylvania, and West Virginia, soliciting from shippers business destined to points on the Union Pacific road west of the Missouri River, of course.

Q. Including transcontinental traffic to the coast?

A. Oh, yes, yes; coast business.

2411 Q. You said that you were traveling freight and passenger agent?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you have to do in the way of passenger business?

A. Well, to tell the truth, I did very little.

Q. Your business was chiefly freight?

A. I never took much stock in the passenger business.

Q. Your work was getting freight?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From what classes of shippers, if there were any special classes, did you solicit shipments?

A. All classes.

Q. During those years, from 1884 to 1900, did the Southern Pacific have an agency here?

A. When I first went with the Union Pacific there were only three or four representatives of western lines in this city at that time. I really do not remember now whether the Southern Pacific had an office here, or whether there was some representative from Chicago came down here.

Q. For a good many years they had one, had they not?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Do you know Mr. Connor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he have a predecessor in his position as agent of the Southern Pacific here, or was he the first one?

A. Well, I have forgotten: it has been so long ago.

Q. He was the agent of the Southern Pacific for a number of years previous to the time that the offices were consolidated, was he not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And during that time you were working for the Union Pacific?

A. For the Union Pacific, and also the Central Pacific branch of the Southern Pacific via Ogden.

2412 Q. That is, you worked the business to go over the Union Pacific through to California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And moved over the Central Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there competition at that time between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific for transcontinental business?

A. Also the Santa Fe, too.

Q. I was going to ask you about that in a moment; but I ask you first between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what way did the Southern Pacific agency here endeavor to move the transcontinental business?

A. It was via New Orleans or El Paso.

Q. How did you endeavor to move it?

A. We endeavored to move it either via St. Louis, Kansas City, Chicago and Omaha via——

Q. Via the Union Pacific?

A. Via the Union Pacific, yes, sir.

Q. To what points on the Pacific Coast did this competition between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific extend; what terminal points on the coast?

A. There was San Francisco, Sacramento, Los Angeles, San Bernardino, and——

Q. How far north?

A. The Southern Pacific was not interested, or rather, we never ran into any competition to speak of, that I really can recall, on Portland or Tacoma or Seattle business. That was generally St. Paul competition—Northern Pacific.

Q. The business into Portland, you say, was competed for against you by the Northern Pacific and Great Northern?

A. Well, the Northern Pacific, first, and the Great Northern afterwards, yes, sir.

2413 Q. Did the Southern Pacific Company, or their agency here, work for business to California points by way of Ogden?

A. They did when they could not get it around via the other two routes.

Q. But their first endeavor was to get it via New Orleans, was it?

A. Naturally.

Q. How was that competition between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific as to being active or otherwise?

A. It was active between all lines. The Southern Pacific, the Santa Fe, the Rock Island, the C. M. & St. P. and the North-Western were all soliciting business in connection with lines via Denver, Salt Lake, El Paso and New Orleans.

Q. You said that the Southern Pacific were endeavoring to work their business by New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If they could?

A. If they could.

Q. How was the competition as between the Southern Pacific agency, which was trying to work the business via New Orleans, and your agency, which was trying to work it via Omaha? Was it active or not?

A. Oh, yes; quite active.

Q. Do you remember of any rate wars during those days?

A. I remember one very distinctly.

Q. About when was it?

A. That I could not tell you. I have no data to go by. All I can say is that we had a minimum of fifty cents from Chicago or the Mississippi river, I believe it was, to work on; and that is all I do remember about it.

Q. You had a minimum of fifty cents what?

2414 A. Fifty cents a hundred on anything and everything, almost, we would take.

Q. To the coast?

A. To San Francisco.

Q. Yes; that is what I mean—to San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Q. That was given you by the Union Pacific?

A. That was before the time the Interstate Commerce law was enacted.

Q. I understand. That is the time when everybody was out scrapping for business at any price they could get?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the Sunset Route participate in that war?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What are the elements that enter into effective competition, Mr. Smith, when rates are maintained?

A. Do you mean at the present time?

Q. Yes; or at any time when rates are maintained. Take the coast rates: They are all the same over the different lines. What are the elements that enter into competition for business, in that situation?

A. I can only speak from my standpoint, when there were no cut rates, as you call it. Personality enters a great deal into it; acquaintanceship with the shippers.

Q. What about the furnishing of equipment?

A. There was a time when the Union Pacific, when I represented them, had the first large furniture car on the western lines; and it was not a case of asking for business; it was a case of furnishing cars. They would send word to you if you would furnish cars they would give you business. I have traveled around. For instance, at Columbus, Ohio, I would go there and would not ask for busi-

2415 ness, but different shipping clerks would say, I will give you a car the last of the week, or two cars this week, and I have got three or four cars for you next week. We always kept a number of cars in the Columbus yards on the different lines. Meanwhile the other lines got busy, and the Rock Island, I think it was, came out with a one-foot larger car, and it was strange how soon they dropped the Union Pacific cars.

Q. Then the building of those big cars enabled you to get a lot of business?

A. Oh, yes. Then we had to get out a larger car. I think they have got them up to about fifty feet or more now. I don't know how large they are, since I have been out of it.

Q. Then that is one way to compete, is it—furnish satisfactory equipment?

A. Well, we were up against a tough proposition on account of the tunnels on the Central Pacific. We could only build so high or so wide.

Q. That was a case where the Southern Pacific did block the Union Pacific?

A. That was where they used to get ahead of us.

Q. But you built them as big as the tunnels would stand, did you?

A. Within a quarter of an inch of scraping the side walls, I guess.

Q. What work do solicitors do in order to get business, outside of endeavoring to procure satisfactory equipment?

A. Well, I used to travel around and try to make myself agreeable to all the shippers, and generally give them a little hot air about making a little better time than any other line.

Q. That is usual, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir. That is one of the tricks, I guess.

2416 Q. Did you work tracing cars, looking up claims, and that sort of thing, for the shippers?

A. No, no, I did not have anything to do with that.

Q. You did not do that?

A. Any claims referred to our office were immediately gotten in shape and then sent to the general office.

Q. Did those two lines, when they were in competition, do any advertising to get passenger business?

A. Oh, yes, yes.

Q. Which line did the Southern Pacific advertise—the Sunset Route or the Ogden Route?

A. They advertised principally through tourist sleeping cars from Cincinnati, if I remember correctly.

Q. Which way?

A. Via Cincinnati Southern, I think it was.

Q. To New Orleans?

A. To New Orleans; via New Orleans. We would advertise the same equipment from Chicago.

Q. By the Union Pacific?

A. In connection with the Northwestern.

COPY BOUND

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You say you advertised the same equipment from Chicago, Mr. Smith?

A. The tourist sleepers.

Q. That is, over the North-Western, the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

A. The Central Pacific, yes, sir.

Q. You mean the line west of Ogden to the Pacific coast controlled by the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Southern Pacific also advertised the Ogden route
2417 generally, did it not, as well as the Sunset Route, in its advertising matter?

A. I can not recall those features. It may be possible that they did.

Q. You are not certain as to that?

A. I am not certain; no, sir.

Q. You do not happen to remember that they advertised very extensively the three routes—the Sunset, the Ogden and the Shasta? Do you recollect that from their advertising matter?

A. Oh, I remember the Shasta route has been advertised. The only way that I can recall, I call to my mind the Southern Pacific advertising via New Orleans. I believe practically the same advertisement has been in the papers in late years since I left the railroad business. I have seen it time and time again.

Q. It has continued much the same?

A. Yes.

Q. I believe you testified that your solicitation was for the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific line by way of Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And so far as California business is concerned, you could not get business for the Union Pacific without also getting it for the Southern Pacific, could you?

A. I had to get it that way. There was no other way to get it there.

Q. You had to get it for the Southern Pacific as well as for the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe you also testified that when the separate solicitors of the Southern Pacific could not get the freight either by New Orleans or El Paso, they would get it by Ogden, if they could?

2418 A. Yes. I have worked with them myself in that connection.

Q. This territory in which you solicited was very actively solicited by all the lines, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For the California business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The lines extending toward New Orleans, and then the lines extending southwesterly toward El Paso, and then the lines westerly to a connection with the Southern Pacific, or with the Atchison, in the west?

ND CLOSE IN CENTER

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is so still, is it not?

A. It is only a presumption on my part. I have been out of it for so many years that I have paid no attention to what they are doing now.

Q. This rate war that you spoke about that occurred many years ago—was not that about 1886, when the Atchison first opened its line to the Pacific coast?

A. The Atchison was mixed up in it, I know.

Q. It was really the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific and their connections as against the Atchison, was it not, for California business.

A. Then it also had—I believe the same would apply via the Northern Pacific by St. Paul.

Q. By St. Paul?

A. Yes.

Q. The Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific were working together at that time in connection with this rate war, were they not?

A. Yes, sir; that is, via Ogden.

Q. You never solicited any business for California points by way of Portland and then down by boat, did you, Mr. Smith?

A. No, sir; I never did.

Q. You never knew of any to move that way, did you?

A. Not from this territory.

2419 Q. Or from any territory, do you know?

A. That I could not say.

Q. I am only asking you of your own knowledge. You don't know any of your own knowledge?

A. No, sir.

2420 J. L. BLAIR,

called on behalf of the Complainant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Blair?

A. Hamilton, Ohio.

Q. And what is your business?

A. I am secretary of the Niles Tool Works Company.

Q. What is the character of the product manufactured by that company?

A. Manufacture machine tools; heavy machinery.

Q. Is it a large concern?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. One of the largest concerns of that kind in the country, is it not?

A. Yes, sir; it is said to be the largest.
Q. To what part of the country do you ship your product?
A. To all parts of the United States.
Q. Including the Pacific Coast?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What, if anything, have you to do with the routing of the traffic of that company, Mr. Blair?
A. I have charge of the traffic.
Q. How long have you had charge of the traffic?
A. For about twelve years.
Q. Are you acquainted with Mr. Connor?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long have you known him?
A. I could not say as to that; but I have known him ever since he has been the representative of the Southern Pacific.
Q. And you knew him before he was joint agent of the two companies?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you remember when the Union Pacific had a separate 2421 agent here?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was his name?
A. Mr. Welch, I believe, was the agent at that time.
Q. You knew him, did you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you know Mr. Liston?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And Mr. Smith?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Previous to the time the agencies of these two lines were amalgamated was there competition for Pacific Coast business between the two?
A. Yes, there was.
Q. Was that active or otherwise?
A. It was active.
Q. And which way did Mr. Connor and his subordinates attempt to route traffic to the Coast?
A. By way of New Orleans.
Q. And Mr. Welch and his subordinates?
A. By way of Omaha and the Union Pacific.
Q. Which way did you ship in those days?
A. We shipped both ways.
Q. Both ways?
A. Both ways.
Q. Divided your business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you still divide it?
A. Yes, sir; we try to divide it.
Q. Do you ship anything via New Orleans now?

A. I do not recall that we have for a long time.

Q. In the days when this competition existed did you ship that way?

A. We did.

Q. Do Mr. Connor or his assistants call on you now and solicit business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way, if either, do they try to work it now—as between these two routes, I mean.

2422 A. I do not think they express any particular preference as between the two.

Q. What way does your business principally move to the Coast at the present time? Take the California terminals first.

A. I think the greater part of our business that has gone to the Coast has gone by way of Omaha—Union Pacific, and Ogden—Southern Pacific.

Q. What other lines take any of it? Does the Santa Fe take any of it?

A. The Santa Fe.

Q. Do you ship to the north coast, to Portland, Tacoma, and Seattle?

A. Some; not a great deal.

Q. What routes does your Portland business take?

A. Usually the Northern Pacific or Great Northern.

Q. Not usually by the Union Pacific?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever know of traffic moving to California points by way of the Canadian Pacific and boat from Vancouver, when there was a differential that way?

A. I think we made one shipment some years ago to the Mare Island Navy Yard. I do not recall the date, though. I know we did make a shipment once.

Q. There was a differential in favor of that route, was there not?

A. As I remember there was a differential of ten cents a hundred.

Q. What do you think as to the usefulness to railroads of these freight solicitors and commercial agencies for getting business?

A. I believe they are a very useful adjunct to a railroad. They do the railroads a great deal of good in soliciting their business; and they also do the shippers some good.

2423 Q. By "useful adjuncts to railroads" you mean they secure business for the railroads?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say they are useful to the shippers. In what way are they useful to the shippers?

A. By way of looking after shipments after they are started; tracing them; hurrying them forward to their destination; reporting arrivals.

Q. And in that way they secure the good will of the shipper and get further shipments, do they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Assuming the rates are equal, what are the principal elements that enter into the competition for business between lines?

A. I think it is a good deal the personality of the solicitor.

Q. Does the matter of service and equipment enter into it?

A. To some extent, yes.

Q. How are your shipments usually—carload or L. C. L.?

A. Usually carload; in fact almost all carloads; very few less than carloads.

Q. But the shipments are not of a character that require any special kind of equipment, are they?

A. Not often.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Your business for the Pacific Coast is solicited by a great many lines, is it not, Mr. Blair?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is your plant located?

A. Hamilton, Ohio.

Q. It is solicited by the lines leading toward New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Such as the Queen & Crescent, Louisville & Nashville,
2424 and the Illinois Central?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then via the Missouri Pacific and other lines leading to the southwest?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then by the Rock Island and Burlington and the Missouri Pacific and the other large lines leading westerly, as well as the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir. The greater part of our shipments to the Coast is routed by the consignees, or the buyers. In the majority of cases we have no option as to the routing.

Q. The most of your business on the Pacific Coast is to railroad shops, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is routed by the consignees?

A. By the purchaser, yes, sir.

Q. The shorter and more direct line is westerly, is it not—that is, as against New Orleans?

A. I think so.

Q. Such business as the representatives of the Union Pacific secured when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate solicitors for California, went over the Southern Pacific as well as the Union Pacific, did it not? That is to say, over the Union Pacific to Ogden and then over the Southern Pacific from Ogden to the Pacific Coast?

A. Yes, sir, I think so.

Q. That was the only outlet for the Union Pacific, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never shipped anything to California by way of Portland and then by boat from Portland down, did you?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. You never knew of a shipment to go that way, did you?

2425 A. No, sir.

Q. You never shipped any business for Portland by the way of New Orleans, or El Paso, either, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. I think you said you recalled one shipment to San Francisco some years ago to the Mare Island Navy Yard?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By the Canadian Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was a government shipment, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the practice of the government, generally, is it not—to patronize foreign lines wherever it gets a chance?

A. No; the government had nothing to do with that part of it. It was up to the contractors to make delivery to the navy yard.

Q. Up to the contractors?

A. Yes, sir. We were the contractors. In that particular case I remember there was an attempt to investigate it in Congress, but it fell flat.

Q. When did that occur, Mr. Blair?

A. I do not recall the date. Oh, it must have been early in the nineties; I do not recall just when, though; probably 1896 or 1897.

Q. Prior to 1901?

A. Prior to 1901, yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how long that differential was maintained by the Canadian Pacific?

A. No, I do not remember.

Q. Your knowledge was called to it, I suppose, only by this single transaction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do not know that that differential was subsequently withdrawn as the result of an arbitration?

A. No; but I think it was. I think it is not in effect now.

2426 Q. When the Southern Pacific solicitors, before the agencies were consolidated, solicited preferentially by way of New Orleans and El Paso, suppose they could not get it that way, didn't they try to have it sent by way of Ogden?

A. Yes, I think they did, although I do not recall any particular cases to that effect.

Q. You do not recall any particular instances?

A. No, sir.

Q. That would be the natural thing for them to do, would it not?

A. Of course, yes.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE.

Q. Mr. Blair, you stated in answer to Judge Lovett that your principal shipments to the Coast were to the railroad shops. At what points are these shops located?

A. There are shops in San Francisco, Sacramento and Los Angeles.

Q. And you say that those shipments are routed by the consignee?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By the railroad company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The shops at Sacramento are Southern Pacific shops, are they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the shops at San Francisco are what? Southern Pacific or Santa Fe?

Mr. LOVETT. Perhaps they are both.

Q. Or both?

A. I could not say now.

Q. Take Sacramento, for instance: The shops there are Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

2427 Q. There is no doubt about that, is there?

A. No, sir.

Q. It is the only line there?

A. Yes; that is right.

Q. Over what route does the Southern Pacific direct you to ship to Sacramento?

A. I could not answer that question definitely without referring to some orders we have had. I do not recall any particular cases, but I know we have had shipments there, but I could not recall the particular routing on any particular shipments.

Q. Do you ship anything via New Orleans now?

A. I do not think we do.

Q. Anything that goes by the Union or Southern Pacific, do you not ship it all by the Union Pacific?

A. I think we do.

Q. So that the Southern Pacific shipments to Sacramento do not go over the Southern Pacific to New Orleans, but they go over the Union Pacific from Omaha, and then over the Southern Pacific from Ogden?

A. I could not answer that positively, but my impression is that they do.

Q. What shops are there in Los Angeles?

A. I do not recall now what railroad shops are there.

Q. You can not remember?

A. No, sir.

An adjournment was then taken until the morning of Wednesday, February 10, 1909, at 10.30 o'clock, at the same place.

2428 ROOM 322, FEDERAL BUILDING, CINCINNATI, O.,
Wednesday, February 10, 1909, 10.30 A. M.

The hearing was resumed pursuant to adjournment, before the Special Examiner, Hon. Sylvester G. Williams, at the above time and place.

Present: On behalf of the Complainant: Mr. C. A. Severance, Mr. G. E. Husted. On behalf of the Defendants: Mr. R. S. Lovett.

A. P. GOTHLIN,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Gothlin, where do you live?
A. Columbus, at the present time.
Q. What is your present business?
A. I am a member of the Railroad Commission of Ohio.
Q. How long have you been a railroad commissioner?
A. Since August 1, 1906.
Q. How many members are there of the Railroad Commission of Ohio?
A. Three.
Q. How are they appointed, or elected?
A. They are appointed by the Governor.
Q. For how long a term?
A. Six years.
Q. You have been in since August 1, 1906?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Previous to that time what was your business?
2429 A. I was traffic manager for the National Cash Register Company of Dayton, Ohio.
Q. How long were you traffic manager of the National Cash Register Company?
A. From August, 1898, to August, 1906.
Q. Previous to August, 1898, when you became traffic manager of the National Cash Register Company, what was your business?
A. For nine years I had been general agent of the Wisconsin Central Railway, at Cincinnati: four years of that time I was general agent of the Northern Pacific and Wisconsin Central jointly, and the last four years of that time I was with the Wisconsin Central alone.
Q. At the time when you were the general agent of the Wisconsin Central and the Northern Pacific, that was the time when the Northern Pacific had a lease of the Wisconsin Central?
A. Yes, sir: from 1889 to 1893.
Q. Previous to your engagement by the Wisconsin Central, what was your business?

A. I was with the Wisconsin Central, in Pittsburg, from 1886 to 1889; and prior to that, from 1883 to 1886, I was traveling freight agent for the Chicago & North-Western.

Q. What was your position with the Wisconsin Central at Pittsburg?

A. General agent; freight department.

Q. And at Cincinnati did your jurisdiction extend over both freight and passenger, or only freight?

A. Well, for a very short period in 1897, or 1896, I had jurisdiction over both; but for the most of the time it was over freight only.

Q. To what parts of the United States did the National 2430 Cash Register Company ship its product?

A. They shipped all over the United States, Canada, Mexico; in fact all over the world.

Q. Also all over the world?

A. Practically so, yes, sir.

Q. Did you have a large business on the Pacific coast?

A. Quite a large business, to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Q. Where did you say their factory is? Dayton.

A. Dayton, Ohio.

Q. How did the bulk of the business of the National Cash Register Company move to the Pacific coast, say from 1898 on, when you were with them?

A. During the time that I was connected with the Cash Register, the most of their 'Frisco business went via New Orleans and the Southern Pacific. Occasionally, for a short period it would go by Omaha; but usually that way. The Los Angeles business usually went by the Santa Fe.

Q. Were you acquainted with the Southern Pacific representatives in this territory?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the Southern Pacific representative; that is, who was in charge at the time you went with the National Cash Register Company?

A. Mr. Connor.

Q. And he continued to be, did he not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was representing the Union Pacific here at that time?

A. I think, if I remember correctly, that when I first went there in 1898, Harry Smith was practically representing them—Mr. Welsh, the nominal representative, being incapacitated by sickness for several years before he retired. Shortly after that, if I remember correctly, when Mr. Welsh was superseded, Smith left very soon 2431 after that and Mr. Liston took charge. I think there was another man in between for a short period, but I do not recall him.

Q. What was the fact as to whether the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific were competing with each other for coast business prior to 1901?

A. I never had any doubt as to that. That was always my impression, judging from my interviews with their representatives.

Q. Did the Union Pacific agents, and the Southern Pacific agents, both call on you and solicit business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way did the Southern Pacific agents endeavor to route the traffic?

A. Its preference was by New Orleans.

Q. And the Union Pacific?

A. By Omaha, or Kansas City.

Q. You said that the bulk of your business to San Francisco moved by New Orleans. Was there any special reason for that?

A. Well, there were several reasons. One was, in my experience, that we generally got better service for less than carload freight. Ours was less than carload freight. For a large part of the time there was a package car from Cincinnati through to San Francisco—I do not just recall how long that was on, but for quite a long time—which was an advantage for less than carload shipments.

Q. Just explain what a package car is, Mr. Gothlin.

A. The Southern Pacific, in connection with the Q. & C., ran one or more cars daily loaded with less than carload freight through from Cincinnati to 'Frisco, via New Orleans. That was one of the arguments, and a very good argument, used by the Southern Pacific for securing less than carload freight for San Francisco.

2432 Q. How frequently did the National Cash Register Company ship to San Francisco?

A. Practically daily. The shipments were of various sizes. Their shipments were not large in themselves, but in the aggregate they amounted to quite a good deal.

Q. Were there other reasons for giving the business to the Southern Pacific, aside from the fact that they had this package car?

A. Yes, sir. I was personally acquainted with Mr. Connor; I had known him for a number of years. Furthermore, he rendered myself and the company I was working for favors, on several occasions, which were perfectly legitimate, and yet they were favors which we recognized.

Q. Mr. Gothlin, you have said that for a long time you were general agent of the Wisconsin Central and the Northern Pacific, and for a while traveling agent of the Chicago & Northwestern?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your opinion as to the value to railroad companies situated as these transcontinental lines are of local representatives occupying positions such as Mr. Connor occupies?

A. The value to the railroad?

Q. Yes. In getting business.

A. Well, when I was representing the western railroad, I was of the opinion that I was of considerable value to them; and I have not changed that opinion very much. They bring the railroad in direct contact with the shipper. And I think I can speak with considerable experience, because, when I first started to travel in 2433 this territory, to have a western representative meet the eastern shippers direct was comparatively new, and we frequently found that many of the eastern shippers were unacquainted with the geography or the identity of the various western roads at all. They simply knew—for instance, a shipper at Springfield who wanted to ship to Omaha or San Francisco, he simply delivered it to the initial line. The western agents educated them to routing their business—that is, the earlier ones. After a while it became a habit.

Q. What services do these agents legitimately render to shippers, which are of value to the shippers and that aids them in getting business?

A. If a representative of a western line, or any line for that matter, looked after the interests of the individual shippers, at the same time looking after the interests of his own line as he should, he could be of great value to both. Now, in my own experience it was frequently possible for me to furnish equipment to shippers, and I think that is the experience of a great many of the western agents. They take upon themselves the burden of securing the equipment.

Q. Suppose that an agent is placed as you were—not the agent of the initial line, but of a western line: how would you go to work to get equipment in this territory?

A. At one time the road that I represented had furniture equipment—that is, suitable for bulky freight, such as buggies and furniture. Take the Big Four Railroad for example: I had an arrangement, and I think many of the other western agents also had, with
Mr. Cavanagh, superintendent of car service, to keep a certain 2434 number of those cars in Indianapolis, and on my order he would send them to Cincinnati or Columbus or any other place where we wished to load them, and have them there promptly, thus relieving the initial line agent of any bother or worry, and also the shipper, which was considered quite an advantage to the shipper. That was one way.

Q. And was that of assistance to you as an agent in securing business?

A. Undoubtedly, yes, sir; because if we got the car, we got the business. If we furnished the car and loaded our car, we got the business.

Q. I think in talking with you last night you spoke of some service you were able to perform for the potteries in Ohio, East Liverpool, which enabled you to get business.

A. The East Liverpool potteries are located at a non-competitive point on the Pennsylvania lines. They ship to all over the west practically. They were not particularly desirous for cut rates, but they liked to be in position to know what the rates were. Myself and one or two other western agents located in Pittsburg would prepare sheets showing all the western towns of any size, in alphabetical order, and the through rates made up by combining the Pennsylvania rates to Chicago or the river, as the case might be, plus the rates beyond, on the commodities in less than carload lots, so they would have those rates before them. They seemed to consider that quite an advantage, to be able to know that, and it secured for our lines quite a good deal of business. As new tariffs came out and changes were made, we would change those sheets. We kept them in the hands of the shippers all the time. And we did that for a good 2435 many other shippers through the country.

Q. And in that way secured business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think you also spoke about the service you were able to render the tobacco people in Louisville, in connection with shipments to Canada.

A. The National Tobacco Works of Louisville became one of my best patrons, and I first secured their business by being able to render them a service in this way: They shipped to Vancouver, and on export business were entitled to a refund of the revenue tax paid at Louisville. It seems that the government official at the boundary was rather lax, and they were frequently held up for many months getting the refund. I instituted a series of tracings by which I could advise them very promptly of the delivery to the passing of the boundary from the United States official, which would enable them to secure their refunds much more quickly than they had before. They seemed to consider that a favor and an advantage, and after that, for a number of years, without further solicitation at all, except tracing such business as they cared to have traced, I had their business steadily, which amounted to quite a good deal for our little road—250,000 pounds in one month, at less than carload—good paying freight; that is, tariff rates.

Q. That was when you were with what roads?

A. When I was with the Wisconsin Central, and when I was with the Wisconsin Central and Northern Pacific jointly. The same way at Middletown, Ohio. By tracing certain of their shipments and keeping them posted promptly, they considered that a sufficient 2436 favor—an advantage to them to know those things—to give me practically all of their competitive business in that territory, which amounted to a great deal.

Q. This business to Vancouver, which you spoke of—these shipments of tobacco for Canada, moved over the Wisconsin Central and Northern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To Tacoma or Seattle?

A. Yes, sir; and then was delivered to the Canadian authorities somewhere there. I think the Government delivery was made on the boat after it left Seattle. I am not sure how it was.

Q. It went up to Vancouver on the boat?

A. It left for Vancouver.

Q. I say it went up to Vancouver from the Sound port.

A. That is my memory, yes, sir.

Q. Now, those are examples of certain services that can be performed by soliciting agents, are they?

A. I think so, yes.

Q. That were performed by you?

A. There are many other ways. Mr. Connor, on several occasions when I was a shipper, rendered me favors that were perfectly legitimate. For instance, we had occasion to ship a carload of secondhand registers that had accumulated in San Francisco. There was no carload rate at that time in the western classification on cash registers. We could not afford to pay the class rate, which would have amounted to something like $1,000, or $1200. He secured the action by the Transcontinental Association, which made us a $300 rate—that is a dollar rate for 30,000 pounds (we did not have quite 30,000 pounds, but sufficient), and, knowing that he took the trouble to secure 2437 that from the Transcontinental Association, of course it was routed by the Southern Pacific Railway. Another time he secured me a very good rate to Australia. We were shipping via New York and were willing to pay a higher rate by 'Frisco, on account of the time we would save; and he secured action of the Transcontinental Association and secured that rate for us. On another occasion I wanted a commodity rate on a certain class of paper that we were shipping in quantities, and I have forgotten now whether he secured that or not, but my impression is that he did; at any rate, we recognized his efforts in that line and felt under obligations correspondingly.

Q. Having these instances that you have mentioned, and your experience generally in mind, it is your opinion, is it, that the location of commercial agencies in this eastern field, by transcontinental lines, is a valuable method of securing business for those lines?

A. I think so. I think they are also of value to the shippers; it enables them to have a friend at Court, so to speak.

Q. You say you continued with the National Cash Register Company until 1906?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, you were with them for several years after Mr. Connor became the joint agent of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. After that time did either Mr. Connor or his subordinates call on you in reference to securing business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they indicate any preference for one route to the coast over the other, when they represented both?

A. Well, to be frank, I never felt but what Mr. Connor per-
2438 sonally always stuck to his first love. I believe, from what I know of him, up until the last time I had dealings with him as a shipper, that he was always inclined towards the southern route. Mr. Liston, who was supposed to represent the Union Pacific, always made it clear to me that if the business were already moving by the Southern Pacific, he did not care to interfere; if, however, it was going by the Santa Fe he would like to have it by the Union Pacific.

Q. That is after the consolidation of the agencies, you mean?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, prior to the consolidation of these agencies, when the Union Pacific had a separate soliciting agency here, they worked exclusively, I suppose, for their own route?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And against all others, including the Sunset Route?

A. Prior to the consolidation the Union Pacific, of course, did not evince any indifference to the Southern route. They wanted to get it whether the Southern Pacific had it or not, to the best of my memory.

Q. Mr. Gothlin, do you know anything about any shipments to San Francisco by way of the Canadian Pacific to Vancouver and boat line from there?

A. I carried some wire from Pittsburg, myself, about 1889, if I remember correctly; I think it was from the Oliver Roberts Wire Company. I know I was rather surprised to get the business, but I got it.

Q. How large a shipment was it?

A. It was a very large shipment; I think as much as thirty or forty cars, if I remember correctly.

2439 Q. How did that move?

A. By Wisconsin Central, and, my memory is it went Great Northern to Winnepeg, and then Canadian Pacific, and then boat line from there down.

Q. Was there a differential at that time in favor of that route?

A. My memory is that there was a very small differential.

Q. And you worked in connection with the Canadian Pacific or Great Northern and got that freight?

A. That is my memory of it, yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember anything about an active competition between the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific and yourself for the shipment of a lighthouse from Mount Vernon to Astoria?

A. There was a lighthouse moved from Mount Vernon to Astoria in about 1889.

Q. Astoria is in Oregon?

A. Astoria, Oregon,—from the John Cooper Company. It moved via C. A. & C., Wisconsin Central and Northern Pacific. From the time that the shipment first became known to the traveling agents through the country until it moved, was quite a long period, five or six months; and, to the best of my memory, every western agent in the country was after it.

Q. Well, by "every western agent" you mean the representatives of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific among others?

A. My impression was that the Southern Pacific people were after it also at the same time.

Q. The Southern Pacific and Union?

A. Southern and Union and every intermediate line. As is 2440 usually the case when there is a large shipment—this was a large shipment you understand, and when large shipments were in prospect nearly every traveling agent in the country who could take the business was after it, of course.

Q. Do you remember anything about a competition over the shipment of a steel bridge from Massillon, Ohio, to a point in Oregon south of Portland?

A. Some time in the early '90's (I do not recall just exactly the date) the Massillon Bridge Company, I think it was, had a bridge for a point in Oregon south of Portland (just where I do not recall) for which I, among other agents, was competing, and it went by the Louisville & Nashville and the Southern Pacific. The reason it was called to my memory is the fact that Mr. Crutchfield, who was traveling for the Louisville & Nashville, after the movement, took frequent occasion thereafter to have a little fun at my expense, at my not knowing that he was my competitor before.

Q. Was the Union Pacific also trying to get that shipment?

A. My impression is that all the agents were at that time. They generally were. I could not say specifically of knowing of them going there for it.

Q. You spoke of Mr. Connor securing the making of some commodity rates for you by the Transcontinental Association. How are transcontinental rates ordinarily made?

A. Well, I have never attended a meeting of any of the Transcontinental Associations, but my understanding is that proposals for changes of rate of any kind are discussed and action taken at the meeting; afterwards they are published by the agent
2441 of the Transcontinental Association, who publishes the tariff.

Q. And those rates are the same by all routes?

A. Yes, sir; ordinarily. I think there have been times when perhaps to the north coast, Vancouver and points there. I think the rates sometimes are five cents above the straight rates, something of that sort; but they are all published rates.

Q. What is your opinion as to the influence that the Union Pacific, considered apart entirely from the Southern Pacific, would legitimately have in the fixing of transcontinental rates to California points, San Francisco, by reason of the possession of a through rail line to Portland, in connection with the boat line from there to San Francisco?

A. Well, I see no reason why, if the Union Pacific were a separate and distinct organization and had an active and vigorous management, they could not practically dictate to the Transcontinental Association any policy that they might see fit to adhere to strictly. That is, they could at least be in position not to be dictated to, not coerced into anything that they did not care to admit.

Q. As Railroad Commissioner of Ohio, do you have to do with the consideration of rates—does your Commission?

A. Intrastate rates.

Q. That is what I mean—local rates.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. That is a large part of your duty?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The questions of rates are tried out before your body as they are before the Interstate Commerce Commission, are they not?
2442 A. The same manner, but limited in scope. We are limited to the state.
Q. Yes: I understand—to local state rates.
A. Yes, sir. Practically the same.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Does the Ohio Commission exercise the power of rate-making, Mr. Gothlin?
A. Well, that depends upon what you mean by rate-making. We have not power, such as the Texas Commission has, to make blanket rates. We have power, upon complaint, to substitute a specific rate deemed unreasonable.
Q. You expressed the opinion, if I understood you correctly, that the Union Pacific, by reason of its control, or rather by reason of its ownership of the line from Omaha to Ogden, and its control of the Oregon Short Line and the O. R. & N., leading up to Portland, is in a position, if absolutely independent of other lines in the matter of ownership and control, to practically dictate to the transcontinental lines, or at least not to be dictated to by any transcontinental lines in the matter of transcontinental rates. Have you considered the relative situation of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific and the probable effect on the Union Pacific of a policy of that sort, Mr. Gothlin?
A. In what way?
Q. Well, you understand, do you not, that the Union Pacific line from Omaha to Ogden is practically a straight line across that portion of the continent, and that at Ogden it connects with 2443 the Central Pacific, controlled by the Southern Pacific, which is practically a continuation of the line to the Pacific Ocean?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And that the Union Pacific is an intermediate line, or link, in the system of transcontinental lines, about 1,000 miles in length, and that from Ogden to San Francisco (that is, Ogden being the western terminus of the Union Pacific proper) it is about 850 miles, and that from Ogden to Portland the distance is approximately 800 miles.
A. You mean by way of Sacramento?
Q. No; by way of the Oregon Short Line, and the O. R. & N.
A. Well, they would come back to Granger, then?
Q. No. From Ogden or from Granger, I don't care which.
Mr. SEVERANCE. It leaves from Granger.
Q. The Oregon Short Line connects with the Union Pacific at Granger?
A. Yes, sir; that is my understanding.

COPY BOUND

Q. And also at Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. And traffic moving to Portland could go either by way of Ogden or diverge from the Union Pacific main line at Granger. In either event, Portland is some 800 miles away from the Union Pacific line, and it is more than 800 miles from Portland to San Francisco, is it not?

Mr. STUBBS. About 777.

Q. Well, it is 850 miles from Ogden to San Francisco, and it is 775 or 800 miles from Portland to San Francisco, and approximately the same distance from Portland to Ogden, or a little greater to Granger. Now, from Portland the Union Pacific, in order to get to California, would have to use a boat line, would it not, in the 2444 case you have assumed, in order to reach from Portland to San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Suppose the Union Pacific should attempt to use that line by way of Portland, in carrying out the policy that you have suggested against the Southern Pacific, and assuming that the management is entirely separate and distinct, don't you think that the Union Pacific would suffer a great deal more than it would gain, inasmuch as the Southern Pacific would naturally retaliate by diverting from the Union Pacific at Ogden the traffic otherwise interchanged and giving that traffic to the Denver & Rio Grande? Don't you think, as a traffic proposition, that the Union Pacific would suffer by that policy very much more than it could possibly gain?

A. I never knew of a rate war in which both lines did not suffer the loss of revenue.

Q. Well, but from the loss of business, too?

A. I do not know just why it should lose business particularly if it made the rates that were satisfactory.

Q. Well, whatever rates it made, under the existing law, at least, it would have to make openly?

A. Oh, undoubtedly; undoubtedly.

Q. And you do not doubt but what the other line would meet those rates, do you?

A. Surely.

Q. And don't you think in view of the connection at Ogden, the natural connection there, that the Union Pacific would lose very much more business by the diversion of the Southern Pacific of the business to the Denver & Rio Grande than it could possibly gain by going by way of Portland?

A. I do not know that I quite follow you. But what would 2445 make them lose the business? From the eastern lines you mean, or from the east-bound business coming from California; is that it?

Q. Both ways. As it is now, the Union Pacific is the preferred connection of the Southern Pacific; they work together.

A. Yes, sir.

D CLOSE IN CENTER

Q. The Southern Pacific would naturally give its unrouted traffic to the Union Pacific—that is, in through rates. Now, if the Union Pacific were to attack the Southern Pacific in the manner that has been suggested, by way of Portland, the Southern Pacific is not dependent upon the Union Pacific at Ogden for an eastern connection—it could use the Denver & Rio Grande—and it would be perfectly natural, would it not, for the Southern Pacific to meet this move of the Union Pacific by diverting the traffic controlled by it to the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. I think that is quite possible.

Q. Well, is it not perfectly natural? You do not suppose that if the Union Pacific were to attack the Southern Pacific in that way, by attempting to use this Portland route, that the Southern Pacific would not retaliate, do you?

A. Please let me see if I understand you correctly and if we understand each other. If there were a question arising between the management of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific in the Transcontinental Association, which they could not agree upon, and determined to fight it out—is that what you mean?

2448 Q. I mean the case that you have assumed, where the Union Pacific would attempt to dictate to the transcontinental lines, by the use of the Portland route, whatever that may be. I am dealing with the case that you have assumed.

A. Well, this is what I had in mind, if you will allow me: assuming that the Union Pacific were entirely independent of any proprietorship of the Southern Pacific, and a question were to arise in the Transcontinental Association, in which the Union Pacific could not agree with the Southern Pacific—thinking, perhaps, that they were attempting to coerce, or something of that sort, I see no reason why, with the adequate ocean service from Portland, they could not put in from the east, from a large part of this territory, a service that would be equally, if not more, satisfactory to the shippers in this section of the country than via New Orleans; and if they kept the rates down to a point that the Southern Pacific did not care to go, they would naturally get that business.

Q. May I digress just a moment to ask if you ever knew of them to do that?

A. No, I did not. I do not know much about their carrying business for 'Frisco by Portland. I do not know about their having done it.

Q. Is it not true, Mr. Gothlin, that you never heard of the Union Pacific attempting to work the Portland route for California business?

A. I think that is true. I would not say absolutely that I never heard of it. I will say this: that I do not recall particularly ever having it called to my attention that they have done that. I never heard particularly of there being any great amount of scrapping between the lines in the Transcontinental Association either.

Q. Well now, to return to the proposition that we were 2447 discussing a moment ago. In that case, if the Union Pacific should, on account of differences in the Transcontinental Association or any other association, or for other reasons, use that Portland route for Southern Pacific business, or California business—don't you understand that the great bulk of the California business handled by the Union Pacific—practically all of it—is interchanged with the Southern Pacific at Ogden?

A. That is my understanding. That is their natural route to California.

Q. It always has been?

A. That is my understanding, yes.

Q. And it is the only outlet that the Union Pacific has ever had to California, except this possible outlet by way of Portland that you have never known them to use.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Except the Salt Lake route now.

Mr. LOVETT. I am speaking of the conditions existing before that.

A. That is my understanding. That would be the natural way.

Q. The difference between the situation of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific at that point is this, is it not—that the Union Pacific has no outlet for California except the Southern Pacific, whereas the Southern Pacific has the Denver & Rio Grande as an outlet for the east: and, coming back to the proposition that I stated just now, as a matter of plain common sense, as well as traffic theories, if the Union Pacific should attempt to use this Portland route in any controversy with the Southern Pacific, the Southern Pacific management, if controlled by the considerations that control other people, would divert all the traffic it could from the 2448 Union Pacific to the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. It is quite possible.

Q. Quite probable?

A. Quite probable I will say. That would be natural.

Q. Now, as against a line of that sort, that direct short rail line, don't you think that the Union Pacific would inevitably lose vastly more in that controversy by that diversion of traffic than it could possibly gain by the use of the route by way of Portland? Now you have some knowledge of traffic, of course. Would not that be your opinion?

A. My experience of rate wars is they are senseless anyway, and the management does not care how much they are losing. Their object is to hurt the other fellow. And undoubtedly the Union Pacific could inflict more damage upon the Southern Pacific, I believe, than it could possibly receive if the question were one that they felt justified extreme measures of that kind.

Q. Do you think that the Union Pacific could inflict more injury on the Southern Pacific in that controversy than it would receive by the diversion of the traffic from it?

A. I think the experience of rate wars will show that the smaller line can always hurt the larger line in a larger ratio than the damage to itself. The Southern Pacific, you know, has more interests than the line from Ogden to Frisco. They have the interests of the long haul line from New Orleans, and I do not have much doubt but that the Union Pacific could, if it saw fit to take drastic measures, arrange rates so that from this whole territory the New Orleans route would get scarcely anything.

D CLOSE IN CENTER

2449 Q. Do you think any intermediate line would do that?

A. I hardly think so; because the situation is a little different. To the Missouri River and Kansas City there are a great number of lines, and I do not believe there is any one of those relatively as strong as the Union Pacific. There are five connections at Omaha, I believe, and several at Kansas City, of the Union Pacific, and no one of those would be as strong in a matter of that kind as the Union Pacific would with its two lines from Kansas City and Council Bluffs.

Q. You think that in the matter of rate wars, such as you call that controversy, the Southern Pacific would suffer more than the Union Pacific because it has more at stake; is that the idea?

A. That is the idea. In the old days, before railroad managers saw the folly of it, when we used to have those extreme wars, the bigger the line the more it suffered.

Q. The Southern Pacific would not suffer more per mile of road than the Union Pacific, but it would suffer more in the aggregate?

A. No; their revenue is not in that proportion.

Q. How is that?

A. Their revenue is not per mile, either.

Q. It would suffer more in the aggregate, you think?

A. I think it would suffer more in the aggregate, yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Gothlin, assuming that the Southern Pacific does a very large business to and from California, which is interchanged with the Southern Pacific at Ogden, and the Southern Pacific should divert every pound of that business that it could control to the Denver & Rio Grande, and should cancel its through rates with the Union Pacific——

A. Which it could not do.

2450 Q. Why not?

A. Because the Interstate Commerce Commission would not allow it.

Q. Why, they have got another practicable route, according to your testimony, by way of Portland?

A. Which—the Union Pacific?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, undoubtedly. But I do not think for a minute that the Interstate Commerce Commission would allow the cancellation of rates and divisions by Ogden.

Q. You do not think they would. Why? Have they got the power if there is another practicable route?

A. Sir?

COPY BOUND

Q. If I understand the law of Congress, they have not got the power, if there is another practicable route—and you say that this Portland route, if I understand you, is a practicable route. So, in that case, the Southern Pacific would be at liberty to cancel the rate with the Union Pacific absolutely?

A. I do not know that I understand the legal situation as you put it. I do not profess to have the legal knowledge that you have, and I would not want to put my opinion against yours on a legal question.

Q. Let us take your view of it, Mr. Gothlin. Assume that they have not got the power to do it; you are aware, are you not, that the Supreme Court of the United States has held (and in the case of the Southern Pacific, too) that it has the right, as any carrier has, to control the routing of traffic beyond its own line?

A. I think that was true in regard to fruit.

Q. Yes.

A. It was a fruit case, was it not?

Q. Yes.

2151 A. Whether that is true with regard to all business, I am not sure. There are certain special conditions in regard to fruit, you know, cars and so forth.

Q. You do not know whether the decision of the Supreme Court turned on the character of the traffic or on account of the legal questions involved, do you, Mr. Gothlin?

A. I would not say as to that; but the impression I had was that the character of the traffic had some bearing on the decision.

Q. You do not understand, then, that the Supreme Court of the United States has decided that the carrier on which the traffic originates has the right to route that traffic in interstate shipments?

A. In every case?

Q. Generally, I will say.

A. Generally? I did not so understand it, no. And I know the practice has not been among railroads to refuse shippers the right to route, even since that decision.

Q. You understand that the right of the carrier is limited, then, simply in the case of oranges and other fruits?

A. I would understand that if a railroad should give a bill of lading to a given point at a given rate, being responsible therefor, that it ought to have the right to control the routing. But I understand further that the Interstate Commerce Commission has held to this in their conference rulings, in the matter of traffic made up on combination of locals; that if the shipper does not specify a routing, the initial line shall be responsible for sending by the route which makes the lowest combination; but their responsibility ceases if the shipper has specified a routing. Now, that would seem 2152 to indicate that the Interstate Commerce Commission themselves admit the right of a shipper to route.

Q. Yes. You understand also that they held that he had the right to route the oranges, too, don't you?

D CLOSE IN CENTER

A. Well, that was what brought the case, I guess.

Q. Yes. And the Supreme Court did not happen to agree with him.

A. They did not agree with him, no, sir. But these other rulings have been subsequent to that.

Q. Subsequent to the decision in the orange case?

A. Yes. However, Judge, I don't want to be considered here as assuming to have any legal knowledge in the matter.

Q. It is your understanding, then, Mr. Gothlin, that the Southern Pacific would not have the right to cancel the rates with the Union Pacific at Ogden if the Union Pacific were using the Portland route against it; and also that it would not have the right, even with those rates in, to control the routing of the traffic as against the Union Pacific; and your opinion as to the power of the Union Pacific, by virtue of this line to Portland, is based upon that understanding of the relative rights of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific; is that true?

A. That question is rather long and involved. Will you allow me to answer it in my own way?

Q. Yes, certainly.

A. As long as a published tariff shows more than one combination of routes, my opinion has always been that the shipper had the right to select those routes. For instance, if the Pennsylvania Railroad from Cincinnati should publish a tariff to St. Paul, and in 2453 that tariff were shown the Chicago & North-Western, the Burlington, the Great Western, the Wisconsin Central, and the others, all on a parity in the tariff, I have been under the impression that that very tariff would give the shipper, when delivering that shipment to the Pennsylvania, the right to dictate which of those routes he should take beyond—that they were all on a parity so far as the connecting line and the Pennsylvania were concerned.

Q. And your opinion that the Union Pacific could inflict more damage on the Southern Pacific that the Southern Pacific could inflict upon it, is based upon that understanding of the power?

A. Largely, yes sir; although, strictly speaking, I was thinking more particularly of the west-bound business than the east-bound.

Q. Of the west-bound business?

A. More particularly, yes, sir—which they would originate, so to speak; that is, business which would go over the Union Pacific rails before it struck the Central Pacific.

Q. I will return to the west-bound business in a moment. But coming back to the basis of your opinion, I wanted to get that clear, Mr. Gothlin. Your understanding is also, I believe, that the Southern Pacific would not have the right to cancel its rates with the Union Pacific in the case that you mentioned?

A. Yes, sir. Now please let me qualify that. I do not mean to say it would not have a right to cancel rates, but that it would be compelled to put in through rates of some kind.

Q. With the Union Pacific?

COPY BOUND C

A. With the Union Pacific—if the Union Pacific saw fit
2454 to complain to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Q. That it could not cancel its transcontinental rates with the Union Pacific and establish them with the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. I do not believe they could. That is my opinion. And furthermore, they would not be allowed to cancel their divisions.

Q. Would not be allowed to cancel their divisions?

A. I don't think they would.

Q. And that is your view of it in expressing the opinion that you expressed?

A. Yes, sir; undoubtedly.

Q. Now, with reference to the west-bound business, you said you had that more particularly in mind?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Very little transcontinental business originates on the Union Pacific, does it not?

A. Very little originates on the Union Pacific proper, I should imagine.

Q. Practically all of it is received from other lines?

A. They have six or seven connections at Kansas City and Council Bluffs from which they take business.

Q. And you think that the Union Pacific could work that business by way of Portland to California points, as against the Southern Pacific at Ogden?

A. I believe they could if the necessity required it. I do not say that it would be as good a route as via Ogden.

Q. When they would get that business by boat down to Portland they would have to use either the Southern Pacific or the Atchison to get into the interior, would they not?

A. Oh, yes. The interior rates, however, are based upon arbitraries.

2455 Q. Yes, ordinarily; but in rate wars all bases are upset usually, are they not?

A. My understanding of the transcontinental business is that the great bulk of it is consigned to dealers at the terminal points.

Q. And then shipped back into the interior?

A. Shipped into the interior by dealers at San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland, Seattle and Tacoma.

Q. Is the fruit traffic a large traffic in California?

A. I never had any experience in the fruit traffic, except the dried fruit traffic from the north Pacific coast. I never had any experience in the fresh fruit traffic at all.

Q. Do you think that the citrus fruit traffic could be handled by the Union Pacific by way of Portland as against the other routes?

A. I think that is very doubtful. I think that is one thing that the Southern Pacific, with their lines in California, would probably have, you might say, almost absolute control of. If that be a factor of the total business, that amounts to a great deal. I do not know what proportion it is.

ND CLOSE IN CENTER

Q. You do not know whether it amounts to much or not?

A. I do not know what proportion the revenue from the citrus fruit business is.

Q. You do not know the distance from Portland to San Francisco, do you, Mr. Gothlin?

A. I do not exactly know. I was under the impression that the Southern Pacific's line from Portland to San Francisco was in the neighborhood of 600 miles; and the boat line would be just about the same, I imagine.

Q. Of course the boat line goes down the river for a considerable distance.

2456 A. From Portland to the mouth of the river and down, yes.

Q. How far inland is Portland, do you know?

A. I don't know exactly what the distance is from the mouth of the river.

Q. About 100 miles, is it not, something like that?

A. I wouldn't think it was quite that far. I thought it was about 80; something in that neighborhood.

Q. I believe you also testified that you never heard of the Union Pacific at any time attempting to use that route for California business?

A. I did not quite say that, I think. I said I didn't recall it. I am not sure that I never heard of it using that line.

Q. Well, when you were in the freight-soliciting business you never knew of it to use that line for California business, did you?

A. I do not recall of any circumstance, no, sir.

Q. And when you were traffic manager for the National Cash Register Company you never shipped anything that way, did you?

A. Oh, no.

Q. You spoke of a bridge shipment from some place in this state to a point south of Portland that went by way of the Louisville & Nashville and the Southern Pacific.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To what point did that shipment go, do you remember?

A. Where it went to?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't recall.

Q. It was to a point south of Portland, wasn't it?

A. Somewhere south of Portland, yes.

Q. It was a local point on the Southern Pacific, was it not?

A. I think it was.

2457 Q. No other line reaching there?

A. Well, the Northern Pacific had rates there, you know. We often took freight for points south of Portland in Oregon based on the Portland rate plus the arbitrary. You know to Albany and Corvallis and points south of that there were certain preferential rates that enabled the Northern Pacific to get in there.

Q. Under existing tariffs?

A. Yes, sir.

COPY BOUND

Q. And on Southern Pacific points?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But after you got above navigation on the Willamette river it was local strictly to the Southern Pacific, was it not?

A. Yes; but the Northern Pacific has taken freight for points above Corvallis. I have forgotten how far down the line you got before the arbitrary from Portland grew to be higher than the arbitrary from the nearest terminal in California. But you could go down quite a ways; you could go below Albany and Corvallis.

Mr. SEVERANCE. You mean "above?" You said "below" in Oregon. You mean above the river?

WITNESS. I mean south.

Q. This shipment of nails by the Canadian Pacific from Pittsburg, that you testified about—when was that?

A. I think it was in 1889, as near as I can recall: 1888 or 1889, I would not be sure. I left there in 1889.

Q. Was that during the time that the Canadian Pacific was making a contest for a differential line to California?

A. I do not know about their contest.

Q. You did not know about that?

A. I know—that is, I recall, not very definitely, that for a
2458 period of time there was a slight differential via the Canadian Pacific to San Francisco, by boat from Vancouver.

Q. And this shipment about which you testified was moved under a differential?

A. That is my memory; but I don't think that was the object. I do not think the differential was the object in moving. The real reason why it went that way was that the man who was shipping was working the direct lines, one against the other, trying to get something.

Q. Trying to arouse suspicion?

A. He shipped it as a blind. I ascertained that afterward. They were accusing each other of having cut the rate.

Q. You think that was the real reason it moved that way?

A. Yes.

Q. Rather the exception? You were surprised when you got it, I believe you testified?

A. Somewhat, yes, sir. Very much gratified, however.

Q. Yes, of course. That is the only important shipment that you recall as moving that way, isn't it, Mr. Gothlin?

A. Yes. I know that we put in oil rates—that is, the Wisconsin Central joined with the Canadian Pacific and put in oil rates to enable the independent oil men in Pennsylvania to get into 'Fri-co; but I do not remember how much they carried on it.

Q. When was that?

A. It was shortly after the Canadian Pacific got to the Coast. I think it was 1887 or 1888.

Q. You do not know how long those rates staid in, do you?

A. No, I do not.

D CLOSE IN CENTER

Q. You do not know how long those rates staid in?

2459 A. I do not remember, no.

Q. You testified in your direct examination, Mr. Gothlin, about your understanding of how transcontinental rates were made—proposed to the Transcontinental Association, I believe, and made in the Association. Were you testifying from your personal knowledge of the matter then?

A. I said that I had never been present at a meeting of the Transcontinental Association.

Q. You do not know of your own knowledge how——

A. Only from intuition and my acquaintance with representatives of the Transcontinental Association. When a man had anything to propose, the statement of it would have to go before the Transcontinental Association to be considered.

Q. And your understanding is based upon those circumstances?

A. Yes, sir. The matters that I spoke of, Mr. Connor hadn't the authority to do it immediately; but they were taken up and in time the action was taken by the Transcontinental Association.

Q. Mr. Connor, and no other commercial agent, has power to make rates, so far as you know, Mr. Gothlin?

A. Oh, no; I understand they have not.

Q. In the instances you mentioned, where Mr. Connor was instrumental in securing some change in the rates, you would suppose, from your knowledge of the way matters are handled, he would take it up with his general freight agent, wouldn't he?

A. Of course.

Q. And it would be considered by his superiors, and possibly by the Transcontinental Association?

A. Well, the belief that the Transcontinental Association

2460 considered them was accentuated by the fact that when the rate became valid and I was notified by Mr. Connor a little in advance, shortly after that they would be published and the other agents would be after the business—all of the lines.

Q. Whatever the Transcontinental Association had to do with it, it could not be made without the consent of Mr. Connor's company, could it?

A. Could be made without the consent?

Q. Could not be made without the consent of his company, could it?

A. Well, I don't know whether their rules require unanimous consent, or majority, or how it is.

Q. You do not know how that is handled?

A. No, I wouldn't say as to that.

Q. But Mr. Connor took the matter up, and ultimately the rate was made; is that correct?

A. And invariably the statement was made that it would have to be considered by the Transcontinental Association before anything could be done.

Q. Before the rate was made. When were those transactions? Do you remember about the dates?

COPY BOUND

A. I don't know that I can recall. I think the matter of the return of the old cash registers was seven or eight years ago; maybe nine. And the Australian rate, I think, was made longer ago than that.

Q. Longer ago than that?

A. I think so. The matter of the paper was later.

Q. Did your company ever make any shipment to Portland?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. How did those shipments move ordinarily?

A. Usually Northern Pacific.

Q. You never shipped any by the Sunset Route to Port-
2461 land, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. I believe you testified that most of your shipments to San Francisco went by way of the Sunset Route—that is, to New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir, almost invariably.

Q. You spoke of what you term package cars being operated over the Queen & Crescent——

A. Yes, sir.

Q. ——from this territory, by way of New Orleans and over the Southern Pacific to California, for less than carload freight. Those cars are still operated, are they not, Mr. Gothlin?

A. I could not say. They were up to the time I left the Cash Register Company.

Q. They were operated in the same way up to 1906, weren't they?

A. That is my memory, yes, sir.

Q. Now, you also testified that Mr. Connor, when representing the Southern Pacific only, solicited preferentially by way of New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If he could not get traffic that way, did he have any other route that he solicited? Did he solicit by way of El Paso, and if not that way, then by way of Ogden?

A. I do not recall of Mr. Connor ever asking me for business by any other route than down by New Orleans.

Q. You do not remember any other?

A. No, sir.

Q. But you would understand, from your knowledge of the location of the Southern Pacific, that if he could not get it that way, that he would like to get it by way of Ogden?

A. Who? Mr. Connor?

Q. Yes. When he was representing the Southern Pacific only.

A. I do not recall that I ever understood Mr. Connor
2462 to want business any way except by New Orleans—from my knowledge as a shipper and from my association with him before I was a shipper.

Q. All business that the Union Pacific solicitors got prior to 1901, when they had separate solicitors, for California, so far as you knew, went over the Southern Pacific from Ogden, did it not?

ID CLOSE IN CENTER

A. Oh, yes.

Q. They could not get business for themselves for California without also getting it for that portion of the Southern Pacific, could they?

A. I think not; unless they elected to take that other route which you spoke of.

Q. Which you never knew them to do?

A. Not to my knowledge, no. I do not recall that they ever solicited business that way from me.

Q. Were other lines soliciting business for California in this territory, Mr. Gothlin?

A. Oh, yes; the intermediate lines, yes, sir.

Q. What is that?

A. The intermediate lines; such as the North-Western--you mean via Omaha and Kansas City?

Q. Let us begin with the Queen & Crescent. It has always solicited business for California, has it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does so yet?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Louisville & Nashville?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Illinois Central?

A. Well, I do not know much about the Illinois Central. I do not recall of their being active, so far as I was concerned, as a shipper.

Q. But the Queen & Crescent and the Louisville & Nashville have been actively soliciting business for California by way
2463 of New Orleans, have they not?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. And the Missouri Pacific lines by way of the Iron Mountain and Texas and El Paso, and also by way of Colorado, have they not? They have two routes.

A. I do not remember anything about business being solicited from me by Iron Mountain, particularly; but the lines to Omaha and Kansas City were Union Pacific.

Q. I mean for the Missouri Pacific. I am speaking of the Missouri Pacific. Has not the Missouri Pacific been actively soliciting business for California?

A. Yes, sir. I do not know how actively. The Missouri Pacific solicited business for all points on their line, California included. They had other interests besides in California, you know—Denver, and so forth.

Q. Don't they solicit business and carry it down by the way of Iron Mountain and Texarkana and El Paso, and also carry it westwardly to Denver?

A. I think possibly they do.

Q. Does not the Rock Island solicit California business?

A. They have an El Paso route now; yes, sir.

Q. And also by way of Denver, haven't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Burlington?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And the North-Western?
A. The North-Western is by Omaha, strictly, I believe, and St. Paul.
Q. I am speaking of all of these lines.
A. Oh, yes.
Q. Do not all of these lines actively solicit business?
A. All of them more or less solicit California business.
Q. Actively solicit California business?
A. Yes, sir.

2464 Q. Well, they all must send their California business either over the Atchison or the Southern Pacific, must they not, in order to get it to destination?
A. Well, the Atchison would take it from Chicago itself.
Q. Or any other point it could get it?
A. Yes, sir. But the Atchison, so far as my memory of the Atchison soliciting business goes, was to get it at Chicago.
Q. Yes, of course. So as to get the long haul.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. But I am speaking of these other lines that I have mentioned. All the business that they get for California must ultimately go over either the Atchison or Southern Pacific, must it not?
A. Yes, sir; that is true.
Q. In order to get to destination?
A. That is true.
Q. To be delivered to the Southern Pacific at New Orleans or El Paso, or some intermediate point, or be delivered to the Southern Pacific at Ogden for California? That is true, is it not?
A. That is my understanding; yes, sir.
Q. With reference to the freight solicitors for these lines: All railroads employ freight solicitors, do they not—practically all of them, so far as you know?
A. That is my understanding. Practically all railroads have freight solicitors; yes, sir.
Q. That is pretty good evidence that they serve a useful purpose, wouldn't you consider it so?
A. Why, I always thought so; yes, sir.

2465 Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. With reference to this route that you say could be used by way of competition by the Union Pacific by Portland: You testified that shipments were made, to your knowledge, by way of Vancouver to San Francisco?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You spoke of one shipment of 30 or 40 carloads of wire, I believe. The route by rail to Portland and thence by boat to San Francisco is many hundreds of miles shorter than the route by Vancouver by rail and thence down to San Francisco by boat, is it not?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And traffic did move by Vancouver, at a differential?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You suggested one thought, in answer to Judge Lovett, with reference to what might happen to the Southern Pacific in case the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific were competing for coast business and there was a disagreement over rates, in answer to his question as to whether more damage would result to the Union Pacific than to the Southern Pacific, and that was that the Southern Pacific had other interests at stake than the simple line from Ogden to San Francisco.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By that did you mean the line via New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what you meant was that if the rates were brought down by the Union Pacific competition it would bring them down all along the line, and therefore it would cut the rates on all the Southern 2466 Pacific through business by New Orleans? Is that what you meant?

A. Yes, sir; with the further idea that from a large part of this territory the distance via New Orleans is so much greater that the shrinkage would be felt a great deal more. It would reduce the rate per ton per mile so much more than by a shorter line.

Q. Your idea, as I understand it, is that the use of that route via Portland and thence by the boat line would be justifiable only as a matter of competition and to insure fair treatment from the Southern Pacific?

A. Well, you used the word "justifiable" there. I suppose it would be justifiable. The Union Pacific would be justified in using it at any time, if they saw fit.

Q. My use of the word "justifiable" was somewhat inaccurate. I did not mean exactly that. What I meant was this: You stated in answer to Judge Lovett that the natural route was the all-rail route by Ogden. That is the shorter route and the more natural?

A. That seems the more natural route, yes, sir.

Q. The more natural route?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that your view of the influence possessed by the Union Pacific by reason of the line to Portland and the boat line was that it would give them such an influence as would insure fair treatment from the Southern Pacific?

A. I think so.

Q. Was the Union Pacific, with its Oregon Short Line and Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company lines into Portland, in competition with you for Portland business when you were agent for the Northern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

2467 Q. Actively competing with you for that business?

A. Yes, sir.

COPY BOUND

Q. During all the time that you were soliciting business, or shipping, were the rates to California terminals the same over the Sunset Route and the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And by the Santa Fe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that the competition that existed between these lines was in service and in solicitation of business?

A. In service and personality.

Q. Do you know whether there was much, if any, difference in time between the Southern route to San Francisco and the route via the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific via Ogden?

A. My memory is that I could depend more for regularity on the New Orleans route.

Q. By "regularity" you mean they made better time, or were more even in their time?

A. Were more even in their time. You see there were transfers via Missouri River. Less than carload business would be transferred at either St. Louis or Chicago, and then again at Omaha or Kansas City often. Sometimes there were through cars—through cars loaded from Chicago, but I wasn't so sure of them as I was by Cincinnati.

Q. Well, when you used this package car there was no transfer at all, except to switch from one railroad to another?

A. That is my understanding.

Q. So the car was not unloaded at all?

A. Of course, I never followed the car through so that I
2468 could say absolutely that, but I have always understood that, and the results seem to justify that impression.

Q. That is what was represented to you by the agent, wasn't it?

A. That is what was represented to me, yes, sir.

Q. Now, the advantage in distance is very greatly with the Union Pacific route, is it not?

A. From Dayton?

Q. To San Francisco.

A. Yes, I think it is. I never compared exactly the figures, but my impression is, from looking at the map, that the distance would be shorter by way of Chicago.

Q. The Southern Pacific had to overcome that in some other way?

A. How is that?

Q. And the Southern Pacific Sunset Route had to overcome that disadvantage in some other way relating to the service, in order to compete?

A. I presume so, yes, sir.

Q. Was there any through package car the other way, so far as you know?

A. I do not recall. I think there were at times cars from Chicago via one route or the other, but I do not recall with any certainty that there was anything that we could depend upon to be regular and sure.

D CLOSE IN CENTER

Q. Was this through package car made up at Cincinnati, or Dayton, or where?

A. Made up at Cincinnati, on the Q. & C. tracks.

Q. Shipped into Cincinnati, and then the stuff was put in this car and then it went right through to the Coast?

A. That is my understanding, yes, sir.

Q. You spoke about a shipment by San Francisco to Australia: Is that a quicker, or a longer, route than the one by New York
2469 and the Suez?

A. Oh, much quicker.

Q. Much quicker by San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why is it that the business is ordinarily moved the other way? You said it usually went the other way.

A. Why, the rate by New York is much less. The rail haul is only to New York, and from there it is water haul; and the rates are very low, comparatively speaking, from New York.

Recross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I believe you testified that most of your shipments to California were by way of New Orleans, Mr. Gothlin?

A. To San Francisco, yes, sir. We had but the two points that we shipped to in California—Los Angeles and San Francisco. San Francisco were much the larger shipments. That usually went by way of the Southern Pacific.

Q. You did not find that a very impracticable route, then, Mr. Gothlin?

A. No. I don't think I said that it was impracticable.

Q. I thought you said that in this possible rate war with the Union and Southern Pacific that the Sunset Route would be out of business?

A. I was talking about the effect on the railroad itself; not on the shipper. It is undoubtedly a longer route, and the rate per ton per mile on the same rate is less from Cincinnati to San Francisco via New Orleans than it is by direct line, and the rate might be shrunk to such figures that the revenue would not be at all compensatory by the longer route.

Q. Well, a good big book could be written on what the rate
2470 per ton per mile does not prove in transportation, couldn't it, Mr. Gothlin?

A. I don't know that anybody ever has found it out yet. I never have been able to find a traffic manager that knew.

Q. Nor I.

Mr. SEVERANCE. They all talk about it, though.

Mr. LOVETT. They all talk about it. It is good for statistics.

Q. Do you not think that the expedition in handling the shipments to California by way of New Orleans was probably aided a great deal by the fact that there was a single management from New Orleans to San Francisco—that is, the unity of management of the Southern Pacific—a single line practically?

COPY BOUND

A. Well, it was undoubtedly aided by the fact that there were but two lines in interest from Cincinnati to San Francisco.

Q. Only two lines concerned in the shipment?

A. Yes, sir—and the fact that they had a through carriage arrangement without transfer. That might apply, I suppose, however, even if there were four lines—the agreement to do that having once been made and the service started.

Q. Did I understand you to testify that there had been or had not been through package cars westerly from here?

A. I said, I believe, that I did not recall definitely. I think there were at times through package cars from Chicago, but my memory is that they were not so certain and sure. There is one other factor: the Southern Pacific, via New Orleans, apparently worked 2471 this through package business by one line only—the Q. & C.

Q. Haven't they the same arrangement with the Illinois Central?

A. I couldn't say. Not to my knowledge. They may have, and may not. I don't know.

Q. I am informed that they have.

A. If they have, Mr. Connor never called my attention to it.

Q. Take the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, and the Big Four; did they seek to get this California business?

A. I don't quite catch you.

Q. I say I wish to take some of these lines leading northerly from the Ohio River. I am not very familiar with the exact location of all the lines, but take the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, for example.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Big Four is one, the Pennsylvania is another, and the Cincinnati, Chicago & Louisville, which are all lines leading from the Ohio River, as I understand, northwardly and northwesterly. They all sought to get business and solicited this business from this territory to the Pacific coast, did they not?

A. I think so. The last line you named—a new line—I have no experience with it; but as to the others.

Q. They all solicit this business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the lines leading south solicit it also?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those lines running in substantially opposite directions, are, then, to some extent and in a certain sense, competitors for that business, are they not?

A. I think that is true. You mean, of course, from Cincinnati?

Q. Yes. From that territory, we will say. Now, hasn't 2472 the line on which traffic originates a great deal to do with the routing of it and control of it, Mr. Gothlin?

A. You mean through this territory here?

Q. I mean generally. Generally speaking. This territory or any other.

ND CLOSE IN CENTER

A. Well, I can speak more particularly of my own experience. I think the situation now is that the territory is so thoroughly covered by connecting lines that the initial line has very little to say about it.

Q. The initial line has very little to say about it. Why shouldn't it have at least as much, if not more, than any other line—for instance in the matter of furnishing cars? They may be indifferent, but if they want to exercise it, aren't they in position to exercise greater influence than any other line?

A. That is a hypothetical question, isn't it?

Q. No.

A. I suppose that would be true; but I was speaking about what the practice is. I believe it is true that the initial line through this part of the country, so far as western business is concerned, does really, in practice, have very little to say about the routing. Whether they care to exercise that power or not, I don't know.

Q. Well, take them with some other business. Take them with the eastern business, for example. I am not asking particularly with reference to western business, but I am asking generally as to the power of the line on which the business originates and its influence in the matter of the routing of that traffic, irrespective of any legal question, too, but as a practical business matter.

A. The situation east is entirely different. They are fast
2473 freight lines and each fast freight line has a series of connecting lines, and if you give it to a fast freight line it must go by that series of lines. The situation is entirely different from western business. If a man elects to give it to the Merchants Despatch or the Traders Despatch or any other line, it must follow the lines of railway that are in that line.

Q. And the business is controlled, then, by the fast freight lines rather than by the railroad companies; is that your idea?

A. I think probably that is true. That is to say, that if a shipper elects to give to a particular fast freight line, he cannot change the routing after the initial line has got hold of it.

Q. No; but where the line or the railroad company on whose line the traffic originates is interested, or wants to exercise any influence in the routing of it, is it not in position to exercise a greater influence, as a business matter, I mean ordinarily and irrespective of any legal right it may have, than any intermediate carrier?

A. Well, that may be true theoretically; but practically I do not think it is true. I know that with myself and with the other western agents, if we found an initial line attempting to dictate routing, or to control routing, contrary to my wishes, or whoever the agent might be, and the arrangement with the shipper, that there would be trouble.

Q. There would be trouble?

A. There generally was trouble.

Q. What kind, and for whom?

A. Well, do you want me to tell you some of the old freight secrets now?

2474 Q. Well, I will not press that.

A. The way the boys used to do, if they found the initial line working against them, they would influence the shipper against that initial line.

Q. Work against the initial line; retaliate; is that the idea?

A. Yes, sir. If they could not do it at that particular point, if he happened to be located at a non-competitive point, they could catch him at the competitive point.

Q. They would get even there, or try to?

A. But, as a matter of fact, my experience, and I think the experience of nearly all the other western traveling agents, has been that the initial line always treated them decently; they never attempted to interfere. If the western line got the business, they let them have it, as a general rule.

Q. You spoke in your direct examination about the furnishing of cars as being a very important factor in controlling the traffic, and that prompted my question as to whether that matter must not rest very largely in the hands of the initial line, and whether, if it wanted to exercise an influence in the routing of traffic, it was not in a stronger position to do so than any other line.

A. You mean the initial line that actually controlled the traffic—if they were not stronger?

Q. Yes.

A. I suppose if they saw fit to antagonize the western line that had secured the business, and insisted on furnishing some other cars, perhaps they could coerce or induce the shipper to ignore the other line and route by the way they wanted to; but I do not think that has been the practice.

Q. You do not think that has been the practice?

2475 A. Not as a rule, no, sir.

Q. The initial lines in this territory as a rule are indifferent to the routing of the traffic?

A. That is my experience as a freight solicitor.

Q. They do not look out to try to secure to themselves the long haul, either?

A. I do not know what I would say about that. I know that roads have given up the long haul; but the western agent has generally policy enough not to try to do anything to make the initial line hurt itself.

Q. He always considers it advisable to deal fairly with the initial line, too, doesn't he?

A. I cannot recall of any situation in this neighborhood where a western line agent has asked an initial line to give up part of its haul.

Q. As a matter of fact, the initial lines will not give it up. Have you known where they have done it?

A. Oh, yes they will. Now, I can cite you right here. I could have given our California business to a line and got the haul to Chicago, instead of the haul to Cincinnati. They never made any fuss about it.

Q. Didn't they get something for it?

A. They got their local rate to Cincinnati.

Q. They probably got as much revenue out of it?

A. Oh, no; no, indeed. The Big Four could carry that freight to East St. Louis and get a great deal more revenue than to Cincinnati, or the Pennsylvania could carry it to East St. Louis, or the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton could carry it to their connecting line.

2476 Q. It is quite unusual, though, is it not, for a railroad to give up its long haul or greater revenue and take the short haul, unless it is compelled to?

A. Well, judging from my experience, I do not think that it is very often the case where the initial line would attempt to enforce the long haul as against any western connection that had secured freight.

Q. If the Southern Pacific, then, were like other railroads in the country, it would be immaterial to it whether traffic controlled by it went by way of Ogden or New Orleans, wouldn't it, if it gave up the long haul cheerfully?

A. Well, I don't know about that.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Just one question with reference to the routing of traffic initiated in this territory for the coast. Wasn't it quite a common occurrence for the transcontinental lines, through their representatives on the coast, to secure the routing of the traffic from this territory to the coast, and in those cases didn't you get letters from the western representatives of the Northern Pacific, say, or the Wisconsin Central, requesting you to go to the shippers and see that they respected that routing?

A. You mean when I was their representative?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, yes.

Q. That was quite a customary thing, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

2477 ABRAHAM RHEINSTROM,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Rheinstrom?

A. I live in this city.

Q. And what is your business?

A. Liquors, fruits, and machinery.

Q. Are you in the distilling business?

A. We are distilling liquors which are not a direct distillation from the grain; it is sort of a re-distillation.

Q. Do you make whisky, too?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you have occasion in your business to ship fruits from California to Cincinnati?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In considerable quantities?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many years have you been in business here?

A. Since 1876.

Q. What is your firm?

A. Rheinstrom Bros.

Q. Do you ship your product to the Pacific coast after it is manufactured?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been engaged in that branch of the business, that is, bringing fruits here from California and manufacturing your liquors and shipping them back?

A. I will have to refer to a memorandum. As to shipping fruits here, we commenced shipping fruits in about 1899.

Q. How long have you been shipping your product to the coast?

A. We have shipped to the coast since about 1880 or 1881 possibly. I could not recall the exact date.

2478 Q. Can you estimate about how extensive your shipments are per annum?

A. From the east or from here west?

Q. Both ways, say.

A. Coming this way we have shipped, for instance in 1899, 38 cars; in 1900 we shipped 55 cars; in 1901, 21 cars; in 1902, 60 cars; in 1903, 67 cars; in 1904, 28 cars; in 1905, 4 cars; in 1906, 15 cars; in 1907, 15 cars; in 1908, 18 cars.

Q. Your shipments were rather heavier some years ago than they have been recently?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How does your product move to the coast—carload or L. C. L.?

A. In carloads, and some L. C. L. on account of discriminating rates against us. They have taken off car rates and we are forced to make local shipments.

Q. Now, do you remember when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate soliciting agencies here?

A. Yes.

Q. Was your business solicited by those agencies?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Separately?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Against each other?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How was that competition—active or otherwise?

A. It was pretty active, as far as I remember.

Q. Do the representatives of Mr. Connor call on you now with reference to business?

A. I have not seen Mr. Connor for some years. Mr. Shinkle calls on us occasionally.

Q. Does he make any distinction between the Southern Pacific route and the New Orleans route in soliciting business?

A. Not that I know of.

2479 Q. Did you ever make shipments to California or from California by the Canadian Pacific and the boat line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?

A. Well, it was around 1902; I could not exactly remember.

Q. Do you mean 1902?

A. Around about that time.

Q. Down to about that time?

A. Around that time; prior to that.

Q. Was it as late as that?

A. I could not really state positively about the date; I would have to refer.

The witness was handed a letter by Mr. Severance.

WITNESS. The letter of our representative there that attends to that is 1900. Then and prior to that.

Q. Now, was there a differential in force prior to that time by the Canadian Pacific? I mean, was there a cheaper rate?

A. There was a cheaper rate by the Canadian Pacific.

Q. How much did you ship that way? I do not mean accurately, but did you ship considerable of your stuff that way?

A. We shipped a number of carloads.

Q. Which way?

A. Well, we shipped both ways, coming and going.

Q. That is, you shipped the fruits this way and your products the other way?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That went by the Canadian Pacific, did it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To Vancouver, and then down by boat?

A. I think that is the way.

Q. How is your business handled in California? Is it sent to a distributing agent, or do you sell direct to consumers?

A. We have a plant there. We have an agent there and we 2480 have a building there where we pack and keep stock on hand for distributing.

Q. And you distribute locally from that place?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, previous to 1900 or 1901, which way did your traffic move when it went all-rail, when it did not go by the Canadian Pacific?

A. Coming this way?

Q. Well, say coming this way, yes.

A. Of course that part was left, as a rule, to our representative there as to how to route it. Of course the only condition we made at this end was to have it by the Pennsylvania, because we have a switch along the Pennsylvania lines.

Q. Then, take the traffic moving the other way. How did that move from here?

A. Well, we worked a great deal with the Southern Pacific. Of course in the winter season, when it was cold, we preferred the Southern Pacific, and had to ship that way to keep from freezing; and sometimes in summer season we had to ship the other way on account of the intense heat and danger of fermentation.

Q. Now, when Mr. Connor or his representative came around, when the agencies were separate, and solicited the business, which way did Mr. Connor endeavor to send it?

A. Via New Orleans.

Q. And the Union Pacific people by Omaha, I suppose?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have there been any changes made since 1901 with reference to your traffic to and from the coast—any changes in rates or conditions under which you can ship?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What have they been?

A. Well, they reduced the rates on the fruit that we were shipping this way, from $1 a hundred to 75 cents, and they changed the rates from here there up to the present time considerably.

2481 Q. Changed it how?

A. Well, they advanced the rates and took away the benefits of carloads, and the valuation of the merchandise shipped. They varied the valuation of the merchandise shipped, as they reduced or advanced the rates. I don't know whether you know anything about that. In shipping whiskies or liquors or alcohol, in order to have a reduced commodity rate, they lowered the valuation per gallon, sometimes 50 cents and sometimes a ltttle more, or something like that, in order to get the reduced rate, that in case of loss they would be called upon to pay only the reduced valuation. Of course, as they have advanced the rates they also raised the valuation of some of the liquors.

Q. What has been the net result of that to you in the transportation charges you have had to pay? Has it been to increase your charges or to decrease them?

A. Well, there has been a tendency to increase the freight charges.

Q. You spoke about taking away the carload privilege?

A. Yes. They have at the present time almost, on some things, taken away the carload rate, giving us only a rate on local shipments, that is, less than carloads, and no concession as to carloads.

Q. They have made them the same, you mean?

A. Yes, made them the same.

Q. Which way does your business move at the present time?

A. Well, at the present time we are not shipping anything.

Q. Oh, you are not shipping?

A. No.

2482 Q. How long ago did you stop shipping?

A. Well, we have stopped shipping now west, with very small exceptions of small shipments, for over a year.

Q. Previous to that time which way was your traffic moving, four or five years back from that?

A. Well, the routing always came from our representative.

Q. I am speaking of west-bound business.

A. Yes, I know. He always directed us as to how we should route it, and of course it went by his way. Of course at this end the Pennsylvania, sometimes the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, and then via Omaha and Union Pacific, and sometimes via New Orleans and El Paso.

Q. Any of it by the Santa Fe?

A. And the Santa Fe, yes.

Q. Did you at any time ship by the Illinois Central and the Southern Pacific?

A. Well, I can't recall that we did.

Q. Have you shipped to Portland, Oregon, too?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Over what routes did you ship to Portland?

A. Well, I can't recall the exact routes.

Q. You don't remember which transcontinental lines took it—whether it was the Northern Pacific or the Great Northern or the Union Pacific?

A. It was usually the Northern Pacific or the Great Northern.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You never shipped any to Portland by way of the Southern Pacific, did you, Mr. Rheinstrom?

A. No, sir.

Q. When were these changes in rates, classification, etc., made, about which you have just testified?

2483 A. They have been made in the last two years or more—the last few years.

Q. Within the last three years?

A. Yes; and of course some changes were made prior to that, where they advanced the rates and discriminated as against us on ordinary liquors and whiskey in favor of alcohol.

Q. Were they made only by the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific?

A. Well, my impression is that they constituted about 99 per cent of the power to make the rates to the Pacific.

Q. That is your opinion of it?

A. That is my opinion, yes.

Q. Were they the only lines that made these changes?

A. Well, they were published changes.

Q. By all lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By the Atchison?

A. Yes. I suppose they are part of the——

Q. You suppose what?

A. I suppose the Atchison is part of that.

Q. Part of the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific?

A. No, not part of the Southern Pacific, but part of that combination.

Q. Part of the Union Pacific?

A. No, part of the Pacific coast roads.

Q. Part of the Transcontinental Association?

A. Part of the transcontinental arrangement or the combination.

Q. You suppose it is a part of the transcontinental arrangement or combination?

A. Yes. Well, they are a part of that system, I mean, carrying freight to the coast.

Q. One of the transcontinental lines?

A. Yes, one of the transcontinental lines.

2484 Q. And you supposed that it made these same changes?

A. My experience is that they never had much influence, it seems to me, in bringing about any changes; they hadn't much to say. It was always the Southern Pacific that controlled the situation.

Q. You always understood the Southern Pacific——

A. I understood that to be the case.

Q. You understood the Southern Pacific controlled the rate situation on the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you were solicited separately by the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, the traffic that you gave the Southern Pacific went, you say, ordinarily by the way of New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did any of it go by way of El Paso?

A. Yes, it used to; some went by El Paso, too.

Q. That is, by the southwestern lines to El Paso?

A. Yes.

Q. And then some went by the Santa Fe? Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And some by way of the other lines, including the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, all of that which went by the Union Pacific went over the Southern Pacific from Ogden to California, did it not?

A. As far as I know. There was no other outlet.

Q. No other outlet?

A. No.

(A recess was here taken until 2 o'clock p. m.)

2485 WILLIAM H. McGUFFEY,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. McGuffey?
A. Milford, Ohio.
Q. How long have you been living here?
A. In this vicinity?
Q. Yes; in the state of Ohio.
A. I was born in Cincinnati, and have been living here off and on since I was born, and the last time about twelve or thirteen years.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am in the freight department of the Proctor & Gamble Company.
Q. How long have you been in that position?
A. A little over four years.
Q. Previous to that time what was your business?
A. I was in the freight traffic department of the Queen & Crescent.
Q. For how long a time?
A. Eight years.
Q. In what line of work were you engaged for the Queen & Crescent?
A. I was the chief clerk and assistant chief clerk in the general freight department.
Q. Prior to the consolidation of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific offices here, do you remember the fact that separate offices were maintained by those two companies?
A. Yes, sir.

2486 Q. Who represented the Union Pacific?
A. I really do not know. The Q. & C. had practically no business with the Union Pacific, and I do not remember the man's name, I never came in contact with him.
Q. With what company did the Queen & Crescent work for business to the coast?
A. Exclusively with the Southern Pacific.
Q. Via the New Orleans route?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What other lines at that time were competing with the Southern Pacific for coast business?
A. The Union Pacific and the Santa Fe.
Q. That is, for California?
A. For California, yes, sir.
Q. And for the North coast what lines were competing?
A. My memory is vague on that, because we never handled any North coast business.
Q. Was that competition between the Union Pacific, the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe an active competition?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the Queen & Crescent, in connection with the Southern Pacific, work for business north of San Francisco?

A. Very little.

Q. Did you get any business north of San Francisco?

A. My recollection is we got occasional shipments, but they were very occasional.

Q. Where to—Portland?

A. Portland, yes, sir.

Q. Which way did the Southern Pacific endeavor to work their coast business?

A. They not only endeavored, but did work it all through New Orleans, as far as we were concerned.

2487 Q. Now, since you have been connected with the traffic department of the Proctor & Gamble Soap Company, do you see the soliciting agents of the different lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you see Mr. Connor and his assistants?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do they come and solicit you for business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As between the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, do they express any preference?

A. No, sir.

Q. How does your Portland business move?

A. It moves almost exclusively Union Pacific.

Q. Almost exclusively Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do any other lines share in it?

A. I do not recall for some time that we have shipped anything to Portland except over the Union Pacific.

Q. Do you ship to Puget Sound points?

A. We ship by the Great Northern or the Northern Pacific.

Q. What service do you find you receive, if any, from the freight solicitors of the different lines?

A. A good deal from some and very little from some others.

Q. What character of help do you get from those who are of service to you?

A. Well, we get the service simply that comes by talking directly to a representative of a company, which is superior to that which we sometimes get by correspondence. The value that we get from them depends a great deal on the man, how much weight he has with his management, and how far he understands how to handle business. Some of the roads we handle through their soliciting agents, their commercial agents, and some of the roads we practically never handle that way.

2488 Q. What kind of service do they perform for you where they are of use, aside from bringing you into immediate contact? In connection with what matters do they perform any service?

A. Very little except that so far as we are concerned. If we are discussing any rate matter we call in one of the commercial agents, if he is a live man, and talk the matter over with him and make it plain to him and get him to put it up to his people for us.

Q. That is, when you want any rate adjustments or changes made?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when you were connected with the freight department of the Queen & Crescent, did you learn, or have you since learned, what service, if any, the soliciting agents performed for small shippers? You have a large organization, I suppose—Proctor & Gamble, but in the case of small shippers what service can they reasonably and properly perform?

A. I think they would perform a good deal of service for a small shipper. They are supposed to post him as to what the rates are. They could not do that for us.

Q. You take care of that yourself?

A. We take care of that ourselves. We have a large traffic department, with tariff files, and we generally post them as to what the rates are.

Q. But in the case of a small shipper, the contrary would be true, wouldn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Since they are not able to maintain a traffic department. What service, if any, do they perform in the way of tracing cars that are shipped?

A. Not much for us.

2489 Q. I am speaking of the ordinary case of a small shipper,

A. In the ordinary case I should think they would perform a great deal of service. In the case of the small shipper, his only method of tracing a car is to go to the soliciting agent of the road, unless the general freight office of the road happens to be in the city where he lives.

Q. Did those matters pass through your hands to a considerable extent when you were with the Q. & C., in the freight department?

A. May I ask what you mean by "those matters"?

Q. Matters of tracing cars, and all that, or rate matters, putting it up, as you said, to the superiors by the commercial agent?

A. Yes, sir, the rate matters passed through my hands very largely. Not the tracing of cars—that was done by one of the other departments.

Q. Was it a matter of frequent occurrence that rate questions were put up to the management by freight solicitors?

A. No, sir, I should say rather infrequent.

Q. Rather infrequent?

A. The solicitors would probably be asked every day to reduce the rates, but there were no specific propositions put up except infrequently.

Q. And that would come up in the way of getting a commodity rate in, or something of that sort?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the case of a small shipper the usual course that those applications would take would be through the soliciting agent, in the first instance, and then through the general freight office?

A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I believe you stated that the Queen & Crescent worked 2490 Pacific coast business exclusively in connection with the Southern Pacific by way of New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That continues up to the present time, doesn't it?

A. As far as I know. Having no connection with the Queen & Crescent now, I do not know; but what business we ship by the Queen & Crescent goes through New Orleans and the Southern Pacific.

Q. When did your connection with the Queen & Crescent cease?

A. A little over four years ago.

Q. Up to that time the Queen & Crescent worked very actively for that business, didn't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And, as far as you know, it has continued to do so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The New Orleans gateway is still open, of course?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Other lines leading to New Orleans also work for that business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In answer to a question on the direct examination, you stated that the Queen & Crescent's principal competitors for that business out of this territory were the Union Pacific and the Atchison. You mean by that the Atchison and its connections, the Union Pacific, and the Southern Pacific west of Ogden, and the connections east of Missouri River, do you not? You did not mean to say that other lines reaching this territory were not actively working for that business, did you?

A. If I may judge your question from some testimony I have listened to, I should say that I meant the western lines. My experience has been that the lines leading directly from here 2491 do not solicit that coast business with anything like the activity that the western lines do.

Q. Now, just what do you mean by the western lines, Mr. McGuffey? Name them, won't you?

A. The Santa Fe, the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific.

Q. The Burlington?

A. No, sir; it would not be my expression to call the Burlington a western line.

Q. Doesn't it work actively for that business in this territory?

A. Well, not actively as compared to the transcontinental lines.

Q. How about the Rock Island?

A. I would say the same about that.

Q. Why isn't the Burlington, with its line from Chicago to Denver, and connecting there with the Denver & Rio Grande, a most active worker for that business? Hasn't it been as active as the Union Pacific ever was?

A. No, sir.

Q. It has not?

A. Not in my knowledge.

Q. Not in your knowledge?

A. No sir.

Q. Do you understand it has been indifferent to it?

A. No, sir, not indifferent, but their solicitors who look after it talk more about the Colorado business.

Q. They do not work for the Pacific coast business?

A. Only occasionally they mention that. If they see cars going out there, of course they call up and try to get the intermediate route on it.

Q. So they try to work it via St. Paul?

2492 A. They don't say much to me. If you are talking to me as the representative of the Proctor & Gamble Company, they never specify about the routing.

Q. I am talking about your general knowledge.

A. The general preference in all cases is for a long haul. I suppose in the majority of cases, if I recall correctly, they express a preference for the long haul, but they are grateful for whatever haul they may get.

Q. They are willing to take the short haul if they cannot get the long haul?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Apparently the Southern Pacific is the only one that is indifferent to the long haul, from what we have heard here. The Rock Island works actively for that business, doesn't it?

A. I will say again not actively as compared to the Union Pacific.

Q. Do you understand why that is? Doesn't it get as long a haul out of it as the Union Pacific?

A. Well, I should say in our business, no. If we were shipping from here via the Rock Island, we would probably give it to the Rock Island at Seneca or Chicago, and turn it over to the Union Pacific at Council Bluffs.

Q. Well, suppose you gave it to the Rock Island at Seneca or Chicago, and it took it to El Paso: it would get a very much longer haul than the Union Pacific would get, wouldn't it?

A. It never had an opportunity to take any of our business that way.

Q. You never sent any that way?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know of its taking other business that way?

2493 A. I know there are divisions in effect that way, but whether they get any business that way I know not.

Q. Even if it took it to Denver, it would get a longer haul out of it than the Union Pacific, wouldn't it?

A. I am not exactly familiar as to just where Denver lies. I know how far it is from Omaha to Ogden.

Q. Yes; that is 1,000 miles.

A. 1,000 miles even.

Q. Do you know how far it is from Chicago to the Missouri River?

A. Roughly speaking I suppose it would be about 300 miles; I never figured it.

Q. That is very roughly speaking. It is about 500.

A. 500?

Q. About 490, I believe.

A. It is 287, I think, from East St. Louis to Kansas City, and I guess it is considerably farther, come to size it up.

Q. And from the Missouri River to Denver it is about 500 miles, isn't it?

A. Well, I don't remember that distance. I have never had any occasion to carry that in my mind.

Q. Has the Rock Island been actively soliciting in this territory, or been soliciting at all in this territory?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. Has it an agency here?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you see any reason why it should not be as active as the Union Pacific, in view of its line to El Paso, and in view of its line to Denver?

A. Well, I imagine the reason is that a great many years ago the western lines—and when I speak of the western lines I speak
2494 of the Union Pacific, the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe—they had their solicitors here, and they have given a good deal of the business that they have secured to these intermediate lines and I imagine that there is some understanding among them that the intermediate lines are not to be too active in trying to get the business and divert it to their long hauls.

Q. You never knew of the Union Pacific to give any to the Rock Island, did you?

A. Well, I don't recall in that way, because we always route our business through anyhow; we always specify the routing.

Q. You do not understand that the Union Pacific or the Southern Pacific would be interested in the selection of the route east of their lines, do you?

A. I should think so.

Q. You wouldn't think so?

A. I should think so, yes, sir.

Q. You think they would be?

A. Yes.

Q. What interest would they have as to whether the business was carried from here to Omaha, for instance, by one line or another, so they got their haul?

CLOSE IN CENTER

A. I judge they have traffic relations with the other lines and have some preferences. I never knew any railroad that did not.

Q. They have rates over all, haven't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And all lines are open to the shippers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, can you see any reason for any preference on the part of the Union Pacific or Southern Pacific as between the lines leading out of Cincinnati, so they got the business at Omaha?

2495 A. Yes, sir, I should think so. If one particular line was naturally more friendly to the Union Pacific than some other line I would think they would reciprocate in influencing the business that way.

Q. Did you ever know a railroad dependent that way upon its connections, soliciting as between them, preferring one as against the other?

A. I think I have.

Q. In the absence of a common ownership?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you known an instance of that sort?

A. If you ask me for a specific instance, I don't know whether I can cite one right at the present moment, but I should say, running my mind back in a general way, I would know a number of cases.

Q. Could you mention one?

A. I don't know that I can. It is not a matter that would probably make any vivid impression on my mind.

Q. How about the Missouri Pacific—has it been soliciting business in this territory?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Actively or otherwise?

A. The Missouri Pacific, I think, solicits coast business a little more actively than some of the other roads, that is, some of the intermediate roads, but not very actively as compared with the transcontinental lines.

Q. By which route does it solicit it—by way of Denver, or by way of El Paso, or both ways?

A. I think in the majority of cases they have solicited by the D. & R. G.

Q. By the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say the Missouri Pacific is not as active in its solicitation as the Union Pacific?

2496 A. No, sir, not to the Pacific coast.

Q. Not to the Pacific coast?

A. They are fully as active in their general solicitation.

Q. The Missouri Pacific has a line of its own extending from St. Louis to Denver, hasn't it?

A. No, sir. I think they get in there with the D. & R. G., if I recall rightly.

Q. Denver?
A. Isn't that correct?
Q. No, you are mistaken.
A. I think so. I think they connect at Pueblo.
Mr. SEVERANCE. I think that is right.
Q. Pueblo—that is right. They connect with the D. & R. G. at Pueblo, then?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. About what is the distance from St. Louis to Pueblo?
A. I think it is about the same distance, or a trifle farther than to Denver. I should say it was something like—well I don't know; I haven't figured that distance for a long time.
Q. It is probably a thousand miles or more, isn't it?
A. I should think it was under a thousand miles.
Q. Then, from Pueblo, by the Denver & Rio Grande, to Ogden?
A. I don't know. We work very little business that way, and I never figured the distance. We give very little business to that road.
Q. You don't know about that distance, then?
A. No, sir.
Q. Is the D. & R. G. an active solicitor for this transcontinental business?
A. Yes, sir, as far as they have had representation in this district. They have been to see us a good many times about that business.
Q. Have they representation in this territory?
2497 A. Yes, sir, they have recently.
Q. All this business that formerly was secured by the separate agents of the Union Pacific for California, or at any time secured, moving over the Union Pacific to California, passed over the Southern Pacific from Ogden, as you understand, didn't it?
A. Yes, sir, that is my understanding.
Q. Moving over the Union Pacific either from Omaha or Kansas City to Ogden, and thence over the Southern Pacific to destination?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You never knew of any shipments to California points by the Union Pacific up to Portland and thence by boat down?
A. I never knew of any, no, sir.
Q. You testified on your direct examination that your shipments to Portland went mostly by the Union Pacific. You mean by the Union Pacific and its connections east of the Missouri River, and then over the Oregon Short Line, and then over the O. R. & N.?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You also testified that formerly, I think when you were connected with the Queen & Crescent, there were some shipments north of San Francisco by way of New Orleans, but they were very seldom. I understood you correctly, didn't I?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You seldom had shipments that way for Portland, for example? Is that correct?
A. Yes, sir.

2498 W. E. SHEWALTER,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where is your home, Mr. Shewalter?
A. Springfield, Ohio.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am connected with Mast, Foos & Company, as traffic manager.
Q. What is the business of Mast, Foos & Company?
A. They manufacture windmills, iron pumps and lawn mowers.
Q. Is it a large institution?
A. Well, it is not the largest, but it is one of the principal manufacturers of goods of that class.
Q. In the country?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. To what parts of the country do you ship your product?
A. All parts generally.
Q. How long has the company been in business?
A. About thirty-five or forty years.
Q. How long have you been with them?
A. Sixteen years.
Q. How long have you been in charge of their traffic?
A. About nine or ten years.
Q. Did you have anything to do with the traffic before that time?
A. Yes; I was in the shipping department. I did not have control of it, but I had something to do with it.
Q. Were you familiar with the way it was routed?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you remember when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific maintained separate commercial agencies here at Cin-
2499 cinnati?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you know Mr. Connor?
A. Yes, slightly.
Q. And Mr. Welsh?
A. I can't remember Mr. Welsh, no, sir.
Q. Who was the Union Pacific man that you knew?
A. Well, I met his representative; I do not remember the name.
Q. The representative of Mr. Welsh?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, at that time did Mr. Connor and his representatives and the representative of Mr. Welsh call on you at Springfield, soliciting business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were they in competition with each other?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Which way was the Southern Pacific agency endeavoring to route its business to the coast?

A. Principally via New Orleans.
Q. And the Union Pacific by the Missouri River gateway?
A. By Omaha.
Q. How was that competition at that time? was it active or otherwise?
A. I should say quite active.
Q. Which way did your company ship, or did they ship both ways?
A. We used both ways.
Q. Since the agencies were consolidated here, are you called on by representatives of the joint agency?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who is the agent that calls on you?
A. Mr. Sigler.
Q. Does he call on you soliciting the business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is his attitude as between the New Orleans gateway and the Union Pacific?
2500 A. I cannot remember that he expresses any preference at all now.
Q. He simply endeavors to get the business for either the Union Pacific or the Southern Pacific.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you ship to the north Pacific coast?
A. Yes; we ship to Portland and Seattle.
Q. What way does your traffic move to Portland?
A. Well, it is divided. Part of the time it goes Union Pacific by way of Omaha, and sometimes by the Northern roads.
Q. By the Northern Pacific or the Great Northern?
A. By the Northern Pacific or the Great Northern, yes, sir.
Q. Did any of that ever move by way of New Orleans, as far as you can remember?
A. I cannot remember that it ever did, no, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You never shipped any to Portland by way of New Orleans, did you, Mr. Shewalter?
A. By way of New Orleans?
Q. Yes.
A. No, I can't remember that we ever did.
Q. All the rates by all these gateways are the same and are still open, are they not, by way of New Orleans, El Paso and the Missouri River gateways?
A. As far as I know they are, yes, sir.
Q. You can ship any way you like?
A. Yes.
Q. In soliciting your shipments, if they could not get them by way of New Orleans, they were always very glad to get them by way of Ogden, were they not?

2501 A. Well, I suppose they were, although I cannot remember that they ever solicited that way.

Q. The soliciting. when they were separate, so far as you recall, was exclusively by way of New Orleans?

A. Yes.

Q. Did they ever solicit any by way of El Paso or the Texas Junction lines?

A. Yes, sometimes by way of El Paso. Very seldom we shipped that way, though.

Q. But you have no recollection of any solicitation by the Southern Pacific representatives prior to the consolidation of agencies by way of Ogden?

A. After the consolidation, you mean?

Q. Before.

A. No, I can't remember that.

Q. You never made any shipments to California by way of Portland and then by boat to San Francisco, did you?

A. No, I think not.

Q. All of your shipments that went by way of the Union Pacific to California went over the Southern Pacific from Ogden to the Pacific coast destination, didn't they?

A. Yes.

Q. That is, handled by the Union Pacific to Ogden, and then over the Southern Pacific beyond?

A. Yes, sir.

2502 G. L. CORY,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Cory?

A. Springfield, Ohio.

Q. What is your business?

A. I have charge of the traffic department of The James Leffel & Company.

Q. What is the business of James Leffel & Company?

A. Manufacturers of water wheels, steam engines and boilers, power connections for water wheels.

Q. Is that a large factory, a large manufactory?

A. As far as the water wheel end of the business is concerned, it ranks probably as large as any concern in the country. The engine and boiler business is comparatively small.

Q. How long have you been connected with that company?

A. Since August, 1899.

Q. In charge of their traffic?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Previous to that time did you have any railroad experience?

A. Two years immediately previous to that I was with the present D. T. & I. Railway—the Ohio Southern at that time—in the local freight office; and previous to that I was telegrapher and clerk and extra agent on the Big Four, Peoria division.

Q. Are you acquainted with Mr. Connor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember when the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific maintained separate agencies here?

A. Yes, sir.

2503 Q. At that time were you acquainted with the Union Pacific representative?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was he?

A. Mr. Liston called upon us.

Q. Did Mr. Connor or his representatives call on you also?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were those two agencies competing with each other for coast business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way did Mr. Connor and his representatives seek to route the business to the coast?

A. New Orleans.

Q. And Mr. Liston and his associates?

A. Via the Missouri River—Ogden.

Q. Was that competition active or otherwise?

A. Active.

Q. Do you ship freight to north Pacific coast points?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How does that move?

A. It moves usually upon instructions of the consignee. Our products are practically all sold f. o. b. cars Springfield.

Q. Are you familiar with the movement that they take?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How does the traffic move, say to Portland and Tacoma and Seattle?

A. The Portland business moves via Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line, Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company; also via St. Paul, the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern, and some of the Seattle business in the last few months especially has been moving via the Soo line and the Canadian Pacific, on instructions of the consignee.

Q. Do the representatives of Mr. Connor's agency here call on you, soliciting business, at present?

A. Yes, sir.

2504 Q. Have they, since the consolidation of the agencies?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do they seek to route the business now as between the two lines—the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, New Orleans route?

A. I don't remember that they have expressed any preference.

Q. Who is the representative of Mr. Connor who calls on you now?

A. Mr. Sigler.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Such business as you shipped over the Union Pacific to California points always passed over the Southern Pacific from Ogden west, did it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the solicitors in working exclusively for the Union Pacific, when the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific were separate, were in that way working also for the Southern Pacific, weren't they?

A. Yes, sir, from Ogden to destination.

Q. You never shipped any business to Portland by way of the Sunset Route, that is, New Orleans or El Paso, did you?

A. No, sir, not that I recall.

Q. You never shipped any to San Francisco by way of Portland, and then by boat down?

A. No, sir.

Q. You are not interested in the division of the through rate as between the different lines participating in the haul, are you, Mr. Cory?

A. No, sir.

Q. You are only interested in the aggregate rate?

A. Yes, sir.

2505 Q. I suppose that the various lines lying between here and New Orleans and El Paso and Denver and the Missouri River are soliciting business to the Pacific coast, are they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And always have been, as far as you know?

A. As far as I know, yes, sir.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Connor or his representatives never solicited shipments by way of Ogden, did they, when they were separate agencies?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. They never objected to getting it that way, but they preferred to have it by way of New Orleans?

A. Well, they could not help but get it, I believe, from Ogden to California points.

Q. If it went that way it was not necessary for them to solicit it?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. But they never said anything to you about the Ogden route in the way of asking for business from you?

A. No, sir.

Q. So any satisfaction they may have felt, as suggested by Judge Lovett, was something that they did not indicate to you?
A. No, sir, if they had any satisfaction they didn't mention it.

2506 F. L. MARSHALL,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Marshall?
A. Piqua, Ohio.
Q. What is your business?
A. Traffic manager of the Pioneer Pole & Shaft Company.
Q. What is their business?
A. The manufacturing of buggy poles and shafts.
Q. How long have you been with that company?
A. Since its organization, early in 1903.
Q. Previous to that time what was your business?
A. I was with the Buckeye Manufacturing Company in the same business, Anderson, Indiana.
Q. That is, in charge of their traffic?
A. The last four years in charge of the traffic.
Q. What is the business of the Buckeye Manufacturing Company?
A. It was the manufacture of poles and shafts.
Q. In the same kind of business?
A. The same thing, yes, sir.
Q. Are these two businesses related—the Buckeye Manufacturing Company and the Pioneer Pole & Shaft Company?
A. The Pioneer Pole & Shaft Company is the successor to the former company.
Q. So, it is the same business under another name?
A. The same business under another name.

2507 Q. And you were formerly located at Anderson, Indiana, and are now at Piqua, Ohio?
A. Piqua, Ohio; that is correct.

Q. Compared with other companies in the same line of business, is this a large concern, Mr. Marshall?
A. Yes, sir. I am not posted as to the exact percentage of the business that they transact. I would judge from 50 to 60 per cent.
Q. Of the entire business?
A. Of the entire business.
Q. Of the country?
A. Probably that.
Q. Then, it is the largest individual company?
A. Yes, the largest individual company.
Q. In that line of business?
A. Yes.

Q. Do they have plants at more than one place?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where are they located?
A. The Ohio Plants are at Sidney, Piqua, Troy, Cincinnati, Akron, Ashtabula and Wellington; in Indiana at Muncie and Anderson; and also at St. Louis, and Memphis, Tennessee.
Q. Do you have charge of all their traffic?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. From all of the plants?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. To what parts of the country do you consign your product?
A. More or less to all parts of the United States.
Q. Do you ship to the Pacific coast?
A. Yes, but not very extensively.
Q. As compared with other parts of the country?
A. As compared with other parts, no. Our product is used mostly in the manufacture of vehicles.
Q. From what points do you ship to the coast such product as you do ship there?
A. Well, we ship mostly from Anderson, Indiana; Muncie, Indiana, and Piqua and Troy, Ohio.
2508 Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific had separate agencies in Cincinnati?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were you acquainted with their agents?
A. I was.
Q. Did they call on you, soliciting business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Which way did the Southern Pacific agency endeavor to route the business?
A. Via New Orleans.
Q. And the Union Pacific which way?
A. Via Omaha—the Missouri River.
Q. Was the competition between these lines for Pacific coast business active or otherwise?
A. It would be considered active in the sense that it was being solicited against one another.
Q. Did you ever ship to the coast otherwise than by rail?
A. I think I recall one or two small shipments that way via New York City.
Q. And how did they move?
A. They went around the Horn. That was at the suggestion of the consignee.
Q. But they were very few, were they?
A. Very few.
Q. Since the consolidation of the agencies of the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific here, does a representative of that agency call on you, soliciting business?
A. Yes, sir; Mr. Sigler.

Q. Which gentleman comes to see you?
A. Mr. Sigler.
Q. And as between the Sunset Route by New Orleans and the Union Pacific route, which way, if either, does he try to route the traffic?
A. He has never expressed any preference that I recall.
Q. Do you ship somewhat to Portland—north Pacific coast
2509 points?
A. Yes, some.
Q. How does your traffic move to Portland?
A. That is divided among the Union Pacific, the Northern Pacific, and the Great Northern.
Q. And is it solicited by those three?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And has been for a long time, during all the time you have been in the business?
A. It has been, yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Does the Chicago & North-Western agent ever call on you soliciting that business, Mr. Marshall?
A. I think I recall solicitations from the North-Western for that business, yes, sir.
Q. The St. Paul agent?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The Burlington?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The Rock Island?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The Missouri Pacific?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. All soliciting that business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The Denver & Rio Grande?
A. More or less, yes, sir.
Q. The Queen & Crescent?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And the Louisville & Nashville and the Illinois Central?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. In fact, they are all soliciting that business?
A. All more or less soliciting it, yes, sir.
Q. Now, if the Chicago & North-Western agent gets the business, which way does it move?
A. It moves via Chicago and Omaha—Union Pacific; Southern Pacific at Ogden, I presume, if it goes Union Pacific.
2510 Q. That is to say, if the agent of the Chicago & North-Western were to get it, so far as Union Pacific is concerned, it would be the same as if its own agent got it, wouldn't it? It would move over that line?

A. What is that question? What is that again?

Q. I say if the agent of the Chicago & North-Western should secure the business, that would be the same, as far as the Union Pacific is concerned, as if its own agent had got it, because it would get the traffic from the Chicago & North-Western, wouldn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And so with the St. Paul?

A. But I don't understand that either one of them can secure the business now, can they?

Q. Can secure the business now?

A. Yes. I understand the routing is in the hands of the initial carrier at this time, is it not?

Q. If they choose to exercise the right, I understand that. But a member of the Ohio Railroad Commission, who was on the stand this morning, had a different view of it. But as a practical matter, if you were to route your traffic over the Chicago & North-Western, either voluntarily or in response to the solicitation of the agent of that company, it would pass over the Union Pacific, too, wouldn't it?

A. Well, I have not had occasion to make a shipment since I got the new transcontinental tariffs, and I am not posted on that. I am really asking for some information, for one thing.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Well, you have come to a good source.

Q. I am not speaking of any recent transaction; I am speak-
2511 ing generally, of the past.

A. Yes, prior to the time the new transcontinental tariffs went into effect, of course it would move that way, the way the shipper would designate.

Q. I didn't know that there were any new transcontinental tariffs. I was just asking as to the situation generally, not with reference to any particular time. But generally, if it moves over the Chicago & Northwestern, it also moves over the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And so if it would move over the St. Paul to California, it would move over the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir, that would be the natural route.

Q. And if it moved over those lines, or if it moved over the Union Pacific it would move to California then over the Southern Pacific west of Ogden, wouldn't it?

A. Yes, sir, necessarily.

Q. Shippers are not interested in the division of through rates as between the carriers, are they? That is to say, it is no concern of yours how the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, for instance, or the Southern Pacific and the Queen & Crescent or other lines divide the through rate as among themselves?

A. No, sir, no material difference to the shipper.

Q. The shipper is not interested in that division at all; he is simply interested in the aggregate rate?

A. That is all.

Q. Did you ever ship anything to Portland by way of the Sunset Route, Mr. Marshall?

A. No, sir; never did—not that I recall.

Q. As far as you recall, none was ever shipped that way?

2512 A. No, sir.

Q. You never shipped anything to San Francisco by way of Portland; that is, by rail to Portland and thence by boat from Portland down to San Francisco, did you?

A. No, sir. That would be an impracticable route for us.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. You are interested in getting as good service as you can, aren't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you feel that the more competition there is between lines the more activity there will be to give good service, to get the business?

A. Yes, sir, I think that is true.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. How is the service generally on the line made up by the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific by way of Ogden? Isn't that about as good as any of the all-rail lines?

A. As I recall, it is on a parity at least with the——

Q. With the best?

A. With any line; yes, sir.

Q. You don't know of any better?

A. I don't know of any better, take it all around.

2513 H. P. BLUM,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Blum, what is your position at present?

A. I am traffic manager of the Central States Cooperage Company.

Q. How long have you been in that position?

A. One week.

Q. Previous to that what was your business?

A. Traffic manager of the Globe-Wernicke Company at Cincinnati.

Q. What is the business of the Globe-Wernicke Company?

A. Manufacturer of sectional bookcases chiefly, sectional filing cabinets—general line of office equipment.

Q. Is that a large concern?

A. The largest of its kind in the world.

Q. To what parts of the United States does the Globe-Wernicke Company send its product?

A. All parts.

Q. Including the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long were you traffic manager of the Globe-Wernicke Company?

A. Five years and two months.

Q. You began when?

A. September 21, 1903.

Q. At that time was the Union Pacific maintaining a separate agency here from the Southern Pacific, or were they consolidated?

A. I am quite sure that they were consolidated.

Q. Who, if anyone, called on you as traffic manager of the Globe-Wernicke Company in soliciting business for the Union
2514 Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

A. Mr. Shinkle, the local soliciting agent, usually called on me, but I have discussed traffic matters with Mr. W. H. Connor also.

Q. In soliciting your business, did Mr. Shinkle express any preference for one route as against the other, that is, for the Union Pacific route as against the route by New Orleans?

A. No, sir; he was impartial.

Q. Impartial as between those two?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did the business of the Globe-Wernicke Company move to Portland, Oregon?

A. Via Union Pacific, Great Northern and Northern Pacific?

Q. Did you ever ship to the coast by boat?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By what line?

A. Through New York City, via the American & Hawaiian Steamship Company at times, and sometimes in care of the Panama Railroad Steamship Company.

Q. And did the product move from here to New York?

A. From here to New York City, yes, sir.

Q. To New York City by rail?

A. By rail, and steamship beyond.

Q. And did the steamship company absorb the rail rate from here to New York?

A. No, sir.

Q. How was it arranged? It was a through rate, was it?

A. The charges were not absorbed, but they were taken care of as advance charges; that is, in case we desired that the consignee pay the freight, the steamship would take up the charges, and, I
2515 presume, pay them to the railroad and charge them as advances at destination. That business usually moved on a prepaid basis, but of course the circumstances were the same.

Q. How did the aggregate rate to San Francisco from Cincinnati by way of New York and the Panama route of the American & Hawaiian line compare with the all-rail rate?

A. It was lower.

COPY BOUND

Q. Did you make any shipments that way?

A. Well, by comparison, no—by comparing it to the number that moved all rail directly overland to the coast.

Q. Well, leaving out the comparison, was the shipment that way considerable or very small?

A. I would say small.

Q. How long a time was consumed in the journey to San Francisco by that route? Take the first Panama route—from here to New York City and then by the Panama route.

A. Well, I am not capable of stating. It was not a matter of sufficient interest to follow it through, because, in the first place, the orders were dated so far ahead of time that the matter of time in transit was no consideration at all.

Q. And was that the same with the shipments by the American-Hawaiian line?

A. Yes.

Q. You don't remember which was the quicker route—the American-Hawaiian line or the Panama route?

A. I do not.

Q. And you do not remember how much time it took to get the product there either way?

A. I do not.

Q. Those shipments were cases where you were in no hurry?

A. In no hurry.

Q. Do you remember how much the differential was?

2516 A. No, I don't recall that at the present time. It was handled on a differential basis, but I don't know just what it was. These companies had a tariff covering that business, but at the time I usually referred to those tariffs.

(No cross-examination.)

2517 GEORGE W. VOSMER,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Vosmer, what is your business?

A. I am foreman of the hardware department and metal filing department of the Globe-Wernicke Company at Norwood.

Q. Was there any time that you had charge of their traffic?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you the predecessor of Mr. Blum?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For how many years prior to his occupancy of that position did you have charge of their traffic?

ND CLOSE IN CENTER

A. I had charge of the traffic department for two years prior to that, and was rate clerk and route clerk of the freight movement from the 8th Street plant two years and a half prior to that.

Q. You heard his testimony given just now as to the extent of the business and the way it was scattered over the country?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Conducted by the Globe-Wernicke Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does that accord with your information as to their business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate soliciting agencies here in Cincinnati?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were those agencies soliciting the business of the Globe-Wernicke Company at that time, in competition?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way did Mr. Connor and his subordinates en-
2518 deavor to route the traffic to the coast?

A. Always via New Orleans.

Q. How has your business always been routed to Portland, if you know?

A. By the Union Pacific and the O. R. & N. Company, and the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific railroads.

Q. Has that business always been actively competed for by those lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is still?

A. I don't know whether it is now or not; it was up to the——

Q. Well, up to the time you left?

A. Up to the time I was there.

Q. Well, the business to California points Mr. Connor endeavored to get by the Southern Pacific, by New Orleans. Did some of your business move that way?

A. Most all of it. Most all of that business out there was routed via New Orleans and the Southern Pacific Railroad by the consignee.

Q. By the consignee?

A. Yes.

Q. Did some of it move by the Union Pacific?

A. I cannot recall that I ever sent any California business out there via the Union Pacific.

Q. Do you remember when the offices were consolidated here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. After they were consolidated what representative of the companies called on you, looking out for business?

A. Mr. Shinkle.

Q. Did he ever after that endeavor to get business away from one line for the other?

COPY BOUND

2519 A. No, I can't say that he endeavored to take it away from one line or the other, but my impression is that he always preferred the New Orleans route.

Q. That is the way you had always been shipping?

A. That is the way we had always been shipping it, yes, sir.

Q. Did you continue to do so?

A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. He tried to get it away from the Atchison, didn't he?

A. Oh, yes, sir; he tried to keep it away from those other roads.

Q. Did I understand you to say that your shipments to the north Pacific coast, that is, Puget Sound and Portland, were by the Union Pacific, the Northern Pacific, and the Great Northern?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never shipped any business that way by the Sunset Route, did you?

A. No, sir, I never did.

Q. And never shipped to Portland by that route?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever ship any business to San Francisco by way of Portland and by boat down the coast?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever know of anybody shipping that way?

A. No, sir, I never did.

Q. The Union Pacific agents never solicited you to ship that way, did they?

A. No, sir, not to my knowledge they didn't.

Q. Now, if, prior to the consolidation of the agencies, Mr. Connor or other agent of the Southern Pacific could not get the business by way of New Orleans, would they, as against the Atchison, seek to work it by way of the Union Pacific and Ogden route?

A. No, sir, not to my knowledge they wouldn't.

2520 Q. Did they solicit only by way of New Orleans?

A. That is my recollection that they only solicited by New Orleans. If it had to go via Ogden they got it anyway, without soliciting.

Q. They got it anyway?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. There being no other outlet for the Union Pacific?

A. No.

Q. You were not interested in the division of these rates as between the different lines participating in the haul, were you?

A. No, sir.

ND CLOSE IN CENTER

2521 J. A. HEDGES,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Hedges, where do you live?

A. Columbus, Ohio.

Q. And what is your business?

A. I am secretary and treasurer of the Peruna Company.

Q. In connection with your position do you have anything to do with the movement of traffic?

A. The traffic department is under my supervision.

Q. That is a very large concern, isn't it—the Peruna Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It manufactures a certain kind of medicine?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And to what part of the country is that medicine shipped?

A. To all parts of the United States.

Q. How long have you been in charge of the traffic of the Peruna Company?

A. It was put into my department sometime in the year 1901.

Q. How does the bulk of your traffic move to the Pacific coast?

A. Since the San Francisco earthquake we have been shipping most of it by rail. Prior to that we sent most of our shipments to the coast around the Horn.

Q. Have you ever used the American-Hawaiian line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How does the traffic move from Columbus when it goes to California by the American-Hawaiian line?

2522 A. To New York city, and then around the Horn.

Q. Did you say since the earthquake you shipped by rail?

A. Principally by rail, yes, sir.

Q. How long a time did it take the American-Hawaiian line to deliver goods in San Francisco from Columbus?

A. About eighty days, I think; somewhere about 80 days.

Q. There was a differential in favor of that line, wasn't there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I suppose that is the reason you shipped that way?

A. That was the reason for shipping that way.

Q. Is your product anything that ordinarily requires quick transportation?

A. Well, usually, yes. The transportation I speak of as going around the Horn was intended for our San Francisco storage account. For a number of years we kept a storage plant in San Francisco and made our distribution from there for a great many western points, that is, in the southern part of the United States and the west; but ordinary shipments on orders we almost invariably shipped by rail.

Q. You stated that it was in 1901 you took charge of that branch of the business. After that time how did your Pacific coast business move when it moved by rail—the California business?

A. I think principally by the Union Pacific, that is, for California points.

Q. And the Portland business, how did that move?

A. For the most part the Portland business was shipped over the Northern Pacific.

Q. After you took charge of the traffic as part of your busi-
2523 ness, the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific did not maintain separate commercial agencies here, did they?

A. No. I have very little recollection about any merger between the two or anything connected with their combining. I think the combination probably took effect before I paid any particular attention to it.

Q. Since you have had charge of the business, have they had any agents there competing with each other for coast business?

A. No, not as between the two roads.

Q. That is what I mean—as between the two roads.

A. No, sir.

Q. They have an agent, haven't they, who calls on you and solicits business?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Is he impartial between the two in his solicitation?

A. Well, I don't recall him ever having solicited business for either particular line.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Such business as you ship over the Union Pacific to California goes over the Southern Pacific from Ogden to destination, doesn't it, Mr. Hedges?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never shipped to Portland by way of the Southern Pacific, did you—the Sunset Route?

A. To Portland?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, I remember some shipments of advertising matter—oh, you mean by the Southern Pacific?

Q. Yes.

A. No. I misunderstood you; I thought you said the Union
2524 Pacific. I do not recall any shipments going to Portland by way of the Southern Pacific.

Q. And you never shipped to California by way of Portland, and then by boat from Portland to San Francisco?

A. No, sir.

2525 WILLIAM J. DOYLE,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Doyle, where do you live?
A. Cincinnati, Ohio.
Q. What is your business?
A. Traffic manager of J. A. Fay and Egan Company.
Q. How long have you been engaged with the Fay and Egan Company?
A. About twenty-two years.
Q. How long have you had charge of the traffic?
A. About sixteen years.
Q. What is the business of the Fay and Egan Company?
A. Builders of woodworking machinery, anything that cuts wood; woodworking machinery for furniture factories, and so forth.
Q. Is it a large concern?
A. One of the largest in the world.
Q. And to what parts of the country is their product shipped?
A. All parts.
Q. Including the Pacific coast?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you remember when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate offices in Cincinnati?
A. Yes.
Q. Were you acquainted with their respective representatives?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who represented the Southern Pacific in those days?
A. Mr. Connor.
2526 Q. And who represented the Union Pacific?
A. Mr. Clifford.
Q. Were you acquainted with Mr. Liston?
A. Yes.
Q. What was his position?
A. He was street man for the Union Pacific.
Q. And who was Mr. Smith?
A. Mr. Smith was also with the Union Pacific, but very seldom called on me. Mr. Liston did, though, and so did Mr. Clifford.
Q. Now, in the days when they had these separate offices here, did the representatives of the Union Pacific and of the Southern Pacific each call on you and solicit your traffic?
A. They did.
Q. And which way did the Southern Pacific people endeavor to route their traffic?
A. New Orleans—Sunset Route.
Q. And the Union Pacific by——
A. Omaha, Overland.

COPY BOUND C

Q. How was that competition—active or otherwise?
A. Active, very.
Q. How do your shipments to Portland move?
A. Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line.
Q. Has that always been so?
A. The last five or six years. Of course the Great Northern got some, and so did the Northern Pacific. In the last five years we have not done much business up there, though.
Q. Have you ever shipped any business to San Francisco by way of the Union Pacific to Portland, and then by boat?
A. No.
Q. You never used the boat line between San Francisco and Portland?
2527 A. No, not the boat line. I think there were a few cars, during a blockade some years ago, from Ogden, that they took to Portland and back. I am not sure about that, though.
Q. From a memorandum I have, I thought you had used the boat-line in a blockade?
A. Traffic was blocked from Ogden and blocked from El Paso, and I think they took some cars up and brought them down on the Shasta route. That is just hearsay, though; I don't know about that.
Q. You don't know about that?
A. No. That was just to accommodate the customers out there.
Q. My memorandum is at fault then; I understood that you did. But your Portland business, as I understand it, then, moves by Union Pacific?
A. Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line.
Q. And formerly went by the Northern Pacific, you say?
A. Yes. That is a long time ago, though. It is controlled on the coast, you know. We sell all our machinery f. o. b. Cincinnati.
Q. Oh, all of your stuff is routed at the other end, is it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. So you do not route anything yourself?
A. No, very seldom.
Q. Do these soliciting agents come in with notifications that stuff has been routed and ask you to respect the routing, at times?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. That is quite frequent, is it?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you ship abroad?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. To the Orient, or only to Europe?
2528 A. Yes, to the Orient, but very seldom by the Pacific coast. It is generally by New York; in fact, we used to send all our foreign business via New York.
Q. How do your shipments to Los Angeles move?
A. By the Santa Fe, via Mazon.
Q. Who routes them?
A. The consignee.

D CLOSE IN CENTER

Q. Do you know an association called the Pacific Machine Dealers' Association?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of which Mr. Gillette is the secretary?

A. Yes.

Q. What does he have to do with routing traffic, if anything?

A. For 'Frisco or Los Angeles you are speaking about now?

Q. Either one.

A. Well, the cars for 'Frisco are made up in the name of the Bradford Machine Tool Company, and the cars for Los Angeles are made up John Steptoe Company.

Q. What does Mr. Gillette have to do with the routing of them?

A. Well, I think Mr. Shinkle looks after the 'Frisco business for Mr. Gillette; that is, they load for him.

Q. Mr. Shinkle here, you mean?

A. Of Mr. Connor's office. And Mr. Fisher of Mr. Thompson's office, looks after the Los Angeles business, I think. Of course we are not supposed to know that.

Q. What I want to get at is this. I will first ask you is your house a member of this Pacific Machine Dealers' Association?

A. They are, yes, sir.

Q. What is that association?

A. More especially during these times it is awful hard to make up a carload right now, and in order to do any business on 2529 the coast, of course we have got to get a carload rate, so all the machinery dealers on the coast are members of this association.

Q. And they bunch their shipments?

A. They bunch their shipments together and make a carload; that is the only way they can do.

Q. And their secretary routes the traffic, doesn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is Mr. Gillette?

A. Mr. Gillette; I believe that is the name.

Q. And does the business to San Francisco, all of it, go Union Pacific?

A. No.

Q. And the business to Los Angeles, all of it, go Santa Fe?

A. Everything for Los Angeles goes Santa Fe, but the 'Frisco business, a whole lot of it, goes by Rock Island and El Paso.

Q. Goes by Rock Island and El Paso?

A. Southern Pacific.

Q. It is divided, is it?

A. In fact, most of it goes that way.

Q. Most of it goes that way?

A. Yes.

Q. But that is all routed out at the other end by this Mr. Gillette?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Representing that lot of dealers and manufacturers?

COPY BOUND

A. That is right, yes.

Q. And no other company participates in the Los Angeles business with the Santa Fe, so far as you know?

A. What is that?

Q. Is there no other company that participates with the Santa Fe in the Los Angeles business?

A. I don't think so, as far as I know.

2530 Q. All of your product goes to Los Angeles by the Santa Fe?

A. Yes, sir; they have their full haul out from Mazon, Illinois, just out of Chicago; they get their full haul.

Q. You mean they take it in train-load?

A. No, each car, you know.

Q. Carload?

A. Yes.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I believe you testified that you never made any shipments to San Francisco by way of Portland.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By boat and water?

A. I never remember of any.

Q. And you never made any to Portland by way of the Sunset line, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, I suppose there are a good many lines soliciting business for California in this territory, aren't there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Rock Island?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Burlington?

A. All of them, all the Northwestern lines—the C. & N. W., the C. M. & St. P., and the Illinois Central.

Q. And the Southwestern lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Southern lines are also soliciting?

A. Yes, sir. Of course we generally refer them to the coast.

Y. Your business is largely controlled from the coast?

A. Largely controlled from the coast.

Q. All business that you ever sent over the Union Pacific for California moved over the Southern Pacific from Ogden, 2531 didn't it?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. The only outlet?

A. The only outlet, of course.

Q. So, whatever business the separate solicitors of the Union Pacific secured for California, was also secured in that way for the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

ND CLOSE IN CENTER

Q. The solicitors of the Southern Pacific, in working for the New Orleans route, if they could not get business that way, would they, as against the Atchison, endeavor to work with the Union Pacific for the Ogden route?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You understand that the shipper is not interested in the division of the rates between the different carriers, participating, don't you? Is that your understanding?

A. Yes.

Q. The shipper is interested only in the aggregate rate, the through rate?

A. The shipper is interested in the through rate.

Q. And not in the divisions of it between the carriers?

A. No; just the through rate, of course.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Do you remember of any instance when Mr. Connor or his representatives tried to work business by Ogden? Didn't he always try to work it by New Orleans?

A. Before they combined?

Q. Yes.

A. Always by New Orleans.

Q. Yes, that is what I thought. So when you said, in answer to Judge Lovett that if he could not get it via New Orleans he would take it by Ogden as against the Atchison, you meant since they have been consolidated?

2532 A. Oh, yes, since they have been consolidated.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Couldn't he do it before?

A. He wanted to have the long haul before.

Q. He would rather have the short haul than let the Atchison get it, wouldn't he?

Mr. SEVERANCE. The question is whether he said anything about it.

A. All of our business generally for ten or twelve years went by New Orleans, up till about four or five years ago. In fact, both our agents route everything via New Orleans; that was our natural route down there always.

Q. So the question of solicitation on the part of the Southern Pacific by the Ogden route did not come to your attention, then?

A. A few cars that way now and then, you know, just to show they were up there.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Those few cars that went every now then were in response to Union Pacific solicitation, weren't they?

A. Yes, sir.

2533 S. F. KEMPER,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Q. Mr. Kemper, where do you live?
A. Cincinnati.
Q. What is your business?
A. Secretary of the Hall Safe Company.
Q. Have you ever had anything to do with their traffic?
A. It has been under my supervision.
Q. Were you ever the traffic manager of the Hall Company?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. From what date?
A. About 1897 up to about two years ago.
Q. The Hall Safe Company manufactures safes?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Steel safes and vaults?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. To what parts of the country do you ship your product?
A. All parts.
Q. Is it a large concern?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Large output?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you ship to the Pacific coast?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you remember, years ago, when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate agencies here?
A. I don't remember it very distinctly, no. I suppose I did know at that time that their——
Q. Did you know Mr. Connor?
A. No, I never met Mr. Connor until today.
2534 Q. Oh, you never met him before. Did you ever know Mr. Welsh?
A. No, sir.
Q. So that you don't remember of their having separate agencies?
A. Oh, I suppose they did, but I never met either one of the gentlemen.
Q. Didn't their solicitors come to see you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Well, I didn't mean necessarily Mr. Connor and Mr. Welsh, but representatives of those two lines came and called on you, soliciting the business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. In which way did the Southern Pacific try to route the business?
A. We never did very much business with them. The Southern Pacific, when they wanted it, wanted it via New Orleans.

Q. And the Union Pacific by Omaha, I suppose?
A. I don't believe we were ever solicited—they must have called on us, but I don't remember much about it.
Q. How does your business chiefly move to the coast?
A. Santa Fe.
Q. And has for a long time?
A. Yes, sir. To California points.
Q. Yes. How do you ship to Portland?
A. The Northern routes—Great Northern and Northern Pacific.
Q. Did you ever ship there by the Union Pacific?
A. Not that I ever recollect of.
Q. Do you have any Oriental business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How do you ship that?
A. Most of it goes by New York.
Q. Any of it go by San Francisco or other coast point?
2535 A. We have had a little of it to go via San Francisco.
Q. Do you remember what steamship line?
A. No, I do not.
Q. Did the Santa Fe take it to San Francisco?
A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I believe you said that practically all your shipments for California go over the Santa Fe, Mr. Kemper?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. None over the Southern Pacific or the Union pacific?
A. We have had a few shipments that way, but not a great quantity of them.
Q. When? recently?
A. I think about the time of the earthquake in San Frascisco.
Q. About the time of the earthquake?
A. Yes.
Q. The earthquake shook the Santa Fe loose, did it? After the earthquake, though, after that temporary state of affairs out there, you resumed shipments by way of the Santa Fe?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How did you say your shipments to Portland move?
A. By the northern routes—Northern Pacific, Great Northern and Canadian Pacific.
Q. You never shipped any that way by the Southern Pacific, did you?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever ship any to San Francisco by way of Portland?
A. No, sir.
Q. Is your business solicited by other lines, Mr. Kemper?
A. We have been, yes.
Q. The Rock Island?
A. Yes.

Q. The Missouri Pacific?

2536 A. Mostly for local business on their lines, though—not for through business.

Q. They do not solicit you for Pacific coast business, then?

A. I suppose they would take it if they got it, but they never come after it.

Q. They gave it up as useless, eh? How about the Missouri Pacific? Does it solicit your business to the coast?

A. Not recently.

Q. The Burlington?

A. For the northwest they do.

Q. But not for California?

A. No.

Q. You don't know how your business would move, I suppose, if it had been given to the Union Pacific, because you never shipped any that way?

A. We never shipped any that way.

2537 J. T. PURSEL, being duly sworn as a witness in behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. What is your business, Mr. Pursel?

A. I have charge of the freight traffic of the Armleder Wagon Works, Cincinnati.

Q. That is a company in Cincinnati, manufacturing carriages and wagons?

A. It is a manufacturer of delivery wagons in Cincinnati, yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been with that company?

A. A little over three years.

Q. Previous to that what was your business?

A. With Frank J. Enger Carriage Company.

Q. And where are they located—in Cincinnati?

A. In Cincinnati.

Q. What is their business?

A. Carriages, vehicles.

Q. Did those two companies with which you have been connected ship their product to the Pacific coast, among other places?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have they, during all the time you have been connected with either one of them?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate agencies here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who represented the Union Pacific?

A. The Union Pacific, when I first knew them, Mr. Welsh.

2538 Q. And later on, who?

A. Mr. Connor.

Q. That is, after the consolidation?

A. Yes. Yes, before the consolidation, too—the Southern Pacific.

Q. Yes, I understand Mr. Connor represented the Southern Pacific, but I asked you about the Union Pacific.

A. Oh, the Union Pacific?

Q. Yes. Mr. Welsh represented them, did he?

A. Yes. I was wrong about that.

Q. Who was he succeeded by, or do you remember anybody succeeding him?

A. I think there was a man by the name of Clifford here, but only for a short while. I don't just remember.

Q. In those days were those two lines competing for Pacific coast business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those two agencies?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that competition active or otherwise?

A. Well, I would consider it active.

Q. They used to call on you to solicit business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way did the Southern Pacific agency endeavor to route its business?

A. Mr. Connor preferred the New Orleans route, of course—the southern route.

Q. Which way did the most of your carriage business move as between these two—via New Orleans or by the Union Pacific?

A. Well, up to the time I went with Armleder it was divided. I hardly know which route got the most.

Q. Was the matter of equipment of importance to you?

A. Very important.

2539 Q. And was the business diverted from one line to another on account of one line being able to furnish equipment superior to that of the other?

A. At times, yes, sir.

Q. How was the Union Pacific in that regard?

A. The Union Pacific, I think, were one of the first to have a large vehicle car; that is my recollection.

Q. And furnishing that car resulted in taking business away from the other lines and giving it to them?

A. In a great many instances, yes.

Q. Since the offices were consolidated, have you been called on and solicited for business by the agent of the joint lines?

A. Well, I have been called on by the representative, Mr. Shinkle.

Q. That is what I mean.

A. Yes.

Q. Does he express any preference between the New Orleans route and the Union Pacific route?

A. Well, no, I don't think he does with me.

Q. When you were with the Frank J. Enger Company, did you ship to Portland?

A. Well, we possibly did, but if we did I haven't any recollection of any shipments now. It is very likely we did.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You never shipped to Portland by way of the Sunset Route, did you, Mr. Pursel?

A. No, sir, I never did.

Q. Nor to San Francisco by way of Portland and by boat from Portland down to San Francisco?

A. No, sir.

2540 Q. Such business as you shipped to California by way of the Union Pacific, either at the solicitation of the Union Pacific agent or for other reasons, moved over the Southern Pacific from Ogden to destination, did it not?

A. I presume it did. There was no other way to get it there at that time.

Q. That is your understanding?

A. Yes.

Q. There was no other way to get there except over the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are not interested in the division of the through rate as between the different carriers?

A. No. The through rate is all we are interested in.

2541 CHARLES BERNDT,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Berndt, what is your business?

A. I am traffic manager of the Andrew Jergens Company.

Q. What is the business of the Andrew Jergens Company?

A. Why, toilet soaps, perfumes, talcum powders, Florida water.

Q. Is it a large concern?

A. Yes, it is a pretty good-sized concern.

Q. To what parts of the country do you ship your product?

A. Why, almost all over.

Q. How long have you been with them?

A. Twenty-three years.

Q. Do you ship to the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Over what lines does your traffic chiefly move to California points now?

A. At the present time over the Santa Fe.

Q. What is the reason that you send it by the Santa Fe, if you have any special reason?

A. Nothing in particular. It is a little bit better time.

Q. A little bit better time?

A. Yes.

Q. And you figure that it is important to shippers to get the time, do you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is one way of getting business, isn't it—furnishing it?

A. That is the object.

Q. Did you formerly ship some over the Union Pacific?

2542 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever shipped by the Southern Pacific, by New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Lately?

A. No, not for the past year, that I can recall.

Q. Did you ever ship very much that way?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Does the same reason apply for not shipping by the Southern Pacific which you gave for not shipping by the Union Pacific, and giving your business to the Santa Fe—that is, that the Santa Fe gave you better time?

A. Better time, that is the only reason.

Q. Than either of the others?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific each had separate agencies here?

A. Yes, sir, I recall.

Q. And were you solicited by both of those agencies for your business?

A. Well, not very much.

Q. Were you at all?

A. Yes, some.

Q. And they were in competition with each other, weren't they?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And at the present time you know there is only one agent here?

A. Yes.

Q. Has this agent called on you?

A. Occasionally.

Q. Who is the gentleman that calls?

A. Mr. Shinkle.

Q. Does he express any preference between the two lines?

A. No, sir.

Q. What transcontinental lines take your traffic to Portland?
2543 A. The Chicago & Northwestern, the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line. That is the way we have been shipping.
Q. You still ship that way?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And have for a long time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do the northern lines endeavor to get it? Do they come to see you about it—the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific?
A. Well, they do occasionally, but we never use them that way.
Q. You give it all to the Union Pacific?
A. Yes.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You never shipped to Portland by way of the Southern Pacific, did you, Mr. Berndt?
A. No, sir.
Q. Nor to San Francisco by way of Portland and boat line?
A. No, sir.
Q. You say you ship now to California exclusively by the Santa Fe?
A. Well, not exactly exclusively, but the bulk of it by the Santa Fe.
Q. And some goes by way of the Union Pacific?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. That which goes by the Union Pacific, goes over the Southern Pacific from Ogden, doesn't it?
A. From Ogden, yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE. That is the slow route.
Q. You ship your slow freight—your dead freight—by the Union Pacific, do you?
A. Well, what I mean is, we have occasionally an order that the consignee asks us to ship that way; otherwise not.
Q. Do you realize, Mr. Berndt, that you are the only man who has discovered that the Union Pacific was a slow route, 2544 of all the witnesses who have been examined?
(No response.)

2545 WILLIAM PISTER,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Pister, where do you live?
A. Cincinnati, Ohio.
Q. What is your business?
A. Traffic manager for the Christian Moerlein Brewing Company, Cincinnati.

Q. That is a very large brewery, is it not?

A. So recognized; quite large; ranks about sixth in the United States.

Q. In previous years have you shipped to the Pacific coast to a considerable extent?

A. We had some shipments to California up to about three years ago; possibly four years ago.

Q. Yes. I understand at the present time you are not shipping there, but you used to ship there?

A. Yes; we formerly shipped there.

Q. How long have you been traffic manager of that brewing company?

A. About seven years.

Q. Since you have been in charge of their traffic, the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific have all the time had their joint agency, haven't they?

A. Yes.

Q. They have not had separate agencies. Has your business been solicited by the representatives of that agency?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have they expressed any preference as between the Union Pacific route and the New Orleans route?

A. No, sir, they did not. We designated that ourselves, 2546 according to the seasons of the year. In the winter months we would run it through the New Orleans gateways, and in the summer months it made no difference about beer. We would let it go through Ogden and Omaha. I do not believe they ever got anything through Ogden.

Q. How is that?

A. I say I do not believe we ever shipped in connection with the Union Pacific, but we did ship via the Santa Fe and other northern lines.

Q. Have you shipped to north Pacific coast points?

A. No, sir, we do not.

Q. You were not controlling that traffic when the separate agencies existed here?

A. No, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I believe you said you never shipped via the Union Pacific, so far as you recall?

A. No, sir. I am almost positive that we never used the Union Pacific.

Q. You never have shipped to Portland by the Southern Pacific?

A. No, sir, not in my time.

Q. You never knew of any shipped that way?

A. No, sir, I have never heard of any out that far.

Q. Did you ever ship any to Portland by way of Ogden?

A. No, sir.

COPY BOUND CL

Q. To San Francisco, by way of Ogden?

A. By way of Ogden, no, sir. Well, yes, we did via Ogden, but it was in connection with the D. & R. G. and other lines, but not in connection with the Union Pacific.

2547 Mr. SEVERANCE. I can not hear.

Mr. LOVETT. He says that he shipped by way of Ogden, but it was by the Denver & Rio Grande and its connecting lines and not by the Union Pacific.

Q. That has been in recent years, has it?

A. Yes.

2548 MAURICE J. FREIBERG,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. What is your business, Mr. Freiberg?

A. Distiller.

Q. How long have you been in that business?

A. Since 1879.

Q. At what place?

A. Cincinnati.

Q. And what is the name of your concern?

A. Freiberg & Workum Company.

Q. Have you had knowledge of the traffic?

A. I have had knowledge of the traffic in a general way; I have not had anything to do with the details of shipping for a number of years, but at one time I did.

Q. Up to what time, did you?

A. Up to about 1884.

Q. To what parts of the country do you ship your product?

A. All parts.

Q. Including the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You know Mr. Connor, don't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know Mr. Welsh?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Liston?

A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't know him?

A. I don't remember him. I would like to say in that connection I may have known him and don't remember his name, but I don't remember an agent by the name of Liston.

Q. At the time when Mr. Connor represented the Southern 2549 Pacific alone and the Union Pacific had its own agency here, were those two agencies competing for coast business?

A. Yes, sir.

CLOSE IN CENTER

Q. Actively?

A. Certainly.

Q. Which way did Mr. Connor endeavor to route his shipments—or his office, I mean? I don't mean Mr. Connor personally.

A. I would have to say in that connection explanatory that our shipments to the coast are all made and all have been made to one concern, and that one concern has always insisted upon the privilege of routing its own shipments, and they have always given us the routing.

Q. What is the name of that concern?

A. It is now the Crown Distilleries Company, formerly Lillienthal Company.

Q. How was that traffic to that concern routed from here to San Francisco, formerly?

A. All ways, all kinds of ways, and is still.

Q. Do they still control the routing?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say all ways. That included the New Orleans route, I suppose?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you now shipping anything by that route?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you sent any business by the American-Hawaiian line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did that move—around the Horn?

A. Around the Horn, I presume; went via New York.

Q. Recently or some time ago?

A. Oh, quite recently, within the last few months.

Q. How has your business moved to Portland, Oregon?

2550 A. To Portland, by the northern routes as a rule.

Q. You mean the Great Northern and Northern Pacific?

A. The Great Northern and Northern Pacific.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Which way does your business that goes to California over the Union Pacific move westward—over the Southern Pacific?

A. How else could it go?

Q. That is just what I was asking.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. There is no other way for it to go?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Your business is solicited by all lines leading to the south and southwest and west for California points, is it not?

A. Well, I would have to give the same explanation that I gave before—that our business is not solicited as much as it would be if it were not for the fact that all the railroads know that the routing is not in our hands.

Q. How long has that condition existed?

A. Ever since the firm has been in San Francisco, since 1870.

Q. During the time that there was separate solicitation by the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, about which you were asked that condition existed then, did it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, they were not the only ones who solicited you at that time, were they?

A. On San Francisco freight?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't quite understand the question.

2551 Q. The question is whether the agents of other lines interested in transportation toward the Pacific coast, as well as the agents of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, solicited your business?

A. Oh, certainly.

Q. You were solicited by lines leading to the southwest, such as the Queen & Crescent, the Louisville & Nashville and the Illinois Central?

A. Surely.

Q. And lines leading to the northwest and west, and even the northern lines?

A. Surely. The consignee, as a rule, gave the routing in full, even to the name of the initial line.

Q. You never shipped any by way of Portland and boat, did you?

A. For San Francisco?

Q. Yes.

A. For California points via Portland?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir.

Q. Nor to Portland by way of the Sunset Route?

A. No, not that I remember. I don't believe we ever did.

JOHN A. COAKLEY,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE.

Q. Mr. Coakley, where do you live?

A. Cleveland, Ohio.

Q. What is your business?

A. Division freight agent for the American Steel & Wire Company, Cleveland.

Q. And what are your functions in that position?

A. To care for the interests of my company in the handling of traffic.

Q. How long have you occupied that position?

A. I have been located at Cleveland since June, 1904. Prior to that time I was located at Pittsburg, in a similar capacity.

2554 Q. For how long?

A. Since June, 1901.

Q. Previous to June, 1901, what was your business?

A. For six months in 1901 I was with the Q. & C. as traveling freight agent. Prior to that time I was for two years with the American Steel Hoop Company, as chief clerk to the traffic manager. Prior to that time I was engaged in various clerical capacities with the Baltimore & Ohio, the Pittsburg & Western and the Pennsylvania Company.

Q. Where were you located when you were with the Queen & Crescent?

A. Traveling freight agent at Pittsburg, in the Park Building.

Q. And through what district or territory did you travel?

A. What is known as the Pittsburg district, which might be considered as the territory west of Buffalo and Pittsburg as far as the Ohio state line.

Q. At the time you were with the Queen & Crescent, were you acquainted with the representatives of the Southern Pacific Company in that district?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were they?

A. George G. Herring was the commercial agent of the Southern Pacific at Pittsburg at that time, and I believe his assistant was Dennis Crowley, traveling freight agent.

Q. Did you know the representatives of the Union Pacific?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who were they?
A. Joe Toynbee, of Pittsburg.
Q. As representing the Queen & Crescent, were you interested in transcontinental traffic?
A. Yes, sir.
2555 Q. In connection with which, if either, of those agencies were you working for transcontinental traffic?
A. The Southern Pacific agency.
Q. At that time were those two agencies competing with each other for transcontinental business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Which way did the Southern Pacific people endeavor to route their traffic to the coast?
A. Via New Orleans and via El Paso. They tried to get the long haul wherever they could.
Q. And the Union Pacific?
A. Via Omaha.
Q. How was that competition between these agencies; was it active or otherwise?
A. Active.
Q. How does the coast business of the American Steel & Wire Company in your territory move now?
A. Principally via Omaha. At times we ship considerable via El Paso, but the bulk of it moves via Omaha, on account of the shorter mileage and quicker time.
Q. Did traffic formerly move from this territory by way of New Orleans?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long ago did that stop?
A. We have not moved any via New Orleans since I have been in Cleveland, that is, since June, 1904.
Q. Do you know any reason why the business does not move via New Orleans from this territory as it formerly did?
A. I would consider it an unnatural gateway. I should say, roughly speaking, the mileage is about 900 miles longer that way than via Omaha. The time would be anywhere from six to 2556 eight days longer in transit.
Q. How did it happen that business formerly moved by that route? It was just as long then as it is now.
A. Well, it is probably due to the personal influence of the representative of the Southern Pacific.
Q. Who was the Southern Pacific representative in this district at that time—Mr. Connor?
A. I was not located here prior to 1904, but I should say Mr. Herring probably looked after this territory. He was a Pittsburg man. Either he or the Cincinnati man.
Q. You know Mr. Connor, do you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember of any business formerly moving to San Francisco by the Canadian Pacific, Mr. Coakley?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember about when that was?

A. There used to be quite a large volume of it move that way. They had a differential rate; and on that differential rate being withdrawn the movement practically discontinued.

Q. Did that move to Vancouver by rail and then by boat to San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are speaking of the large volume. From what district do you mean?

A. The Pittsburg district is the district I was familiar with prior to 1904.

Q. What was the character of the traffic that moved that way?

A. I should say general. Iron, steel and merchandise.

Q. Are you called upon by the traffic agents of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific at present?

A. Yes, sir.

2557 Q. Have you been for some years since you have been in Cleveland?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do they have separate agencies now, or does the same agent represent them both?

A. The same gentlemen represent both companies now.

Q. Who are they?

A. W. H. Connor and George Hild.

Q. Where does Mr. Hild live?

A. I believe he resides in Cincinnati. He travels out of Mr. Connor's office. He is Mr. Connor's subordinate.

Q. In soliciting coast business do Mr. Connor and Mr. Hild work for either line as against the other, or for both lines?

A. They aim to get the long haul by Omaha, and if they cannot get it that way they take whatever haul they can get. I would regard the competition between the companies and the Santa Fe as very active.

Q. Do they seek to route traffic now via New Orleans?

A. Not particularly. Their solicitation is of a general character.

Q. That is, they solicit for the two companies, do they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Without any discrimination between the two?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your opinion, Mr. Coakley, as to the value or efficiency of soliciting agents of the transcontinental lines in this territory?

A. I consider them very valuable and of considerable benefit to the company I represent.

Q. In what way?

A. They furnish us with rate advices; keep us posted on 2558 contemplated changes in classifications in which we are interested; and they expedite the movement of freight.

Q. What is your view about their value to the railroads that they represent, in the way of getting business?

A. I consider that they are of considerable value to the railroads.

Q. In securing business for the lines they represent?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You said that Mr. Connor's office is competing actively with the Santa Fe for California business. Does the Santa Fe maintain solicitors in this district?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is the competition between Mr. Connor's office and the Santa Fe office that you refer to, is it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How does your traffic move to the north Pacific coast points?

A. During the season of navigation it practically moves exclusively by boat, via Duluth, the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific, and the Omaha, which is a connection of the Union Pacific; and during the season when lake navigation is not open, it moves via Chicago and St. Paul. We aim to divide it pretty equally.

Q. You aim to divide it equally?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say it moves by the lakes to Duluth, and then by the Omaha road to Omaha?

A. Some of it, yes, sir; for instance, business for Portland.

Q. Yes; that is what I mean.

A. Yes.

Q. Does some of your Portland business go by the Northern 2559 Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And by the Great Northern?

A. And by the Great Northern, and some by the Canadian Pacific.

Q. How does the Canadian Pacific reach Portland?

A. I believe they go in over the O. R. & N. tracks from Spokane.

Q. How is the competition, if any, between those lines for Portland business?

A. Very keen.

Q. How does your business for Seattle and Tacoma move?

A. About the same way as the Portland.

Q. Does the Union Pacific share in that business or does that go by the other line?

A. We aim to divide it equally among all of the lines.

Q. Is your traffic out of Cleveland a large traffic?

A. I should say it amounts to probably 10,000 tons in a season.

Q. The transcontinental traffic?

A. Yes, sir. That is, I mean the north Pacific coast traffic.

Q. The north Pacific coast traffic?

A. The north Pacific coast traffic.

Q. What would you say about your California traffic?
A. Probably 40,000 to 50,000 tons to Central California.
Q. That moves, you say, over the Santa Fe and the Union Pacific?
A. And the Union Pacific. We do give the Rock Island and the El Paso gateway a proportion of it, but it is not a very large proportion compared with the total amount.

Q. Does any of that move over the San Pedro route from 2560 Salt Lake City?

A. A large proportion of the Los Angeles business moves over the San Pedro, but none of the San Francisco.
Q. If you know, Mr. Coakley, how does the tonnage of the American Steel & Wire Company for the coast compare with that of any other shipper in Cleveland?
A. I haven't any idea of that. I could not say.
Q. Well, it is one of the largest, if not the largest, shipper, is it not?
A. I should imagine so; yes, sir.

Cross-examination, by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Did I understand you to say that the Union Pacific got any of your business for Tacoma and Seattle, Mr. Coakley?
A. They do for Seattle. I would not say for Tacoma; no, sir.
Q. How does that move?
A. No—I beg to be corrected there.
Q. The Union Pacific does not get any of your business for Seattle?
A. No Seattle business; no, sir.
Q. Nor for Tacoma, does it?
A. No, sir.
Q. With reference to the agencies and the service performed by a soliciting traffic agent: Have you been satisfied in that respect with the service you have gotten from Mr. Connor and his assistants since the combination of the agencies?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. They have served all of your purposes, so far as you are concerned, have they not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. During what period was it that you say you were connected with the Queen & Crescent as soliciting agent? I did not catch it.
A. I was six months with them. From January, 1901, to June, 1901.

2561 Q. And during that time you sought, of course, to work business from the Pittsburg territory by way of New Orleans to the Pacific coast?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. About how far did that traffic have to move before reaching the Southern Pacific, from point of origin to New Orleans?
A. I should say from one thousand to twelve hundred miles.
Q. Such traffic as moved then, or as moves now, to points on the Pacific coast south of Portland, over the Union Pacific, had to move also over the Southern Pacific to reach destination, had it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, from Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It would move over the Union Pacific to Ogden and then by the Southern Pacific to final destination?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Since the opening of the San Pedro line, that for Southern California, I believe you say—that is, for Los Angeles—moves generally over the San Pedro?

A. Yes, sir; a large proportion of it.

Q. You have testified, I believe, that formerly a considerable amount of traffic moved by way of New Orleans to the Pacific coast—I think perhaps you were speaking especially of your company—but that now it practically moves the direct all-rail route?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you attribute that, in a large measure, to the personnel of the agents, I believe. Now, wouldn't you say, Mr. Coakley, that there has been a very great improvement in the all-rail line to the Pacific coast, and the service has been enormously improved, in recent years?

A. Yes, sir.

2562 Q. Has not that had a very influential effect in routing traffic that way?

A. You mean now via the Central gateway?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do not understand that the shipper is at all interested in the division of rates between the different carriers, do you?

A. No, sir.

Q. The shipper is interested only in the aggregate rate; and just how it is divided between the railroads is not a matter of any concern to the shipper?

A. No, sir.

Q. There are a number of lines soliciting traffic from this territory to the Pacific coast, are there not?

A. A great many.

Q. The lines leading to New Orleans still solicit that way, do they not?

A. Not actively, no, sir.

Q. The Louisville & Nashville and the Illinois Central?

A. No, sir.

Q. They are not actively soliciting from this territory by way of New Orleans?

A. No, sir.

Q. Distance and time being against them?

A. We have been given to understand that the division of the rate allowed them is so small that the business is unremunerative, on account of the large mileage.

Q. So they do not solicit actively any more from this territory?

A. No, sir.

Q. How about the lines leading southwesterly to El Paso, such as the Missouri Pacific system?

A. They solicit that business very actively.

2563 Q. The Rock Island?

A. The M. K. & T., the Kansas City, Mexican & Orient, the Rock Island.

Q. They actively solicit business still by way of El Paso?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then the lines leading westerly to a connection with the Denver & Rio Grande or the Union Pacific?

A. The Colorado Midland.

Q. And the Colorado Midland—that is, such as the Burlington, the North-Western, the St. Paul, and the intermediate lines, Chicago & Alton——

A. Very active in their solicitation.

Q. ——the Clover Leaf, and all of those lines actively solicit?

A. Very actively.

Q. The Big Four system—the New York Central lines—they actively solicit business?

A. Yes, very actively.

Q. Such business as would move over the St. Paul, or the North-Western, or the Burlington, or the Rock Island, or the Missouri Pacific, or the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, to California points, would ultimately pass over the Southern Pacific, would it not—either the Southern Pacific or the San Pedro?

A. Yes, sir, except possibly the Santa Fe via Pueblo.

Q. Well, if they would deliver it to the Santa Fe, these intermediate carriers would be getting the short haul, would they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Ordinarily, railroads do not like that?

A. No. They aim to get the long haul wherever they can.

2564 Re-direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Judge Lovett asked you if there had not been great improvement in the physical condition of the railroads west of the Missouri River; you answered there had; that has had some effect on traffic. There has been great improvement in the Santa Fe, has there not?

A. Yes, sir; I should say general improvement in both companies.

Q. And there has been a great improvement in the Sunset Route of the Southern Pacific, has there not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They have spent a great deal of money from New Orleans to the coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that the improvement has not been confined to any one line?

A. No, sir.

Q. As you understand it, in the last seven or eight years all the railroads in the country, practically, have made very great improvement in their rolling stock and in their permanent way, haven't they?

COPY BOUND C

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated, in answer to Judge Lovett, that the Queen & Crescent and Louisville & Nashville were not as actively soliciting business by New Orleans as formerly. I think you said it was because of some change in the divisions?

A. That is the impression that we have. I could not testify to that as a fact. It is simply an impression that I have of the solicitation they made of me.

2565 Q. That is, that the Southern Pacific gets a larger share of the through rate?

A. No; the L. & N. and the Q. & C. get such a small revenue per car out of it that they would prefer to have other business.

Q. Oh, you do not mean that there is a change in the division?

A. There is not a change in the through rate, but I do not know whether the divisions are the same that were in effect formerly, or not. I am not competent to testify to that.

Q. The Q. & C., and the L. & N., do not refuse to handle that traffic?

A. No, sir.

Q. And some of it is handled that way, is it not?

A. Some of it is handled that way, yes, sir.

Q. So then, the real reason why the traffic has fallen off that way is the reason you assigned on your direct examination, is it not—that the solicitation of traffic that way by the Southern Pacific has lessened?

A. That is one reason. And the improved service and shorter line mileage via Omaha is the basic reason, I should say.

Q. The mileage is not much shorter via Omaha than it was in the old days, is it?

A. No; and probably the bulk of it moved that way in the old days.

Q. At the time when these two agencies were competing for business and the business was divided between the New Orleans gateway and the Omaha gateway, the comparative mileage was the same as it is now, substantially, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And both lines have been much improved?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that there is really no valid reason that you can assign for the lessening of business via the New Orleans gateway, except 2566 the fact that they are not fighting for business that way as they used to?

A. Ostensibly the conditions are just the same as they were, as you have stated, yes, sir.

Q. And the business moves the other way because they try to move it the other way?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By "the other way" I mean by Omaha.

A. Yes.

2567 F. W. BOLTZ,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Boltz, where do you live?
A. Cleveland, Ohio.
Q. How long have you lived in Cleveland?
A. A little over forty-five years.
Q. What is your business?
A. Traffic manager of the National Petroleum Association.
Q. How long have you occupied that position?
A. About three years.
Q. Previous to that what was your business?
A. I was engaged in the mercantile business for a period of a little over four years. Prior to that I was in the railroad service in the service of various railroad companies.
Q. Will you please state the names of the railroads in whose service you were engaged, the nature of the service which you performed, and the dates, as near as you can.
A. I was engaged in the service of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad, in this city, in the general freight department, from 1881 until 1887, at which time I engaged in the service of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, as traveling freight agent, and subsequently as commercial agent of that line here at Cleveland. I was in the service of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul at Cleveland until 1898, at which time I was transferred to Sioux City
2568 as division freight and passenger agent at that point. I left the service of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul on January 1, 1899, I believe, and went into the service of the Iowa Central Railway as general agent at Cleveland, and remained with that company for a period of about three years, and then entered into the mercantile business at Cleveland.
Q. During the time when you were railroading here in Cleveland, previous to the consolidation of the agencies of the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific, were you acquainted with the gentlemen who represented those respective lines in this territory?
A. I was, yes, sir.
Q. Who were they?
A. Mr. J. D. Welsh was general agent of the Union Pacific Railway, located at Cincinnati, and had jurisdiction over this northern Ohio territory for the Union Pacific road. Mr. W. H. Connor was the representative of the Southern Pacific line, with headquarters at Cincinnati, having charge of the business from this territory for the Southern Pacific line.
Q. Did those gentlemen have subordinates who personally worked this territory?
A. Yes. The Union Pacific had Mr. A. G. Shearman, whose title, I believe, was freight and passenger agent, located here at Cleveland, and who had charge of the freight and passenger business for the Union Pacific Railroad, under Mr. J. D. Welsh. Subsequently Mr. D. W. Johnson (I think his initials are D. W.) represented the Union Pacific here at Cleveland, reporting direct to headquarters at Omaha.

COPY BOUND

Q. Did Mr. Connor have some subordinates in this territory?

2569 A. Yes, sir. Mr. Connor had traveling freight agents who covered this territory under his direction, but, outside of Mr. Hild, I do not recall their names.

Q. On transcontinental business which way did the Southern Pacific agents endeavor to route their traffic to the coast?

A. Why, they almost invariably endeavored to route it via the New Orleans gateway, in order to obtain the long haul for their line, I assume.

Q. Which way did the Union Pacific people endeavor to route their traffic?

A. Via the Omaha and Ogden gateway.

Q. As the agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul here at Cleveland, did you participate in the solicitation of business to the coast?

A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. In connection with which one of these routes?

A. In connection with the Union Pacific line via Omaha or Kansas City.

Q. How was this competition between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, as to being active or otherwise?

A. It was extremely active in those days.

Q. In what way did this activity show itself?

A. Well, the representatives of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific lines were actively engaged as competitors in securing as much business as possible for their respective lines, and the Union Pacific endeavored to handle their business in connection with the lines via the Missouri River gateways; whereas, the Southern Pacific handled almost their entire business via the New Orleans gateway.

2570 Q. How would you say the traffic was divided in those days? Could you give any estimate as to percentages?

A. No; I would simply be guessing, and I would not want to guess at it. I am unable to state as to the approximate amount of business secured by each line.

Q. Was there a substantial business via New Orleans?

A. There was considerable business moved via the New Orleans gateway from this territory.

Q. As the agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, did you run up against the competition of the Southern Pacific for that business?

A. Frequently.

Q. Where were you at the time the agencies of the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific in this territory were consolidated? Were you in Cleveland then?

A. To the best of my recollection that consolidation occurred in 1901, although I am not absolutely positive as to the date. My recollection is, however, that that was about the time; and I was then in the service of the Iowa Central Railway.

Q. You say you were with the Iowa Central. You represented them here at Cleveland, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were their general agent?

A. I had charge of their eastern business, with headquarters at Cleveland.

Q. When this consolidation of agencies took place, who was placed in charge of the joint business of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific? Of course we understand it was all 2571 placed in charge of Mr. Connor; but who was there under him here at Cleveland, if anyone?

A. I do not recollect that they ever had a joint agent located at Cleveland. Mr. D. W. Johnson was at that time representing the Union Pacific system, but his jurisdiction did not extend over the Southern Pacific, and, for that reason, I believe that I am wrong as to the date of the merger, because Mr. Connor subsequently came to Cleveland, and his jurisdiction extended over both the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific. Mr. Johnson, however, did not represent the Southern Pacific, as I recall it; and, to the best of my recollection, the Southern Pacific did not have a representative located here. Mr. Connor came here himself and was represented by subordinates.

Q. Who traveled?

A. Who traveled under his directions.

Q. And you had no regular general agent located here in Cleveland?

A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Johnson left the service of the company, of the Union Pacific, when the consolidation took place, or shortly after, did he not?

A. I am unable to remember the dates.

Mr. LOVETT. The consolidation of the agencies took place in September, 1901.

Q. Judge Lovett says that the consolidation was in September, 1901; so you were correct as to the date.

A. Yes.

Q. After the consolidation of the agencies took place, what traveling freight agents, or solicitors under Mr. Connor, worked this particular territory, if you know?

A. Mr. J. Stanley Orr, I think, was one of their repre-
2572 sentatives, and Mr. George Hild another, traveling under Mr. Connor.

Q. You state that you are at present and for two years or more have been the traffic manager of the National Petroleum Association?

A. Yes, sir; for a period of nearly three years.

Q. What is the business of that association?

A. The National Petroleum Association comprises thirty-odd independent oil refiners, located in the States of Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Kansas, and the Dominion of Canada, who refine a large proportion of various products of petroleum, and ship extensively all over the United States and Canada.

Q. As traffic manager of that association, what are your duties?

A. I have charge of their freight traffic.

Q. You mean routing the traffic?

A. I do not attempt to direct the routing in each specific case, but as a general proposition I have jurisdiction over the routing of their business.

Q. Is that a large traffic?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To what parts of the country do the members of that association ship, Mr. Boltz?

A. They ship all over the United States and Canada and also to foreign countries.

Q. Including the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you called upon by soliciting agents of various lines looking for business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does the joint agent of the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific call on you and solicit business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does this agent express any preference as between the 2573 northern and the central gateways?

A. No, sir.

Q. I mean the southern and the central gateways?

A. No, sir.

Q. By that I mean the New Orleans or Omaha or El Paso or Kansas City.

A. He has never expressed any preference.

Q. He solicits generally for the two lines, does he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do the other transcontinental lines have agents here soliciting business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which lines?

A. The Santa Fe have a representative here.

Q. Over what lines does your traffic move to North Pacific coast points—Portland, Tacoma and Seattle?

A. As a rule, the business for northwest Pacific coast points moves via the northern lines—the Northern Pacific. Some moves via the Union Pacific for Portland, although our business to the north Pacific coast has not been very extensive.

Q. It is greater to California points, is it?

A. Yes, sir. I might say that that has been due very largely to the excessive freight rate.

Q. How is that?

A. That has been due very largely to the excessive freight rate which has existed to the Pacific coast from this territory, together with the fact that up to a period of about two years ago it was the custom to charge for the return of our empty tank cars from the Pacific coast to the Missouri river, which practically prohibited us from entering into successful competition on the coast. That, however, was adjusted about two years ago, since which time we have built up a very nice business on the Pacific coast.

2574 Q. Were the rates the same to the California Pacific coast points as to the north Pacific coast points?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And this suggestion that the rates were excessive applied to the entire coast, did it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that two years ago there was some adjustment of this returning of tank cars?

A. Yes, sir. The former charge of $105 for returning empty tank cars from the Pacific coast to the Missouri River was canceled, at our request, and a readjustment in the rate was made, which enabled us to enter into successful competition to a greater extent than we had before enjoyed.

Q. Where do your refineries ship from to the Pacific coast?

A. From Pittsburg, Cleveland, Finlay, Oil City, Wellsville, New York, Warren, Pennsylvania, and many other refining points where we have refineries located.

Q. Over what lines does your traffic move to California points?

A. I would say that we use all of the transcontinental lines at times. Business for the northwest Pacific coast would probably move over the Northern lines—that is, I mean by that, the Northern Pacific and Great Northern—for San Francisco and points in California; northern California would move via the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, and for Southern California points via the Santa Fe, or possibly via the El Paso gateway and the Southern Pacific.

Q. Does any of your business move via the New Orleans gateway?

A. At the present time very little is moving by the New Orleans gateway, although there has been some slight movement

2575 that way, which was due to the expressed wish of the consignees on the coast, who asked that the business be forwarded via the New Orleans gateway.

Q. Is your traffic usually routed by the consignor, or consignee?

A. No, sir; it is sometimes routed by the consignee. Where business is sold f. o. b. at point of shipment, the consignee directs the routing. That sometimes occurs; but not entirely so.

Q. When the consignee directs the routing, are you in the habit of being called on by the local agents of the line over which the car has been routed, who have received advice from the west that requests you to respect that routing?

A. I do not believe I have ever had an experience of that kind, I do not recall it, since I have been in the service of the National Petroleum Association. That frequently occurred, however, when I was in the railroad service.

Q. It is a usual thing, is it not?

A. It is quite customary, yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever know of traffic to California points moving via the Canadian Pacific and boat line from Vancouver?

A. I have known considerable business to move via the Canadian Pacific Vancouver route, and sailing line from there to San Francisco, in the old days, for the reason that there was a differential rate in effect via that gateway.

Q. What kind of traffic moved that way?

A. Well, I do not recall any specific shipment; although it was natural to assume that traffic which would bear transfer 2576 would move via that gateway—handling from the cars to the steamers and from the steamer back to the cars, at Vancouver and at San Francisco.

Q. Does all of the product of the National Petroleum Association move in tank cars?

A. No, sir. The great bulk of it does, however.

Q. Do the shippers own their own cars?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your opinion, Mr. Boltz, from your experience, as to the desirability of railroad companies (transcontinental lines) seeking business in this territory to the coast, maintaining officials here on the ground, a soliciting office, for the purpose of getting business?

A. I should say that it was the wise thing for them to do, for the reason that a line which is represented in a certain city or district is, unquestionably, able to secure a greater volume of business for their line than if they were not so represented.

Q. And if two lines are in competition with each other for business, and one line has a local agent and the other has not, is not the latter line at a disadvantage in securing competitive traffic?

A. I should so consider it, most certainly.

Q. What services are performed for the shippers by the soliciting agencies of railroads?

A. Why, it is frequently the case that shippers desire certain business transported with as little delay as possible. In that case the local representative endeavors to trace the cars through, sometimes by wire, but in every instance endeavors to hasten the delivery of the shipment with as little delay as possible. It also occurs 2577 at times that when changes in rates are pending, local representatives have knowledge of changes that have become effective, and give the information to the shipper, who avails himself of the opportunity to ship during the time when the rates are most advantageous.

Q. What effect does the performance of these services have upon the ability of the soliciting agents to get business from the shippers?

A. Well, a good live wire would naturally secure a great deal more business than one who did not give attention to the detail of the movement of the business and endeavor to give the shipper all the information he could, concerning changes in rates, and so on.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. During what period was it that you represented the North-Western, Mr. Boltz—or was it the St. Paul?

A. The St. Paul. During what years?

Q. Yes.

A. I represented the St. Paul here at Cleveland, from 1887 until 1898.

Q. 1898?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in soliciting traffic for the Pacific coast, over what line did you seek to move it, did you say?

A. We endeavored to move our traffic over the Union Pacific via the Omaha or Kansas City Gateway, and also in connection with other west Missouri River lines, such as the Santa Fe or the Missouri Pacific, and we frequently had business to move via all of the 2578 western Missouri River lines. We were simply seeking the haul to the Missouri River.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I did not hear that question and answer.

Mr. LOVETT. I asked him over what lines he sought to move traffic to the Pacific coast when he was soliciting for the St. Paul, and his answer was "via the Union Pacific and also by other western lines, west of the Missouri River—the Atchison."

Q. The Union Pacific was your preferred connection, though, was it not, Mr. Boltz?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. You moved it that way, whenever you could, by way of Omaha, did you not?

A. Yes, sir. That is, I am speaking now of business for California points.

Q. Yes. Well, that is the business I was inquiring about—business from Portland south.

A. That wasn't especially true to Portland, for the reason that we had other connections via St. Paul that we worked in connection with our business for the northwest Pacific coast.

Q. Including Portland and the northwest—Puget Sound points?

A. Yes.

Q. But for all points south of Portland you preferred the Union Pacific; that is, you sought to move your business that way?

A. The Union Pacific was our natural connection, and we did work very closely with that line.

Q. Such business as you secured by way of the Union Pacific for points south of Portland necessarily went over the Southern Pacific a portion of the way, did it not?

A. Yes, sir, from Ogden west.

2579 Q. Yes, from Ogden west. About how long a haul did you get out of that business from this territory?

A. About 500 miles.

Q. And the Union Pacific about 1,000?

A. I should say perhaps a little over a thousand.

Q. From Omaha to Ogden it is just about 1,000 miles?

A. Yes.

Q. And from Ogden to San Francisco at that time was about 850 miles?

A. Over the Southern Pacific, yes, sir.

Q. So your work in that case inured to the benefit of both the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific necessarily, did it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Union Pacific had no other outlet at that time for business south of Portland than the Southern Pacific, had it?

A. No.

Q. And so, in soliciting for itself, it necessarily solicited for the Southern Pacific, for the haul from Ogden to Pacific coast destinations?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never knew of any attempt to move freight to California points over the Union Pacific and Short Line and Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company to Portland, and thence by boat down to California, did you?

A. To the best of my recollection there was an arrangement whereby business did move for a certain period by the Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line, and steamer line, via Portland for California points, but I have forgotten just what the nature of the arrangement was; nor am I able to state at this time how long that arrangement continued in effect.

Q. Are you able to state positively that there was such an 2580 arrangement?

A. To the best of my recollection there was such an arrangement.

Q. Did you ever attempt to solicit business that way for California points, Mr. Boltz?

A. I did not.

Q. Your solicitation was for the direct line by way of the Union Pacific and the Ogden route of the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was true during the whole period when they had separate agencies, so far as you knew, was it? That is to say, that the Union Pacific and the St. Paul traffic for California was routed over the Union Pacific and over the Southern Pacific by way of Ogden, so far as it could be controlled?

A. Yes, sir; that is true. I do not recall any business having gone via the Portland route just referred to.

Q. Was not your solicitation largely in connection with the Union Pacific agents as against the Atchison line to California?

A. Yes; for the reason that the Atchison had their own line into Chicago and did not work as closely with our line as the Union Pacific did.

Q. So you naturally worked with the Union Pacific as against the Atchison?

A. The Santa Fe, yes, sir.

Q. I believe you stated that the Southern Pacific during that time solicited business preferentially by way of New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did they seek to get it by way of El Paso if they could not get it by way of New Orleans?

2581 A. I am unable to state whether any business moved by the El Paso gateway at that time. I do know of a number of instances where business moved via the New Orleans gateway, but I do not recall any business having moved via the El Paso gateway; but it is my impression that the Southern Pacific endeavored to work as much business as possible via the New Orleans gateway, in preference to the El Paso gateway, for the reason that the New Orleans route would give them the longer haul.

Q. There were a good many other lines, like the St. Paul, soliciting for the Ogden route, weren't there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. There was the Union Pacific, the St. Paul; the North-Western was in the same situation as the St. Paul in that respect, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What other lines would you mention as soliciting, necessarily?

A. Almost all.

Q. The Burlington?

A. Almost all of the eastern lines, the lines east of the Missouri River, lines running from St. Louis, would work in connection with the Missouri Pacific.

Q. Including the Burlington?

A. The Burlington did work some business in connection with the Union Pacific.

Q. And that that it did not work in connection with the Union Pacific it worked in connection with the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It also went over the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In other words, my question had more direct reference to the situation of the Southern Pacific's Ogden route than the Union

2582 Pacific. The Southern Pacific was the outlet for the Denver & Rio Grande, as well as for the Union Pacific at Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that the Burlington, whether working either via the Union Pacific or the Denver & Rio Grande connection, would be working for the Southern Pacific, in either event?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that would be true of the Rock Island, would it not, prior to the opening of its line to El Paso?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And true, also, as to a portion of the Missouri Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Missouri Pacific having two outlets—one by way of Denver, or Pueblo, rather, and the other by way of the Iron Mountain, down through Texas?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Southern Pacific to El Paso?

A. Yes.

Q. So those lines were all in that way working in this territory for the Southern Pacific indirectly as well as for themselves directly?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does the Rock Island actively solicit traffic from this territory for the El Paso route now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Missouri Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Missouri, Kansas & Texas?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And all of the lines leading to the southwest and to the west?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The service of the transcontinental lines—that is, the all-rail lines from here to California, as well as to the northwest—has been very much improved in recent years, has it not, Mr. Boltz?

A. Very materially so; yes, sir.

Q. The route by way of New Orleans was always a pretty good route in the matter of time, was it not?

2583 A. I do not know so much about that, for the reason that I never traced any shipments moved that way. I was not interested in the movement via the New Orleans gateway.

Q. Is it not your understanding that the relative improvement in the all-rail service from here to California—that is, the direct rail service—has been very much greater than by way of New Orleans?

A. I should say there had been very great improvement in the service via New Orleans and the Southern Pacific gateway to the Pacific coast.

Q. That is, including all lines leading in that direction?

A. Via all lines, yes, sir.

Q. Hasn't your interest as a shipper to the Pacific coast been efficiently served by the joint agent, Mr. Connor and his representatives?

A. Yes, sir, I should say so.

Q. Haven't they been diligent in performing all the functions which a commercial agency could do?

A. They have entirely so.

Q. You spoke about some readjustment that occurred. I think you said about two years ago——

A. On May 29th.

Q. ——in reference to charges on return cars. Just what was that, Mr. Boltz?

A. Prior to May 29, 1906, through rates on petroleum to the Pacific coast were made on combination of locals to and from Chicago, and a charge of $105 was assessed for the return of empty tank cars from the Pacific coast to the Missouri River. We endeavored to have the Chicago rate established from all of our refining points in the east to the Pacific coast, which was the basis in effect on 2584 various other commodities, and asked that the return charge of $105 per car for the empty tank cars, be eliminated. After a conference with the representatives of the transcontinental lines, held at Chicago in April, 1906, they agreed to establish a blanket rate of 90 cents per hundred on our products, from all points east of the Missouri River to the Pacific coast terminals, and to waive the charge of $105 formerly made for returning empty tank cars. That arrangement continued in effect until January 1st of this year, at which time the rate was advanced to $1.00 per hundred pounds.

Q. How about the return charge? That wasn't made?

A. No, sir. The cars are now returned free.

Q. The arrangements you described went into effect on May 29, 1906?

A. May 29, 1906.

Q. And continued in effect until the first of January, 1909?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When the rate was advanced from 90 cents to a dollar a hundred?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But still with no charge for the return of the car?

A. That is correct, yes, sir.

Q. Do you happen to recall that when the charge for the return car was abolished in May, 1906, that the rate which was formerly 80 cents from Chicago west, was advanced to 90 cents also?

A. From 78½ to 90. The rate was 78½ cents. It was advanced to 90 cents.

Q. Yes. The same rate made for all this territory?

A. Yes, sir.

2585 Q. I believe you stated that your shipments to the Pacific coast—that is, for the companies that you represent now—are not very large?

A. There has been a very decided increase in our Pacific coast trade since the blanket rate of 90 cents per hundred pounds was made effective. The advance to $1.00 per hundred pounds, however, will again eliminate competition on the coast, so far as the independent refiners are concerned, to a very great extent.

Q. Well, by the advance, or putting the rate at 90 cents, and the abolition of the charge for the return car, and by the increase of the Chicago rate to 90 cents, you were put on an equality with the territory about Chicago, too, weren't you?

A. Yes, sir; we were put on an equality with the Whiting and Wood River refineries of the Standard Oil Company, but were unable to meet the local competition on the coast.

Q. There is a very large oil production in California, is there not?

A. Very large, yes, sir.

Q. That continues now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is in Southern California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there any production in the Puget Sound territory?

A. Not to my knowledge; although there is considerable movement from California to——

Q. By water?

A. ——not only to Puget Sound territory, but back as far east as Spokane.

Q. But the production is in California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Southern California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, that I suppose also accounts somewhat for the 2586 fact that your business in Southern California is not larger, does it not?

A. Oh, yes. If there were no local production there we would of course be enabled to do a much larger business on the coast.

Q. You never shipped anything to Portland at any time by way of New Orleans and the Sunset route, did you, Mr. Boltz?

A. No, sir; not to my knowledge.

Q. Shippers are not interested in the division of the through rate as between the carriers, are they?

A. They have no reason to be. I do not believe they are.

Q. You know of no reason why they should be?

A. I do not know of any reason why they should be interested.

Re-direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. You stated that you had a meeting with the Transcontinental Traffic Association—some representatives of that association in Chicago—and this rate adjustment was made. When was that conference?

A. The conference was early in April, 1906.

Q. Do you recall who represented the different lines at that conference?

A. I can recall some of the representatives who were present. Mr. G. W. Luce, general freight agent of the Southern Pacific line at San Francisco; Mr. Edward Chambers, assistant freight traffic manager of the Santa Fe line at San Francisco was present; Mr.

John Baird, general freight agent of the Northern Pacific at St. Paul was present; and a number of other representatives, but I 2587 cannot recall their names at the present moment.

Q. Do you remember whether someone there represented the Union Pacific, or did Mr. Luce represent both the Southern and the Union Pacific?

A. As I understand it, Mr. Luce represented both the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific lines.

Q. How is that?

A. As I understand it, Mr. Luce represented both the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific; although I am under the impression that Mr. J. A. Munroe was also present; at least he was in Chicago at the time, and I think perhaps represented the Union Pacific line in the meeting, although I am not positive as to that.

Q. Prior to that time what had been your rate from here to California?

A. The rate from all points east of Chicago was based on the combination of locals to and from Chicago; that is, by taking the rate from the point of origin to Chicago, added to the 78½-cent rate beyond.

Q. Whiting, Indiana, takes the Chicago rate, does it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that previous to this adjustment the Standard Oil refineries at Whiting had the 78½-cent Chicago rate?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your refineries farther east paid that rate in addition to the local rate into Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you say the rate was advanced from Chicago and blanketed over this territory?

A. Yes, sir, the 90-cent rate was established from all points east of the Missouri River.

2588 Q. What is the revenue that the railroads receive on a 90-cent rate—ordinary tank car?

A. Why, I have forgotten what the divisions are.

Q. I do not mean the divisions; I mean what is the total freight per carload. What is the weight of a tank?

A. Oh, the weight?

Q. Yes. How much do they get?

A. The weight of an ordinary tank car would probably be about 50,000 pounds. That would be about a fair average, I think.

Q. That would be, at 90 cents, $450 a car?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the previous rate from Chicago had been 78½ cents?

A. 78½ cents, yes, sir.

Q. The increase was 11½ cents?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they eliminated the return charge, you say, of $105 a car?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Previous to that rate adjustment were your companies able to do any business on the coast in competition with Chicago?

A. We were able to do a very limited amount of business on the coast.

Q. Well, after that 90-cent rate went into effect, how were you situated?

A. The business increased very materially from that time on; that is, as soon as they could get their traveling men at work and have them show results.

Q. How is that, sir?

A. As soon as they could get their traveling men at work in the field and give an opportunity to show results, I say.

2589 Q. You mean the traveling men of the oil companies?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you were able to do business into that territory to a very large extent after that rate adjustment?

A. To a very considerable extent, yes, sir.

Q. You stated that on the first of January, 1909, that rate was advanced to a dollar?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What effect has that had on your business?

A. It has had the effect of preventing our entering into successful competition on the coast, and has compelled some of our people, who have contracts on the coast, to use the water line via New York.

Q. Which way via New York?

A. Via New York and the Isthmus.

Q. The American-Hawaiian line?

A. The American-Hawaiian line and the Panama Steamship Company.

Q. From what point is oil moved to New York and thence around across the Isthmus or via the American-Hawaiian line?

A. There has been no business moved as yet via that route, for the reason that we have entered a vigorous campaign against the advance in the rate from 90 cents to $1.00 per hundred, and hope to induce the transcontinental lines to restore the former rate of 90 cents per hundred pounds.

Q. Then, no traffic has as yet moved by the boat line?

A. There has been no business moved yet, although there is business ready to move in case we are unable to bring about this restoration in the rate. The matter is now being considered.

2590 Q. How do you handle business when you have to transfer from the cars to ships and then again to cars and again to ships?

A. It is handled through some transfer company.

Q. Well, do you have tank shipments?

A. No; we ship only in barrels when we ship by water.

Q. Oh, in barrels. That is what I supposed. Then, that would not help you so far as shipments in tank cars are concerned?

A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Stubbs was not present at that conference in Chicago where the rate adjustment was made?

A. No, sir. Mr. Stubbs was not present.

Q. You know Mr. Stubbs, do you not?

A. Yes, sir; I have had the pleasure of meeting the gentleman.

Q. When that dollar rate was put in the first of January it applied to all points from which the 90-cent rate had applied?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Chicago, as well as this territory?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then the effect of that 10 cents increase was not to enable Chicago to more effectively compete with you, but to put you at a disadvantage with the local production in California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Chicago was placed at the same disadvantage?

A. Yes, sir; although it does not operate as much against the Standard Oil Company as it does against the independent oil companies, because they are able to ship by water from their At-2591 lantic seaboard refineries, in their own tank steamers, I believe—tank barges.

Q. Well, they have done some business at times locally in California, too, haven't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They have made some oil out there?

A. I believe it is a matter of record that they have done some little business in California.

Q. So they might possibly get along and supply the production locally?

A. Yes, sir; quite successfully, too.

Q. Has the Standard Oil joined with you in this protest against the increase?

A. Not to my knowledge, no, sir.

Q. Mr. Boltz, you stated, in answer to Judge Lovett, that Mr. Connor's agency has been diligent in performing services for you as a shipper. That is true? In tracing cars, or anything of that sort, Mr. Connor has done the best he could, has he not?

A. I do not think there was ever any time when I called upon Mr. Connor for any information of any kind, or any help that he could grant, that he was unwilling to give me the best accommodation possible—the best service.

Q. Then, the only change in the situation, so far as Mr. Connor is concerned, that you have observed, is that formerly he tried to send his business via New Orleans and now he is indifferent as to whether it goes via New Orleans or Omaha?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is no longer competing for coast business, as between the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific?

A. No, sir.

Q. You were also asked by Judge Lovett with reference to the improvement in service by the Missouri River gateways to 2592 the coast. Hasn't there also been a very great improvement in the service by the Sunset Route—a large amount of money spent on that line?

A. Yes; there has been considerable improvement in the service on all railroads. I should say, in the past decade.

Q. Well, that is what I wanted to get at. The Union Pacific have no monopoly on improved service or improved roadbed, have they?

A. No, sir.

Q. That is one thing in which other lines compete?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the lines east of the Missouri River, even, have improved their road-beds, have they not?

A. Very considerably, yes, sir.

Q. Well, it has been essential to improve the roads in order to get business at all?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it not a fact that some of them are doing it?

A. Yes, sir; and by reason of the fact that heavier equipment is being used.

Q. Larger cars?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And heavier locomotives?

A. Heavier engines, yes, sir.

Q. So that the lines all over the country have been reducing grades, straightening curvature, and putting on bigger equipment?

A. That is true, yes, sir.

Q. Judge Lovett also brought out from you that you had a recollection of business having been handled for a time to California points by rail to Portland and thence by boat. There is no
2593 reason why that is not as feasible a route as the route by the Canadian Pacific and then by boat from Vancouver to California, is there?

A. No, sir.

Q. It is a shorter route, is it not?

A. It is shorter via Portland, yes.

Q. The rail haul and the steamship haul are both shorter?

A. Yes, sir.

Recross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. As far as the Union Pacific is concerned in using that route, it would be rather hauling it away from destination in getting it to Ogden and taking it up to Portland, wouldn't it?

A. Yes; rather an indirect route, Judge.

Q. And I believe you testified before that during the time you were soliciting transcontinental freight you never sought to move any that way?

A. No, sir, I never did.

Q. And you have an impression that at some time or other there was some freight that was open for——

A. Yes, sir, there was an arrangement whereby business could move via the Portland gateway and steamship line from there to California points—that is, San Francisco; but I do not recollect just when that arrangement was made or how long it continued in effect.

Q. And you do not know that any freight moved that way?

A. I do not know of any business ever having been moved that way.

Q. All these gateways have been kept open all the time, have they not? A shipper can send his freight by way of New 2594 Orleans to-day, if he wants to, can he not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or by way of El Paso?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And all these gateways?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Aside from the time when the Canadian Pacific had this differential, none of the northern lines have ever attempted to work California business—made any serious attempt to do it—by way of Portland or Puget Sound, have they?

A. No, sir. No, sir, I think not.

Q. The Canadian Pacific had that differential only a short time?

A. Well, I would not want to say the length of time that differential was in effect, but my impression is it was in effect for a period of several years; three or four years, possibly.

Q. You think that long?

A. I would think so, yes, sir. I would say so.

Q. And when was that?

A. I should say late in the '80's. From 1885 perhaps for a period of three or four years thereafter, according to my recollection.

Q. Well, after that differential was abolished, the Canadian Pacific retired from the California business from this territory, practically, did it not?

A. Yes, I think so.

Q. The Northern Pacific and Great Northern do not attempt to work business that way to California, do they?

A. I do not believe they actively solicit any business for California points via the Portland gateway.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Just one question suggested by a question Judge Lovett
2595 asked you. He brought out from you that the route to San Francisco by way of Portland is rather a roundabout route.

A. Rather indirect, yes, sir.

Q. Rather indirect. Now, the evidence in this case has shown that a very large traffic has moved from the Atlantic seaboard territory to California by the Morgan Steamship line to New Orleans and thence by rail. That is a longer route to California, is it not, than a route by Portland and then steamship from there?

A. Yes, I should say it was. The distance would be greater by the Morgan line and by New Orleans than it would be via Portland.

Q. And the distance is much greater by the American-Hawaiian line, across the Tehuantepec, or by the Panama route across the Isthmus, or by Clipper ships around the Horn, is it not?

A. Yes, sir, very considerable.

Q. So that the matter of distance really does not figure very much in the movement of traffic, does it, unless it is something that demands speed in transfer—express service?

A. Well, the question of distance does enter as a factor into the successful securing of freight by different lines, for the reason that shippers naturally prefer the most direct route, all things being equal.

Q. But this matter of distances can be overcome by other considerations such as rates?

A. Oh, yes; if there were any preferential rates via an indirect line, it is natural that that line would get a certain percentage of the business which they would not otherwise get—a greater percentage.

2596 Q. You are familiar with the facts, by reason of your connection with the eastern business, that the rates, via the Morgan line, to California, are just the same as they are by all-rail lines, are you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In spite of the additional distance they are able to get a large traffic by that route?

A. Yes, sir. They do get considerable traffic from the east; not very much traffic from this interior territory.

Q. I suppose very little?

A. Yes, comparatively.

Q. They do not absorb the rate west of Pittsburg, do they?

A. I think not.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. About how long does it take a shipment to move by Cape Horn from this territory to California?

A. Usually from four to five months; something of that kind.

Q. And the all-rail route takes about how long, ordinarily?

A. Oh, I presume twelve to fourteen days would be a fair average time.

Q. The rate via Cape Horn is very much lower usually, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And so it is very much lower by way of Panama and Tehuantepec, is it not?

A. The rate is considerably lower via both of those lines than it is by the all-rail line.

Q. Of course, there is a very short rail haul in both of those routes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the rate is very much lower by both Panama and 2597 Tehuantepec?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you familiar with the conditions under which the line mentioned by Mr. Severance is operated by the Southern Pacific from New York to San Francisco by way of New Orleans? I say are you familiar with the conditions under which that line is operated?

A. I do not quite understand what you mean by the conditions.

Q. Well, for example, you are aware, in the first place, that it is a single line from the point of origin in New York, practically a single management?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From point of origin to final destination?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whereas the Union Pacific lines do not extend east of the Missouri River?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is dependent on its connections for carrying the freight?

A. Yes, sir, I understand that.

Q. You are also aware of the fact that the Southern Pacific and the line from New York to New Orleans and Galveston has three fast ships a week; it collects the freight on the piers there, puts it on those ships three times a week, sends it to New Orleans or Galveston, where it has very extensive docks and terminals, has the freight transferred direct from the ship into cars standing on the dock, and sends it through in practically solid train lots, without break, to California? Are you aware of those conditions?

A. I am aware that those conditions do exist to a certain extent; yes, sir.

Q. And that the Union Pacific, in attempting to pick up
2598 freight in the middle of the continent, depending on the connections going to it, to put in broken lots, and carrying it by way of Portland, would not be so favorably situated as the Southern Pacific, would it?

A. That is quite true.

Q. Isn't this a very important consideration, too, Mr. Boltz: that the Union Pacific is a direct connection with the Southern Pacific at Ogden and itself is a part of the all-rail system across the country, and must be benefited by a very large interchange of traffic with the Southern Pacific at Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that if it should attempt to work the Portland route as against the Southern Pacific, for California business, it might, if the two sytems were independent, jeopardize that relation?

A. Yes, sir, I think so.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. If the two systems were independent and competing with each other, and business was worked by the Portland gateway, as you said—that is, by boat line—at a differential, the natural result of that would be to bring down all the transcontinental rates, would it not?

COPY BOUND CL

A. I believe it would have that effect; yes, sir.

Q. And that would affect all movement of traffic by the Sunset Route of the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Do you think any sane man operating the Union Pacific and being responsible for it, would attempt, under those condi-
2599 tions, to bring down the rates in that way, Mr. Boltz?

A. I do not believe, unless there were some good reason for the establishment of differential rates via the Portland gateway to California points, that the rates would be reduced.

Q. And you cannot see any good reason, from a railroad standpoint, can you?

A. If the line via Portland and steamer was thoroughly advertised in the East, and its service was even fair, and its rates placed on a differential basis, I believe that it would be considered a feasible route on certain classes of traffic.

Q. Well, of course, any line can do business on a differential basis; can it not?

A. If the differential is great enough.

Q. That would depend, in a large measure, upon what its rivals would allow it to do?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But at equal rates you do not think considerable business would move that way, do you?

A. I think not, no, sir.

Q. And from your knowledge of the situation, still assuming the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific independent, if the Southern Pacific diverted at least all of its unrouted traffic to the Denver & Rio Grande as against the Union Pacific, wouldn't you say that the Union Pacific would lose very much more than it would gain from that sort of enterprise?

A. I should think so.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Now, that brings up another question. You say you
2600 think considerable traffic could move that way at a differential?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, the evidence in this case shows that the differential exists between the boat line to Portland and the rail line to Portland from San Francisco; so we have the differential on that end.

Mr. LOVETT. Shows what?

Mr. SEVERANCE. There is a differential between the boat line and the Shasta route. The boat line is cheaper.

Q. So that the differential is already in force between Portland and San Francisco. Now, suppose the Southern Pacific, on this interchange of business from the Missouri River to San Francisco, the through business, should undertake to exact unfair division of the through revenue from the Union Pacific: the Union Pacific would be very well protected against such demand, would it not, by the possession of the route to Portland and the boat line to San Francisco?

A. Most certainly, yes, sir.

Q. So that by the possession of that rail line and the boat line down, they are able to protect themselves against an unfair exaction on the part of the Southern Pacific of through business?

A. I would say so, yes, sir.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I believe you have already testified that the public is not interested as to the division of the through rate?

A. Yes, sir; the public has no interest.

Q. You, as a shipper, do not care whether the Union Pacific
2601 or the Southern Pacific gets the big end of the through rate?

A. No, sir.

Q. And if the Union Pacific should attempt to use that Ogden route and boat line with the Southern Pacific, on which a large volume of traffic originates on the Pacific coast, it would naturally divert that to the Denver & Rio Grande, if it is operated by sane men, would it not, Mr. Boltz?

A. Yes, sir; that would be the natural inclination.

Q. And don't you think that in a controversy of that sort the Union Pacific would probably suffer more than it would gain by using the Portland route?

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. Railroad managers as a rule are about as much alive to their interests as other people, are they not?

A. As a rule that is true.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. The natural way for the Southern Pacific to send unrouted traffic from the East to California points is by the Southern Pacific route, where they can control it, so as to get the long haul, rather than get the short haul via Ogden?

A. Yes; that would be their effort if it were not that the merger is in effect, and that they were interested in the Union Pacific line east of Ogden.

Q. Yes; I am assuming that they are separate lines, as they used to be.

A. That would be the natural conclusion, yes, sir.

Q. The natural thing. So that the traffic that is moved by Ogden would be the traffic—that is, the through traffic 2602 from the west—that the consignees wanted to send that way?

A. Yes, or traffic which might have been secured through the efforts of some individual freight solicitor representing one of the other lines.

Q. Yes; of the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. East of Ogden?

A. Or the representative of some of the eastern Missouri River lines, who was located on the coast.

Q. So that if the Southern Pacific undertook to fight back the Union Pacific by diverting unrouted traffic to the Rio Grande, they would have to take that unrouted traffic from the Sunset Route, where they get the long haul, and divide it up with the Rio Grande, in order to hit the Union Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. That wouldn't pay very well, would it?

A. I think not.

Q. If you are still assuming, as Judge Lovett suggests, that railroad men are sane and that they are like other people?

[No response.]

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Well, I will follow that a little bit. There is a great deal of this transcontinental traffic that moves all-rail in spite of the Southern Pacific Sunset Route, is there not?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. So, assuming that no more traffic was moved during this controversy that we have assumed than moves now, why, the 2603 Southern Pacific could divert that same amount of traffic to the Denver & Rio Grande from the Union Pacific, could it not?

A. Most certainly.

Q. As it is now, the Union Pacific is the preferred connection of the Southern Pacific at Ogden?

A. I so understand it, yes, sir.

Q. And if this controversy were to arise, why, the Southern Pacific would naturally change that situation and divert the unrouted traffic to the Denver & Rio Grande that it could not get by way of the Sunset Route?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there is necessarily a very large volume of traffic that will not move by the Sunset Route? That is and always has been true, has it not?

A. That is true.

Q. The Atchison is pretty active in the field?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if the Southern Pacific insists on taking it via the Sunset Route, and would not take it by way of Ogden, it would go by the Atchison, naturally, wouldn't it?

A. Yes; business which was not routed by the shipper would move that way.

Q. There is this established line by way of Ogden, the only outlet being the Southern Pacific line west of Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. And at Ogden it has the two eastern outlets?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Denver & Rio Grande and its connections?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Union Pacific and its connections?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it can select either of these?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And very much the larger proportion of the traffic to and from the Pacific coast, ever since the transcontinental lines have 2604 been opened, has moved all-rail? Don't you understand that to be true?

A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. And that the Southern Pacific could not move that by the Sunset. It has either got to come over the Denver & Rio Grande or the Union Pacific or the Atchison?

A. Yes.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Well, it could move by rail to New Orleans and then by some other railroad?

A. Oh, yes. I want to qualify that statement by stating that if it moved via the Ogden gateway it must necessarily move over the Union Pacific or the Denver & Rio Grande; but it might move via the Sunset Route via New Orleans.

Q. Or El Paso?

A. Or El Paso, yes.

2605 JOHN F. RYAN,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Ryan, where do you live?

A. Toledo, Ohio.

Q. What is your business?

A. I have charge of the traffic of the National Supply Company.

Q. What is the business of the National Supply Company?

COPY BOUND CL

A. Manufacturing oil and gas well supplies.
Q. Is that a large concern, Mr. Ryan?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. One of the largest of the kind in the country, is it not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. I will ask you again, what kind of product do you put out?
A. We manufacture oil and gas well supplies, except the pipe that produces the oil from the ground. The pipe, we are agents for the National Tube Company. But boilers, machinery, cordage, valves, and fitting we manufacture ourselves at our own factory and ship from our own factory to our warehouses and stores in the southern California oil fields. We have eight or nine warehouses in southern California.
Q. Do you manufacture tanks?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long have you been in that business, Mr. Ryan?
A. About ten years.
Q. In charge of the traffic during that time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is your traffic to California points large or otherwise?
A. I beg pardon?
2606 Q. Is your traffic large to California points?
A. Yes, sir, very heavy—that is, to the oil country, the oil field.
Q. That is what I mean. That is in Southern California?
A. That is in Southern California.
Q. At what points do you have warehouses there?
A. Los Angeles, Bakersfield, McKittrick, Coalinga, Orcutt, Sunset.
Q. Some of those points are on the Santa Fe and some on the Southern Pacific?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And some on both?
A. Some on both.
Q. Do you recall the time that the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific had separate representatives in this territory?
A. I do.
Q. Who represented the Southern Pacific interests in the Toledo district?
A. Mr. Connor, of Cincinnati.
Q. Did he personally come there?
A. He did.
Q. Did he have any subordinates who came there?
A. The subordinates never called on me.
Q. Mr. Connor himself came to see you?
A. Personally.
Q. And who represented the Union Pacific in that territory?
A. Mr. Johnson and Mr. Carney.
Q. At the time these separate agencies were in existence, were they competing with each other for coast business?

D CLOSE IN CENTER

A. They were.
Q. How is that?
A. Yes, sir, they were.
Q. Actively or otherwise?
A. Actively.

Q. Which way did Mr. Connor endeavor to route his coast
2607 traffic?

A. Via New Orleans and the Sunset Route.
Q. And the Union Pacific people via Omaha?
A. Ogden and Omaha.
Q. Was your traffic as large then as it is now?
A. Not quite so large, I don't think.
Q. But it was a very considerable traffic then?
A. Yes, sir, it was.
Q. Since the consolidation of these agencies here, who has called on you in the interest of the two lines soliciting business?
A. Mr. Choate has called on me in the last few years.
Q. Where does he live?
A. Detroit, Michigan.
Q. He represents both the Southern and the Union Pacific?
A. He does.
Q. In soliciting business, does he make any distinction between the two?
A. No, sir.
Q. Are there in this district any persons at the present time, since the consolidation of the agencies under Mr. Connor, who are representing separately those two lines and conducting the competition which was formerly conducted by Mr. Connor and the other people?
A. No, sir.
Q. How does your traffic move to Southern California; over what routes?
A. Well, most all of the gateways via El Paso—Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Ogden, Salt Lake route.
Q. Does any of it move now by New Orleans?
A. Some. Not very much.

Q. In the old days when competition between the Union
2608 and the Southern Pacific was active, did traffic move via New Orleans?

A. It did.
Q. How much, as compared with the amount that moves that way now? More or less?
A. Less.
Q. Less then than now?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Perhaps you misunderstood my question. I say at the time when Mr. Connor represented the Southern Pacific alone and, as you say, was endeavoring to move business via New Orleans, did he get a larger share of your business that way than goes that way now?

COPY BOUND CL

A. Yes, sir, he did.
Q. He did?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You misunderstood my question. Is your business low-grade or high-grade, in the way of classification?
A. Well, it is high-grade. It takes the machinery rate.
Q. Does that move under a commodity tariff or under a class rate?
A. Under a class rate.
Q. Which? Fifth-class?
A. Class A.
Q. Do you ship at all by boat, Mr. Ryan?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Which line?
A. The American-Hawaiian Tehuantepec route.
Q. From Toledo?
A. From Toledo.
Q. How does the traffic move to the seaboard?
A. Via the Lake Shore, D. L. & W.
Q. Moves all-rail, does it?
A. All-rail.
Q. And what is the port on the Pacific coast at which that traffic is delivered out by the Hawaiian line?
A. San Diego.
Q. And then distributed over the Santa Fe?
A. The Santa Fe.

Q. How long does it take to get a shipment from Toledo to 2609 San Diego by the American-Hawaiian line ordinarily?

A. From 35 to 45 days.

Mr. LOVETT. You said "to San Diego." You mean to final destination?

Mr. SEVERANCE. Well, San Diego.

Q. And it is only a very short journey from San Diego up to the oil fields, is it not?
A. To Los Angeles.
Q. To Los Angeles?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Does your product that goes to San Diego go into your storehouse at Los Angeles altogether?
A. Yes, sir; and then re-shipped to the interior.
Q. You ship everything, then, in the first instance, to Los Angeles, do you?
A. That we ship by water. Shipments all-rail to interior points in southern California go by all-rail.
Q. To save re-handling?
A. To save re-handling.
Q. You do not have any warehouse at San Diego?
A. No, sir, we do not.
Q. The American-Hawaiian ships do not put in at San Pedro?

D CLOSE IN CENTER

A. No, sir.

Q. At least they do not discharge your goods there?

A. They do not discharge our goods there. San Diego.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I believe you stated that formerly more of your traffic for California moved by way of New Orleans than now, Mr. Ryan?

A. Yes, I think it did, for the first few years, yes, sir.

2610 Q. If there was a separate solicitor put in this territory for the New Orleans route exclusively, as against all the all-rail lines, are you prepared to say whether it would probably affect the movement of your traffic in that direction?

A. I am not prepared to state.

Q. Don't you believe it would not?

A. Well, that would depend a great deal upon the personnel of the solicitor for business.

Q. You think that the right sort of a solicitor might be able to influence some of your freight that way?

A. I think a great deal depends upon the personnel of the solicitor.

Q. What are the particular qualities—can you describe them, Mr. Ryan—I would really like to know—in a solicitor who would control traffic under those conditions? because we would like to look out for a man of that kind. I ask that for Mr. Stubbs' benefit.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I think you have one now, and have had him all the time.

Q. Mr. Connor?

A. Mr. Connor, I think, is——

Q. You think he fills the bill, do you?

A. I think he fills the bill.

Q. You think, then, that if we were to get some other man—I would not say a man equal to Mr. Connor, but if we would get some other average solicitor to take his place, so far as the Ogden line is concerned, and let Mr. Connor devote his time exclusively to 2611 the New Orleans line—do you think that would probably get more business for the New Orleans line—more of yours?

A. If he was working exclusively for that line, yes.

Q. And that would be at the expense of what line—the Union Pacific-Ogden line and the Santa Fe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You think he might get some of that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe you say most of your shipments go to Southern California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is about the most direct route for those shipments, Mr. Ryan?

A. Via the Santa Fe and the Salt Lake, and Union Pacific and Southern Pacific via Ogden.

Q. You mean what is commonly called the San Pedro route?

COPY BOUND C

A. Yes, sir.
Q. And then by the Union Pacific and Ogden?
A. And Ogden.
Q. In connection with the Southern Pacific?
A. The Southern Pacific.
Q. About how many miles would you say that distance is, roughly speaking, as against the New Orleans line?
A. I should say 500 miles.
Q. The service by the all-rail lines to the Pacific coast has been very much improved in recent years, has it not, Mr. Ryan?
A. It has.
Q. From this territory?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Hasn't it improved relatively more than the line by New Orleans?
A. Well, I am not prepared to state.
Q. You are not prepared to state as to that?
A. We have shipped a great deal of tonnage from the east
2612 via the Morgan line to Galveston and the Sunset Route to California.
Q. From the east. What do you mean by that?
A. Seaboard territory.
Q. Seaboard territory—east of Buffalo and Pittsburg?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You still ship that way from that territory, do you not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. In the former days, when there was freight solicitation by both the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, all your traffic that passed over the Union Pacific to California passed over the Southern Pacific also, did it not, west of Ogden?
A. It did.
Q. No other outlet for it?
A. No other outlet. I never used any other gateway except——
Q. I say there was no other gateway for that passing over the Union Pacific, was there?
A. No, sir.
Q. You never attempted to ship over the Union Pacific to Portland and thence by boat down from Portland, did you?
A. No, sir.
Q. Have you ever made any shipments to Portland proper?
A. No, sir.
Q. You are not interested in the division of the through rate between the different carriers participating in the haul, are you?
A. No, sir.
Q. You do not care what each one gets out of the rate, do you?
A. No, sir.

2613 E. D. RYAN,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Ryan, where do you live?

A. Toledo, Ohio.

Q. What is your business?

A. Traffic manager for the Milburn Wagon Company.

Q. How long have you been in that position, Mr. Ryan?

A. Well, I was first employed with the intention of letting me handle all the traffic; but two weeks after I entered the service, on account of a shipping clerk resigning, it was necessary to turn over about two-thirds of his work to me and divide what I had been doing. For that reason the traffic work was divided. I handled the checking of freight charges and took care of the shipping; and Mr. F. D. Sudam, who was then secretary, now president, received the freight solicitors. After that, H. W. Sudam succeeded F. D. as secretary and he handled the freight solicitors and such matters up to I guess about the year 1902, or such a matter.

Q. Since then you have seen them?

A. Yes, sir. Well, there was a short time when a stenographer of H. W. Sudam helped out, for a period of about a year.

Q. Since you have been in charge of the traffic and have been called on by freight solicitors, have the Union and Southern Pacific had separate soliciting agents calling on you, or only one man?

A. Only one man.

Q. And who is that?

A. F. B. Choate, Detroit.

2614 Q. Did Mr. Choate call on you frequently?

A. Yes, sir; quite frequently.

Q. And how does he solicit California business?

A. Well, he solicits the long haul. He leaves it optional with us as to what route we shall choose, but, of course, always tries to get the long haul.

Q. By the long haul which do you mean?

A. Care of the Union Pacific at either Kansas City or Omaha.

Q. Yes; but he does not solicit by New Orleans?

A. Well, not for Portland; but for San Francisco. But if he learned that we were going to route a shipment via the El Paso gateway, in that case he would solicit care of New Orleans by the Southern Pacific.

Q. That is, he would try to get it over the New Orleans way, instead of taking it at El Paso?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But otherwise, you say, on San Francisco business he does not try to work it by the south?

A. No, sir.

COPY BOUND CL

Q. But by Omaha or Kansas City.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, are there other solicitors representing transcontinental lines in the field?

A. Yes; there are several others—the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific. The Canadian Pacific is also soliciting.

Q. The Atchison?

A. The Atchison.

Q. When Mr. Choate finds that you are contemplating routing a shipment via El Paso, we will say, does he endeavor to change it and have it go via Omaha?

A. No; not to my knowledge.

Q. Or, if you are going to route it by Omaha, does he try 2615 to take it away from the Union Pacific and send it by El Paso or New Orleans?

A. No, sir.

Q. That is, he is not trying to play one of those lines against the other?

A. No, sir; but a few shipments have moved by way of the El Paso gateway; only a few cars.

Q. Only a few cars?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does the Milburn Wagon Company ship a good deal of its product to the Pacific coast?

A. Well, up to the fall of 1895—that is three or four months after I entered the service—we had quite a number of cars; but from that time until the spring of 1900 we had no shipments. The reason for that is that we had a large business, and, on account of the wagons for the coast territory being special, we found that we could not make them; they interfered too much with our other work.

Q. How has it been since 1900?

A. Well, conditions changed. Since then we have had a large number, with the exception of the past year.

Q. Had a large business on the coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And over what lines does your traffic to California move?

A. To California? Well, as a rule we have divided that traffic about equally between the Santa Fe and the Union Pacific.

Q. How does your Portland business move?

A. Portland business? We aim to give about fifty percent of that to the C. & N. W., the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line; and the balance we divide via all the routings—that is, the Denver gateway—the Great Northern and Northern Pacific. A few cars we have shipped by the Canadian Pacific. The first two or 2616 three were shipped on account of washouts and blockades, on the American lines—that is, the northwest lines.

Q. You say that all these lines out there have agents in the field here soliciting your business?

A. Yes, sir.

D CLOSE IN CENTER

Q. That is, the Canadian Pacific, the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern—Mr. Choate representing these lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Atchison?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How often do those men come to see you, looking after business?

A. Of the other lines?

Q. Yes.

A. Now, that is a hard matter. Sometimes they call once a week; and again, I suppose on account of their business taking them to other places, they do not call oftener than once a month.

Q. They constantly keep tab on the business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is an active solicitation, is it?

A. Yes, sir. They either call on me personally or in some other way—telephone—every time they visit the city.

Q. They write to you, I suppose?

A. Yes; and write to me.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Do the representatives of these other lines call on you any oftener than the representatives of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, Mr. Ryan?

A. No, sir.

Q. Are any of them more diligent in soliciting than the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific?

A. Well, Mr. Lovett, I dislike very much to tell you what I
2617 think of Mr. Choate, because there are other railroad representatives here. While the western lines are pretty well represented, still I will have to say that I rather think Mr. Choate has just a little bit the better of any of them.

Q. A little the better of them?

A. Yes, sir. And I wish to qualify that by saying that while there are a few other railway solicitors who have nerve enough to argue with a shipper, Mr. Choate goes a little bit better on that.

Q. He does?

A. Yes. I wish to say that on account of him liking to get into an argument, I have learned many things about the railroad business—things that I did not know or had not learned when in the railroad service.

Q. You wouldn't think it necessary, then, to strengthen the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific representation any?

A. No, sir, I would not.

Q. Such business as you ship to California over the Union Pacific passes over the Southern Pacific, does it not, Mr. Ryan?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

COPY BOUND CL

Q. You never shipped any to Portland by way of the Sunset, did you, via New Orleans?

A. No, sir; no shipments for Portland ever moved that way, to my knowledge.

Q. Did you ever ship any to California points by way of Portland and then by boat down?

A. No. When I first entered the service of the Milburn Wagon Company we were taught, by experience gained on shipments to Texas, that the service would be very poor—first, on account 2618 of the slowness, and, secondly, on account of our wagons being damaged.

Q. In the transfer?

A. Yes, sir. It would take a differential rate of at least twenty cents better than the all-rail rate to pay us for making shipments via any such routing. If we crated wagons, why, the cost would be greater than twenty cents a hundred. As I said before, the damage would amount to a good deal more than twenty cents per hundred on the wagons if we didn't crate them.

Q. All the lines extending from this territory to El Paso or the Missouri river gateways and the Rocky Mountains actively solicit business for California, do they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Re-direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. You said in answer to Judge Lovett that you did not think it was necessary for the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific to strengthen their representation. That was in reference to Mr. Choate?

A. Yes, sir; so far as his abilities are concerned.

Q. You mean by that that you do not think it is necessary to have anybody who could put up a stronger argument than he does? You say he argues very strongly?

A. Yes, sir. Well, he is a man who understands his business in every detail. Things that I hardly thought he knew of in local offices—the handling of freight business in local offices as well as general offices——

Q. How is that?

A. I say he understands the handling of all traffic matters
2619 from the ground up: local offices, general offices and all.

Q. And financing the road, too, I suppose?

A. Well, I don't know anything about that. That is something I am not interested in. I am not very high up in finances.

Q. If the Union Pacific had Mr. Choate's services exclusively and he did not have to divide his allegiance between that line and the Southern Pacific, with this capacity that he possesses, he might get a larger percentage of the business for the Union Pacific, might he not?

A. Well, I rather think he would if the representative of the Southern Pacific were not as good a man as he. I beg your pardon; I wish to add to that. He would anyhow, on account of the service being better by the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific than via New Orleans and the Southern Pacific.

CLOSE IN CENTER

Q. Yes, but leaving the matter of service out of the question for the moment; Mr. Choate's ability as a railroad man, if devoted to one line instead of to two, might make a difference in the distribution of the traffic between those lines; isn't that true?

A. Well, if he were a Union Pacific man, of course.

Q. Yes, that is what I mean.

A. But if he were a Southern Pacific representative, I doubt whether he would be able to secure any business via that line or New Orleans.

Q. You do not think he could?

A. I do not think he could.

Q. Or via El Paso?

A. He might via El Paso, but not via New Orleans.

Q. You heard the testimony of your namesake who was just on the stand, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

2620 Q. Who thought that Mr. Connor could return to his former allegiance and represent the Southern Pacific alone and he could get more business to move by the Southern route, as he formerly did. Now, don't you think Mr. Choate would be as strong in that way as Mr. Connor?

A. I am not personally acquainted with Mr. Connor. For that reason I have no knowledge of his ability. He may be just as good a man as Mr. Choate.

Q. Well, if Mr. Choate could not move business via New Orleans and Mr. Connor could, then evidently Mr. Choate is not the stronger man?

A. Well, I doubt whether——

Q. That is all, Mr. Ryan.

2621 JOHN D. KLEUTER,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Kleuter, where do you live?

A. Toledo.

Q. What is your business?

A. In charge of the traffic department of the Gendron Wheel Company.

Q. Is that a concern of considerable size, Mr. Kleuter?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To what parts of the country do you ship your product?

A. We ship it all over the world.

Q. Including the Pacific Coast?

COPY BOUND CL

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been connected with that company?

A. I have been with the company about sixteen years.

Q. How long have you been in charge of their traffic?

A. Something over ten years.

Q. Do you remember the time when the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific had separate commercial agencies in this field?

A. I do.

Q. Did both of those agencies solicit your traffic?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way did the Southern Pacific endeavor to route its traffic?

A. Via New Orleans.

Q. And the Union Pacific by the Missouri River?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who representing these two roads calls on you now since the consolidation of the agencies?

A. Mr. Choate, of Detroit.

2622 Q. Does he discriminate between the two lines in soliciting business?

A. No, sir.

Q. How does your traffic move to the coast?

A. Generally via Omaha—Union Pacific.

Q. How is that?

A. Union Pacific.

Q. Do you ship to Southern California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How does it move to Southern California?

A. Santa Fe. Not very much, though, Santa Fe. Generally Salt Lake route.

Q. Salt Lake route?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the Union Pacific and the Salt Lake route?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And to San Francisco, by the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you ship to Portland?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how does your traffic move to Portland?

A. Always Northern Pacific or Great Northern.

Q. Does any of it go by the Union Pacific and the Oregon Short Line?

A. I do not remember of any going that way.

Q. Do you ship any by the Canadian Pacific?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or by the steamship lines?

A. Never.

2623 W. F. RAND,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Rand, where do you live?
A. 1317 East 78th Place Northeast.
Q. How long have you lived in Cleveland?
A. Since 1881.
Q. What is your business?
A. Railroad clerk.
Q. In what office?
A. Lake Shore local freight office.
Q. How long have you been with the local freight office of the Lake Shore?
A. From October, 1889, I was with the Union Pacific until 1890. I could not state exactly what month I left them. I returned to the Lake Shore office after I had left the Union Pacific. I have been there ever since.
Q. So that you have been with the Lake Shore since 1887 down to the present time, with the exception of part of two years?
A. About one year.
Q. About a year?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And at that time you were with the Union Pacific?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is your business in the freight office of the Lake Shore?
A. Why, east-bound billing department I had jurisdiction over up until a year ago; and then they consolidated the departments and made one head, east and west-bound; but I am assistant to the chief bill-clerk. We have charge of the east-bound billing.

Q. Previous to that what were you doing in the freight office,
2624 after you left the Union Pacific? Or were you all the time in charge of that billing?
A. Yes, sir; I was in that same department, but did not have charge of it.
Q. Previous to going with the Union Pacific what were you doing here in the Lake Shore office?
A. In the billing department—east-bound.
Q. Billing; east-bound?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who engaged you in the service of the Union Pacific?
A. Mr. James D. Welsh.
Q. And where did Mr. Welsh live?
A. Why, I think he lived at Cincinnati; at Chestnut Hill, I think.
Q. And in what capacity were you employed by Mr. Welsh?
A. As solicitor of freight.
Q. In what place, or what places?

COPY BOUND C

A. Just here in this territory.

Q. Locally, in Cleveland?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or in the region about Cleveland?

A. Just in Cleveland.

Q. Only in Cleveland. During that time were there any other freight solicitors employed here by the Union Pacific?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who had been locally employed by the Union Pacific previous to your employment?

A. A man by the name of John Moran.

Q. How long had he been here, do you know?

A. Why, I could not exactly state. To the best of my knowledge he had been there for two years.

Q. Do you remember who was his predecessor?

A. I was.

Q. No. His predecessor—the man before him. Were you there twice?

A. No, no. Oh, predecessor. I beg your pardon.

2625 Q. Predecessor, yes.

A. No; I couldn't say as to that.

Q. You do not remember?

A. No, I do not.

Q. When you quit the service of the Union Pacific and went back to the Lake Shore, who took your place here?

A. Why, the offices were closed up. They had closed the offices in several cities, and this being one, they also closed it; and Mr. Shearman (I think he traveled) who was then passenger agent, under whose jurisdiction I was, went back to Cincinnati. He reported to Cincinnati under Mr. Welsh.

Q. Well, they continued their solicitation of business through traveling men after that?

A. I think they did, yes sir; through traveling men.

Q. But did not maintain a separate office here?

A. No, sir.

Q. While you were in the employ of the Union Pacific did you have a regular office?

A. We had an office at the Kennard House, yes, sir.

Q. And after you left the service the business that you had been doing here was taken over by traveling men?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Just what were your duties as freight solicitor here?

A. Just simply going out looking up business and having it routed by the Union Pacific at the Missouri river gateways, working in conjunction with the C. M. & St. P., the Northwestern, the Chicago & Alton, and sometimes with the Q. and the Rock Island.

Q. Any connection you could get to work with, I suppose?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is customary, is it not, for all freight solicitors
2626 to work with their connections?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To work with anybody?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To get the business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said that your duties were confined wholly to Cleveland proper?

A. Cleveland, yes, sir.

Q. At that time who represented the Southern Pacific in this territory?

A. To the best of my knowledge, Mr. Connor, from Cincinnati. I met the gentleman once, and that was the first time and the last time.

Q. You met him, you say, once?

A. Yes, sir. I think it was through Mr. Krause, the Big Four commercial agent.

Q. That was in those days when you represented the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have not seen him since?

A. Not until the other day—I happened to see him across the street when he was going to the Northwestern office.

Q. Well, you are unfortunate if you don't see him often. Did you have anything to do with the solicitation of passenger business for the coast when you were——

A. Well, I occasionally did go out to see a party; but my business was more in the freight line. I was not familiar with the passenger business; but if I got next to any people going to the coast, I would always advise Mr. Shearman and he would go after them or advise some intermediate line between Chicago and the Missouri River and put them next to it and they would probably go out and see them.

Q. Who was Mr. Shearman?

A. He was the traveling passenger agent. His title was——
2627 Q. Of the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did he have anything to do with freight business?

A. Well, he had that title, but he never solicited any freight to my knowledge.

Q. How did he work passenger business; what way?

A. I was not familiar with that, but I think they used to work it Northwestern, C., M. & St. P. or Q., by the Union Pacific gateway.

Q. By the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What methods of solicitation are used in getting passenger business?

A. That I couldn't say. I never tried to solicit any passenger business.

Q. Oh, you never had anything to do with that?

A. No, sir.

Q. You said Mr. Shearman was doing that work——

A. He was doing that.

Q. ——and I didn't know but you might know. Now, in soliciting business here for the Union Pacific did you solicit for Portland business too?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way did Mr. Connor endeavor to work the business for the Southern Pacific?

A. I presume by the New Orleans gateway. That was his proper route.

Q. That was his route?

A. Yes.

Q. How was the competition as between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific for California business at that time?

A. Very active.

Q. What company was your strongest competitor for California business?

A. The Southern Pacific.

(A recess was here taken until 2 o'clock p. m.)

2628 Q. Mr. Rand, at the time you were employed by the Union Pacific, were you working business to Portland?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were your chief competitors in the Portland business, what transcontinental lines?

A. The Northern Pacific.

Q. And did the Canadian Pacific do any business into Pacific coast points, in the United States, at that time?

A. Not that I know of. I presume they did at that time. I have heard of some shipments going by that route on a differential.

Q. I will have to ask you to speak a little louder.

A. I say I have known of some cases where shipments went via that route on a differential basis—that is, California business.

Q. They went all-rail to Vancouver, and then by boat to San Francisco?

A. I presume that is the way they went, yes, sir.

Q. Were they competing with you for business into Portland?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Do you remember any particular business that the Canadian Pacific took from you or were able to get, in competition with you, for California?

A. I remember several carloads of machinery going that way—that is, sewing machines, going by that route for San Francisco.

Q. When you represented the Union Pacific, in competing for business to the coast, did the matter of equipment have 2629 anything to do with it?

A. Not at that time, that I know of; but I understood there were large cars on the Union Pacific, what they call furniture cars, that we could get in case we needed them for for any special business, such as stoves—gasoline stoves that were shipped by the Standard Lighting Company or the Snyder-Trentkant Company.

Q. Were any shipments moved in that kind of equipment?

A. There were some, yes, sir, but we did not manage to get the business. It went by the C. B. & Q. and the Rock Island.

Q. Did Mr. Welsh personally do any work in this locality in getting business at the time you were employed by him for the Union Pacific?

A. He did occasionally, yes, sir.

Q. In connection with what kind of business, if any special kind?

A. Any business that I could not control, why, I would simply wire him and advise him what business was in his territory, and he would come here and look after it himself.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. This business that you say went by way of the Rock Island and Burlington, went over the Southern Pacific to California from Ogden, didn't it?

A. No, they would haul that to Denver, Colorado, and turn it over to the Union Pacific at that point, to get the long haul. That is why they furnished the cars in this territory, to get the business to that junction.

Q. Then how did it go?

A. Went over the Union Pacific, I presume, to Ogden.

2630 Q. And then how?

A. Over the Southern Pacific.

Q. All business that you secured in your efforts in soliciting, ultimately went over the Southern Pacific, did it not, Mr. Rand?

A. Over the Southern Pacific?

Q. Yes, from Ogden.

A. From Ogden, yes, sir.

Q. It went over the Union Pacific to Ogden, and thence to destination over the Southern Pacific.

A. My instructions were to work all the business via the Missouri River, to go via the Union Pacific, via the Kansas City and Omaha gateways.

Q. You understood that all the business you secured that way would have to go over the Southern Pacific to California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, that was true also of the Burlington and Rock Island, largely, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They would turn it over either to the Union Pacific or the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they in turn would carry it over the Southern Pacific?

A. Over the Southern Pacific, yes.

Q. There were a great many solicitors soliciting in that way for the Ogden route or the Union Pacific, weren't there?

A. Yes, sir, there were. The Rock Island and the "Q." were soliciting mostly that way.

Q. All of those lines soliciting for themselves necessarily solicited for the Southern Pacific by the Ogden route?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was the Atchison working for business then?

2631 A. Yes, sir, they were. They were very strong competitors of ours, very active in the field.

Q. You never solicited any business for California by way of Portland and the boat line down?

A. No, sir, I did not; I never had authority to do so.

Q. You never knew of any business moving that way?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Mr. Longacre, where do you live?

A. 2105 Wann Road, Lakewood, Ohio.

Q. What is your business?

A. Traffic manager of the Atlantic Terminal Line.

Q. What is the business of the Atlantic Terminal Line?

A. That is an association of several manufacturers who have freight business which we handle.

Q. Where are the factories of these manufacturers located?

A. They are located in this city.

Q. About how many of them are there?

A. There are three manufacturing plants.

Q. Three plants?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been in that position?

A. Five years the 22nd of this month.

Q. Previous to that time what was your business?

A. Previous to that time I was connected with various railroads, starting in 1884 with the Nickel Plate Railway.

Q. Where?

A. In this city, in the general freight office. I was with them until 1895. Then I was connected with the Erie Railroad until the spring of 1901.

Q. Then, what were you doing between that time and the time you went with the Terminal line?

2633 A. I was in New York with the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western road.

Q. To what territory does your traffic move?

A. All over the United States.

Q. What kind of manufactured goods are those that you handle?

A. All kinds of oils, lubricating oils, paints and greases, and numerous specialties which oil people manufacture.

Q. Then, is your business all in connection with oil shipments of one sort or another?

A. Yes, sir; paints, too.

Q. Oil products?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Over what routes does your business move to California points?

A. Moves over all the different routes, over the Southern Pacific via New Orleans and via the Union Pacific and Ogden, and over the Santa Fe road too. We aim to divide it up as nearly as we can among the different roads. It is mostly less than carload shipments, though.

Q. Do these manufacturers sell their product to railroads?

A. With only a few exceptions, some small roads; none of the large roads.

Q. Then you ship to Portland and Puget Sound points?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How does the traffic move to those points?

A. Some of it moves in connection with the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line, and some in connection with the Northern Pacific and Great Northern.

Q. Do these various lines have their traffic solicitors call on you looking for business?

A. Yes, sir.

2634 Q. Who calls on you representing the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific?

A. Mr. Hild and Mr. Connor.

Q. Do they endeavor to route the traffic to the coast over one line as against the other, or whichever way they can get it?

A. No, sir; they are glad to get the business any way.

Q. What was your position with the Erie road when you were with them?

A. The last three years I was with them I was division freight agent at Meadville, Pennsylvania.

Q. And before that?

A. Before that I was a rate clerk, and then chief clerk for the general freight department.

Q. You were familiar with the movement of transcontinental traffic in those days, weren't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that time did the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific maintain separate agencies?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were they competing with each other for business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Actively, or otherwise?
A. Yes, sir, very actively in my territory.
Q. Who represented the Union Pacific?
A. Mr. Choate was their general agent there, and Mr. Toynbee, I believe, was his traveling man.
Q. Who represented the Southern Pacific?
A. Mr. Herring.
Q. That was when you were at Meadville?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How did the Southern Pacific endeavor to route the traffic they secured?
A. That busines they wanted via Cincinnati and New Orleans.
Q. And the Sunset Route from New Orleans?
A. Yes, sir.
2635 Q. Which way did the Union Pacific endeavor to route it?
A. The Union Pacific wanted their business via the Missouri River.
Q. Do you make any shipments now by boat to the coast?
A. We do to north Pacific coast points, during the season of navigation, by Duluth and via other water routes to the northwest.
Q. Does any of your traffic move by the lakes to Duluth and then by the Omaha road to Omaha and then over the Union Pacific?
A. No, sir.
Q. It goes by the northern lines?
A. Northern Pacific and Great Northern.
Q. Do you ship anything to the coast by the Atlantic lines, by boat?
A. No, sir.
Q. Do you ship anything by the American-Hawaiian line?
A. No, sir.
Q. Is Meadville one of the Pittsburg common points?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Does traffic move from Meadville by the Morgan line, or only by rail to New Orleans?
A. I don't remember of anything ever moving out of that territory via New York and Morgan line.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Mr. Longacre, I understood you to testify that at one time, when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate agen-
2636 cies, competition between them for California business was quite active?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Such business as the Union Pacific agents secured in that competition moved how to California?
A. Well, to San Francisco, points in that vicinity, it would have to move via Ogden and the Southern Pacific.
Q. Didn't all of it to the Pacific coast, except Portland?
A. All that moved in connection with the Union Pacific did.

Q. All that moved over the Union Pacific to points on the Pacific coast south of Portland, moved over the Southern Pacific from Ogden to final destination? Is that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And a great many other lines were soliciting business that moved ultimately over the Southern Pacific from Ogden to the Pacific coast, were there not?

A. Yes, sir; all the Missouri River lines would solicit that business too.

Q. The traffic controlled by the representatives of the North-Western, the St. Paul, the Burlington, the Rock Island and the Missouri Pacific for California points, would naturally go over the Southern Pacific from Ogden, would it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never shipped any business for California to Portland and by the boat-line down?

A. I have no recollection of any business moving that way.

Q. Did you ever ship any to Portland by way of New Orleans?

A. No, sir.

Q. You never knew of any to move that way, did you?

A. No, sir.

2637

A. J. HENDERSON,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. What is your business, Mr. Henderson?

A. Traffic manager for the White Sewing Machine Company and the White Company.

Q. And where are you located?

A. Cleveland.

Q. How long have you been traffic manager for the White Sewing Machine Company?

A. Fifteen years.

Q. Does that company have a large output?

A. They do.

Q. To what part of the country do you ship?

A. We ship all over the world.

Q. Do you ship large quantities to the Pacific coast?

A. We do.

Q. Have you for many years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you manufacture anything except sewing machines?

A. Automobiles—that is the White Company.

Q. Do they move to the Pacific coast, too?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Not under their own power, though?

A. Hardly. We can, though, if necessary.

Q. Can you give an idea of the extent of your traffic annually to the coast?

A. Oh, probably three hundred carloads.

Q. What routes does your traffic go over to California points?

A. We generally divide it up among all the lines.

2638 Q. Divide it which way, having reference to the transcontinental lines?

A. Missouri River lines via Ogden, Omaha, El Paso.

Q. Do you ship by the Santa Fe, too?

A. Yes, sir, by the Santa Fe.

Q. Do you ship anything by New Orleans?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever shipped that way?

A. We did years ago.

Q. How long ago?

A. Probably ten or twelve years ago.

Q. Do you remember when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate agencies soliciting traffic in this region?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who represented the Southern Pacific?

A. Mr. Connor.

Q. You know Mr. Connor, do you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he call on you soliciting business?

A. He did.

Q. Who represented the Union Pacific?

A. Mr. Johnson.

Q. Which way did Mr. Connor endeavor to route traffic to the coast?

A. By New Orleans.

Q. Was he successful with you in routing traffic that way?

A. Yes, to a certain extent.

Q. And at the present time who calls on you in the interest of the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific?

A. Mr. Connor and Mr. Hild.

Q. And your traffic all moves, so far as they get a share of it, by the Union Pacific now, does it?

A. Some of it still goes via El Paso.

Q. Some by El Paso.

A. Yes, sir.

2639 Q. But none by New Orleans?

A. No, sir.

Q. In soliciting traffic from you on behalf of the Southern and the Union Pacific, do they discriminate as between the two, or endeavor to get it to go one way or the other?

A. No, sir.

Q. When Mr. Johnson secured your business, which way did he endeavor to route it when he represented the Union Pacific?

A. Via Omaha.
Q. How does your Portland business move?
A. By the northern lines.
Q. All-rail?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. All the year round?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. By the northern lines you mean the Great Northern and Northern Pacific?
A. Great Northern and Northern Pacific, yes.
Q. Have you considerable traffic into Portland?
A. Oh, quite a little, yes.
Q. In those days when there was competition between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific for coast business, was that competition active or otherwise?
A. Very active.
Q. How does your business to the Orient move?
A. Principally by Vancouver—Canadian Pacific.
Q. Does any of it move by American lines?
A. No, sir.
Q. Have you at any time shipped by American lines?
A. No, sir.
Q. You never shipped to the Orient by way of San Francisco?
A. Yes, we have. I beg your pardon. We have made a few shipments that way.

2640 Q. By what steamship lines did the traffic move from San Francisco to the Orient?

A. Occidental-Oriental, I believe. I would not be sure whether that is the right name or not.
Q. That is one of the lines?
A. Yes.
Q. Did any of it move by the Pacific Mail?
A. Not to my recollection.
Q. What is your opinion, Mr. Henderson, about the value to railroad companies of local soliciting agencies?
A. Why, I think if the line is represented by a local man there is a better chance of getting business.
Q. What can these local men do in the way of securing business? How do they get it?
A. Oh, they assist in getting equipment, looking after forwarding and making up a report passing points, and such as that.
Q. Is it your experience that the active solicitation of local men does secure business?
A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Are not the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific representatives about as active in their solicitation for that business as they ever were, Mr. Henderson?

A. I believe they are.

Q. They do not let any of it get away from them that they can control?

A. Not if they can help it.

Q. There are a good many other solicitors for other lines in this field, aren't there?

A. Yes, sir, a great many.

Q. All the business that the Union Pacific controlled in the days when they had separate solicitors from those of the 2641 Southern Pacific, for California or points south of Portland, went out over the Southern Pacific west of Ogden, didn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your business went that way?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So, to that extent and in that way the Union Pacific solicitor was working for the Southern Pacific, too?

A. Ultimately, yes.

Q. Now, the St. Paul and the North-Western were both soliciting business by that route, weren't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are still?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And so with the Rock Island—either that way or by El Paso?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are the Denver & Rio Grande soliciting in this territory?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Missouri Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And all the principal lines lying to the westward are actively soliciting for that business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Hasn't there been a very considerable improvement in the service of the transcontinental lines in recent years, Mr. Henderson?

A. Yes, there certainly has.

Q. Do you know anything about the New Orleans line and the Southern Pacific Sunset Route? Do you know whether it has relatively improved, in the same way?

A. I could not say as to that.

Q. About what is the difference in distance, would you say—the difference in time—for your shipments from this territory to 2642 San Francisco, we will say, by way of New Orleans, as against the Ogden route?

A. Well, I couldn't say. I haven't had any business that way. I couldn't judge.

Q. It is very considerable, isn't it?

A. It must be, yes.

Q. You never shipped anything to California points by way of Portland and by boat down, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Nor to Portland by way of New Orleans?
A. No, sir.
Q. You never shipped anything to the Orient by way of Portland, did you?
A. Not to my recollection.
Q. You don't care how through rates are divided, do you?
A. No, sir.
Q. So long as you have to pay?
A. We don't care, no.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Judge Lovett asked you if it was not a fact that the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific representatives were still very active in soliciting business, and you said they are. But they solicit business for the two lines together, don't they?
A. They certainly do, yes, sir.
Q. For the consolidated system?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. But they do not solicit for the Union Pacific as against the Southern Pacific, or vice versa?
A. No, sir.
Q. And in the old days when they had separate agencies, they were competing with each other?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now they are not?
A. No, sir.

2643 WALTER RUSHFORTH,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Rushforth, where do you live?
A. I am living in Meadville, just now.
Q. What is your business?
A. I have charge of the traffic and freight of the W. S. Tyler Company.
Q. What is the business of the W. S. Tyler Company?
A. We manufacture all kinds of wire screen, for almost every business in the United States. There is a little of something goes into almost all businesses anywhere, I might say, where there is any business at all done. It is not heavy. Small quantities, a great deal of it.
Q. But the aggregate output is very large?
A. No, not heavy at all. It is nearly all special work that we have; it is all woven from wire, and we make it right down from very fine material, perhaps 50,000 holes to the square inch, probably down to 2 inch openings. So you see there is no limit, although it is nearly all special work. We haven't got anything that we can specialize.

COPY BOUND

Q. You say you make wire screen?

A. Wire screen.

Q. The ordinary wire screen?

A. Yes, sir, for locomotives and——

2644 Q. For windows?

A. For windows. Well, we used to make that, but we have gone out of that business. We used to make that extensively.

Q. And you manufacture the wire screens that are used in locomotives?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where do you ship the traffic?

A. All over the world.

Q. How long have you had charge of their traffic?

A. Eighteen years.

Q. How does your business move to California points, and how has it moved for a number of years past?

A. Chiefly through Omaha and Ogden, through that territory.

Q. And some of it via the Santa Fe?

A. For instance, going to Los Angeles or San Francisco we would work by El Paso gateway.

Q. By El Paso?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you ship some by the Santa Fe route?

A. The Santa Fe and Rock Island road.

Q. Do you ship over the Union Pacific?

A. The Union Pacific.

Q. And over the Santa Fe, and over the Sunset Route of the Southern Pacific by way of El Paso?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever shipped by New Orleans?

A. Excuse me; not the Sunset Route by El Paso.

Q. I thought you said El Paso.

A. Well, we make direct shipments into Los Angeles—we have made them that way—Santa Fe route.

Q. I call that the Sunset Route west of El Paso.

2645 A. I thought you meant through the New Orleans gateway.

Q. The Southern Pacific west of El Paso. Have you ever shipped any by New Orleans?

A. No, sir.

Q. How does your traffic to Portland move?

A. Over the Northern lines—Great Northern and Northern Pacific lines.

Q. Not by the Union Pacific?

A. No, not unless we have specific directions. Sometimes they will signify, for instance, that the freight is to go by the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, and we ship it that way. But it would have to be specified that way—not of our own billing.

Q. Do you route your shipments, as a general thing, or is that done by the consignee?

A. We route a good many of the shipments.

Q. Do you remember, years ago, before the agencies of the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific were consolidated, when they had separate agencies here soliciting business?

A. I don't remember.

Q. You don't remember of separate agencies or solicitors for the two lines? I don't mean their names, but the fact.

A. Yes, there were solicitors of the different lines.

Q. At that time the Union Pacific had its own solicitors and the Southern Pacific had its own, hadn't they?

A. Yes, they had.

Q. You know Mr. Connor, don't you?

A. I know Mr. Connor, yes.

Q. You remember when he represented the Southern Pa-
2646 cific alone?

A. Mr. Connor I only remember as a Southern Pacific man.

Q. At that time, when these separate solicitors were at work here, which way was Mr. Connor trying to move his traffic?

A. I only knew him as a Southern Pacific official, a Southern Pacific man.

Q. Which way did he try to route the traffic?

A. To New Orleans, or something of that kind.

Q. In those days when he represented them alone, was he successful in routing business that way?

A. Yes, sir, he was.

Q. The Union Pacific people, I suppose, tried to send it over the only line they had—Missouri River?

A. The Union Pacific man, yes.

Q. Who is it that calls on you now, if anyone, in the interest of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, soliciting business?

A. I know Mr. Hild as the Union Pacific man. The Southern Pacific business we have is so little I don't remember anyone, only in touch with Mr. Connor. If I have any business at all I would get in touch that way with Mr. Connor.

Q. Then, the only man that calls on you is Mr. Hild?

A. All I remember. I have not seen anyone else for some time in connection with that line. Mr. Connor used to call on me in connection with the Southern Pacific, years ago.

Q. Do you make any shipments partly by water, that is, using the lakes during the open season?

A. Yes, we do some.

Q. To what points?

A. To points in Montana, chiefly; work them by way of 2647 Duluth.

Q. Do you ship anything to the Pacific coast that way?

A. No.

COPY BOUND CL

Q. Do you ever get any communications by letter from Mr. Connor?

A. In reference to freight rates, yes, sir.

Q. Have you got any of those with you?

A. I have one, yes.

Q. Please let me see it.

A. (Producing paper.) That is an old letter.

Mr. SEVERANCE. It may be admitted that this letter is written by Mr. Connor, although there is no signature except the words "General Agent" printed in. The letter reads as follows:

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY
Oregon Short Line Railroad
Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company
Southern Pacific Company
Mexican International Railroad.
Traffic Department.

W. H. CONNOR,
General Agent.
53 East Fourth Street,
Cincinnati, Ohio.

In your reply please refer to No. 17502-S.

JULY 22, 1902.

Mr. WALTER RUSHFORTH,
Care of Tyler Wire Works,
Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR: Our Mr. Clover, T. F. A., requests that we quote you rate on brass trunks and enclosures from Cleveland to Los Angeles and San Francisco. If the above articles properly 2648 come under the head of iron and iron work or elevator enclosures, boxed or crated, beg to quote you through carload rate of $1.60 per 100 pounds, minimum weight 24,000 pounds. If your shipment does not properly come under above heading, kindly advise specifically names of articles, and I will take pleasure in quoting you through rates on same.

Yours truly,

General Agent."

Mr. LOVETT. It is admitted that Mr. Connor wrote that letter.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Did I understand you to say, Mr. Rushforth, that you had formerly shipped to California by way of New Orleans, or not?

A. We have shipped goods that way.

Q. You have?

A. Yes, sir.

CLOSE IN CENTER

Q. When?

A. I have no notice of any special date.

Q. Well, I mean approximate about the date. Was it long ago?

A. I haven't any possibility of knowing without reference.

Q. I believe you stated that you had also shipped by way of El Paso?

A. We have, yes, sir.

Q. Over the lines leading to the southwest?

A. Yes.

Q. You have also shipped some by way of the Atchison & Santa Fe?

A. By the Atchison, yes, sir.

Q. And some by the Union Pacific Ogden route?

A. Yes, sir.

2649 Q. Now, all of that which went by the Union Pacific, went over the Southern Pacific from Ogden, didn't it?

A. From Ogden; that is the way I understand it, yes, sir.

Q. You never shipped any to California by way of Portland, Oregon, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. And you never shipped any to Portland by way of New Orleans, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. What did I understand you to testify about your shipments by the lakes, westwardly? Did you say you shipped that way to the Pacific coast, or only to Montana?

A. Shipments going to Montana. When we can use the boat route, in connection, via Duluth, we do so. In Montana there is a good deal of mining business done and we have shipments there occasionally, and we take advantage of the Duluth boat route if we can.

Q. Why do you ship by the lakes?

A. We figure the time is better, and the rates are better by water connection. We get direct connection with the delivering road at Duluth.

Q. The rate is lower by the lakes, is it?

A. Yes, sir.

2650 W. G. NORVELL,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination, by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Norvell?

A. Detroit, Michigan.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am manager of the shipping department for Park, Davis & Company, manufacturing pharmacists.

Q. That is the largest concern of the kind in the country, isn't it?

A. I believe so. I couldn't say positively.

COPY BOUND C

Q. And to what points do the products manufactured by that company move?

A. They are sold and delivered in nearly every village, town and city in the United States, and largely in various countries in the world.

Q. How long have you been traffic manager of that company or in charge of the shipping?

A. Well, I am not called traffic manager.

Q. Well, how long have you been in charge of their shipping?

A. Since January 31, 1899.

Q. Are you called upon by soliciting agents, soliciting traffic?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you been during all that time, or not?

A. Not very much previous to January 1, 1902; since then regularly.

Q. Are your shipments carload or L. C. L.?

A. About 65 per cent of our output moves carload, and the balance L. C. L.

2651 Q. How do your shipments to the Pacific coast usually move?

A. L. C. L.

Q. What are the principal points to which you ship in California?

A. At the present time Los Angeles and possibly 'Frisco; from there they are of course distributed to all towns and cities.

Q. What lines does your traffic move over to California points?

A. Complete routing?

Q. No, transcontinental lines.

A. U. P. and S. P. to 'Frisco, and Santa Fe generally to Los Angeles.

Q. Does any of it move over the San Pedro-Salt Lake route?

A. No, sir. We sometimes have had, yes, sir, but I could not say that we ship there usually or in very large quantities, over that particular route.

Q. Have you at any time shipped via New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Any considerable quantities?

A. No, sir.

Q. How long ago did you stop shipping that way, if you have stopped?

A. We have not stopped.

Q. Oh, you have not stopped? In your first answer to my question, you meant that the bulk of your shipments went over the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific to San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir; about 90 per cent.

Q. And the Santa Fe to Los Angeles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who, if anyone, calls on you soliciting business over the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific?

D CLOSE IN CENTER

A. F. B. Choate.

Q. In soliciting business did he discriminate as between the different parts of the system made up of those two lines?

A. No, sir.

2652 Q. Does the Santa Fe have a representative in Detroit?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How does your traffic to North Pacific coast points move?

A. Northern Pacific and Great Northern.

Q. Does that include Portland?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. None of it to Portland over the Union Pacific?

A. Not of late years.

Q. Does any of it move to north Pacific coast points by the lakes, in open season?

A. Oh, yes, we use that route almost exclusively during the season of navigation.

Q. Who preceded Mr. Choate in representing these two lines at Detroit, if you remember?

A. I knew his name a minute ago, but it has just escaped me.

Q. Mr. Herring?

A. Mr. Herring, yes.

Q. Did he handle the business the same way Mr. Choate does, as far as the routing is concerned?

A. You mean as far as not specifically soliciting for one line or the other?

Q. Yes.

A. He did.

Q. I believe you stated that previous to 1902 you did not come in contact with the solicitors?

A. No, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. The business that you ship by the lakes during the open season, goes to what points—the north Pacific?

A. It goes to all points along the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific as far as Seattle and Portland and the Pacific 2653 coast points, yes, sir.

Q. But not to California points?

A. No, sir.

Q. I believe you stated that such business as you shipped over the Union Pacific to California moved over the Southern Pacific west of Ogden, except some shipments by the San Pedro route?

A. Yes, sir. Well, very little by the San Pedro.

Q. Yes, that is what I say.

A. Except some, yes.

Q. Except some. You said it was a very small proportion?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever ship any business to California points by way of Portland and by boat down from Portland?

COPY BOUND

A. Not that I have ever had any cognizance of.
Q. You never knew of any shipments to be made that way?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you ever ship any to Portland by way of New Orleans?
A. No, sir.
Q. Or by way of El Paso to Portland?
A. No, sir.
Q. The rates by the lakes are lower than the rail rates, are they not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. As a shipper you are not interested in the division of the through rate between the carriers participating in the haul, are you?
A. No, sir.
Q. You don't care how they are divided?
A. No, sir.

2654 WILLIAM J. GORDON,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Gordon, where do you live?
A. Detroit.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am traffic manager of the Anderson Carriage Company.
Q. How long have you been in that position?
A. About seven years.
Q. To what parts of the country does that concern ship its product?
A. All parts.
Q. Including the Pacific coast?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Previous to the time that you became connected with the Anderson Company what was your business?
A. I was in the railroad business.
Q. With what company?
A. Michigan Central.
Q. And what department?
A. I was contracting freight agent.
Q. Whereabouts?
A. Detroit.
Q. For how long?
A. I was with the company about nine years, but not in that capacity. I was contracting agent about four and a half years.
Q. Do you remember when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate representatives in this territory?
A. Yes.
Q. Who were the men that were working the business at Detroit?

ND CLOSE IN CENTER

A. At that time, before the merger, there was no resident representative in the territory.

Q. Who were the traveling men that came there?

2655 A. The Southern Pacific man was Mr. Nethercott—the traveling freight agent out of Chicago; the Union Pacific man was Mr. Houston, also out of Chicago.

Q. Which way was the Southern Pacific endeavoring to route traffic to the coast?

A. New Orleans.

Q. And the Union Pacific by Omaha, I suppose?

A. Yes.

Q. How was the competition between those gentlemen for business to the coast? Was it active or otherwise?

A. Well, I should say that the Union Pacific was a little more active than the Southern Pacific on account of our geographical position, being so far north.

Q. Do you mean that he was a more active man, or was in better position to get business?

A. No, I mean, for instance, Mr. Nethercott of the Southern Pacific had a larger territory to cover. Michigan was only a part of his territory. Whereas, I believe the Union Pacific man had Michigan as his territory exclusively. I am not sure as to that, though.

Q. Since the merger, as you call it, who has represented the combined lines in that territory?

A. Why, Mr. Herring, I think, was the first. He has been succeeded by Mr. Choate.

Q. Did these gentlemen call on you soliciting business to the coast?

A. Yes.

Q. And in soliciting business as representatives of the two lines, do they discriminate between the two routes?

A. No, they do not.

Q. Is there now, as far as the representatives of those lines are concerned, any competition for business out of Detroit?

A. No.

2656 Q. Over what lines does your business move to the coast?

A. We use all the lines, rather favoring the Union Pacific system.

Q. Do you use the Santa Fe also?

A. Yes.

Q. Does anything move by New Orleans?

A. No.

Q. Anything by El Paso?

A. No.

Q. How does your business to the North Pacific coast points move?

A. In order to make a division of the traffic between the roads, we usually favor the northern lines for the northern business.

Q. That is, the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern?

A. Yes.

COPY BOUND

Q. How about business into Portland?
A. We use the Union Pacific system and the Oregon Short Line sometimes.
Q. And the Northern Pacific?
A. Sometimes the Northern Pacific.
Q. Do you ship anything over the Salt Lake route?
A. Yes, to Southern California.
Q. In connection with the Union Pacific?
A. Yes.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. When the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had their separate solicitors some years ago, Mr. Gordon, I believe you stated that the Union Pacific's solicitation was a little more active than the Southern Pacific. If the Southern Pacific could not get their business by way of New Orleans, did they seek to secure it by way of Ogden?

A. Yes.

2657 Q. They worked Ogden as well as New Orleans from that territory, didn't they?

A. Yes. If they could not get the long haul they were satisfied to get the short.
Q. Does the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul solicit California business from your territory?
A. Yes.
Q. And the Union Pacific?
A. Yes.
Q. Before the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific agencies were merged, did they?
A. Yes.
Q. The North-Western formerly, as well as now, solicited that business, didn't it, for California?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You would not regard the Union Pacific and the Chicago & North-Western as competitors for that business, would you, Mr. Gordon?
A. No, I would not.
Q. They are connecting lines?
A. Yes.
Q. You never shipped anything to California by way of Portland and boat-line, did you?
A. No. Our goods would not stand the transfer.
Q. You never tried to ship that way?
A. No.
Q. Such business as you shipped to California over the Union Pacific, prior to the opening of the San Pedro, or Salt Lake line, as it is sometimes called, went over the Southern Pacific from Ogden to final destination, didn't it?
A. All that was sent that way.

ND CLOSE IN CENTER

Q. All that was sent by the Union Pacific?
A. Yes.
Q. There was no other outlet for it?
A. No.
Q. As a shipper you are not interested in the divisions of the through rates between the different carriers participating, are you?
A. No, sir.

2658 By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. You do not use the lakes during the season of navigation?
A. No. Our goods would not stand the transfer.
Q. I assumed that you did not from your answer as to the Portland route.
A. Yes, sir.

2659 JOHN L. EVANS,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Evans, where do you live?
A. Cleveland.
Q. What is your business?
A. Manager of the traffic department of the Sherwin & Williams Company.
Q. What is their business?
A. Manufacturers of paints, varnishes and linseed oil.
Q. How long have you been in that position, Mr. Evans?
A. A little over five years.
Q. Previous to that what was your business?
A. With the Mutual Transit Company for one year.
Q. That is a boat line on the lakes, is it not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long were you with them?
A. One year.
Q. Previous to that what was your business?
A. Previous to that I was with the Atlantic Refining Company.
Q. For how long?
A. Two years.
Q. And before that were you in the railroad service?
A. Railroad and steamboat service; yes, sir.
Q. With what line?
A. The Cleveland-Buffalo Transit Company, the Northern Steamship Company, and the Rutland Transit Company.
Q. And all together how long have you been in the transportation business in Cleveland?
A. About 27 years.

Q. Where are the plants of the Sherwin-Williams Company?

A. Cleveland, Kensington, Illinois, Newark, New Jersey,
2660 Montreal, Quebec, London, England, Coffeyville, Kansas City, and Joplin, Missouri, and Magdalena, New Mexico.

Q. Do you ship to the Pacific coast?

A. We do.

Q. Have you during all the time you have been with the company?

A. We have, yes.

Q. From what plants do you ordinarily ship to the coast?

A. From Cleveland, from Kensington, and from Newark.

Q. How does your traffic to the coast from the Newark plant usually move?

A. By the American-Hawaiian line.

Q. Previous to the establishment of that line how did it move from Cleveland?

A. Oh, we used to ship from Newark previous to that time. We have shipped some from Newark by the American-Hawaiian line. We ship principally from Cleveland; some from Kensington.

Q. But all you ship from Newark goes by the American-Hawaiian line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how does your traffic from Cleveland move to the coast?

A. By Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, by Omaha, Ogden; some via New Orleans; some via El Paso.

Q. Any of it by the Santa Fe?

A. Some; yes, sir.

Q. And to the north Pacific coast points how does it move?

A. By Omaha and Ogden; some by St. Paul to Omaha and Ogden; and some by St. Paul by the Northern Pacific, Great Northern and Soo line—Canadian Pacific.

Q. Do you use the lakes during the season of navigation?

A. Very little.

Q. When you do use the lakes which way does the traffic move from Duluth?

A. We use the lakes via Chicago and Milwaukee, Gladstone, Duluth and West Superior.

2661 Q. And then it moves to the north coast by the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern and the Canadian Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you ship anything by the lakes which eventually goes to the coast over the southern lines—that is, through the Missouri River gateway to California?

A. By El Paso, you refer to?

Q. Yes. Well, in the season of navigation?

A. Not south of Omaha or Kansas City, no.

Q. Does any of that traffic that goes from here by the lakes to Chicago, Milwaukee, Duluth, or West Superior go to the California points by the Union Pacific or the Santa Fe?

A. No, sir; no.

Q. That is only on north Pacific coast business, is it?

A. North Pacific coast business.

Q. Do you remember when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate agencies here in Cleveland?

A. I have a faint recollection of it.

Q. Or separate solicitors in this territory?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the names of the Union Pacific agents?

A. If I said that Mr. Johnson represented the Union Pacific and Mr. Connor represented the Southern Pacific I believe I would be right.

Q. Mr. Johnson the Union, and Mr. Connor the Southern?

A. Yes.

Q. In those days when their agents were separate, which way did Mr. Connor endeavor to route the traffic?

A. New Orleans.

Q. And Mr. Johnson, via the Missouri River?

A. Omaha, yes.

Q. Was the competition between those agencies active in those days?

2662 A. At that time I was connected with the Atlantic Refining Company and we did not have very extensive business into the California terminals. We did some business into Portland.

Q. And was your business into Portland competed for by these gentlemen?

A. By the Northern lines and by the Union and the Southern Pacific, yes.

Q. That is what I mean.

A. Representing the Oregon Short Line.

Q. Since the amalgamation of these agencies, who, if anyone, calls on you in soliciting business for the Union and the Southern Pacific?

A. Mr. Connor and Mr. Hild.

Q. Do these gentlemen in soliciting your business discriminate as between the two lines to the coast—the Southern Pacific line and the Union Pacific?

A. Invariably Mr. Connor wants the haul via New Orleans or El Paso. If he cannot get that he gets Union Pacific from Omaha, Southern Pacific from Ogden.

Q. He still endeavors to get it by the southern gateway, does he?

A. He rather insists on it.

Q. How does he get along with that "insistence"? Is he able to get it that way?

A. He is helped out occasionally.

Q. You give him some occasionally?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But on all occasions when Mr. Connor approaches you for business, he endeavors to route it via New Orleans or El Paso?

A. By El Paso, yes.

Q. And how is it with Mr. Hild? Is he the same?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, so far as that business is concerned, the Union Pacific is unrepresented, is it?

A. No, sir.

Q. So far as soliciting your business is concerned?

2663 A. No. We have business all through the west. They represent both lines. If we have business going out to the coast, they solicit by both the Ogden and the Southern gateways. They try to get the long haul by El Paso if they can.

Q. Well, I understood you to say that their effort was to move it by New Orleans or El Paso.

A. Their effort was to route it by New Orleans or El Paso, for the Southern Pacific. We have other lines in mind that do business through the southern gateway.

Mr. LOVETT. I was wondering whether you and the witness understood each other.

Q. Judge Lovett thinks that possibly I have not made myself clear in my question. I am not referring now to the times prior to the merger of the offices, but since Mr. Connor has represented both the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific.

A. Yes.

Q. Do I understand you correctly; that as to the coast business he endeavors to send it all, as far as he can get you to send it that way, by the southern gateways?

A. No, no; that is not the way I tried to reply to it. In connection with the Southern Pacific, he tries to get it by New Orleans or El Paso. We work by other lines via St. Louis, south—via the L. & N., the Queen & Crescent, and overland by Omaha. They try to get the haul from the river, invariably.

Q. Well, I do not know as I understand you yet.

A. Well, if I have in mind routing business via El Paso or New Orleans, I have other lines in mind that I want to route the business over.

Q. What you mean is this: that where the initial line, or 2664 some line this side of the transcontinental lines, has secured the business from you, then Mr. Connor tries to get it from the point of connection with those lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But in coming to you as an independent proposition on business that has not been already promised to some line this side of the point of connection with them, he does not make any discrimination between the northern and the southern route, does he?

A. I am inclined to think that Mr. Connor would like to see the business go through Omaha.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I believe you stated that the shipments of the Atlantic Refining Company to Portland, at the time there was separate representation of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, went ordinarily by the Union Pacific Ogden route or the Northern lines?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. None of that business went by way of New Orleans, did it?
A. None.
Q. Or El Paso to Portland?
A. None.
Q. You never shipped to California by way of Portland, did you?
A. We have, yes, sir.
Q. And the boat line down?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When?
A. Immediately after the earthquake.
Q. Was that on account of the railroad blockade about California?
A. It was, yes, sir.
Q. And you could get the water front by using the boat line?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was that the only time you ever shipped that way?
A. That is the only time.
2665 Q. All such business as moved at any time to California by the Union Pacific, except this shipment during the earthquake, always went over the Southern Pacific west of Ogden, did it not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You are not interested, as a shipper, in the divisions of the through rate between the connecting lines, are you?
A. Not in any way, no sir.
Q. Did you testify that you used the lake route?
A. I did.
Q. That is, for the north coast points—that is, north of Puget Sound?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Has the lake line a differential?
A. All lake lines have, yes, sir.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. That business into Portland which went by the Union Pacific which Judge Lovett was asking about a moment ago, did a part of it move from Ogden by the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, and part of it by the Southern Pacific to Sacramento?
A. You refer to the 'Frisco business?
Q. No; I am speaking of Portland business.
A. No.
Q. That went out over the Union Pacific? There were two routes to Portland from Ogden—the Southern Pacific having one to Sacramento, and the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation having the other?
A. Yes.
Q. Did some of the business move one way and some the other?
A. No, sir; the Oregon Short Line.
Q. It all moved Oregon Short Line?
A. Yes, sir.

2666 JOHN HART,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Hart, where do you live?
A. Cleveland.
Q. What is your business?
A. Traffic manager of the Gresselli Chemical Company.
Q. And what is the character of the business transacted by that company?
A. Manufacturing chemists.
Q. Of all kinds or many kinds?
A. Commercial chemicals, yes.
Q. To what parts of the country does the traffic of that concern move?
A. All parts.
Q. Have you plants in Cleveland and other places?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where are they located?
A. Cleveland, Chicago, Cordaville, New York, Birmingham, Beaver Falls, Titusville, Park City; I guess that is about all of them.
Q. Do you have charge of the routing of their traffic from the plants?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. From what plants do you ship to the Pacific coast?
A. Mainly from Chicago.
Q. How long have you been traffic manager?
A. Eighteen years.
Q. How long have you had the Chicago plant?
A. I should say the Chicago plant is probably 13 years old. I imagine it is about that old.
Q. And during all that time have you made your coast shipments from Chicago?
2667 A. Yes, we have made some from there during all that time.
Q. Do you ship anything to the coast from Cleveland?
A. Occasionally.
Q. Do you remember when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate agencies in this territory?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What agent of the Southern Pacific were you acquainted with?
A. Mr. Connor.
Q. And of the Union Pacific?
A. Mr. Johnson.
Q. Did those gentlemen call on you and solicit business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Which way did Mr. Connor endeavor to route the business, if he could?

A. In those days through New Orleans, if he could.

Q. Which way did Mr. Johnson attempt to route it?

A. Through Omaha to Ogden.

Q. Do you remember when the agencies were consolidated?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Since that time, who calls on you in reference to the business of the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific?

A. Mr. Connor and Mr. Hild.

Q. And which way do they endeavor to route the traffic to the coast now?

A. They take it anyway they get it. I think they prefer Omaha.

Q. What makes you think they prefer Omaha?

A. Well, they are continually after the business, and as we do not route through New Orleans very much now, I think they prefer it that way.

2668 Q. How did it happen you quit routing through New Orleans?

A. Well, I don't know that there was any special reason, excepting at the time the Southern Pacific was represented separately Mr. Connor solicited for it, and of course his personality had something to do with getting the business that way.

Q. So that when Mr. Connor's personality was switched from the southern route, at least partially, to the Missouri River route, the traffic went with it?

A. So it appears.

Q. In those days did your traffic move both ways?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you say you divided it then as between Mr. Connor's route and the Union Pacific?

A. Well, I guess there was a pretty fairly even division in those days.

Q. What would you say about the percentage that goes by New Orleans now?

A. There is none going by New Orleans to the coast.

Q. From your experience in connection with Mr. Connor, then, you regard the freight solicitor as of considerable importance to his road in getting business, don't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are they also of service to the shippers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what way?

A. They can assist us in getting tariff quotations, getting the tariffs themselves, and assist us in helping the freight through when we are in a hurry for it.

Q. Do you ship to North Pacific coast points?

A. Some.

Q. Over what lines does that traffic move?

A. Great Northern or Northern Pacific.

Q. None of it by the Union Pacific?

A. No, sir.

2669 Q. The Portland business all goes Northern Pacific or Great Northern?

A. All through the St. Paul gateway and one of those two lines.

Q. Does any of your California business go by the Salt Lake road?

A. No, sir.

Q. None of it?

A. No, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Do Mr. Connor and his assistants efficiently and adequately serve the purpose of both lines now, as far as you are concerned?

A. I think they do.

Q. Mr. Connor looks after your freight as well by the Ogden route as he would by New Orleans, doesn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Interested in your freight no matter which way it goes?

A. He appears to be all the time.

Q. Now, with reference to the New Orleans route: the rates being equal and the personal element of the solicitor being eliminated, which is the better route for traffic to California—by way of New Orleans, or by way of Ogden?

A. I should say that the Omaha-Ogden route was the better, being the shorter.

Q. If you were to send it by way of New Orleans, on equal rates, on account of solicitation, it would be largely to help out a good fellow, wouldn't it?

A. Very largely so, yes.

Q. Did you ever send any freight to California by way of Portland and boat down?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever send any to Portland by way of New 2670 Orleans or El Paso?

A. No, sir.

Q. And all such freight as you had for California prior to the opening of the San Pedro line, passed over the Union Pacific, I presume, and went over the Southern Pacific west of Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are there a great many lines soliciting your traffic to the Pacific coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The North-Western, the St. Paul, and the Burlington?

A. All the intermediate lines do.

Q. All the intermediate lines. That has continued right along, has it?

A. Yes.

Q. You are not interested in the division of the through rate between them, are you?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Is it an advantage, in getting shipments through rapidly, to have them go over as few lines of road as possible, that is, as few transfers from one line to another as possible?

A. Well, I should imagine that would be an advantage.

Q. Taking that into account, then, there are less transfers from one line to another by way of New Orleans than by way of Omaha, aren't there?

A. Yes, I expect there is one less transfer there at least.

Q. Only one. And you say that Mr. Connor efficiently served both lines. You mean that so far as attending to your part of the business is concerned, he is efficient?

A. I can speak from no other experience; we only have our own.

2671 Q. By that you do not mean that he is conducting a very active competition, one line against the other, do you, since he represents them both?

A. Well, no, I don't suppose there is any competition just now.

Q. No. So that from the standpoint of the stockholders of the Southern Pacific on the one hand, and the Union Pacific on the other, Mr. Connor's present activities are not especially efficient, are they?

Mr. LOVETT. I object to that.

Q. Each one endeavoring to get business—one line against the other?

Mr. LOVETT. I object to that question because this is not a stockholders' suit.

The EXAMINER. Answer the question.

Q. You can answer. I want to find out just what you mean by saying that he conducts the business of both lines efficiently.

A. By that I mean this: that he is soliciting for both lines continuously. Now, our coast business, being 'Frisco business, I send through Ogden, but I have any amount of business in the southwest which he is continually soliciting for his Southern Pacific.

Q. But in the old days, when he was soliciting for the Southern Pacific, he got your business, about half of it, you say, by New Orleans?

A. He got a nice percentage of it, yes.

Q. And therefore if at the present time he is not soliciting any longer for the Southern Pacific on that coast business, but is soliciting it for the Union Pacific, why, that is so much the worse for the Southern Pacific, isn't it?

A. Well, I don't know as it is.

Q. You don't know?

A. No.

2672 J. E. WILKISON,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Wilkison, where do you live?
A. East Cleveland.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am assistant to the treasurer of the Chandler & Price Company.
Q. What is the business of the Chandler & Price Company?
A. Manufacturing printing presses and printing machinery.
Q. To what part of the country is their product shipped?
A. All over the world.
Q. Is it a large concern—a large output?
A. Yes, sir. It is the largest of its kind in the world, I guess.
Q. How long have you been in charge of their traffic, if you are in charge of it?
A. I am not immediately in charge of it now. It is underneath me. I had charge of it for about seven years.
Q. Between what dates?
A. October, 1899, up to within about two years.
Q. Do you still have charge of it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific had separate agencies in this territory?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were you called on by those agents for business?
A. Yes, sir, we were.

2673 Q. Which way was the Southern Pacific agency endeavoring to route the traffic to the coast?
A. Via New Orleans.
Q. And the Union Pacific by the Missouri River?
A. By Omaha, as I recollect.
Q. Are you acquainted with Mr. Connor?
A. I have met Mr. Connor, yes, sir.
Q. Does he come to see you and solicit business?
A. He has not been there for some time.
Q. Who calls on you in the interests of the two lines since the consolidation?
A. Mr. Hild.
Q. In soliciting business to the coast at the present time, which route, if either, does Mr. Hild endeavor to secure the traffic for?
A. I could not say that Mr. Hild makes any particular difference in his solicitation. Nearly all of our shipments are routed by the consignee, and if he comes to us it is simply to ascertain about the time the shipment is going forward and the lines out of Cleveland.

Q. That is, the consignee on the coast routes the business?
A. In nearly every instance.
Q. And Mr. Hild's interest is to see if it is routed their way, that the routing is respected, I suppose?
A. I didn't get the last part of that question.
Q. Mr. Hild's interest is to see that the routing is respected, if the consignee has routed it by one of their lines?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Does he ever call on you and endeavor to get business that has been routed by some line other than the Union Pacific or the Southern Pacific?

A. Well, in this respect; he might ask if we had any ship-
2674 ments for the coast, and if we told him we did have, and they were not routed his way, he would probably make a memorandum of it and go after the business at the other end of the line, through their Pacific coast representatives.

Q. But if they were routed either Union Pacific or Southern Pacific via New Orleans he is satisfied?
A. He is satisfied.
Q. Do you think that traffic going out of Cleveland and not routed by the consignee, but is free traffic, in the hands of the consignor, can be influenced as to the direction it will move by a personal solicitation of traffic officials here?
A. Yes, sir, I do.
Q. Then, you believe in local representatives?
A. I do.
Q. And that they will secure business for their lines?
A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Such shipments as you have to the Pacific coast, how do they move?
A. They go Union Pacific. Or Los Angeles business usually goes Union Pacific-Salt Lake route.
Q. Since that route was opened?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And how to other points in California?
A. Our San Francisco business usually moves Illinois Central-Southern Pacific; some of it goes Santa Fe.
Q. Illinois Central-Southern Pacific by way of New Orleans?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Suppose it goes to San Francisco?
2675 A. That is the way it goes—Illinois Central-Southern Pacific.

Q. Don't you send any over the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific by the Ogden route?
A. We haven't for some time, no, sir, to the best of my recollection.
Q. Why?

A. Well, our standing instructions, up to within a short time, have been Illinois Central-Southern Pacific—I presume mainly through the efforts of Mr. Connor and Mr. Doul. Mr. Doul is the Illinois Central representative.

Q. In this territory?

A. Yes, sir. I don't know where his headquarters are.

Q. So you haven't been shipping much to San Francisco over the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific by way of Ogden?

A. No, sir.

Q. You send some by way of El Paso, do you?

A. We haven't for some time.

Q. In the days when they had separate solicitation here—the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific—how did the Union Pacific business for California go?

A. That went by Union Pacific or Council Bluffs, through Ogden, and Southern Pacific, I think.

Q. It was the only way for it to go, wasn't it?

A. It was about the only way it could go, I guess.

Q. You never sent any to California by way of Portland, and boat down?

A. No, sir, we never have.

Q. Now have you ever sent any to Portland by way of the Sunset Route?

A. No, sir.

Q. You are not interested in the division of the rate by the carriers, are you?

A. No, sir.

2676 Q. You have been solicited for your California shipments by all the intermediate lines, haven't you—the Rock Island, the Missouri Pacific, the Burlington, the Chicago & North-Western, and the St. Paul?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They are all actively soliciting your business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Chicago & North-Western has a solicitor in this territory?

A. Yes, sir; a good one.

Q. And the Union Pacific had its separate solicitor here, too?

A. I don't remember the Union Pacific solicitor who used to be here. I would possibly recognize him if I saw him.

Q. But there was one, I mean?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It has been testified there was a Union Pacific solicitor here.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And also a North-Western solicitor at that time?

A. Yes, sir, I think so.

Q. And for the various intermediate lines?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Does Mr. Hild leave his card with you when he calls on you?
A. He is apt to, yes, sir.
Q. Have you got any of them with you?
A. No, I have not. I remember the card, however.
Mr. LOVETT. Haven't you got one you could give him.
Mr. Hild produces card, and the same is handed to Mr. Severance.

Mr. SEVERANCE. It is stipulated that these cards of Mr. Hild
2677 contain on the back a map identical with the one upon the back of the card of Mr. Liston, Complainant's Exhibit 116, and on the face of the card there is the following:

GEORGE B. HILD,
Traveling Freight Agent,
53 East Fourth Street,
Cincinnati, Ohio.

Union Pacific Railroad Company
Oregon Short-Line Railroad
Oregon Railroad & Navigation Co.
Southern Pacific Company.

This is stipulated, isn't it?

Mr. LOVETT. Yes, sir.

2678 O. J. STEWART,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Stewart, what is your business?
A. Manager of traffic, Standard Sewing Machine Company.
Q. Where is the plant of the Standard Sewing Machine Company?
A. Cleveland.
Q. Do they ship to the Pacific coast?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How does it move? Over what transcontinental lines does your business chiefly move?
A. Over the Santa Fe, the Union and the Southern Pacific generally.
Q. How does your Portland business move?
A. What we have, Great Northern and Northern Pacific.
Q. Do you know Mr. Hild?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Does he call on you soliciting traffic for the lines he represents?

A. He does.

Q. Does he solicit for either the Union Pacific or the Southern Pacific, one as against the other?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you in the traffic department of your company when they had separate agencies here?

A. No, sir.

Q. Are you called on by a good many traffic solicitors?

A. Yes, sir

Q. What is your judgment as to whether the movement of traffic is affected by the solicitation of business? Do they succeed in getting the business—the solicitors?

A. I think they do.

2679 Q. That is, it is your opinion, from the standpoint of the railroad represented, that it is valuable to them to have traffic solicitors in the field?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They secure traffic?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what way do they secure this traffic?

A. They call on us occasionally, and if we have anything that is going to any points that they represent, if it is routed their way, they take care of it after it has gone. They trace the shipment, and help to get the equipment ready for it.

Q. By performing these various services for the shipper, you think the traffic solicitors are able to secure business for their companies?

A. I think they are.

Q. How does your Oriental business, if you have any, move?

A. Via New York.

Q. None of it by the coast?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you have shipments to Australia and New Zealand?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do they move?

A. Canadian Pacific, via Vancouver.

Q. Entirely Canadian Pacific?

A. Well, local line, Lake Shore.

Q. You mean all by Canadian Pacific steamship connections?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. None of them by San Francisco?

A. No.

Cross-examination, by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You never shipped anything to San Francisco by way of 2680 Portland and boat line down?

A. No, sir.

Q. Nor anything to Portland by way of New Orleans or El Paso?

A. No, sir.

Q. When the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate solicitors here, how did your business for California move over the Union Pacific? Over the Southern Pacific west of Ogden?

A. I was not at the head of the traffic department at that time.

Q. Oh, I didn't understand it.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I asked him that, and he said he did not have charge of the traffic then.

Q. How far back does your control of the traffic extend?

A. About eight years, as nearly as I can remember.

Q. Such business as you send to California goes over the Union Pacific and over the Southern Pacific, does it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With reference to the solicitors, Mr. Stewart, does the present force of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific here adequately serve your purpose?

A. Yes, sir; they do.

Q. In looking after your shipments and giving you such service as you expect from soliciting agents?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Taking into account the location of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific being a line extending from Omaha to Ogden and there connecting with the Southern Pacific as the only outlet to the Pacific coast, prior to the opening of the San Pedro line, two joint men representing both the Union Pacific 2681 and the Southern Pacific could serve your purpose as well as two separate representatives, couldn't they?

A. They could; yes, sir.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. They could not, however, serve the purpose of the Southern Pacific road, having a line west from New Orleans, in competition with the Union Pacific, could they? The same men could not compete with themselves for the business, could they?

A. No.

Q. Now you say these gentlemen serve you efficiently. Do you ship very much over the Union and Southern Pacific?

A. Not a great deal, no, sir.

Q. Most of your shipments go Santa Fe, don't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have you had occasion to call on Union Pacific-Southern Pacific representatives for assistance in tracing cars, or anything of that sort?

A. Not in late years, no, sir.

Q. Well, if you have not had to call on them, of course their efficiency doesn't interest you very much?

A. Not a great deal, no.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Mr. Severance asked you a question, assuming the Southern Pacific was the leading line. Wouldn't you understand, so far as the Southern Pacific was concerned, it was a question of a long haul and a short haul—that is, long haul by way of New Orleans and short haul from Ogden?

A. I have always considered it that way.

2682 Q. That the Union Pacific is a connecting line of the Ogden line of the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. But you can't see how the Union Pacific could get very much revenue out of business going by way of New Orleans, can you?

A. Well, the question of revenue I have not thought of.

Q. I say the Union Pacific could not get any revenue out of business going by New Orleans, could it?

A. No, the Union Pacific could not.

Q. That is what I mean—the Union Pacific.

A. No.

Q. So if they were competing with the Sunset Route of the Southern Pacific they could not get any revenue at all unless the business went over the Union Pacific line?

A. No.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You are not concerned as to what roads get the revenue that you have to pay, are you, Mr. Stewart?

A. No sir.

Q. As to how they divide it?

A. No, sir.

2683 GEORGE KRAUSE,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Krause, where do you live?

A. I live in Cleveland.

Q. What is your business?

A. Commercial freight agent of the Big Four Railroad.

Q. How long have you been with the Big Four?

A. About 32 years.

Q. In the traffic department all the time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 32 years?

A. 32 years, yes, sir.

Q. You don't look it?

A. It is a fact, sir; since the first of September, 1877.

Q. Do you remember when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific were separately represented in this territory, Mr. Krause?

A. I do, yes, sir.

Q. As far as you recall, who represented the Union Pacific at different times here?

A. The first representative of the Union Pacific that I recall was Mr. J. D. Welsh. Then they had a number of changes at that time. I could not be specific as to the date, but they had an office here for awhile, and then they closed it up, and then I think Mr. Shearman traveled out of Cincinnati. And then, if I remember rightly, they opened it again, with Mr. Johnson. But I could not be specific as to the dates that the different representatives represented the road; I could not give the years.

2684 Q. Yes, I understand. Who represented the Southern Pacific as far back as you can remember?

A. Why, as far back as I can remember, the original commercial agent was Asa Kellogg, and Mr. Connor traveled for him. That was only for a short time. Shortly after Mr. Kellogg's death Mr. Connor was made commercial agent, and he has been coming up ever since.

Q. You remember when the two agencies were consolidated, don't you? I don't mean the year, but the fact.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Previous to that time had these two representatives been competing for California business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way did Mr. Connor and his subordinates and the other Southern Pacific men endeavor to route the traffic?

A. Through New Orleans. I say through New Orleans, but I want to modify that by saying that they tried to get it through New Orleans, through El Paso, or through Ogden gateways.

Q. Now, which way did they try to get it? Which way did he endeavor to route it when he could control it?

A. The preference was through New Orleans.

Q. And if he could not get it by New Orleans and could get it by El Paso, he did so?

A. Yes, sir, or through Ogden.

Q. And if he could not get it through New Orleans or El Paso he was glad to get the haul from Ogden to the coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, that is about it, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Union Pacific endeavored to route it which way?

A. Through Missouri River gateway.

Q. They had no other route?

A. No, sir.

2685 Q. Was the Big Four interested in this traffic—some of it?

A. We had an initial line's interest in it.

Q. You had an initial line both ways, hadn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whether it went by Cincinnati and then south, or went west to Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And so you were in position to observe the way that these gentlemen were working business, weren't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, since the agencies have been consolidated, Mr. Connor has represented both lines. So far as you know have they shown any preference for one route over the other?

A. They aim to get the business any way they can get it—anything so that it does not go over the Santa Fe.

Q. That is what I mean. But as between the Union Pacific route and the Sunset Route they are not working one against the other?

A. It depends on the circumstances, perhaps. I should say that there are times, if the L. & N. representative, for example, discovers a carload somewhere, he brings it to the attention of the joint representative, Mr. Connor or Mr. Hild, and they tried to get their support to secure the car through New Orleans.

Q. Certainly; but they do not, as representatives of the Union Pacific, try to get that car away from the L. & N., do they?

A. Well, it is considered a question of honor, that if a man puts you onto the car first, you will work it that way.

Q. In that instance the Union Pacific element is eliminated, isn't it? They represent only the Southern Pacific in trying to help the L. & N. route the car?

A. Well, to a certain extent; but in the meantime while per-

2686 haps they are trying to get this, the Milwaukee and the St. Paul men, or the North-Western, or the Burlington, or the Rock Island and all the other lines that work through the northern gateway are trying to get that car over their line.

Q. That is just what I was getting at. The L. & N. are trying to get the car, and they try to get the support of Mr. Connor to route that car by New Orleans, don't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then the North-Western and the other lines that are running to Omaha try to get that car over their lines, as you said?

A. Yes.

Q. Who represents the Union Pacific? How does the Union Pacific come in to help them get that car if Mr. Connor, who represents both lines, is working to get it by the southern gateway?

A. Well, he aims to be neutral; that is, he——

Q. No, but you said a moment ago he was supporting the Louisville & Nashville.

A. Yes, I understand.

Q. Well, how can he be neutral, then?

A. Well, it is pretty hard to describe those things, just how they come up.

Q. Well, I should think it is. Now, don't you know that Mr. Connor cannot represent two lines that are competing with each other, at the same time?

A. Well, that is their general policy—to be neutral so far as possible.

Q. I say, don't you know that he can't represent two lines that are competing with each other at the same time, as to the same business?

A. Well, I presume that would depend on circumstances.

Q. You think he could do it, do you? Now you explain a
2687 circumstance under which he could represent both lines when the one line was competing against the other for the business?

A. Well, I will tell you. Mr. Connor, as he is situated, he is so that he can work with all lines.

Q. Can he work with the lines to Omaha at the same time he is working with the lines to New Orleans, on the same car, at the same time?

A. No, I presume that is right.

Q. Of course he couldn't. Now, if they had separate agencies, when the Louisville & Nashville was after a car and had the support of Mr. Connor, representing the Southern Pacific, and the Union Pacific had an agent, and the lines leading to Omaha were working for that car, they could be supported by the Union Pacific agent, couldn't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And would be?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And, having a common agent, that element of competition is eliminated, isn't it?

A. I presume it is, sir.

Q. How do you think the business to the coast, moving by the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, taking the two together, I mean by the New Orleans route and by the Union Pacific, is divided now as compared with the way it was divided when they had separate agencies?

A. I think the situation has changed very materially in the last ten years, say.

Q. You can give me an answer. I am just asking you as to what your view is as to percentage of division, which way it has changed, and how much.

A. More of it goes through the Missouri gateway—for good reasons, of course.

Q. Now, one reason is that Mr. Connor is working for both lines, isn't he?

2688 A. I presume that might be one reason, yes, sir, but the——

Q. Mr. Connor is a very efficient solicitor of traffic?

Mr. LOVETT. Let him finish his answer.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I thought he had answered.

WITNESS. The situation has changed entirely, Mr. Severance, in this way: that in the last ten years the Santa Fe have got a good deal stronger by reason of their entrance into San Francisco; the Rock Island have strengthened the El Paso gateway very greatly, and in Cleveland all of the Missouri River lines have offices now—I think there are eight or nine offices, and they all fight for the Missouri River gateway; and by reason of the Sunset route being from Cleveland to 'Frisco about a thousand miles farther around, they have lost their standing; they do not get as much business as they used to, because during that time the situation has changed, and it has been brought about largely, I think, by the appointment of traffic managers by industrials. They are always fighting to get improved service, and by sort of pitting one line against the others they have gradually been after the railroads to improve the service, and each man presents the matter to his people, and the improvements, to my mind, seem to have been more through the northern gateways.

Q. You mean that since the Union Pacific got control of the Southern Pacific they have not done anything to improve the Southern route, do you—let that go?

A. No, sir; I wouldn't say that. The distance from here to 'Frisco is about a thousand miles farther around by New Orleans.

Q. How much longer is the distance now than it was be-2689 fore the consolidation of these two lines?

A. It is no longer, sir.

Q. No. Well, that hasn't anything to do with it, has it?

A. I think it has, sir.

Q. There has been a change in the situation?

A. The service given by the roads ten years ago would not be satisfactory at this time, sir.

Q. Isn't the service over the Sunset Route of the Southern Pacific better than it was ten years ago?

A. Our time that we gave away to the Sunset Route then would not be satisfactory to the shippers of to-day.

Q. That is the point. There has been an improvement both ways, has there?

A. Yes: but the New Orleans gateway is too far around to be satisfactory.

Q. But the New Orleans gateway is no farther around than it was ten years ago, and they have improved both lines, haven't they?

A. I know, but they have been able to shorten the time more through the northern gateway than they have the Southern by reason of the shorter route.

Q. How much more have they shortened it?

A. Well, I had a case the other day where a shipper wanted to obligate me to put a car into 'Frisco in ten days. He claimed he could get it. He allowed one day to Chicago and nine days from Chicago to 'Frisco. Ten years ago if we got in there in twenty days we thought we were doing pretty well.

Q. Well, did you get it in there in ten days?

A. We didn't handle the car.

Q. Do you know whether he could get it in in ten days over any road?

2690 A. I did not obligate myself. They had what they supposed was a pretty good promise that the car would go through in about that time.

Q. From whom did they have it?

A. The shipper told me it was the Lake Shore and Santa Fe.

Q. In times such as we had a year and a half or two years ago, when traffic was very heavy, wasn't there a great deal of time lost in getting traffic through Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And wasn't it a fact that in times of congestion like that, in spite of the difference in distance, it can be moved to California points, particularly we will say to Los Angeles, Southern California points, quicker from Cleveland by the New Orleans or the El Paso gateway than it could by Chicago?

A. I wouldn't say it could be quicker.

Q. Well, as quickly?

A. No, I don't think as quick, sir. I think perhaps by the El Paso gateway to Los Angeles—through the El Paso gateway?

Q. Yes. Because the same condition does not exist as to congestion in transfers south of Chicago, does it?

A. Well, you can't state that general, Mr. Severance, because at times some distribution may exist through the St. Louis gateway, and they have some congestion there, and another time the congestion might be through New Orleans and Chicago gateway.

Q. More apt to be at Chicago because the traffic is much larger?

A. Yes; but of course they are supported by their belt lines, the E. J. & E., and——

Q. Just answer my question. Isn't it more apt to be con-

2691 gested at Chicago than at these other gateways farther south?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, I thought so. The Big Four is a part of the New York Central system?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are aware, I suppose, that the Union Pacific is a stockholder of the New York Central and that its president is a director of the New York Central, aren't you?

A. Well, I have no means of knowing that positively, sir.

Q. Well, you have heard of it?

A. Yes, sir, by reading the paper; I don't know it to be a positive fact.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Husted the other day, when he was talking with you, that in the old days, when there were separate agencies, the Southern Pacific people were working for business via New Orleans or El Paso and not via Ogden?

A. The Southern Pacific?

Q. Yes, sir, when they had separate agencies. Didn't you tell Mr. Husted that when he talked with you the other day?

A. Well—I may have——

Q. Didn't you tell him that?

A. Well—I—Let me refresh my memory on that. I may have put it in that way, but he——

Q. Why didn't you say it here today, then? What has changed you?

A. Well, I had overlooked—may have overlooked for the moment the routing through Ogden by Union Pacific.

Q. Have you had any talk with any of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific representatives since you talked with Mr. Husted the other day about your testimony here?

A. No, sir. Well, I beg your pardon, sir; I have, too, but 2692 nothing that would change that answer in any way, sir.

Q. You have talked over your testimony with them, though?

A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You have had several visits from representatives of the Government, haven't you, Mr. Krause?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many times have you been called upon by Mr. McKenzie?

A. Twice.

Q. How many times by Mr. Husted?

A. Once.

Q. It never occurred to you that there was any impropriety in talking to a representative of the Union Pacific or the Southern Pacific, did it?

A. No, sir. I didn't understand that I was obligated not to talk to them.

Q. You have been under the impression you could talk to anybody you pleased, haven't you?

A. I so understood it; I didn't know to the contrary.

Q. In the days when they had separate solicitors for the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, Mr. Krause, which way did the traffic secured by the Union Pacific representatives for California move?

A. I beg pardon? Did you say by the Southern Pacific or the Union Pacific?

Q. I said during the days when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate solicitors, which way did the traffic that was secured by the representative of the Union Pacific, for California, move?

A. It went through the Missouri River gateway.

Q. And thence over the Southern Pacific from Ogden to 2693 destination.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. There was no other outlet for it, was there?

A. There was no other outlet for it.

Q. Mr. Severance's questions to you about Mr. Connor's representation of both the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific seem to have been based upon the assumption that they were competing lines. Now, isn't it true that the Union Pacific, so far as the Ogden line of the Southern Pacific is concerned, is a connecting line?

A. Connecting line as between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

Q. Yes. That is to say, isn't it true that the Southern Pacific in addition to its Sunset Route by way of New Orleans and Galveston and the Morgan line of steamers from New York, commonly called the Sunset Route, also operates the line from San Francisco and other California points to Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in that way is interested in two lines between the Atlantic and the Pacific—one, which it controls exclusively, from New York to New Orleans and Galveston by steamer and thence by rail to the Pacific Ocean, and the other an interest of about 800 or 850 miles in the all-rail route? That is true, isn't it?

A. I so understand it, yes, sir.

Q. And as to the latter route, that is, the all-rail route, the Union Pacific is a connecting and not a competing line; isn't that true?

A. A connecting link with the Southern Pacific, yes.

Q. But the all-rail lines do compete with or did compete with and do now compete with the Sunset route of the Southern Pacific?

2694 That is, I mean the lines operated by the various railroads lying between the Atlantic Ocean and the Pacific Ocean?

A. Yes, sir, they do compete with each other.

Q. But that the Southern Pacific owns a link of about 850 miles in one of those transcontinental lines, and the Union Pacific a link of about 1,000 miles extending between Omaha and Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You so understand that, don't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So far as the Southern Pacific's interest in the traffic from this territory to California is concerned, as you say it is largely a question of division, isn't it, or, rather, the short haul as against the long haul?

A. It is, yes, sir.

Q. Except as against the Atchison. It is a competitor of the Atchison?

A. As against the Atchison, yes, sir.

Q. Does the Atchison solicit actively in this territory for California business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Rock Island?

A. And the Rock Island.

Q. And the Missouri Pacific?

A. And the Missouri Pacific.

Q. And all of those lines extending westerly?

A. All of the lines through the El Paso gateway and through the Missouri River—Colorado.

Q. Do you have anything to do with California business moving from this territory to the Pacific Ocean?

A. We have an initial line's interest. We try to get it over our line out of Cleveland.

Q. You try to get it over your line out of Cleveland?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way do you try to have it move?

A. We try to get a haul on it, any sort of a haul, through 2695 no particular gateway.

Q. You don't work for one gateway as against another?

A. No, sir; we simply want to get a haul, whether it is long or short. Of course we try to get a long haul if we can.

Q. Now, if a car originates on your line, or if there is a car that might be handled by your line, and that is brought to your attention, for instance, by the St. Paul, you would try to work with the St. Paul to carry that car by way of Chicago, wouldn't you?

A. We would win or lose.

Q. If, however, such a car was brought to your attention by some line, say out of St. Louis, some St. Louis connection, you would try to work it with that line?

A. Try to work it with that line, yes, sir.

Q. The situation which Mr. Severance assumed, that Mr. Connor might find himself in with reference to this Louisville & Nashville car, is not a very unusual one in freight soliciting, is it?

A. No, sir, it is not unusual.

Q. Whenever an agent's attention is called to a car by a connecting line he tries to work it with that line?

A. He tries to work it with that line, yes.

Q. That is the rule among them, isn't it?

A. Yes, that is the rule.

Q. Did you ever know of or attempt to move any freight to California over the Union Pacific and by the boat line from Portland down to California?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember ever having attempted to move any to 2696 Portland by way of New Orleans?

A. I don't recall any, sir.

Q. You were asked about the Union Pacific being interested as a stockholder in the New York Central, Mr. Harriman being a director. Have you any knowledge of that beyond what you see in the newspaper?

A. No, none whatever.

Q. Has that ever had any effect on you in soliciting freight?

A. Not in any way.

Mr. LOVETT. I am sorry to say it has not, but I just wanted to know.

Br. Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. You say you only know that from reading it in the newspaper?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You read of his election to that position, as a director of the New York Central, since the time you gave your original statement to the representative of the Government with reference to the testimony here, didn't you?
A. I think it has taken place since then.

2697 J. C. WICKS,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct-examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Wicks, what is your business?
A. I am with the Erie Iron & Steel Companies. I am sales agent and incidentally handle the traffic.
Q. How long have you been in that position?
A. Six years.
Q. Do you ship to the Pacific coast?
A. Some, yes, sir.
Q. To California?
A. Yes.
Q. What route does your traffic take to California?
A. Santa Fe.
Q. How do you happen to give your business to that route?
A. Well, largely because they have always given good time and because they have called upon us to get the business.
Q. Has your business been solicited by the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific representatives?
A. No, sir, not to my knowledge.
Q. Not during the last six years?
A. No, sir.
Q. Do you know Mr. Hild?
A. Not to say that I know him; I met him once.
Q. Did he come in to solicit business?
A. He did not.
Q. When did you first meet him?
A. After I received a subpœna from the court to appear here.
Q. What did he do—come in to talk to you about your testimony?
A. I don't know what he came in for. That is what he talked about.
2698 Q. But he has never been in to solicit your business?
A. Not to my knowledge, no, sir. He has never talked to me, to my knowledge.
Q. You were not in that position at the time the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific each had a soliciting agency here?

A. I guess not, because I know nothing about it. I have only been six years constantly here.

Q. From your experience during that period, what is your opinion as to the value to railroads of soliciting agents?

A. Well, they are a great help to me because of the fact that my attention is largely directed to sales and other matters not pertaining to transportation. Consequently I rely a good bit upon the representatives of the different roads for information, such as rates and tracing cars, and also in obtaining settlement of claims.

Q. From your experience would you say that the presence in Cleveland of an active soliciting agent of a line of railroad would have a tendency today to get the business for that road from the shippers?

A. Yes, I should say so, because we try to be fair and distribute the business; and I presume if some representative called upon us, even though we had not much to give him, we might give him their share, providing it was not objectionable to the consignee.

Q. You appreciate the services that they render for you?

A. Yes.

Q. And in consideration of that give them business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you ship to the north Pacific coast?

A. Yes—Portland and Seattle.

2699 Q. Over what lines does that traffic move?

A. Union Pacific and the northern roads, the northern railways.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Suppose Mr. Hild were to resign his connection with the Southern Pacific and work exclusively for the Union Pacific and the Ogden line, and Mr. Connor resigned from the Union Pacific and worked exclusively for the Southern Pacific line: do you think you could give us any more of your business?

A. Well, I presume if they called upon me and I had the routing, that I could give them more than I have, because we have never given them anything.

Q. Oh, you haven't given them anything?

A. No.

Q. So you haven't suffered by the solicitation?

A. No, we do not consider it so. We get good service from the Santa Fe, and have never inquired as to better service or quicker time.

Q. Oh, I see. Did Mr. Hild never call on your company before?

A. Not to my knowledge he has not; I don't know.

Q. I am sorry.

A. So am I.

Q. Your house routes its own freight to the Pacific coast, does it, or is that done by the consignees?

A. We usually route unless there is some preference given by the consignee, and then we always follow their suggestions.

Q. How is it with reference to the coast?

A. The coast business is generally routed beyond the initial line. They usually express a preference. That has been changed on one or two occasions, however.

Q. That is, the consignees usually route it?

A. Yes.

2700 FRANK A. PECK,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct-examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Peck, what is your business?

A. The traffic manager of the Brown Hoisting Machinery Company.

Q. What kind of product does your company manufacture?

A. Ore and coal-handling machinery and fire-proof construction material.

Q. Do you ship to the Pacific coast?

A. We do.

Q. How long have you been in that position?

A. About seven years.

Q. How does your California traffic chiefly move?

A. Mostly through the Omaha gateway.

Q. By the Omaha?

A. By the Omaha route, yes.

Q. Any of it by the Santa Fe?

A. Not very much.

Q. How does your business to the north coast move?

A. Mostly by Northern Pacific and Great Northern.

Q. Have you any particular reason for sending your business to the north coast by the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern?

A. No particular reason, no, sir, only that it seems more direct.

Q. Is your business solicited that way?

A. Yes, it is solicited that way.

Q. Do those lines have representatives here?

A. Yes. That is, I don't know that they have offices here, but I know they have their representatives soliciting here.

Q. Is your business solicited by the Union Pacific and the 2701 Southern Pacific—the joint agency?

A. Yes.

Q. By whom?

A. By Mr. Connor and Mr. Hild.

Q. In soliciting that business do they discriminate between the Southern line and the Union Pacific line?

A. Not that I have ever known of.

Q. Do you, in your experience, regard soliciting agents as useful to the railroads in securing traffic?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What do they do for the shippers that commends them to the shippers?

A. They endeavor to facilitate the movement of freight, make it quicker; we can keep in touch with it by calling them up on the phone quicker than we can by outside offices; also on the rates and tariffs, and in getting general information that we might want of them through the offices here.

Q. And in consideration of their performing those services for you, you feel like giving them business?

A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Are Mr. Hild and Mr. Connor active in serving you, as soliciting agents?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They will look up shipments, whether they move by way of El Paso or New Orleans or Ogden, will they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And all of your shipments to California that go over the Union Pacific go over the Southern Pacific west of Ogden, do they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever shipped anything to California by way of Portland and the boat line?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or anything to Portland by way of New Orleans or El Paso?

A. No, sir.

2702 Q. You have no interest in the division of the through rate?

A. No, sir.

2703 B. C. KRIDLER,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Kridler, what is your business?

A. I am traffic manager of the Cleveland Hardware Company.

Q. How long have you been in that business?

A. I have been with that firm pretty near two years.

Q. And as traffic manager of that company what are your duties?

A. Checking rates, routing freight, handling the freight business in general.

Q. Does that company do a large business in different parts of the country?

A. It is mostly east of Kansas City. We have very little western business.

Q. You do some Pacific coast business?

A. Very little.

Q. Do the agents or representatives of the transcontinental lines call on you and solicit Pacific coast business?

A. I think there has been quite a few of them, but not in general. Our business is so small that they do not bother with it.

Q. Does Mr. Hild ever call on you and solicit your business?

A. He has never called on me to solicit freight.

Q. He never has?

A. No, sir.

Q. I misunderstood you. Do you ship anything to Portland?

A. We have shipped business to Portland.

Q. How does that move?

A. St. Paul, through Omaha route.

Q. Do you ship anything to Los Angeles.

2704 A. Small, less than carload business.

Q. How does that move, ordinarily?

A. Through New Orleans—Illinois Central and Southern Pacific.

Q. And that moves without solicitation?

A. Yes, sir. It is routed from the other end, routed by the consignee.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Your Honor, we have only two or three other witnesses subpœnaed and their testimony is of the same character as that which has been taken. Owing to the necessity of arranging some record evidence which we have, that must be arranged today, we will not call any other witnesses, and the other witnesses may be excused.

The EXAMINER. Any other witnesses who have been subpœnaed will be excused. Their testimony will not be required.

2705 Mr. SEVERANCE. I now offer in evidence, pursuant to our stipulation, the testimony given by R. P. Schwerin, a witness before the Interstate Commerce Commission, who testified on the 29th day of January, 1907, at the City of San Francisco. I understand it is agreed by all parties that this testimony may be written into the record and have the same force and effect as though Mr. Schwerin were upon the witness-stand giving the same testimony?

Mr. LOVETT. Yes.

R. P. SCHWERIN

testified:

Examined by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Schwerin, where do you live?

A. San Mateo.

Q. And what is your business?

A. Steamship operator.
Q. How long have you been in the steamship business?
A. Since 1893.
Q. Where did you commence your work in the steamship business?
A. In San Francisco.
Q. With what company were you first connected?
A. With the Pacific Mail Steamship Company.
Q. Was that in 1893?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. In what capacity?
A. Vice-president and general manager.
Q. And you still occupy that position?
A. I do.
Q. So that, so far as that corporation is concerned, there has been no change in your title, at least since 1893?
A. None.

2706 Q. Will you please state the names of the steamships that are owned by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company—that is, if you can from memory—or give me the number of steamboats owned by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, when you came here in 1893, say, first?

A. "The City of Peking," the "Peru," the "Rio Janeiro," the "Colima," the "Colon," the "San Juan," the "San Jose," the "San Blas," the "Acapulco," the "Barracouta," the "Starbuck," and the "City of New York"—I think that is about all.

Q. Now, which of those ships were engaged in the Oriental trade, if any?
A. The "Rio Janeiro," "City of Peking" and "Peru."
Q. And they sailed out of San Francisco?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And at what ports did they call in the Orient?
A. They touched at Yokohama, Kobe, Nagasaki, Shanghai, and Hong Kong; and sometimes at the port of Amoy.
Q. Sometimes at what?
A. At the port of Amoy.
Q. What connection, if any, did you have with the port of Tientsin?
A. None, except the transfer of freight, from either Shanghai or Nagasaki.
Q. That is, the freight would be brought to your boats at one or the other of those places by coast steamers?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, how long did those three boats continue in that service, Mr. Schwerin?
A. Two of them were withdrawn after we placed the "Korea" and "Siberia" on the run.
Q. You put the "Korea" and "Siberia" on that same run, and which boats did you withdraw?
A. The "Peru" and——

Q. (Int'g.) The "Peking" or "Rio Janeiro?"

A. No, sir, the "Rio Janeiro" was lost.

2707 Q. Oh, yes. Then you had left the "Peking," the "Korea" and the "Siberia"?

A. We had left the "Peking," the "Siberia," and the "Korea" on the run. There was an interval when we had only two vessels, after we lost the "Rio Janeiro."

Q. How long did those boats make up your Oriental fleet?

A. Until we got the "Mongolia" and "Manchuria," when we withdrew the "City of Peking."

Q. The "Mongolia" and the "Manchuria" were added?

A. Yes, and we withdrew the "City of Peking."

Q. So after you had withdrawn the "City of Peking"——

A. We had the "China" too; I should have said the "China" was put on the run. I should have mentioned her. She was on the run all the time.

Q. All the time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So you had four ships?

A. After the "Rio Janeiro" was lost, we put the "Peru" on the run.

Q. You had four all the time, did you?

A. We had three on all the time, and we took one off the Panama line and put it on the transpacific line. The "China" was there all the time. She was there when I went into the company.

Q. Then you had the "China," the "Siberia," the "Korea," and the "Peking," and then you got the "Mongolia" and the "Manchuria"?

A. We added the "Mongolia" and the "Manchuria" and that made five.

Q. Then the line consisted of what?

A. Of the "Korea," "Siberia," "Manchuria," "Mongolia," and the "China," five ships.

2708 Q. What year was that?

A. The "Korea" and "Siberia" went on the line in 1902, and the "Mongolia" and "Manchuria" went on the line in 1904.

Q. Prior to 1902 the fleet was made up of the "Korea," "Siberia," "Peking"——

A. No, prior to 1902 the fleet was made up of the "China," "Peru," and "Peking."

Q. Of the "China," "Peru," and "Peking?"

A. And "Peking," yes.

Q. And that ran back for how many years?

A. It ran back to the time the "Rio" was lost.

Q. What year was that?

A. She was lost four years ago, and we substituted the "Peru" for the "Rio."

Q. You did not understand my question. I asked you what ships made up the line prior to 1902.

A. The "Rio," the "China," and the "Peking."
Q. The "Rio," "China," and "Peking?"
Q. And for how many years back prior to that time did those ships make up the line?
A. The time I was in the company.
Q. Then from the time that you came here in 1893, down to the loss of the "Rio," the ships that made up the line were the three you have just mentioned?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And then when you lost the "Rio," you substituted the "Peru" for her?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And afterwards added these other ships that you have mentioned?
2709 A. Yes, sir; and part of that time the "City of New York" was on the line, when we had extra freight—we put her on for extra freight when we had extra freight. She was also lost.
Q. Now, Mr. Schwerin, did you have agents or representatives at the different Oriental cities?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Will you kindly name the representatives of your company there from 1893, if you have them in mind—from 1893 down to 1902, when the change was made in the ships that made up the line?
A. Mr. Howard, the agent at Yokohama——
Q. (Int'g.) Howard, did you say?
A. Howard, yes.
Q. Wait a minute. We may as well dispose of him now. Is he still the agent there?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. He was the agent of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company from the time you came here?
A. Yes.
Q. At Yokohama?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Go on, please.
A. Mr. Tilden, at Kobe.
Q. Tilden?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. At what place?
A. Kobe.
Q. Is he still the agent there?
A. He is out of the company.
Q. Out of the company?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And how long ago did he retire?
A. About a year and a half.
Q. Up to that time, he was your representative, was he?
A. Not at that point. He was promoted to Hong Kong and afterwards to Shanghai, and then finally left the service.

Q. Mr. Tilden was your representative originally at Kobe? About when did he leave Kobe?

A. About three years ago.

Q. He was there up to three years ago?

A. Yes, sir.

2710 Q. From the time you came here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was at Nagasaki?

A. Holmes, Ringer & Company, commercial agents.

Q. Who?

A. Holmes, Ringer & Company.

Q. Are they still your agents there?

A. They are.

Q. Who is at Shanghai?

A. At the present time Mr. Thebau.

Q. When you came here——

A. (Int'g.) We had no agency at Shanghai, regular agency, but we afterwards established an agency there with the firm of—what is that name—connected with the International Bank—Fearin, Daniel & Company.

Q. What year did you establish that agency?

A. 1894.

Q. And how long did they continue to represent you there?

A. Until 1904.

Q. Until 1904?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was your agent at Hong Kong?

A. Mr. Van Buren was the agent when I came into the company.

Q. Van Buren?

A. Van Buren, yes.

Q. And how long did he remain there?

A. He remained there till three years ago.

Q. Who succeeded Fearin, Daniel & Co., at Shanghai, in 1904?

A. Mr. Thebau.

Q. You say Mr. Van Buren was at Hong Kong until four years ago?

A. Three years ago.

Q. Three years ago. And who succeeded him?

A. Mr. Tilden.

Q. The same gentleman that was originally at——

A. At Kobe.

Q. Who succeeded Mr. Tilden at Kobe?

A. Mr. Campbell.

Q. Campbell?

A. Yes, sir.

2711 Q. Now, have all these agents—I will read them over to you, and see if I have them correct. Howard at Yokohama all the time. Is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tilden at Kobe until three years ago, and afterwards Mr. Campbell there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is still your agent there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Holmes, Ringen & Company——

A. Ringer—R-i-n-g-e-r.

Q. At Nagasaki. Still your agents there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Fearin & Daniel Company at Shanghai from 1894 until 1904, and since 1904 Mr. Thebau?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Van Buren at Hong Kong until three years ago, and since then Mr. Tilden?

A. Yes, sir—no, Mr. Tilden was afterwards relieved by Mr. Silverstone.

Q. When?

A. About 18 months ago.

Q. And Mr. Silverstone is still your agent at Hong Kong?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where does the freight come from that is brought this way by your line?

A. It originates as far west as Calcutta, and as far north as North China.

Q. Is it assembled by these various agents at these ports?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What means do these gentlemen take to secure traffic?

A. Well, they are in communication with shippers—the usual methods.

Q. It is by the ordinary methods that would be employed anywhere?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By personal solicitation, and solicitation by correspond-
2712 ence?

A. Not so much solicitation by correspondence as solicitation personally, or the shipping men coming into the office and asking if they can get space on the steamers.

Q. Are these shipments, Mr. Schwerin, largely made by exporters at these ports you have named? That is, do they buy the stuff in the interior, or bring it in, or handle it on commission, or something of that sort, and ship it?

A. Yes, sir; the freight is not only handled by the houses there, but very largely controlled by the parent houses in this country.

Q. And the freight, where is the freight usually routed? Is it routed by the houses in China or Japan, or is it routed in this country?

A. Both.

Q. Now, at all the time that you have represented the Pacific Mail Steamship Company—I am speaking of the Pacific Mail

Steamship Company now when I say "you"—and that the Pacific Mail Steamship Company has been represented in the Orient by these gentlemen at these various places, they have had practically the same functions, have they not, that is, to look after passenger and freight traffic and procuring it to be sent to this country by your ships?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did those ships and do they still make through billings of commodities that are destined to points in the eastern parts of the United States?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They issue the bills of lading over there, do they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who is the official of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company that has charge of the through freights?

2713 A. Mr. Garland is the present manager.

Q. Have you anything to do with that part of the business?

A. As the general manager of the company I have the right to approve or disapprove.

Q. What is your function? Do you personally take a hand in the making of rates, or do you leave that to Mr. Garland?

A. No, sir, I take a hand in it.

Q. How are steamship rates affected? By what things on the Pacific are steamship rates affected?

A. By competition.

Q. Chiefly by competition, are they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you started out here in 1893, the Pacific Mail was competing for business with all the other lines that were crossing the Pacific, was it not?

A. All the other lines, yes, sir, with the exception of the Occidental & Oriental line, with which it worked in unison.

Q. With the exception of the Occidental & Oriental. Well, did the Occidental and Oriental Steamship line have a separate organization at that time?

A. It had a separate organization, and the Pacific Mail were its agents for freight and passenger business.

Q. The Pacific Mail was its agent?

A. Its agent, yes, sir.

Q. As it was or has continued to be during all the time you have been with them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many ships had the Occidental & Oriental?

A. Three.

Q. How many did they have when you came here?

A. Three.

Q. What were their names?

A. The "Doric," "Coptic," and "Gaelic."

Q. What is the third?

A. The "Gaelic."

Q. I understood the first two, but not the last.
2714 A. "Doric," "Coptic," and "Gaelic."
Q. What became of the "Gaelic?"
A. She was given up. I believe the owners sold her.
Q. For several years you have only had the "Doric" and the "Coptic," have you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When you came here, you found that line being operated under the auspices of the Pacific Mail, although in different ownership?
A. Different management, altogether.
Q. What is that?
A. And different management, I say.
Q. It had a different management?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. I thought you said the Pacific Mail Steamship Company acted as its agent?
A. It did. It didn't manage the line though.
Q. It didn't manage the line. What part of the management was——
A. (Int'g.) We simply acted as its agents for freight and passenger business.
Q. That is, the Pacific Mail Steamship Company used its organization to procure freight and passengers for this company?
A. Yes, sir, for which they were paid.
Q. Do you happen to know, Mr. Schwerin, how long the Pacific Mail has been in the Oriental trade?
A. Since 1868.
Q. That was one of the pioneer lines, was it not?
A. The only line.
Q. It was the only line?
A. Took the first cargo of flour in 1868 to the Orient.
Q. When was the Occidental & Oriental line established?
A. 1874.
Q. You found that in operation when you came here?
2715 A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who was its manager?
A. Mr. D. V. Stubbs.
Q. Mr. D. V. Stubbs?
A Yes, sir
Q. Is he related to Mr J. C. Stubbs?
A. Very closely.
Q. How closely?
A. Brother.
Q. Well, that is close enough. And how long did he continue to be the manager of the Occidental and Oriental?
A. He is still the manager.
Q. He is still the manager, is he?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say the Pacific Mail acts as the agent, but aside from acting as the traffic agent to procure passengers and freight through its organization, the Pacific Mail has not assumed the management of the ships of the Occidental & Oriental?

A. Nothing to do with the management of the ships.

Q. Nothing to do with the management of the ships?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you happen to know who—well, I think we brought that out before, the ownership of the stock. Now, Mr. Schwerin, in so far as the procuring of traffic is concerned, these two lines are now and always have been since you have been here, acting in harmony?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Through the same instrumentalities?

A. Yes, sir.

Q Did the Pacific Mail Company, at the time you came here, have any agencies in the United States for its business?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. You have none in New York?

A. None except the agency here in San Francisco.

Q. Have you ever established an agency in New York?

A. Yes, sir.

2716 Q. When was that done?

A. Some time between 1895 and 1897—as near as I can recollect.

Q. And who was appointed as agent?

A. Mr. Hawley.

Q. What is his name?

A. Hawley—H-a-w-l-e-y.

Q. How long did he continue to be the agent?

A. Until he left the employ of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Do you remember when that was?

A. About 1902 I should think.

Q. Who succeeded him?

A. Mr. Nutting, his chief clerk—or Mr. Spence, his chief clerk, in charge of the freight business, and as our general eastern freight agent. Mr. Nutting is our eastern general passenger agent.

Q. Did you establish agencies at any other place in the east?

A. Yes, sir; in Chicago.

Q. And who was your agent there?

A. Mr. Neimyer.

Q. In what year did you appoint Mr. Neimyer?

A. The same period.

Q. Did Mr. Hawley, and after him, Mr. Spence and Mr. Nutting, as well as Mr. Neimyer, sustain any relation to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Not so far as I was concerned. They reported directly to us.

Q. Possibly you do not understand my question. I asked whether these gentlemen sustained any relation to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir, they retained their original titles with the Southern Pacific.

Q. That does not answer it. What was their original title?

A. I think Mr. Hawley was the general eastern traffic
2717 manager, and Mr. Neimyer was the general eastern agent—western agent, I should say; general western agent.

Q. Mr. Schwerin, have you had any other agency in the east outside of New York and Chicago?

A. No. Those were the only ones who were appointed agents.

Q. You had no agency in Boston?

A. No, sir. We had no regular appointed agent in Boston.

Q. Did you have any representative in Boston?

A. Yes, sir, I believe the representative of the Southern Pacific acted for us there.

Q. He acted for you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How about Baltimore?

A. The same way.

Q. And how about Philadelphia?

A. The same way. We gave commissions to any—I should say this was principally on passenger business. The agent at Boston never acted for us in freight matters. Mr. Hawley is the only one that acted for us on freight in New York City, and Mr. Neimyer in Chicago, and every ticket agent in the United States of every connecting carrier, trunk line, was appointed as our agent. We asked them to act as our ticket agents, and we pay commissions for all the business they secure.

Q. But nobody had your freight matters in charge other than these general officers in New York and Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is correct, is it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Schwerin——

A. (Cont'g.) That is, they were the only two officers who were appointed by us under a regular form of appointment.

2718 Q. Let me ask this: Were there any other agents who had authority to make contracts for you for traffic?

A. If they did, they would have had to do it for those two gentlemen.

Q. They would have had to act as sub-agents under them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But they were contracting agents?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of the company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were also, as you have stated, the agents of the Southern Pacific in a certain capacity?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, did you solicit shipments in connection with the Southern Pacific from the Orient?

A. We solicited shipments to every point in the United States, by any line by which we could move it.

Q. By any line by which you could move it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were possibly aware, were you not, Mr. Schwerin, that the majority of the capital stock was owned by the Southern Pacific?

A. I was not.

Q. Had it not been brought to your attention?

A. I don't think they owned a share of it.

Q. Pacific Mail stock?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did they sell it?

A. They did not buy it until after Mr. Huntington died. I am talking about 1893, 1895, 1896 and 1897, when these gentlemen were appointed. I supposed that was the time you were referring to.

Q. But have you not been informed recently that they own it?

A. I knew when they bought it.

2719 Q. I didn't know but perhaps they had sold it since we were in New York the other day. When did they buy that stock, if you know about it?

A. I think it was in the winter of 1901.

Mr. LOVETT. 1900, was it not?

WITNESS. 1900? Mr. Huntington has been dead now—he died in 1900, I think.

Mr. LOVETT. He died in August, 1900.

WITNESS. Then they bought it in the fall of 1900.

Q. Now, Mr. Schwerin, was the Pacific Mail Steamship Company stock now owned by the Southern Pacific formerly owned by Mr. Huntington?

A. No, sir.

Q. It was not?

A. No, sir.

Q. By whom was it owned?

A. It was owned by about, I think they had something like 5,600 stockholders on the book.

Q. Do you know from whom the stock was bought or acquired by the Southern Pacific?

A. In the street.

Q. It was bought in the street?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes, sir. I think Mr. Hawley and Mr. Harriman sold quite a block of it.

Q. They did what?

A. I think they sold quite a block of it.

Q. That is, Mr. Harriman sold quite a block of it to his railroad company?

A. Mr. Harriman had nothing to do with the Southern Pacific at that time.

Q. That was before he acquired the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He sold it to the Southern Pacific in the fall of 1900?

A. Yes, sir; Mr. Hawley and he, I think, sold quite a block
2720 short to Mr. Tweed and Mr. Speyer.

Q. Sold quite a block of it short, and then afterwards went into the street and picked up the stock and made deliveries?

A. I suppose so.

Q. And that was in the fall of 1900?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that at that time, or from that time, the fall of 1900, the Southern Pacific Company did own the majority of the capital stock of the Pacific Mail?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And still own it?

A. To the best of my knowledge.

Q. That was prior to the purchase of the Southern Pacific stock by the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. A few months prior—it was in the spring of 1901, according to the testimony, that the stock of the Southern Pacific was purchased by the Union Pacific. Who owned the stock of the Occidental & Oriental Company?

A. 50 per cent was owned by the Union Pacific Company, and 50 per cent by the Pacific Improvement Company.

Q. The Pacific Improvement Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who owned the stock of the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. That was owned in equal proportions—you mean at the time I came into the company?

Q. Yes.

A. Owned in equal proportions by the estate of Governor Stanford, by the Crocker Estate, by Mr. Huntington individually, and the Searles—Mr. Searles, in New York.

Q. That was the Hopkins stock—the Searles stock was the Hopkins stock?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that one-half that stock belonged to the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

2721 Q. And the other half belonged directly to these gentlemen?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What became of the half of the Oriental & Occidental stock that was owned by Governor Stanford and Mr. Crocker and Mr. Huntington and Mr. Hopkins?

A. It was afterwards purchased by the Union Pacific interests, with the exception of the Huntington stock, which is still owned by the Huntingtons—that is, a one-eighth interest.

Q. Still owned by the Huntingtons?

A. Yes, sir; the Huntingtons.

Q. And the balance of it was purchased by the Union Pacific interests?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You mean by the Union Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell when that purchase was made, sir?

A. Well, I should say between the year 1903 and the year 1905.

Q. Between those years, the Stanford stock and the Crocker stock, and the Searles stock, was bought by the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that at the present time, seven-eighths of the Occidental & Oriental belongs to the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And one-eighth still belongs to the Huntingtons?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Southern Pacific Company as a corporation never owned any of the stock of the Occidental & Oriental?

A. No, sir.

Comr. LANE. Did you give the year in which the Pacific Mail became the agent of the Occidental & Oriental?

2722 WITNESS. No, sir; I did not.

Comr. LANE. What year was it?

WITNESS. I believe they became the agent for the Occidental & Oriental—not speaking of my own knowledge now, but I have heard in 1884. In the Orient, when they first started in, they had a joint agency, and then they split in 1876, and they continued separate agents until 1884, and then the Pacific Mail again took the agency for that company.

Comr. LANE. What year did the Occidental & Oriental begin?

WITNESS. In 1874.

Comr. LANE. They were six years under the Pacific Mail?

WITNESS. The Pacific Mail had been in operation—that was six years after the Pacific Mail had started its transpacific line. But they were in operation on the Panama line afterwards——

Mr. SEVERANCE. I am going to take that up separately, the Panama end of it. I haven't got to that yet. Is that all, Mr. Commissioner?

Comr. LANE. Yes. I understand that it was 1884 that the Pacific Mail became the agent of the Occidental & Oriental?

WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Q. I think you stated, did you not, Mr. Schwerin, that the agency for the Occidental & Oriental has continued ever since its inception?

A. I stated that it had been continuous ever since I have been with the company in 1893.

Q. I say, it has continued ever since its inception, as you

2723 understand it?

A. I understand it has continued from 1884.

Q. But I say, it still continues now?

A. And has continued until the present time.

Q. Yes. Now, what other steamship lines, regular lines, I am not speaking of tramp ships, but what other lines of steamships were going out of San Francisco and to the Orient, at the time you came here in 1893?

A. Those were the only two lines.

Q. Those were the only two lines, the Pacific Mail and the Occidental & Oriental?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were there any lines of steamers going out of any other ports on the Pacific coast at that time?

A. Yes, sir. The Canadian Pacific were operating a line of steamers.

Q. And that was in operation at that time to Vancouver?

A. Vancouver.

Mr. DUNNE. What line is that, Mr. Severance?

Mr. SEVERANCE. The Canadian Pacific.

Q. And that line was competitive with yours?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With separate agents in the Orient?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any other line?

A. The Northern Pacific Steamship Company.

Q. The Northern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From Tacoma and Seattle?

A. Tacoma.

Q. From Tacoma. And that line was in competition with yours?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What other line, if any?

A. That is all.

Q. Were any other lines put on between 1893 and 1900, going out of or sailing out of any of the ports along the Pacific 2724 here?

A. The Toyo Kaisha came on to San Francisco.

Q. That is the Japanese line?

A. To San Francisco, yes, sir.

Q. And when did that start?

A. In 1899. And the Nippon Nushen Kaisha——

Q. Just a moment, before we reach that. Was the line competitive with you, the Toyo Kaisha?

A. We took the agency of that line—the Pacific Mail did.

Q. Did you have it from the inception of the line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, from the time it first came here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, by "we" you mean the Pacific Mail?

A. The Pacific Mail took the agency of that line.

Q. And have since kept that agency?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And just in passing, before we go to the other lines established up the coast or down the coast, is there any other line from San Francisco to the Orient now, with the exception of the three you have named, the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, the Occidental & Oriental, and this Japanese line?
A. At the present time?
Q. Yes.
A. The Standard Oil Company run a line of steamers, yes.
Q. Do they run that line for commercial business?
A. Oh, yes. They run oil out and commercial freight home.
Q. Oil out and commercial freight home?
A. Yes, sir. And then there is the Dollar Steamship Company.
Q. What company?
A. The Dollar.
Q. Dollar?
A. D-o-l-l-a-r, yes.

Comr. LANE. What is the name of the Standard Oil line?

2725 WITNESS. It has no name. They are just called the Standard Oil steamers.

Q. How many boats have they? The Standard Oil line.
A. They run about a monthly service.
Q. How many boats?
A. It must take four boats to run a monthly service.
Q. Do they take any freight west-bound?
A. Do you mean west-bound from the Orient?
Q. From here.
A. We always speak of the freight as inward freight and outward freight.
Q. Inward freight and outward freight?
A. Inward from the Orient, and outward to the Orient.
Q. Then we will call it outward freight. Then do they take any outward freight, any cargo except their own oil?
A. Nothing but oil.
Q. And they bring back anything they can get?
A. Anything they can get hold of.
Q. Are they represented by you in any way over there in the Orient?
A. No, sir.
Q. You have never been agents for them?
A. No, sir.
Q. Therefore the Standard Oil Company, on business originating in the Orient and coming to this country, is a competitor of yours?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was the other company you spoke of, the Dollar Steamship Company?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When was that company established?
A. It has been running the last three or four years.

Q. Who are the officers of that company?

2726 A. Mr. Dollar is the president. I don't know the others.

Q. Mr. Dollar is the president?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many ships have they?

A. I don't know.

Q. How frequent a service have they?

A. Their service is irregular. They load lumber, and come back with general merchandise, anything they can get in the Orient.

Q. They load lumber in San Francisco?

A. They load lumber from the Sound.

Q. And take it to the Orient?

A. And take it to the Orient. They are competitors homeward, and not outward.

Q. They are competitors homeward?

A. Yes, sir. Then we have the French line, the——

Q. (Int'g.) Just a moment. As to this Dollar line. Do they have separate agencies in the Orient, to procure traffic?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what was the next one?

A. The French line.

Q. Is that the same French line that has ships on the Atlantic?

A. No, sir, it is another organization.

Q. Another company?

A Yes, sir.

Q. How many ships does the French line have?

A. They have an arrival here every month.

Q. Monthly. Do they compete with you both ways, or only one way?

A. Only homeward, inward.

Q. What do they take over?

A. They just keep going around to the eastward all the time, keep a line of ships going around the world.

2727 Q. Then they go from San Francisco around the Horn?

A. Yes, sir, and they touch all along the coast of Central America, Mexico, South America, and so on.

Q. And they have separate agencies in the Orient from yours?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they compete with you for business from the Orient here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there any other line coming inward?

A. None that I know of.

Q. Well, now we will go up to the Sound again. You have spoken of the Northern Pacific line. What other line is there?

A. There is the Nippon Nushen Kaisha, run in connection with the Great Northern.

Q. That was established about 11 years ago?

A. Oh, no; established about 1898 or 1899.

Q. Was it not established in 1896?

A. Well, it may have been, I am not sure about it; I would not be sure of the date of that first operation, but I think it was later than that.

Q. Was that company represented in any way by you in the Orient?

A. No, sir.

Q. Has it been competitive with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What other line is there up there?

A. There is a line called the Ocean Steamship Company.

Q. Where does that sail from?

A. Tacoma or Seattle.

Q. Did they have separate agencies from yours?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are they competing with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Both ways?

2728 A. Yes, sir. Then there is the China Mutual Steamship Company.

Q. The what?

A. The China Mutual Steamship Company.

Q. The China Mutual?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where do they sail from?

A. Tacoma or Seattle.

Q. They have separate agencies from yours?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are competitive with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Both ways?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Any other lines?

A. Then there was the Dodwell line, of Portland.

Q. You have omitted the Great Northern line, have you?

A. That is the Nippon Nushen Kaisha. I am now along there.

Q. I see; you are taking the order in which they were established.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, the line to Portland. In what year was that established?

A. That was along in 1896 or 1897.

Q. And it lasted three years, did it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They had separate agencies from yours?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Competing with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who succeeded them?

A. They were succeeded by Samuels & Samuels.

Q. How long did they continue in that trade?

A. They were there two or three years—or it may have been the other way, by the way; it may have been Samuels & Samuels first. Samuels & Samuels were on at the time the O. R. & N. was in the hands of a receiver.

Q. I thought you had that turned around.

A. Yes, sir. It was first Samuels & Samuels, and then the other company.

2729 Q. They were both of them competitors of yours?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who succeeded Dodwell?

A. The O. R. & N.

Q. For about three months intervening, there was a man named Graham had some ships running in connection with the O. R. & N., was there not?

A. I never considered that a line.

Q. He had some ships there, chartered some ships?

A. I think he did; yes, sir.

Q. And that was run in connection with the O. R. & N.?

A. I don't know what the connection was. I had nothing to do with it.

Q. Run from Portland?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was it competing with you, so long as it lasted?

A. We didn't consider it competition.

Q. Too small?

A. Yes, sir; irregular.

Q. In so far as it did any business, it was competitive business?

A. Well, it took it away from some transpacific line; if it got any business it was business that all the lines would have shared. But we didn't consider it a competing line at all, from our standpoint.

Q. You did not represent Graham over there at all, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. So if Graham succeeded in getting any business he got it in opposition to you and the other lines?

A. Yes, sir; that is right.

Q. Did you regard the Dodwell line as a competing line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Samuels' line?

A. Yes, sir.

2730 Q. And the Portland and Asiatic?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That Portland and Asiatic Company was organized by the O. R. & N. Company, you have stated—or was it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What became of the Portland and Asiatic?

A. Still running.

Q. At the present time are you representing them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long since?

A. 1904.

Q. 1904. Prior to that time had it been run independently of you?

A. I had nothing to do with it.

Q. Well, independently of your agency, the Pacific Mail.

A. Yes, sir. It is today independent of the Pacific Mail.

Q. Yes. I understand—we will get at that later. But up to 1904 they had agents of their own, had they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the Orient?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Soliciting traffic?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Performing the usual duties of agents?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Today they have the same agents as the Pacific Mail, have they not?

A. The Pacific Mail are its agents.

Q. The Pacific Mail are its agents?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I notice on the literature put out by the Southern Pacific road or by these steamship companies that the same agents appear as the representatives of the Portland and Asiatic in the Orient that also appear as agents of the Pacific Mail. That is the case, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And this Portland and Asiatic line was put in——

A. (Int'g.) I would like to correct the thing here, Mr. Severance, and that is to say that in the port of Nagasaki,
2731 which is a large coaling port, practically, Holmes Ringer & Company represent all steamship lines that enter that one port, and when you asked me in regard to that one, I neglected to say that that is principally a commercial port attending to the provisioning and coaling of ships.

Q. That only applies to Nagasaki?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have been personally in the Orient, Mr. Schwerin?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are familiar with the way business is done?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You still have the Great Northern to enumerate?

A. Yes, sir, then the Great Northern came on. Before them came on the Boston Towboat Company, with the Tremont, the Fremont, the Lyra, the Hyades, and the Pleiades.

Q. Lots of stars. Then, in addition to that, were there two ships of the Great Northern?

A. The "Minnesota" and the "Dakota," yes.

Q. That constitutes the whole list, does it not, of the ships that are plying between those ports, that is, the ports of the Pacific coast and the Orient, as a regular thing, outside of the tramp boats?

A. At the present time?
Q. Yes.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was there at one time, Mr. Schwerin, a line of boats proceeding from San Diego?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was that line?
A. A line put out by a shipping firm.
Q. Do you remember who they were, and about when the line was established, and how long it lasted?
A. I don't remember the name of the firm—Downing something—no, the name of the firm was—— 2732 Q. (Int'g.) Well, that is perhaps not material.
A. Well, it was an English shipping firm put the line on, and they were on, I think, about two years.
Q. And between what dates, about?
A. 1901 and '2 or '3—around there.
Q. And was that line a competing line?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You did not represent them?
A. No, sir.
Q. That line was procured to be run by the Santa Fe road, was it not?
A. They ran in connection with the Santa Fe.
Q. Yes. Was it not your understanding that it was through the influence of the Santa Fe that the line was established?
A. I know nothing about their arrangements.
Q. All you know about it was that they ran in connection with the Santa Fe?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And that is necessarily so, because the Santa Fe is the only line reaching San Diego?
A. I presume so.
Q. There are no other railroad lines reaching there?
A. No, sir.
Q. And there were not at that time?
A. No, sir.
Q. Do you recall any conferences between the officials of the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific or yourself about the time this line to San Diego was given up?
A. I had none.
Q. You had none?
A. No, sir.
Q. You were not present at any conference between Mr. Stubbs and Mr. Ripley, or any other representative of the Santa Fe, with reference to the movement by rail of Oriental traffic, or at which there was discussed the movement by rail of Oriental traffic brought 2733 to this country by the San Francisco lines under your jurisdiction?

A. I have no recollection of such a meeting.

Q. You don't remember any such meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember, Mr. Schwerin, about the time that the San Diego line was given up, that there was some conversation or talk as to how the freight coming here from the Orient should go forward to the east, if that line was abandoned and the Santa Fe people brought their Oriental shipments by the way of San Francisco?

A. I had always tried to get the Santa Fe into business relations with us; I had always told them I could do it better than they could get it done by anybody else.

Q. I have no doubt you believed it. About that time, Mr. Schwerin, did you represent these modest suggestions regarding your ability to handle it?

A. I have been soliciting this Santa Fe business all the time, and trying to get it.

Q. Do you recall any assurances that were given to the Santa Fe people that if they would give up trying to support this line out of San Diego, they would be treated fairly in the division of east-bound business outside of San Francisco?

A. No, sir. I know of no meeting where that question was discussed with the Santa Fe officers.

Q. With whom did you have your conferences at which you made those assurances? With what individual?

A. Every time I saw Paul Morton, I told him he ought to give up his business, that we could do it better than anybody else. He was very much dissatisfied with the service he was getting at San Diego.

2734 Q. I thought I could lay my hands on some testimony given by Mr. Stubbs, but I guess I have missed it. You were frequently—well, as the result either of the poor service out of San Diego, or of your solicitation, or that of some of your people, the line was abandoned, was it not?

A. I understood the line was abandoned because they lost so much money.

Q. Because they lost so much money? What arrangements do your agents in the Orient make on business coming to San Francisco as to the route that it shall take by rail when it is consigned to the east, or what do they attempt to make? Do you attempt to distribute it fairly between the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific?

A. They do not make any arrangement.

Q. You say that your agents have the right to make through billings?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that they solicit business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the soliciting of that business, do they solicit or ask the shippers to route it in any particular way after it gets to this country?

A. No, sir.

Q. Does the Southern Pacific maintain any separate agencies in the Orient?

A. No, sir.

Q. Does the Santa Fe maintain any?

A. No, sir.

Q. Then will you explain, if you can, how the business is divided over there, as to removal to the east after it reaches this country?

A. A ship comes in here and we just turn the whole cargo over to the Southern Pacific; and another ship comes in and we turn the whole cargo over to the Santa Fe.

2735 Q. That is what I want to get at?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the way you divide it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you divide it equally? By that I mean, do you first give a shipload of merchandise to one road, and then a shipload to the other?

A. That is the way it is done, yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been doing that, Mr. Schwerin?

A. Well, I think the past six months.

Q. For the past six months. Prior to six months ago what method did you take to secure a distribution of the east-bound traffic as between the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe?

A. We just loaded the cars put on the dock, and the railroad did the routing.

Comr. LANE. The last six months, the Santa Fe has had the boats from the Orient?

Mr. SEVERANCE. It has had the same amount, I think he means.

Comr. LANE. An equal amount?

WITNESS. No, sir, I would not say that.

Comr. LANE. Approximately so?

WITNESS. No, sir, I would not be able to tell how much one road got or the other, without going to the statistics.

Mr. SEVERANCE. The question whether they got an equal amount would depend upon the amount carried by the respective ships, I presume.

Comr. LANE. Is it the agreement that each alternative ship shall go to the Santa Fe?

WITNESS. No, sir.

Q. What is the nature of the agreement?

2736 A. We have no agreement. We simply have an arrangement for the exchange of traffic. The Southern Pacific now gives a much larger proportion of traffic than the Santa Fe does, and we try to give the Southern Pacific as nearly equal percentages as we can offer them, and the same way with the Santa Fe.

Q. That is, if the Southern Pacific gives you 75 per cent. of the inward-bound freight?

A. Yes, sir, we would be in duty bound to give the Southern Pacific 75 per cent. of inward-bound freight. If the reverse of that were to take place, and if the Santa Fe should give us 75 per cent. of the outward-bound business, I would naturally be inclined to give the Santa Fe 75 per cent. of the inward-bound business.

Q. How long do you think that inclination of yours would be indulged, so long as the Southern Pacific owns the control of the Pacific Mail?

A. The Southern Pacific has never interfered in any shape, form or description, with my operation of the steamship company.

Q. They probably have not had reason to.

A. Yes, sir, they have many times. I think Mr. Stubbs looks upon me in the question of traffic as if I had nothing whatever to do with any incorporation whose stock is owned in the other company which he is employed by.

Q. You think Mr. Stubbs looks on you as a rank outsider?

A. Absolutely, over and over again—to my sorrow.

Q. Now, Mr. Schwerin, to proceed a little further, with this division of business between the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific. You say at the present time you give one shipload to one line
2737 and another shipload to the other line, and you have done that for six months?

A. Yes, sir, about six months.

Q. Prior to six months ago, how did you make the division?

A. Turned the freight over to the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. All of it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then the Southern Pacific Company did what with it? What they pleased?

A. I suppose that they routed it—they had an arrangement by which they routed a certain portion by the Santa Fe, and a certain portion by the Southern Pacific, but that was done under our, under the steamship company's understanding.

Q. Now, let us see, Mr. Schwerin. Prior to six months ago all the freight was turned over by you to the Southern Pacific. Then the Southern Pacific, of course, had absolute control of that freight, could have sent it forward by its own lines, either by Ogden, the Central & Union Pacific route, or the Sunset Route, or deliver it to the Santa Fe. That is true, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And for how many years had you been delivering all your freight to the Southern Pacific?

A. Since the—I think shortly after the California and Asiatic line went out of business—the California and Oriental line, I should say, went out of business.

Q. What was the California and Oriental line?

A. That was the line to San Diego.

Q. While that line was in existence, what did you do with your freight when it was got in here to San Francisco?

A. Sent it over to the Southern Pacific.

2738 Q. Always?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did the Southern Pacific send all of it east over their lines?

A. I don't know.

Q. Aren't your relations with Mr. Stubbs' organization sufficiently intimate so that you know what becomes of the freight that leaves here?

A. No, sir.

Q. So that you don't know as to whether they gave any of it to the Santa Fe at any time?

A. They may have given it to the Santa Fe at that time, without my knowledge.

Q. Yes, without your knowledge. But they did not do it with your knowledge?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Did they a year ago give any of it to the Santa Fe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they not give a certain amount of that traffic to the Santa Fe at all times after the San Diego line was abandoned?

A. That is my impression.

Q. And was it not because of the assurance given to the Santa Fe road that it should have a certain amount of this business coming over the Pacific Mail and its allied lines, that the San Diego line was abandoned?

A. As I stated before, Mr. Severance, I personally solicited that business myself; I urged the Santa Fe people to give us that business, and I told them, and I talked with Mr. Paul Morton, who was the only Santa Fe man that I had any connection with, and told him that we could transact his business and do it better for him than he could get it done by anybody else.

Q. Now, Mr. Schwerin, that does not quite touch the point,

2739 it seems to me. You say you could transact their business. Now, you have already testified that cargoes coming in from the Orient are discharged from your ships and turned over to the Southern Pacific—they were until those last six months?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, it was not the transaction then, of the business of the Santa Fe, in any way, was it, unless you could hold out to them some assurance of traffic. Did you hold out to Mr. Morton an assurance that his line would receive traffic from your ships if he would abandon the San Diego line?

A. That stood to reason, that we had to, in making a traffic arrangement of that kind—it stood to reason that we had to give him traffic in exchange for the traffic that he gave us.

Q. That is what I am trying to get at. You spoke of handling his business——

A. (Int'g.) I made a report to the Santa Fe, and showed them the amount of tonnage which we would give them.

Q. That is, the amount you would give them if they would abandon the San Diego line?

A. No, sir; after we were in operation with the Santa Fe.

Q. The amount of tonnage they had been given?

A. The amount that they had been given; I kept them posted as to the amount of tonnage that passed over their lines.

Q. Do you mean tonnage west-bound or east-bound?

A. Tonnage east-bound, that is, bound from San Francisco to interior points of the United States.

Q. How did you get that information?

A. We kept track of it on the dock. The Santa Fe cars
2740 would be switched in to be loaded with Santa Fe freight. We did not load Southern Pacific cars with Santa Fe freight.

Q. I understood you turned all your cars over to the Southern Pacific?

A. So we did, but we kept track of the cars.

Q. You kept track of the amount of the business that was given to the Santa Fe by the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is right, is it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you did assure Mr. Morton, in order to procure them to abandon the San Diego line, that they should have a fair amount, or a certain amount, I don't know how you put it——

A. I never made any stipulation with Mr. Morton as to any amount.

Q. Not as to any amount, but what was your proposition to him, then, outside of the general statement that you would handle his business better? Did you not give him some assurance?

A. No, sir, I gave him no assurance of a definite amount of freight.

Q. I understand, but did you tell him he would get some freight from you?

A. Oh, yes, undoubtedly.

Q. Was that as near as you got at the actual result?

A. I told you, Mr. Severance, that I have no idea of ever having discussed with Mr. Paul Morton anything in regard to a definite amount of freight to be turned over to the Santa Fe.

Comr. LANE. Have you a copy of that circular, or report that you made to the Santa Fe of the business that you have then?

WITNESS. It was not a circular, but in the shape of a report.
2741 Comr. LANE. Have you got a copy of that?

WITNESS. No, sir. Everything was burned up in the fire.

Comr. LANE. Perhaps the Santa Fe people have one.

WITNESS. They may have.

Q. When did you make out that report?

A. Each month, after the month's business passed over the dock.

Q. Up to what time?

A. I don't think there has been any made since the fire. In fact, I am sure there have been none made since the fire.

Q. That was delivered to whom representing the Santa Fe?

A. Sent to Mr. Bissell.

Q. Then he would probably know. Were his offices burned up, too?

A. I don't know exactly as to that. I can tell you, Mr. Severance, that sometimes that freight would run for a month 20 per cent., sometimes it would run 30 per cent., sometimes 17 per cent., sometimes 28 per cent.—it varied from month to month.

Q. It depended upon the amount of freight that the Southern Pacific gave to the Santa Fe. That is all there was of it. There was not any way that the Santa Fe could get in there and get that except by sufferance of the Southern Pacific, was there?

A. I think if the Santa Fe people had had cause to complain in regard to the amount of freight they were receiving in exchange for the amount of outward freight they were giving us, that we would have heard from them: they would have found fault with us.

Q. They were quite content, were they?

A. Well, we were giving them more freight than they were 2742 giving us. They were not giving us the same amount——

Q. I say, they were content, were they?

A. As far as I know.

Q. They did not make any fuss about the amount of business they were getting?

A. No, sir.

Q. You say in those times, you gave them from 17 to 20 per cent. How did you happen to increase that to what might possibly be 50 per cent., assuming that the boats were all equally burdened, six months ago?

A. Well, a ship may come in here—for instance, the "Mongolia" may come in here with only 1700 tons overland cargo, and the next voyage she might come in here with 8000 tons of overland cargo.

Q. I appreciate that.

A. There is not a ship comes in with any definite amount of overland cargo.

Q. I appreciate that thoroughly, but if you are without discrimination, turning the ships over to the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific, turning them over indiscriminately as they come, one of them is just as likely to get a big cargo as the other?

A. Yes; but if the Santa Fe is not giving us outward tonnage, we would not turn every second ship over to the Santa Fe; we would regulate that so as to have a fair exchange for the amount of tonnage over to us.

Q. I understood you to say, Mr. Schwerin (perhaps I misunderstood you), that about six months ago you adopted the plan of sending alternate ships to the Santa Fe?

A. That is because it just happened that way at the present time. The through tonnage has been very light.

Q. Where do you discharge your cargo?

A. At San Francisco, Pier 42 and Pier 44.

2743 Q. At some point that is reached by the Santa Fe as well as by the Southern Pacific?

A. It is switched from the Southern Pacific.

Q. It is switched from the Southern Pacific to the Santa Fe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you caused that to be done with every alternate cargo?

Mr. LOVETT. He said alternate cargoes from——

Q. I mean you have been lately, for six months past?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What you mean is that you do not know that you will continue to do that?

A. No, sir.

Q. But you have continued that for six months. At whose suggestion, if anyone's, did you make that change in the method of handling the amount of traffic for each?

A. I think the question came up in relation to the steamship company routing the overland freight.

Q. Came up between whom, sir?

A. Come up between Mr. Luce and Mr. Chambers and myself.

Q. Who is Mr. Luce?

A. He is the general freight agent of the Southern Pacific Company in San Francisco.

Q. And who is Mr. Chambers?

A. He is the general freight agent of the Santa Fe.

Q. And this was a conversation between you three gentlemen?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was said at that conversation, in substance, by each of you?

A. Well, I believe that I raised the point that if we turned the freight—if we turned the freight over to the Southern Pacific 2744 Company the question immediately arose in regard to the Santa Fe handling the freight. We had had considerable trouble on the dock in regard to getting Southern Pacific cars, and I think I threatened that unless I had less trouble in getting cars from the Southern Pacific, I would shove all the freight over the Santa Fe; if the Southern Pacific didn't give me any cars, I would send the freight over the Santa Fe, because the freight was congested on the docks there.

Q. Did that meet with any remonstrance on the part of the majority owners of stock in the Pacific Mail?

A. No, sir. The owners have never remonstrated or said anything upon the question. We discussed the question and concluded the best way to do, instead of apportioning out of the ship any special cargo, for instance, a cargo that might be served best by the Santa Fe lines, to try to aggregate that cargo out of the ship, that we would turn over the whole cargo to the Santa Fe, and let them bill it out as they saw fit, and then turn over the whole net cargo to the Southern Pacific, and let them bill it out as they saw fit.

Q. Mr. Schwerin, did you three gentlemen agree on that.

A. We did.

Q. And you have since carried out that agreement?

A. As far as I know.

Q. Up to this date?

A. As far as I know, it has been carried out.

Q. So that you give those instructions to your subordinates?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was satisfactory to the two roads with whom 2745 you made the trade?

A. As far as I know, yes, sir.

Comr. LANE. What was the month in which that arrangement was made?

WITNESS. Sir?

Comr. LANE. What was the month in last year in which that arrangement was made?

WITNESS. I don't just recollect what month it was.

Comr. LANE. Was it about the middle of the year?

WITNESS. No, sir. I think it was between September and November. It may have been later than that, when I finally met those people, and we had that conversation about the delivery of the cars of the Southern Pacific and the Atchison there—it may have been November, and it may have been December. I don't remember, Mr. Lane, just when the meeting took place.

Comr. LANE. Did you adopt any new policy as to the publishing of rates, either on the other side or on this side, for Oriental business?

WITNESS. No, sir.

Comr. LANE. During last year?

WITNESS. No, sir.

Comr. LANE. Did you publish your new rates over on the other side?

WITNESS. They were published by the rail connections in their joint Oriental traffic.

Comr. LANE. Published by the rail connections on this side?

WITNESS. Yes, sir.

2746 Comr. LANE. For business moving from this side outward?

WITNESS. I think there is a joint tariff published by them for inward rates also.

Comr. LANE. For inward rates?

WITNESS. Yes, sir, transcontinental; transpacific and transcontinental.

Comr. LANE. Where could that rate be found over in the Orient?

WITNESS. That tariff, do you mean?

Comr. LANE. That tariff, yes.

WITNESS. Our agents have it over there.

Comr. LANE. Your agents have it over there?

WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Comr. LANE. That is, the tariff for business moving to the United States and inland?

WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Comr. LANE. Is that tariff the same today that it was a year ago?

WITNESS. I think there have been some corrections made in the tariff, in relation to certain freights, and also in relation to what they call the outboard freights. You see there is an arbitrary freight originating in Tientsin—they take an arbitrary to Shanghai or Kobe or Newchang or Nagasaki, and these outboard rates were modified, and I think the new rate sheet has got the new, modified rates in it.

Comr. LANE. Were the rates from San Francisco to eastern points in the United States over the Santa Fe the same as rates to the same points over the Southern Pacific?

2747 WITNESS. To the best of my knowledge, yes. All the transcontinental lines and all the transpacific lines are billing at the same rates. The principal commodities we bring from the Orient are tea and matting.

Comr. LANE. Do you import much rice?

WITNESS. Not overland, no; locally.

Comr. LANE. And silk?

WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Comr. LANE. Are curios of much importance?

WITNESS. Yes, sir. But the great bulk of the commodities are tea and matting.

Comr. LANE. When you route business over on the other side for the east, say Chicago or New York, do you give a through bill of lading which names the American railroad that carries it to the east?

WITNESS. No, sir.

Comr. LANE. You do not?

WITNESS. No, sir. We give our own bill of lading.

Comr. LANE. You give your own bill of lading, showing the business as going over the Occidental & Oriental, or the Pacific Mail?

WITNESS. Yes, sir—whichever line it moves on.

Comr. LANE. And that bill of lading runs from the point in China, Hong Kong we will say, or Nagasaki in Japan, to Chicago, say?

WITNESS. Yes, sir, via the port of San Francisco.

Comr. LANE. Via the port of San Francisco?

WITNESS. Yes, sir.

2748 Comr. LANE. And it is reserved to you to determine there, or at any time you please, just how the freight shall move, once it reaches the port of San Francisco?

WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Q. At the time the line was running to San Diego, you routed all the business to the east over the Southern Pacific, did you not?

A. It was routed that way.

Q. Well, you caused it to be done, or permitted it to be done?

A. That was the route that——

Q. (Int'g.) Who routed it? You seem to make a distinction between causing it to be routed, and routing it. Who did it?

A. I suppose it was routed by the Southern Pacific officials.

Q. Prior to the abandonment of the San Diego line, prior to their abandoning their line to San Diego, and coming up here, the Southern Pacific had all the business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And immediately the line from San Diego was abandoned, and the Santa Fe freight began to go through this port, the Santa Fe began to get a percentage of the inward business, which you say varied from 17 to 20 per cent?

A. It went higher than that sometimes.

Q. Sometimes higher than that?

A. That is right.

Q. Since then, the Santa Fe has had no line of ships in competition with you, and going out of San Diego?

A. No, sir.

Q. What lines does that division of traffic embrace? Does it embrace the Japanase line, or only the Occidental & Oriental and the Pacific Mail?

A. All three.

Q. All three?

A. Yes, sir.

2749 Q. And that covers the distribution of all the traffic coming in here by those three lines from all ports of the Orient?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you turn over to the Southern Pacific its share of this business, do you have anything to do with routing it to the east; that is, as to deciding what particular route it shall take to the east?

A. No, sir.

Q. As it leaves the lines of the Southern Pacific?

A. No, sir.

Q. That is left to the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you happen to know, sir, whether the Atlantic seaboard business, New York business, Boston business, and so on, moves by the Sunset Route, in case the Southern Pacific has the routing?

A. It could move that way, but if it did we would object.

Q. You would object to the Sunset Route?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why?

A. We are all competing for the rapidity with which we deliver tonnage from the Orient destined for the Atlantic seaboard, and we believe that the Central & Union Pacific, and Chicago & Northwestern can make better time than the Sunset—we want that all-rail route.

Q. You prefer the all-rail route?

A. Yes, sir. The people in New York will telegraph to the Orient asking when the goods will arrive, and all the lines are competing to make the best showing with reference to the time occupied in transit upon the question of who can give the best service.

Q. You find, do you, that it is best for you to have the stuff moved by the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific, and 2750 the Northwestern?

A. Yes, sir. That has been the route since I can remember.

Q. That has been the route that you have preferred since you have been there. Do you happen to know whether that is the way——

A. (Int'g.) The Rio Grande, I believe some of the teas used to go over the Rio Grande.

Q. What is that?

A. Some of the teas used to go by the Rio Grande.

Q. They don't any more, do they?

A. I don't know; I think so.

Q. They do?

A. I think so.

Q. Who routes them that way?

A. I suppose the railroads.

Q. You don't mean to say, do you, Mr. Schwerin, that the Southern Pacific Railroad agents here at San Francisco, if they have the routing of the traffic, route it over the Rio Grande?

A. I have understood that teas are still going over the Rio Grande.

Q. But it is not routed that way by the Southern Pacific, where it is left in their hands to route, is it?

A. There is nobody else could route it except the Southern Pacific.

Q. Nobody else could route it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Then the Southern Pacific absolutely controls the routing of the traffic after you turn it over to them?

A. It is for their account, yes, sir.

Q. Neither the shippers nor the consignee have any voice in that?

A. If they have, they never exercise it.

Q. They never exercise it?

A. No, sir.

2751 Q. So that if the Rio Grande gets any of that traffic, it gets it through the kindness of the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what line to the east does the traffic that goes over the Portland and Asiatic take?

A. It takes the O. R. & N., the Oregon Short Line, and U. P.

Q. And the Northwestern?

A. I suppose so.

A. Can you tell any reason why the traffic goes Northwestern instead of by the Milwaukee & St. Paul, or any other line east of Omaha?

A. No, sir.

Q. You know nothing about that?

A. No, sir.

Q. You merely know the fact, without knowing the reasons?

A. I merely know the fact. I don't know that it all goes by the Northwestern. I know that it goes up on the Oregon Short Line, and the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company, up to the junction of the Union Pacific. After that I don't know where it goes.

Q. After it gets to——

Mr. DUNNE. He has not said it always goes Northwestern.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I understood him to say that that is the way it moved east of Omaha, by the Northwestern.

Mr. DUNNE. No, that was the implication of your question, but that was not his testimony.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I certainly do not want to misquote Mr. Schwerin, or put him in a hole, or anything of that kind.

WITNESS. I want to correct myself.

Mr. SEVERANCE. If I mistook you, correct me.

WITNESS. I made the remark that the Oregon Short Line,
2752 the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, the U. P., and the Northwestern, because it is the habit to take it on that line. But I meant that after striking the U. P., I don't know how it went. I know that up to that point it went over the O. R. & N., and the Short Line. I would suppose it would go the shortest route under the same conditions, if we wanted it to go from San Francisco.

Q. That is, if you were sending it from San Francisco, that is the route you would have to take?

A. That is the route I would like to have it go.

Q. And that is the route, as you understand it, that the bulk of the traffic takes?

A. Yes, sir, because we have a fast freight, are supposed to have an Asiatic fast freight on that line.

Q. Is there any difference, Mr. Schwerin, any substantial difference in the character of the commodities that are imported through the Portland gateway and those that are imported through the San Francisco gateway, or are they about the same?

A. As far as the Portland tonnage is concerned, with the exception of silk, silk piece goods, the rougher or common class of goods that go by tramp steamers rather than by mail and dispatch steamers, and excluding this local Oriental business which we have largely here in San Francisco, the general tonnage is about the same.

Q. The same class of goods?

A. Matting, tea, and curios.

Q. Do you remember whether at the time that the O. R. & N. was running boats to the Orient, or rather had boats running in connection with it, and at the time that the O. R. & N. was 2753 independent of the Southern Pacific, whether it was customary for the O. R. & N. boats from Portland to San Francisco to bring down any Oriental traffic that came in by Portland and deliver it here in San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was done, was it not, without any extra charge to the shipper?

A. Yes, sir, but it was a very small amount.

Q. Yes, a small amount, but whatever it was, that is the fact?

A. We have the same thing for Portland now.

Q. That is, you bring goods down from Portland?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If they come in that way?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Destined to San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who pays the freight?

A. The same rates apply to San Francisco via Portland as apply to San Francisco direct.

Q. I understand that. But who absorbs that charge between San Francisco and Portland?

A. It is divided between the Portland and Asiatic line, and the San Francisco and Portland line—prorated.

Q. Is the San Francisco and Portland line a connection, legally, I mean, has it any legal connection with the Portland and Asiatic? Does it belong to the corporation?

A. No, sir. It is an independent organization.

Q. But you expect—and I say "you," speaking of you as representing the Portland and San Francisco line—you expect from the Portland and Asiatic a less carriage charge, do you, for bringing these goods from the Orient that come into Portland down to San Francisco that you would expect on a local shipment?

A. Yes, sir.

2754 Q. And that is what you mean when you say that the charge from Portland to San Francisco is divided between the two companies?

A. Prorated.

Q. Will you explain that a little more in detail, what you mean by "prorated"?

A. Well, we might prorate on our locals—for instance, there is a certain rate, say a six dollar rate, from Hong Kong to Portland, and there may be a two-dollar-eighty rate from Portland to San Francisco. If the Asiatic line took the whole of it, the San Francisco line would not get anything. So we prorate that on the basis of our locals, divide the six dollars on the basis of the relation which the two locals bear to each other.

Q. So that in that case, the Portland and Asiatic instead of getting the $6 for itself that it would have had if the cargo had gone from there to the east——

A. (Interrupting.) Gone direct to Portland; it is local cargo that I am comparing there.

Q. I want to be sure that we understand each other.

A. I am talking about local cargo there.

Q. Let us take the case of an importation from the Orient.

A. Locally, or overland?

Q. To San Francisco, we will say, and it comes to San Francisco by way of the Portland & Asiatic.

A. Yes, sir, that is a local shipment. We call all shipments to the coast local shipments.

Q. Very well. We understand each other upon that term. I am speaking now of shipments from say China or Japan to San Francisco, and instead of moving directly to San Francisco, it comes via Portland,

A. Yes, sir.

2755 Q. The rate, you say, to San Francisco is just the same?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. (Continuing.) Whether it comes direct by ship to San Francisco, or by ship to Portland, then trans-shipped to San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, take your case that you spoke of; suppose the rate on that commodity is $6 from the Orient to any of these Pacific coast points, such as, for instance, San Francisco. How would you divide that revenue between the Portland & Asiatic and San Francisco & Portland?

A. Well, if the local rate from Portland was $3, then we would prorate on the basis of 3 to 6.

Q. That would give them half as much for bringing it from Portland down here as the Portland & Asiatic would get for bringing it over?

A. One would get three-ninths, and the other would get six-ninths.

Q. That is what I say. The San Francisco & Portland would get half as much. That is the basis on which you make the division, is it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In making that division, you act for both parties, do you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is your best judgment as to what is a fair division?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Prior to the time that you established that division, do you happen to know what the charge was that was paid to the San Francisco & Portland line—in the old days when there were O. R. & N. boats?

A. No, sir.

Q. You don't know about that?

A. No, sir.

Q. This division you established as soon as you came into charge of the lines, did you?

2756 A. I don't want you to understand that they always prorated on the basis of the locals. There might be times when we would not prorate on the basis of the locals.

Q. Why, Mr. Schwerin? Why so?

A. Because the local Portland-San Francisco rate on the commodity might be so much higher in proportion to the transpacific rate that it would be entirely unfair to the transpacific to prorate on the locals.

Q. In that case, how do you divide it—on some terms——

A. (Interrupting.) Somewhat like Solomon—cut a fair division to each.

Q. Use a knife?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, to leave the transpacific business for a moment, Mr. Schwerin. The Pacific Mail runs ships in other directions, does it not?

A. Yes, sir: we have the Panama line.

Q. To what ports do you run on that line?

A. To the port of Manzanilla and Mazatlin, San Blas, Acapulco, Coos, Champerico, San Jose, Acajutla, La Libertad, La Union, Corinta, and Ancon.

Q. And what?

A. Ancon—that is the new American port.

Q. That is a port of Panama?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before that port was established, you ran to Panama?

A. It is the same thing; they just changed the name of the terminal to Ancon.

Q. That is, Ancon is on the American zone?

A. Yes, sir; in the American zone.

Q. The canal zone?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you bring out commodities from the east by way of Panama?

A. Yes, sir.

2757 Q. Have you any boats on the other side of the Isthmus?

A. No, sir.

Q. With what line of ships do you operate in connection with the trade that comes around by Panama?

A. With the United Fruit Company from Gulf points and with the Panama Railroad line—from New York—the Panama Railroad Company's steamships—and with the Hamburg-American Packet Company from New York to points other than American, and with all the trans-Atlantic lines out of Colon.

Q. Out of Colon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you accept their shipments from Europe, do you not, that way?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Brought from Trans-Atlantic points and then on down from New York and across the Isthmus?

A. Yes, sir, and to all points I have named, the points along the Central American and Mexican coast.

Q. How many ships had you in that trade when you first came here in 1893? You need not bother to give the names, but give the number.

A. There were six running on the through line.

Q. That is, from Panama to San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has that fleet been enlarged or diminished?

A. Enlarged. We are running nine there now.

Q. You are running nine there now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how long have you been running nine?

A. About five years.

Q. Now, as to that business, Mr. Schwerin, your line is competitive with the rail lines, is it not, from New York to San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And always has been?

A. Yes, sir.

2758 Q. Since 1893, when you went into the Pacific Mail?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the business, you say, has increased; you have three more ships than you had then?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is their tonnage as compared with the average tonnage of ships that were running on the line in 1893?

A. Well, the "Peking" is on that run, and the "Peru" is on that run, and they were transatlantic steamers before.

Q. Are they larger than the old boats?

A. The "Peking" took the place of three boats that went off, practically, and the "Peru" of at least two.

Q. Would you be able to without any trouble figure in your head the aggregate tonnage of that fleet in 1893, and the aggregate tonnage of that fleet at the present time?

A. I could figure it on a piece of paper better than I could in my head.

Q. All right. I will loan you a piece of paper, and a pencil too, if you like.

A. Would it not be better if I gave you that accurately afterwards.

Q. No, just give it as near as you can now. I don't care whether it is absolutely accurate, but just approximately.

Commissioner LANE. Mr. Severance, how soon will you be through with this witness?

Mr. SEVERANCE. I don't know, your Honor. I should think I would be half an hour longer. That is my impression. I have some other matters that I want to examine him upon.

Commissioner LANE. We will adjourn at 4 o'clock.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Your Honor wants to adjourn at 4?

2759 Commissioner LANE. Yes, promptly.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Then I will not be able to finish with Mr. Schwerin tonight because it is 10 minutes to 4 now. All of the witnesses I have caused to be subpoenaed may depart now, and they need not return until to-morrow morning, as I shall not be able to take them up tonight.

WITNESS. (After making the calculation requested.) Roughly, about an increase of one-seventh.

Q. What was the tonnage originally and what is it now, about?

A. About 15,000 tons originally, and it has increased to about 20,000.

Q. Increased by one-seventh, did you say?

A. A seventh, yes, sir.

Q. That would be more than that, an increase from 15,000 to 20,000.

A. 15,000 and 20,000 makes 35,000. 15,000 tons and 20,000 tons makes it twenty thirty-fifths, which is four-sevenths, and fifteen thirty-fifths, which is three-sevenths, and that is an increase of one-seventh.

Q. It was originally 15,000 and now it is 20,000, so that it must have increased 5,000 tons?

A. And that would be one-seventh of the total tonnage of the two.

Q. I know, but the increase is 5,000 tons, and that increase is from 15,000 to 20,000 tons.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that increase of tons would be a 33⅓ per cent increase on what it was in 1893. That is right, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Commissioner LANE. You may proceed now until 4 o'clock.

Mr. SEVERANCE. I think this will be a good point to take the adjournment, if your Honor please.

2760 Commissioner LANE. Very well. Then we will take an adjournment until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

(An adjournment was then taken until January 30, 1907, at 10 o'clock A. M., at which time the hearing was resumed.)

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Schwerin, does the Portland & Asiatic Company own its own ships?

A. No, sir.

Q. From whom are they chartered?

A. Chartered from the Hamburg-American Packet Company.

Q. Does the Occidental & Oriental own its own ships?

A. No, sir.

Q. From whom are they chartered?

A. Chartered from the White Star Company.

Q. You are acquainted with Mr. William Mahl, are you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is the controller of the Pacific Mail, is he not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Mahl testified at the hearing of this matter in New York that the Oriental & Occidental Steamship Company has gone into liquidation. Is that so?

A. Not at present.

Q. Has there been any change in the matter of the management of the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Company?

A. No, sir.

Mr. LOVETT. He did not testify it had gone into liquidation. He said he did not know absolutely, but that was his understanding.

Mr. SEVERANCE. He said "which I believe has gone into liquidation," and when I asked him "When?" he said, "Possibly within the last six, seven or eight months."

Mr. DUNNE. I don't think that is so.

2761 Mr. SEVERANCE. Well, I want to find out. Does the Pacific Mail own its own ships, Mr. Schwerin?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All of them?

A. Yes, sir. Do you mean own its own ships that belong to the Pacific Mail, or all the ships it operates?

Q. You gave a list yesterday of the fleet.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The fleet of the Pacific Mail.

A. All that I enumerated as a fleet belong to the Pacific Mail.

Commissioner LANE. Are there additional ships that it operates that it does not own?

WITNESS. Yes, sir; the "Mongolia" and the "Manchuria."

Q. I was just coming to that. That is what I want to ask you about. There was introduced in evidence at New York an excerpt from the minutes of the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Oregon Short Line of the 26th of March, 1903. At that meeting, Mr. Harriman reported that, pursuant to the authority conferred upon him at the meeting of the Executive Committee on February 19th, 1903, he had purchased from the Atlantic Transport Company two ocean steamers, known in the contract as Nos. 5 and 6, now under construction at the New York Shipbuilding Yard at Camden, New Jersey, at the approximate sum of $2,200,000 each, the delivery of which was expected about the end of the present year, and his action was ratified and confirmed. Are those two ships the "Mongolia" and "Manchuria"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, those ships belong to the Oregon Short Line, do they?

A. As far as I know they belong to E. H. Harriman.

Q. Oh, they belong to E. H. Harriman personally?

A. As far as I know, yes, sir.

2762 Q. Would it not appear from those minutes from which I have just read that they were bought for the Oregon Short Line?

A. I never saw the minutes before you read them, or heard of them.

Q. Mr. Harriman is president of the Pacific Mail, is he not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you act under his instructions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you have a charter party covering these ships?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From whom does it run?

A. Runs between the Pacific Mail and E. H. Harriman.

Commissioner LANE. At what time was it made?

WITNESS. I dont remember when it was made. The charter parties are in New York now.

Commissioner LANE. What is the date of that minute order?

Mr. SEVERANCE. March, 1903.

Commissioner LANE. It is subsequent to that date, is it?

Mr. LOVETT. Although I have no information on the subject, my understanding is that they were registered in the name of E. H. Harriman.

Q. In the Ninth Annual Report of the Union Pacific, which embraces the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, that is, the report to the stockholders, not to the Interstate Commerce Commission—in the report to the stockholders for the year ending June 30, 1906, there appears on page 12 the following: "The total expenditures. In addition to the above capital expenditures, there was passed during the year, on account of construction and acquisition of new lines, and for equipment and other 2763 property, the sum of $17,541,755.88." And then after referring to and enumerating some of this property, it concludes, "And in the steamers 'Mongolia' and 'Manchuria.' Those steamers are chartered to the Pacific Mail." Now it appears from that entry in the Annual Report that those ships belong to either the Union Pacific, the Oregon Short Line, or the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company. Those companies are making a common report to their stockholders. You never heard of that report before?

A. I never heard of that report before, until it was brought up in the hearing on Monday.

Q. What hearing was that?

A. On the salvage case, of the "Manchuria" in Honolulu.

Q. That matter——

A. (Interrupting.) The matter of the price was brought up, and reported in that report—in regard to the value of the ships.

Q. I don't know what that inquiry is.

Mr. LOVETT. It is a suit pending here——

A. (Interrupting.) It is a suit in reference to the salvage of the "Manchuria."

Q. Oh, yes. Then on page 26, also in this report, there are entered a number of items under the head of "Deferred Assets," and among the rest "Ocean steamers 'Manchuria' and 'Mongolia' $5,126,796.58, as against a similar charge opposite these steamships in the previous annual report of $4,964,986.07."

Q. How long has the Pacific Mail been operating those boats?

A. Since 1904.

Q. Since 1904?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With whom was the arrangement made for the leasing or chartering of those boats?

A. With Mr. E. H. Harriman.

2764 Q. Who represented the Pacific Mail in the negotiations?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. I say who represented the Pacific Mail in the negotiations?
A. I did.
Q. You represented the Pacific Mail?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You are the Vice-president of the Pacific Mail?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And your arrangements were made with the president of the same company, Mr. Harriman?
A. I recognized Mr. Harriman as acting personally.
Q. You make a distinction between Mr. Harriman as President of the Pacific Mail and Mr. Harriman individually?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What rental did Mr. Harriman exact for those ships?
A. I don't think I could tell you the exact figures.
Q. Practically?
A. It varied. The first year it was somewhere in the neighborhood of $20,000 a month, and it was gradually increased until it was $30,000 a month.
Commissioner LANE. For both?
WITNESS. For each ship.
Commissioner LANE. For each ship?
WITNESS. Yes, sir.
Q. Does it depend on the freight carried?
A. No, sir, it is a dead straight charter.
Q. You have a regular contract by which the rental increases?
A. No, sir. In the operation of a new ship, the expenses are always heavier than after you get the ship running, and also the expenses are heavier to introduce a new ship. So I contended that the first—the first six or nine months of the charter, the charter should be less than what it would be afterwards. So the final 2765 charter—we are paying, the last rate that we are paying, is $30,000 a month. But I don't just remember how the terms varied from $20,000 to $30,000, and exactly what period that covered.
Q. That is what you are paying now, is it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. $30,000 a month for each ship?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And that is paid to Mr. E. H. Harriman, is it?
A. Yes, sir. As far as I know, it is.
Q. Where is the payment made?
A. In New York City.
Q. By whom?
A. We remit the money to the controller, Mr. Mahl.
Q. Mr. Mahl is also the controller of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific and the Oregon Short Line, is he not?
A. So I understand, yes.
Q. Who is the auditor of the Pacific Mail?

A. Mr. Railton.

Q. He lives here in San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who is the auditor of the Portland Asiatic Company?

A. Mr. Railton.

Q. And is Mr. Mahl also the controller of that company?

A. I don't know.

Q. You are the vice-president and general manager?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is Mr. Harriman the president?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who is the president?

A. There is none.

Q. They have no president?

A. They have no president.

Q. What is your position with the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Company? Are you vice-president and general manager of that company?

A. President.

Q. President?

A. Yes, sir.

2766 Q. Then if one of those railroad companies, as appears by the minutes, owns those ships, you don't know it?

A. I don't know it, no, sir.

Q. Your only dealing was with your president, Mr. Harriman?

A. Well, I am dealing with Mr. Harriman as the individual owner and registered owner of those ships.

Q. Happening at the same time to be the president of your company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, about the Panama business. I started to interrogate you about that yesterday. Are those ships all the property of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company?

A. Yes, sir, except from time to time we charter ships on that line.

Q. For extra service?

A. Extra service, yes, sir.

Q. Then, as I understand you, the Portland & Asiatic ships are chartered?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Occidental & Oriental ships are chartered?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And those two ships, the "Mongolia" and "Manchuria" of the Pacific Mail line to the Orient, are chartered from Mr. Harriman?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the balance of your ships are owned by the Pacific Mail?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The ships comprising what is known as the San Francisco & Portland Steamship Company were formerly the property of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, were they not?

A. There is one ship on that line.

Q. One ship?

A. Yes, sir.

2767 Q. You mean you have only one ship on that line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long ago was the San Francisco & Portland Steamship Company organized, Mr. Schwerin?

A. In 1904, I think.

Q. Prior to that time had you anything to do with the running of those ships?

A. No, sir.

Q. By whom were they run up to that time?

A. As far as I know they were known as the water division of the O. R. & N.—as the ocean division of the O. R. & N.

Q. Those ships made the connection of the O. R. & N. with San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir; I presume so.

Q. You know that, do you not?

A. I say I presume so.

Q. In 1904, was this company organized as a separate corporation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who are the stockholders?

A. The O. R. & N.

Q. The O. R. & N.?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that the only change of ownership was the fact that they own it by virtue of stock ownership now, while originally they owned the ships direct?

A. The proposition was to put the ships into the hands of steamship men rather than a railroad company, and so they put it into the hands of this operating company.

Q. This operating company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were the ships transferred by the O. R. & N., to the operating company?

A. Yes, sir, chartered.

Q. Are the ships still owned, then, by the O. R. & N. Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So the ships are still owned by the O. R. & N. Company and chartered to the operating company?

A. Yes, sir.

2768 Q. And you are the head of the operating company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you say there is only one ship on that line; what is her name?

A. The "Columbia."

Q. What is her tonnage capacity?

A. About 1800 tons.

Q. How many ships were there when you took charge of that line?

A. Two, the "Elder" and "Columbia."

Q. Do you know whether, prior to 1904 there had been more than two ships?

A. I don't know anything about the history of the company prior to the time I took hold of it.

Q. You know nothing about that?

A. No, sir.

Q. What became of the "Elder?" Was she wrecked?

A. Lost—she was lost at the Columbia River.

Q. How long ago?

A. About three years ago. No, it could not have been that long; two years ago.

Q. What efforts have you made since then to replace the "Elder"?

A. Immediately bought the "St. Paul" and fitted her out and put her on the line, a much better ship than the "Elder." She was lost a year ago last summer, on the coast.

Q. What efforts have you made to replace the "St. Paul"?

A. Then we chartered the "Barracouta" and "Costa Rica," and the "Aztec" and the "Spokane."

Q. Did the "Barracouta" belong to the Pacific Mail?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To what companies did the others belong?

A. The "Aztec" and the "Costa Rica" belonged to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company.

Q. That is, you put those into service there from the Pacific Mail?

A. Regular official charter. You understand, Mr. Sever-
2769 ance, that those ships are insured, and in order to protect the interest of the individual company the charter has got to be made exactly the same as though chartered to Paul Jones, or any other man who is operating the company, entirely distinct and separate company from my own. In other words, the Pacific Mail Steamship Company would charter from the Portland & Asiatic, say, in exactly the way that they would charter from Barneson Hibbard Company.

Q. Except, I suppose, in the charter of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company of steamers to run from San Francisco to Portland, the whole matter would be in your hands as the managing officer of both companies?

A. Yes, sir; and the rate of charter would be governed by the ordinary rate of charter for that character of ships.

Q. And that was fixed by you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many boats have you in service there now?

A. The "Columbia," "Costa Rica," and "Aztec" have been running there.

Q. How frequent is that service?

A. Well, we have had this summer a very serious time with that line. If you want me to enumerate all the difficulties we have had, I will be pleased to do so. It takes its beginning from the time of the earthquake.

Q. Go ahead.

A. At the time of the disaster in April, the "Columbia" was on the Union Iron Works drydock. She was shaken off the blocks, and carried the drydock away, and sunk there. She was there from April till September before they were able to salve her, and repair and restore her to the line. Then about the 1st of May we had a 2770 strike on the water front, which tied up all the steamers, and we were finally able to get the line opened without the passenger service—we didn't believe it advisable, with the class of men we were getting, to take the chances of sending the ship to sea with an untrained crew. So we had to abolish the passenger service.

Q. Has that been resumed?

A. That has been resumed, yes, sir.

Q. How long ago?

A. I think the strike was over in September, and we resumed immediately after the strike ceased. We had the "Costa Rica" and "Barracouta" on the line, and as the business developed, we put the "Aztec" on the line. When we got the "Columbia" back, we took the "Aztec" (she carries freight only) off, then the "Costa Rica" smashed her high pressure cylinder, and the inspector would not let us go out and made us put in a new cylinder, and that took six weeks, and she was taken off the line. So it has been one continual interruption on that line since the disaster.

Q. Assuming that the three boats are all in condition—they are now, are they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Assuming that, how frequent is the service?

A. Five days; that is, five days for the two passenger ships, and the "Aztec" runs as fast as they can load and discharge. She would take 21 days to make the round trip.

Q. About 10 days each way, between loading and unloading?

A. No, sir; that takes in the time in port. It takes about 5 days to go up and down, that is, 5 days up and 5 days down, and the balance of the time is taken in the difficulties of discharging the ships in port.

2771 Q. How long does it take the passenger ships to make the trip?

A. To Astoria, about 48 hours. They are about 4 or 5 hours going up the Columbia.

Q. And the return?

A. About the same; we run on a schedule.

Q. And so you have a five-day passenger service?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Passenger and freight?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And an extra boat which makes the round trip every 21 days?

A. And also we have been trying very hard to purchase two five thousand ton ships for that line, but we haven't been able to get a satisfactory price yet.

Q. Has there been within the last year any change in the rates on that line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?

A. I think the change of rates was made effective this month.

Q. Was it an increase or a decrease?

A. An increase.

Q. Could you produce a copy of the tariff, of the former tariff, and of the new tariff?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And let us have it in evidence?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you state, without reference to the tariff, about the percentage of increase?

A. No, sir, I could not.

Q. Does the increase cover all classes of freight?

A. No, sir.

Q. What does it cover?

A. Roughly speaking, it covers south-bound flour and feed-stuffs, and north-bound canned goods, heavy wagons, automobiles, sugar—that is about all that I can remember.

Q. General merchandise moving north?

A. Well, we have general merchandise in different classi-
2772 fications, that is to say, "general merchandise" is not generally a classification. In our tariffs each article is given a rate.

Q. These articles that you have mentioned go under a commodity tariff?

A. No, sir. They just go, for instance, bran, feed-stuffs, flour.

Q. A specific amount?

A. A specific amount as to the rate.

Q. Do you happen to know, Mr. Schwerin, whether at about the same time that you raised the steamship rates, the Southern Pacific raised its rail rates to Portland and from Portland?

A. No, sir, I haven't heard that they have raised rates.

Q. You haven't heard that?

A. No, sir.

Q. This is the first time you ever heard of their raising rates?

A. Yes, sir—I supposed they would.

Q. You supposed they would raise the rates?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did not know that a notice had been given that the rates would be increased, by rail?

A. No, sir.

Q. What made you suppose that the railroad would raise the rates?

A. Well, they always have raised rates when we raised our rates.

Q. Ever since 1904?

A. Yes, sir.

Comr. LANE. Was there a consultation between yourself and any of the railroad men respecting the raising of rates before it was done?

A. We had a differential against the railroad, and I have discussed it with the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, and our rates are governed very largely by their water rate; and I have dis-
2773 cussed it with the railroad company. And there has been general discussion as to whether the rates were too low, and whether they ought to be advanced or not.

Comr. LANE. When was it decided upon to advance the rates?

WITNESS. I think it was in November or December.

Comr. LANE. With what official of the railroad did you deal in matters of that kind—Mr. Stubbs?

WITNESS. No, sir.

Comr. LANE. Who is the man you talked it over with?

WITNESS. Sometimes discussed it with the traffic manager, or one of his assistants.

Comr. LANE. In this particular case, who was it you discussed it with?

WITNESS. In this particular I think I spoke to Mr. Luce about it.

Comr. LANE. He is the freight and traffic manager here?

WITNESS. He is the——

Mr. LOVETT. (Int'g.) General freight agent, is he not?

WITNESS. General freight agent.

Comr. LANE. It was after that conversation, subsequent to that conversation with Mr. Luce, that you made your advance?

WITNESS. Well, it would not have made any difference whether they made an advance or not, we would have advanced our rates, because the rates were unremunerative. The cost of labor had advanced so, our stevedoring charges had advanced over one-third, and it was costing us as high as 76 cents a ton to take freight out of the ship, and we were getting $2.50 a ton for it.

2774 Comr. LANE. What is the differential between yourself and the railroad?

WITNESS. I think it is about 60 cents a ton.

Comr. LANE. 60 cents a ton.

WITNESS. Yes, sir. Yes, sir. It was absolutely immaterial to me whether the railroad advanced the rate or not. I said we would advance our rates, and the Pacific Coast Steamship Company said they would advance their rates. They were in the same position we were. There had been an advance in the price of fuel and supplies, and an advance in the pay of the officers, and in the crews' wages; and, all together, we were in a very bad shape.

Q. That advance in wages of the stevedores and of the longshoremen would have no effect on the expense of handling railroad traffic, would it? Their traffic expenses were not increased because you had to pay more on the dock?

A. I suppose not. I suppose our arrangement had nothing to do with them.

Q. Then their rate was not increased for the same reason that yours was, but was merely increased because you had increased yours?

A. Well, I suppose that is for them to answer.

Q. Is that not your understanding, Mr. Schwerin, that it was done so as to maintain this differential?

A. I told the railroad company we were going to advance rates.

Q. They didn't protest vigorously at all, did they, against that?

A. No, sir.

Q. And after you advanced the rates on the different occasions that you have done so, it has been their custom to ad-

2775 vance the rail rates at the same time.

A. We have advanced rates in cases where they have not advanced rates.

Q. Where sometimes they have not advanced the rates, you say?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I understood you to testify a few moments ago, Mr. Schwerin, that they customarily advanced the rates when you did?

A. I did, but I think there are cases where they have not done so.

Q. The general rule is that they do advance the rates when you do?

A. If they advance their rates we will advance ours, and I suppose if we advance our rates, they will advance theirs, though there is no understanding between us upon that point.

Q. No agreement that they shall do it?

A. No, sir.

Q. But the coincidence exists. When one rate goes up, the other goes up?

A. As a matter of fact, in my study of the traffic between here and Portland, which is largely a traffic that moves from San Francisco to Portland, the Southern Pacific Company is not a competitor.

Q. Why?

A. We can give so much better service than they can that we get their business.

Q. The railroad men who have testified are under the impression that they are.

A. That is the difference between the steamship men and the railroad men.

Mr. DUNNE. What is that, Mr. Severance?

Mr. SEVERANCE. I say the railroad men who have testified are under the impression that they are.

2776 Mr. DUNNE. You say "the railroad men?"

Mr. SEVERANCE. Yes, sir.

Mr. DUNNE. You do not mean all railroad men?

Mr. SEVERANCE. Several.

Mr. DUNNE. Several, but not all.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Several of them have so testified.

Mr. LOVETT. Some have testified to the contrary.

Q. Let us examine into this for a moment. Does not the Southern Pacific Railroad Company carry from here to Portland goods of the same character that you transport by ship?

A. I suppose they do. I am not at all familiar with what they carry, Mr. Severance.

Q. If you are not familiar with what they carry, how would you hazard this opinion that they are not competitive with you?

A. Because we get the freight very largely unsolicited, and we are not able to handle all the freight that is offered to us.

Q. You would be if you had enough ships?

A. And if they were competitors, they would take the freight away from us. We make better time to Portland than they make, for instance. A man can order his groceries in San Francisco, and barring those accidents that we have had, he will know just when he will get his goods in Portland.

Q. And as you understand it, the Southern Pacific service is not as good as yours, so that if the order is given here to send it by rail, he does not know when he will get it in Portland?

A. Well, transportation by rail has been very much disturbed lately.

2777 Comr. LANE. One of the reasons the railroad is not competitive is that it cannot give as good service. Is that it?

WITNESS. That is the way I look at it, yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Schwerin, do I understand you now to testify that you don't know what kind of traffic is carried by rail from here to Portland?

A. My testimony is that I have never interested myself to see what the railroad takes from here to Portland, yes, sir. I suppose they are in the carrying business, and they are out for all the freight they can get. I know that we compete with them, our solicitors will compete against the Southern Pacific Company for every pound of freight we can get.

Q. How is that?

A. Our freight solicitors will compete against other freight solicitors in the port of San Francisco for any freight we can get.

Q. If your solicitors are competing with the Southern Pacific for freight, why do you testify that you are not a competitor of the Southern Pacific?

A. Did I testify to that?

Q. I thought you did a moment ago.

A. I haven't that impression. I testified I did not consider the Southern Pacific were competitors of ours—just at the present time, on account of the congested amount of freight. But if the market was lean of freight, I would consider that they were competitors.

Q. Then, as I understand it, you do not wish to be understood as testifying that the Southern Pacific and the boats from here to Portland are not competitors of one another, under ordinary conditions?

A. No, sir; I don't mean that.

Q. No. But it is your opinion that their service by rail is so poor at present that they are not, and that they should 2778 not be dignified by the title of competitor?

A. I could not say that.

Q. What do you mean by your answer?

A. I mean to say that our service at the present time has been better than the rail service, and for that reason we haven't had such a strenuous time to get freight as we have had at previous times.

Q. There is a great deal of traffic moving out of here?

A. Yes, sir; south-bound; not so much north-bound. The north-bound movement has been light.

Q. And you need more ships to handle the traffic that is offered, and you are trying to get more?

A. Well, trying to get a better class of ships that will handle the business better than we have been able to handle it. For instance, the north-bound ships have been going out with light tonnage. For instance, the "Aztec" on her last trip had 500 tons, and the "Columbia" on her last trip only had 700 tons—the last voyages up there. But the demand for tonnage is south-bound.

Q. Who is your agent in Portland?

A. Mr. Dewson.

Q. And prior to his employment with your steamship company, what was his position?

A. He was in the employ of a shipping firm of New York City.

Q. You brought him out from the east?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you have an agent here in San Francisco for this steamship line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that separate and apart from the agency of the Pacific Mail?

A. Entirely.

Q. A separate organization?

A. Yes, sir, entirely.

2779 Q. Under your charge?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does the Pacific Mail run any boats to Alaska?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or to Puget Sound points?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever run any boats up there?

A. No, sir. We chartered boats that run to Alaska, but we never operated them.

Q. I think that is all.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Mr. Schwerin, you say that you have been endeavoring to get two additional boats for the Portland and San Francisco line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have not been able to secure them?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why?

A. It has been a question of difference of price between the owner and ourselves.

Q. Are you restricted in your purchase to American boats?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why?

A. It is the coastwise traffic—United States coastwise traffic.

Q. You can't buy a foreign made ship and put it in this business because of the tariff that you would have to pay on the foreign built ships?

A. No, sir, that is not it. They do not permit a foreign bottom to operate in the coastwise traffic.

Q. I didn't know whether that was it, or whether it was the tariff. I knew there was some restriction.

A. It is against the United States law to operate a foreign bottom in the coastwise traffic.

Q. And the supply of American made ships is very small?

2780 A. We have been in great difficulty to try to get even a charter for that line. We have not been able even to do that.

Q. I believe you testified that the principal amount of traffic on that line was south-bound; that is, from Portland?

A. It has been lately; yes, sir.

Q. What is the character of the traffic? That is as a rule; I am not speaking of any exceptional conditions, but as a rule?

A. South-bound has been mostly mill products.

Q. Mill products?

A. Flour, feed, bran, and oats, and shakes and shingles and laths.

Q. Where does it originate?

A. Most of it originates in Portland, and I suppose along the line of the O. R. & N.

Q. Those boats do not handle any traffic coming from the east, do they?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, as to the north-bound cargo. What is that ordinarily?

A. Canned goods, sugar, salt, cement.

Q. Products of California?

A. Yes, sir; almost entirely.

Q. I believe you testified that on account of conditions existing at this time, at least, on account of the better time that your boats make, the Southern Pacific has not been able to compete with you. That is under present conditions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it not true, Mr. Schwerin, that as a rule, generally speaking, railroads are not equal to competing with ocean carriers; that is, coastwise carriers? Is that not true on the Atlantic? That is, I mean from seaport to seaport; I am not speaking of the ordinary river steamers, but of coastwise steamers.

A. I think they get the first call on the traffic.

2781 Comr. LANE. Is that true as to the rates, or as to time and facilities?

WITNESS. Time and facilities.

Mr. LOVETT. Time and facilities, my question was addressed to.

Mr. DUNNE. From seaport to seaport?

Comr. LANE. From seaport to seaport.

WITNESS. For instance, the Old Dominion Line has the bulk of the traffic between Norfolk and New York City.

Q. And the Morgan & Mallory Steamship lines have the bulk of the traffic between New York and New Orleans and Galveston?

A. So I understand.

Comr. LANE. What is the basis for the differential between the railroad and the steamship?

WITNESS. I suppose it is based upon the fact that the rail lines give a security which the steamer does not. The bill of lading in the case of the rail line covers the risk to freight, whereas on the steamer the owner has to insure his own risk.

Comr. LANE. That differential, 60 cents in your case, is far more than would cover the insurance?

WITNESS. That 60 cents a ton?

Comr. LANE. Yes.

WITNESS. Yes, I should think the insurance would cover about 30 cents a ton.

Comr. LANE. So that there must be considered that there is some preference to be given a railroad?

WITNESS. But the railroad has always had the higher
2782 rate, on account of the fact that it costs more to operate than it does a steamship line. The railroads have always insisted, in a division with the steamship line, for a larger share of the through haul and through traffic—everywhere in the world, the world over, that is true.

Comr. LANE. That the railroad has insisted upon its larger proportion?

WITNESS. Yes, sir, on the ground of its increased expenses. It costs more to operate a railroad than it does a steamship line.

Comr. LANE. As between yourself running a coast line of steamers, and the Shasta route from here to Portland, you could put the Shasta route out of business, so far as the direct freight going from Portland to San Francisco is concerned, in the matter of rates, and in the matter of time, at present?

WITNESS. Well, I could not say that, because I could not control the shippers. But if I found our rates were diverting business from us, I would be forced to lower our rates again.

Comr. LANE. Do you know how much cheaper you can haul a ton of freight from Portland to San Francisco than the railroad can haul it?

WITNESS. I do not.

Comr. LANE. You do not know the comparative cost by railroad and steamboat in competition?

WITNESS. No, sir.

Comr. LANE. That is all, Judge.

2783 Q. I believe you testified that you also operate steamers between New York and various South American and Central American ports?

A. No, sir.

Q. Between San Francisco, I should say, and various South American and Central American ports?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Pacific Mail Steamship Company has no steamers on the Atlantic?

A. No, sir.

Q. And never has had?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?

A. It used to operate a line from New York to Panama, and the Panama Railroad Company would not allow us to continue there, in connection with the Panama Railroad.

Q. When was that discontinued?

A. I think it was late in '90's.

Q. Late in the '90's?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are there any other lines besides yours operating between San Francisco and Panama, and South American and Central American ports?

A. Yes, sir, the Cosmos Line and the French Line.

Q. How long have they been operating?

A. The Ocean Line has been operating there about 10 years.

Q. Has the Pacific Mail Steamship Company had competition between San Francisco and the southern ports ever since you have known it?

A. Yes, sir, very severe competition.

Q. Does not the Hamburg American Packet Company operate ships on this coast?

Comr. LANE. That is the Cosmos Line, is it not?

WITNESS. No, sir. I believe the Hamburg American Packet Company—there are common stockholders in the Hamburg American Packet Company and in the Cosmos Line, but I do not understand that the Cosmos Line is really owned by the Hamburg American Packet Company.

2784

Q. But the Hamburg American Packet Company, as such, does not operate steamers on the Pacific between the ports mentioned?

A. No, sir.

Q. I believe you stated that there has been competition on the Pacific between San Francisco and these southern ports ever since your connection with the Pacific Mail Steamship Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there is competition now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the name of the line that was promoted by the Santa Fe system from San Diego to Asiatic ports?

A. The California & Oriental.

Q. The California & Oriental?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did that line go out of business? Do you know, Mr. Schwerin?

A. Sometime along in 1902, 1902 or 1903, as near as I can remember.

Q. About 1902 or '3?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How often did that line sail?

A. They were supposed to have a steamer first every month, and later they, I believe they contemplated having two steamers a month, or a steamer every three weeks, I don't remember which.

Q. And what was your service from here?

A. We had a steamer then about every nine days.

Q. You had a steamer then about every nine days. And you had been for some time soliciting business from the Atchison for Asiatic ports?

A. Yes, sir.

2785 Q. You believe that you could give them better service than the line from San Diego gave them, did you not?

A. We thought so.

Q. When did the Atchison get its line into San Francisco? About when, Mr. Schwerin, do you know?

A. No, sir, I don't believe I remember that date.

Q. This line from San Diego was opened by the Atchison before the time it got its rails in San Francisco, was it not?

A. Well, this line was in operation—I know that when the line started, there were no Santa Fe rails into San Francisco, because the steamship line came here and delivered its local cargo and then went south and delivered its overland in San Diego.

Q. How long had you been making your efforts with Mr. Morton, I believe you said yesterday—how long had you been making your efforts with Mr. Morton to get the business of the Atchison, the business from Asiatic ports?

A. Well, I don't know; it is so long ago I can't remember. Almost from the very beginning of my connection with the line, I tried to persuade the Santa Fe to give me the business, and every time I saw Mr. Morton I would joke him about it, or talk earnestly to him, or any way to try to persuade him to give me the business.

Q. Did you finally arrange with him to get some of the business?

A. The last talk that I had with Mr. Morton was in the Waldorf in New York, and I told him if he would give us a share of his business, that we would agree to give him equal rates and divisions with any other connecting carrier from the port of San Francisco.

2786 Q. The point I was trying to develop, Mr. Schwerin, is when the arrangement with the Atchison, or when the arrangement by which you succeeded in getting their business, was made with reference to the discontinuance of the Oriental line?

A. This conversation I had with Mr. Morton was long after the California and Oriental line had gone out of business.

Q. You had no arrangement with him until after that line went out of business?

A. Some time after that line went out of business.

Comr. LANE. Did they go out of business in view of any conversation that you had with Mr. Morton or the Santa Fe people?

WITNESS. Absolutely not.

Comr. LANE. Absolutely not?

WITNESS. No.

Comr. LANE. It was not in pursuance of any agreement or understanding that they should get a share of the business that they put that steamship line out of business?

WITNESS. No, sir.

Mr. DUNNE. Do you understand why the steamship line went out of business?

WITNESS. I understood, both from Mr. Morton and from the agent of the line here, that they were losing considerable money—the line was very unprofitable.

Q. Your information was that the line had been unprofitable?

A. And I understood from the steamship end of it that the Santa Fe declined to hold the sack any more for the steamship company.

2787 Comr. LANE. I didn't hear that.

WITNESS. I understood that the Santa Fe declined to hold the sack for the steamship company.

Mr. DUNNE. I think Mr. Ripley gave some testimony before your Honor in Chicago upon that subject.

Comr. LANE. There was a lot of statements made in Chicago about the Steamship company, but not as to the reason why it went out of business.

Mr. DUNNE. He said it was disastrous, he used that term.

Q. Then after that line was discontinued, you arranged with the Santa Fe to get some of their business, and to reserve space for them on your ships out-bound, so as to use their freight?

A. We had to do that. We had to agree to let them have a certain amount of space on the outward bound ships, otherwise they would not have been able to contract it, and we would not have known what they would want to carry, how much.

Q. And in return for that, you would agree to give them some portion, and you did agree to give them some portion, I think you said 25 per cent?

A. It varied above and below 25 per cent., but we tried to give them about 25 per cent.

Comr. LANE. It depended entirely on the amount of freight you got from them, the amount you would give to them?

WITNESS. No, sir, I can't say that, Mr. Lane, for the simple reason that the Santa Fe—it is one of the things we complained about, that the Santa Fe has not given us as much freight as we have given them, and we have continually kept after the Santa Fe to get after their agents to get more freight for us.

2788 Comr. LANE. And you at the present time give them more than they give to you?

WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Comr. LANE. Then why don't you cut them off?

Witness. Because I want to have an argument on my side for them to get after freight, because we have all the Santa Fe men working for us to get freight to the port of San Francisco—we are getting freight from the northern lines who are working against us to get freight from the south.

Comr. Lane. Do they pull freight that would naturally go to the south?

Witness. Oh, yes. All the freight originates in common, competitive territory.

Comr. Lane. So you are trying your best to keep on the good side of the Santa Fe people.

Witness. Yes, sir. Every pound of freight that is taken out of this port can be moved to the Orient without coming here at all. In other words, our business can be absolutely taken away from this port, our transcontinental business, and go out from the north and be served just as well as through this port as far as the rail service is concerned, and getting it to tidewater.

Comr. Lane. That is not a matter of rates, then, but it is a matter of competition between the solicitors?

Witness. I don't think you understand. I mean physically that can be done. Therefore we want to get all the solicitors we can to work for tonnage from the port of San Francisco to feed our 2789 line, in competition against the railroad lines that are working for freight for the steamers that go to the north.

Comr. Lane. Now then, when you make a rate from the Orient for business to Chicago, or some point that is served by the Santa Fe, there is no competition between the Santa Fe and Southern Pacific, or between the Santa Fe or Southern Pacific and Union Pacific, upon a rate for that import business, is there?

Witness. Well, there was a time when we could make a rate from the Orient to any point in the United States without consultation with the rail lines at all; the initial carrier has the right to make that rate, but now, under the Interstate Commerce ruling, we have to give 30 days' notice. We are out of competition with the Orient, you may say, with the Orient entirely because the Suez line, with whom we compete there, can change their rates every day, and we have got to give 30 days' notice. They can come in within 30 days and contract, and then we come in with another 30 days' notice under which we will contract, and they can come and contract again, in that way divert all the tonnage.

Comr. Lane. Do you think the through rate from Hong Kong to Chicago comes under that?

Witness. Yes, sir.

Comr. Lane. You publish those rates?

Witness. Yes, sir. They are published and filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Comr. Lane. And you are enabled, by the ownership of the boats by the railroad, to absorb a portion of the inland 2790 freight rate?

Witness. No, sir. How do you mean, absorb it?

Comr. LANE. I mean this, that you can make a through rate from Hong Kong to Chicago upon business and not publish the proportion from Chicago to San Francisco, and from San Francisco to Hong Kong. You simply make one through rate, and that through rate may be divided up between yourselves and the railroad people as you see fit?

WITNESS. As I understand it, yes, sir. We can arrange the division as we may desire.

Comr. LANE. Yes.

WITNESS. It is a matter of traffic arrangement.

Comr. LANE. Traffic arrangement between you two?

WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Comr. LANE. Is that rate open at San Francisco to the Santa Fe?

WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Comr. LANE. You have the same rate, then, with the Santa Fe inland which you have with the Southern Pacific?

WITNESS. Yes, sir, the same division.

Comr. LANE. The same division of through rate?

WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Mr. DUNNE. Just exactly, your Honor, like the orange rate from Southern California. The initial line makes the connection with a number of companies and the rate is the same through all these connections.

Comr. LANE. So it is practically the same as if you published 2791 a rate to San Francisco, and a rate upon import business from San Francisco to Chicago. Is that so, Mr. Schwerin?

WITNESS. Well, I suppose that could be done, but that never has been done.

Q. The Suez competition that you referred to is principally to the Atlantic seaports?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are at a disadvantage with respect to that?

A. We are entirely at a disadvantage with respect to that. They are all foreign steamships, operated very cheaply, and as tramps.

Q. The route of this traffic that originates in the Orient and that comes to your possession for the east is in the hands of the Pacific Mail, is it?

A. So far as turning it over to the initial carrier is concerned.

Q. That is what I mean.

Mr. DUNNE. Your Honor asked a question about publication. The through rate from the Orient is published as a through rate.

Comr. LANE. That is what I understand.

Q. The routing of it, so far as the initial carrier is concerned, that is, the carrier taking it out of San Francisco, is in the hands of the Pacific Mail?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where the carrier has to deliver it beyond its own lines, it turns it over—that is, it has the control of the railroad carriers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So far as the carriers beyond the initial carrier are concerned, then, the initial carrier has control of the routing?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Coming back to the point where we were considering the arrangements for this business that you get with the Atchison.

2792 You testified yesterday something about there being no agreement. What do you mean by that? Do you mean no written agreement?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or contract. You do mean to convey the impression that there was not an arrangement?

A. I said there was an understanding.

Q. You testified yesterday that there was an understanding?

A. An understanding, yes, sir.

Q. By which you intended to give them about 25 per cent of the business, as near as you could apportion it, in that way?

A. Yes, sir.

Comr. LANE. May I ask you this question: What was the reason that you named that, if there was any reason, aside from your desire to get the Santa Fe solicitors at work for your steamship company?

WITNESS. I don't know that I understand your question.

Comr. LANE. Why was it that you gave that agreement to give them 25 per cent of the business?

WITNESS. Well, the reason was that we contemplated trying to build up the San Francisco line, and to put on large carriers across the Pacific—we contemplated putting on the "Korea" and "Siberia," which were nearing completion, and then I was trying to get a larger shipment, which finally culminated in our getting the "Manchuria," and I wanted to work it up and have all the solicitation I could get. It was absolutely impossible for me to consider that the Santa Fe, from my discussion with Mr. Morton, would work to give us outward tonnage unless I would agree to give 2793 him inward tonnage. And in our discussion, he used to laugh, and he said "If I do that, I will swamp you," and I said "Try it on." And finally it started with 25 per cent and they never gave us a full 25 per cent of our outward tonnage. They are working more actively lately than they did previously.

Comr. LANE. These conversations with Mr. Morton were held prior to 1904?

WITNESS. These conversations were held, well, probably running back six or eight months prior to the time that he finally said that he would give us some of his business.

Comr. LANE. And these conversations were held subsequent to the going out of business of the San Diego line?

WITNESS. Absolutely so. There was no line out of San Diego at the time we talked this over. Prior to that time it was merely a question of solicitation, to give us the business, because we joshed them about losing so much money, and that they didn't know how to run a steamship line. There was a good deal of talk in that way, and every time I got a chance at him I tried to persuade him to come over to our line. This talk about a division occurred after the Santa Fe actually got its trackage into San Francisco, where they could make connection with us, direct rail with us, over their own lines.

Q. You were trying to get business for the steamship company, Mr. Schwerin?

A. That is what I was out for, first, last and all the time.

Q. You tried to operate the Pacific Mail in the interest of the Pacific Mail?

A. Entirely so.

Q. And not for the Southern Pacific line?

2794 A. I didn't consider the Southern Pacific at all in the matter.

Q. And if you could make an arrangement with the Atchison to increase your business, you desired to make such an arrangement, did you?

A. I certainly did.

Comr. LANE. But you can't very well eliminate Mr. Harriman as a consideration, Mr. Schwerin?

WITNESS. Mr. Harriman has never suggested even a single instruction to me upon that question.

Comr. LANE. When you come to a division of the through freight between yourselves and the Central and Union Pacific line, does not Mr. Harriman have anything to say about that?

WITNESS. No, sir. That matter is fought out between Mr. Stubbs and myself, and he treats me just as though I were a foreign connection.

Comr. LANE. You don't suppose Mr. Stubbs has any communication with Mr. Harriman to see what proposition shall be made?

WITNESS. I know he has not. We settle those things, and we settle them ourselves.

Comr. LANE. Those things are left to you entirely?

WITNESS. As to Mr. Stubbs, when I first started in with negotiations with Mr. Stubbs, the Southern Pacific hadn't a dollar of interest in the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. That was way back in 1893 and '4.

Comr. LANE. Yes, of course, but conditions have changed since then.

WITNESS. I understand, but our divisions have not changed.

2795 Comr. LANE. Your divisions have not changed?

WITNESS. No, sir, we have the same divisions.

Comr. LANE. Your divisions are just the same now as they were then?

WITNESS. They are just the same now as they were then, exactly.

Q. You don't know of any reason why Mr. Harriman should have the Pacific Mail worked in the interest of the Southern Pacific against the interest of the Pacific Mail, do you?

A. I can't imagine such a thing.

Q. You don't know of any reason why the Southern Pacific should object to your handling business for the Atchison, do you, or any other line?

A. No, sir. The Pacific Mail is simply a connecting carrier with the Southern Pacific and the Atchison.

Q. The Pacific Mail Steamship Company is simply a connecting carrier with the Southern Pacific and the Atchison for this Asiatic traffic, is it not?

A. That is the way I look at it; yes, sir.

Q. You spoke yesterday, testified yesterday about the routing of the Asiatic traffic, and the intention to give 20 or 25 per cent to the Atchison, and I don't know that I understood exactly your testimony upon that point. You testified, as I understand, that about six months ago it was turned over to the Southern Pacific here; what do you mean by that? I am not clear as to your meaning there.

A. Well, we have the only rail connection, our docks rather have the only rail connection there is in San Francisco.

2796 Q. That is the rails on your dock are Southern Pacific rails?

A. The tracks belong to the Southern Pacific, yes.

Q. The Atchison has no tracks there?

A. Actually the Atchison has no rail connection to our docks, and any freight to or from our docks must be passed over the trackage of the Southern Pacific to reach the tracks of the Santa Fe.

Q. Is that what you meant by your testimony that all the traffic was turned over to the Southern Pacific?

A. I meant that the Atchison Company would turn their cars over to the Southern Pacific Company, to be again distributed over to the Santa Fe, to their own line.

Q. And did the Southern Pacific settle with you for your charges, or did the Atchison settle with you for your charges on freight to go via its lines, and the Southern Pacific for freight that was routed by its lines?

A. On the inward bound freight, we would bill direct to the Santa Fe for our advance charges for freight routed by the Santa Fe, and the same way to the Southern Pacific. On the outward freight the Santa Fe would collect direct from us for their proportion of the through rate on any charges there might be, and the same way with the Southern Pacific—they would collect direct from us their proportion.

Q. In other words, while the traffic was turned over to the Southern Pacific, or on the Southern Pacific tracks, it was in pursuance with the arrangement you had with the Atchison that certain portions of it should be routed by the Atchison, and the Atchison settled with your company for the charges on that that was moved by the Atchison?

A. Yes, sir.

2797 Comr. LANE. Does that mean that it was not left to the Southern Pacific Company to decide what should go to the Atchison at all?

WITNESS. No, sir, it was up to us.

Mr. LOVETT. Is that all, your Honor?

Comr. LANE. Yes.

Q. Mr. Severance asked you something about the arrangement for chartering the "Manchuria" and "Mongolia," and you testified, I believe, that the charter or contract was with Mr. Harriman. You don't know whether the beneficial ownership of those boats is in the Oregon Short Line, or the Union Pacific, or Mr. Harriman; but he is the registered owner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was the rental, or charter, I believe, is the term you used, that was paid for those ships, reasonable, Mr. Schwerin?

A. Yes, sir, it is a fair charter.

Q. You regarded it as fair to the Pacific Mail?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You testified just now that at the time the present rates or divisions, I believe you call it, with the Southern Pacific were put in by agreement between Mr. Stubbs and yourself, that the Southern Pacific Company had no interest in the Pacific Mail. That is correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You testified yesterday to the appointment of certain agents in the east, Hawley in New York, and Neimyer in Chicago. When were those appointments made?

A. In 1894 and 1895.

Q. In 1894 and 1895?

A. Somewhere along that period.

Q. The Southern Pacific had no interest in the Pacific Mail at that time?

A. No, sir.

2798 Q. You were working with the Southern Pacific as a connecting line?

A. There were certain questions that would come up from time to time that required quick action in the east, in competition for traffic, and I solicited to have those people appointed there, so they could communicate direct with me, and get our authority as to what we were willing to do at the steamship end of it, and they acted there entirely under that understanding.

Q. In 1900 and 1901, Mr. Schwerin, about how frequently were the sailings of your vessels from this port?

A. About the same as they are now, sir.

Q. That is, about every nine days?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How often were the sailings from Puget Sound at that time?

A. There was one, at that time there was really one, what we considered one regular line there which had sailings that were absolutely definite. The Canadian Pacific and ourselves consider that we run those lines on railroad train service. That is, we know just exactly what ship is to come into port, and exactly what day she is to leave, and they carry mails. Outside of the Northern Pacific Steamship Company, that operated at that time from Tacoma, I think the Canadian Pacific and ourselves were the only ones that maintained an absolutely regular schedule, although they advertised a schedule possibly of dates of sailings.

Q. How often were the sailings from the Sound?

A. Very frequent; there were a great many tramp steamers coming in there under the guise of regular lines, and sailings were very frequent.

2799 Q. Were they as often, do you think, as your sailings—that is, all the lines from the Puget Sound?

A. Yes, sir; I should think they were more frequent.

Q. More frequent?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were there other lines running out of here at that time besides the Pacific Mail?

A. The Pacific Mail—I am speaking of the Pacific Mail, and by that I mean what we call the San Francisco lines, the three lines.

Q. Yes. It takes the three lines to make the nine days' schedule, does it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Dodwell line from Portland was discontinued by 1900, was it?

A. I think it was discontinued somewhere along in 1900, yes, sir.

Q. The Portland & Asiatic Company was organized in 1901?

A. Yes, sir; at least, I think so; I was not connected with the line at that time.

Q. No; but you have general knowledge of it?

A. Along in that period, I think—yes, that is right; about 1901.

Q. Were there any regular lines out of Portland for Asiatic ports at that time?

A. There was a line advertised there, but we didn't consider it a line.

Q. In 1900 and 1902 was it in operation?

A. Prior to 1901.

Q. Prior to 1901?

A. Prior to 1901.

Q. What line do you refer to?

A. I think Mr. Graham started a line there.

Q. You refer to the Graham line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If that be deemed a line, there was that line, but there
2800 was no other line out of Portland?

A. No, sir.

Q. How often were the sailings of the Portland & Asiatic?

A. They were at first to sail once a month.

Q. Did they maintain that schedule?

A. No, sir; nowhere near it.

Q. I beg pardon.

A. Nowhere near it.

Q. How many steamers were they operating?

A. Three.

Q. Were they carrying both freight and passengers?

A. No, sir; freight only. I believe they did carry some inward Asiatic passengers.

Q. Mr. Schwerin, what is the principal traffic of the Portland & Asiatic?

A. Almost entirely flour.

Q. Do you understand why that line was established?

Mr. SEVERANCE. You mean going out flour?

WITNESS. Yes, sir.

A. I understood it was to take care of the business that originated on the lines of the O. R. & N.

Q. The flour industry?

A. Flour and grain—to protect, have the grain go to the mills on the line of the O. R. & N., and to protect the grain going to the south.

Q. But flour was the principal commodity that they transported?

A. Yes, sir. We have got two ships there now with a full cargo of flour.

Q. Has that line ever been able to compete with the San Francisco & Puget Sound lines for business from the east, Mr. Schwerin?

A. You mean from the east, the Atlantic seaboard?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir.

Q. Why, if you can give the reason, was that?

2801 A. On account of the irregularity of the service. May I scratch that out? A man who ships from the East wants to know when his freight is going to leave the seaport through which the freight passes, and he will figure to send his freight over by rail and reach the port so as to go by a certain steamer. We maintain our schedule some five, six, seven to eight months ahead of our sailings, so that a shipper in correspondence with the Orient can tell his correspondent what freight he is going to get a long time ahead. If a man puts his agreement into the form of a contract, he would contract that freight to be delivered by a certain steamer. It is to maintain that traffic, hold that traffic, that we have tried so hard to maintain our schedule. On the Portland and Asiatic line, they get bunched up sometimes in Portland, and then again they get bunched up in the Orient. They advertise a steamer to sail on a certain date, and she may sail two or three weeks later than that. The result was that the shipper would be continually growling about his freight, or, there might be some delay on the railroad, and the freight would not get in until the steamer had left, she might have gotten out at near her schedule, and then there would not be another steamer at all for a month, and meanwhile that freight would lie in Portland for a month waiting for a steamer; whereas in San Francisco, in case he missed one steamer, we had another steamer in 9 days, and that would take the freight right forward. That was the superiority of our line over the Portland and Asiatic, so far as the shippers are
2802 concerned, and what they demand in the handling of this Oriental freight.

Q. A line that is not able to afford more than a monthly service really cannot compete with a line running on a 9 or 10 days schedule, on business that originates some distance from port?

A. Yes, sir. We look upon our line as an express service, as against tramp service in some of these other lines. We are not able to accumulate the overland freight in Portland, as you can do in some ports of the world—they won't stand for that at all.

Q. What has been the result of the Portland and Asiatic Steamship Company?

A. Well, it has been a decided loss, as a financial venture.

Q. Have you a statement showing the result of its operations?

A. Yes, sir. Here is the statement.

Mr. LOVETT. Mark that "Exhibit No. 1, Schwerin." We offer that in connection with Mr. Schwerin's testimony as Exhibit 1 to his testimony, it being a statement of the earnings and expenses of the Portland & Asiatic Steamship Company for the year ending June 30, 1902, and for each subsequent year.

Comr. LANE. Does it show a loss for each year?

Mr. LOVETT. It shows a loss for each year, except for the year ending June 30, 1905, during which the Japanese-Russian War was in progress, which helped it out. It shows a loss for the entire period of $283,749.29.

Said exhibit is as follows:

ERASTUS YOUNG, General Auditor.

OMAHA, Nebr., January 15, 1907.

Comr. LANE. On the face of those figures why do you maintain the line?

WITNESS. Well, if we don't maintain the line, Mr. Wilcox,
2803 who has the Portland Flouring Mill, will be compelled to close that mill at the port of Portland, and the people of Portland would very seriously object to having that enterprise destroyed there and moved to Puget Sound. He has another mill at Dayton upon which it would have some effect. Then all the grain that originates along the line of the O. R. & N., would go to Puget Sound Mills, and mills along the lines tributary to Puget Sound, and be milled there, and shipped to the Orient.

Comr. LANE. So that really you can stand a loss on the steamship line, because of the freights you get on the O. R. & N. from the tributary territory to Portland?

WITNESS. Well, they are doing that.

Q. Without this steamship line, your understanding is that the grain originating on the O. R. & N. in northern Oregon and Washington would go to the Northern Pacific and Puget Sound, and then out by the Puget Sound lines to the Orient, and Portland Mills and Portland grain people would be practically out of business, would they not?

A. Yes, sir, unless they got tramp steamers to come in there from time to time and take the cargo and take it out across the Pacific. But they would have no regular service that they could well send their flour by, or sell it against. They sell their flour on monthly deliveries, and there must be a steamer there regularly, in order to meet those monthly deliveries.

Comr. LANE. Has the Wilcox mill expanded at all in the last four or five years?

2804 WITNESS. It has doubled in capacity in the last three years.

Comr. LANE. It has doubled in capacity?

WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Comr. LANE. How much larger is it now than it was in 1900?

WITNESS. I don't remember the exact capacity, but I know he has told me he has doubled his capacity.

Comr. LANE. On export business?

WITNESS. No, sir; on the number of barrels per day he turns out at the Portland Mill.

Comr. LANE. Do you know what proportion for export he has increased?

WITNESS. His tonnage?

Comr. LANE. Yes. Do you know what the increase in tonnage has been?

WITNESS. I think his tonnage has just varied from year to year—some years more than others, and some periods of the year more than others, varying quantities all the time. We have gone out of Portland with not enough freight to ballast the ship.

Comr. LANE. Ten years ago they shipped a good deal of flour across the ocean, did they not?

CLOSE IN CENTER

WITNESS. From Portland?

Comr. LANE. Yes.

WITNESS. No, sir; not such a large amount ten years ago. We had 72 per cent of the total flour sent to the Orient from here until the time Mr. Wilcox came into the market.

2805 Comr. LANE. At what time was that?

WITNESS. I think he became a factor—it is just about ten years ago that he became a factor, and he has gradually worked it up until he has got the control of it—reversed the situation between the Sound and San Francisco.

Q. You understand that the O. R. & N. Company owns the stock of the Portland & Asiatic?

A. I understand so, yes, sir.

Q. And you undertsand that the object it has in maintaining this line of steamers at a loss is to hold the traffic to its rails?

A. Yes, sir; to its rails.

Q. As against the Great Northern and Puget Sound lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Without the support of the O. R. & N. in that way could a steamship line of this character be maintained out of Portland?

A. Unless somebody wanted to simply pay the operating expenses of steamers, it could not.

Q. In other words, as a steamship proposition, it is not practicable, is it?

A. No, sir.

Comr. LANE. Could it be made so, if you ran a regular schedule, put on more boats up there and did a regular competitive business with San Francisco?

WITNESS. The more steamers you put on there, Mr. Lane, the more money you will lose.

Comr. LANE. Why could you not do the same kind of business over the Short Line and the O. R. & N., that you do over the Central, Union and Southern Pacific?

WITNESS. If the San Francisco line was dependent upon 2806 through freights alone they would go out of business. There is not a steamer out of the port of San Francisco to-day that we could run if it were merely a question of freight, I mean transcontinental freight. But we have here inward and outward passenger business, and we also have a large passenger business between the Orient and the Hawaiian Islands. It is a combination of the freight and passenger business that permits this line to run, although this year the Pacific Mail line has lost nearly half a million dollars here in this port.

Comr. LANE. Go on.

WITNESS. We have mentioned a fairly regular schedule out of Portland. The only time that our schedule has varied we were running four steamers—and in reality it has been at the earnest solicitation of the Portland shippers that we have made the divergences that have caused the irregularity of the schedule, and have sent one of our steamers, instead of sending it over to Hong Kong or Moji, at their earnest solicitation, to Kadodate or Newschwang, or some other place out of the regular line, and as those vessels are freight carriers and run to maximum speed, it is impossible, when making those divergences, to get them back into the schedule again without some little lapse. We tried to maintain a steamer every three or four weeks. Now, in Portland, you have had an illustration there of the "Oregonian," lying four or five days at St. Helena trying to go up the river to discharge a cargo. And while she is lying there, she ought to have been up there and discharged. The "Nikomedia," again, appears up there off Astoria, and we have worked in Portland day and night to keep those ships on schedule. And the same 2807 way in the Orient, we have turned them around in Hong Kong in 48 hours, unloaded and loaded in 48 hours, working day and night and we come over to Portland and we can't get in on account of the bar. Then we make up that time again at Portland and go down the river and lie there 7 days trying to get over the bar again.

COPY BOUND CL

Comr. LANE. That is what I was trying to get at——

WITNESS. (Int'g.) We not only have the difficulty of not getting this passenger business, but we have physical difficulties to contend with on the Portland line.

Q. The ships out by the Portland and Asiatic are not passenger steamers?

A. No, sir, they are modern freighters.

Q. Does the Portland and Asiatic own any steamers?

A. No, sir.

Q. Has it ever owned any, so far as you know?

A. No, sir.

Q. It charters them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long, for what period at a time, does it charter these ships?

A. This present charter—I believe the previous charter of the "Intervelli" Steamers was three years.

Q. That is, the original charters of 1901?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was for three years?

A. And this charter was for the period of three years and an option of two more, as I remember, and we declared the option—we have so declared it.

Q. When were the present charters made?

A. They were made in 1903, and became operative, I think, in 1904, that is, negotiations were made in the spring of 1904.

Q. I asked you just now about the frequency of the sailings from Puget Sound in 1901. About how many are they now, taking all of the lines?

2808 A. Well, I should say, including the lines and the tramp vessels—do you include both?

CLOSE IN CENTER

Q. Yes.

A. I should say they are more frequent than they were in 1901.

Q. You testified yesterday about the handling of some business originating in the Orient and going over to Portland via the Portland & Asiatic, and then to San Francisco by the San Francisco lines. Was that business of considerable volume, or small?

A. Very small.

Q. Practically trifling?

A. Well, it is practically nothing, except some shipper in the Orient may at some time route his freight that way and we take it.

Q. It is not a traffic of any consequence, really?

A. No, sir. It is not a physical way to ship the business, when we have as many steamers coming into San Francisco; it is an unreasonable way to ship business under those circumstances. Not only that, but our rates in competition with the Dollar Line and the Standard Oil Company's steamers to San Francisco at the present time are very low, and then the trans-ship to San Francisco again is practically not remunerative at the present rates that prevail.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Schwerin, you have spoken of the losses in the operation of the Portland & Asiatic. I understood you to say the Pacific Mail sustained a loss of half a million dollars this last year?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the capital stock of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company?

A. $20,000,000.

Q. Does it pay any dividends?

A. Indirectly.

2809 Q. How?

A. Paid for the "Siberia" and "Korea" out of earnings.

Q. How long ago?

A. Just finished up paying for them this last year. It would run into some $1,300,000 in the last four years, I think.

Q. Now, Mr. Lovett asked you if the rental that you paid for the "Mongolia" and "Manchuria" was fair, and you stated it was fair?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who pays the insurance and taxes on those boats? Does the Pacific Mail pay it or the lessor?

A. Insurance is taken out in the name of the Pacific Mail, E. H. Harriman beneficiary, as I remember it.

Q. Who pays the premium?

A. The premium is paid out of this $30,000 which we send on to New York.

Q. That is what I want to know.

A. I suppose so.

Q. The Pacific Mail does not pay the insurance premium?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who pays the taxes on the boat?
A. Mr. Mahl, I suppose.
Q. Is that paid by the Pacific Mail?
A. No, sir.
Q. Is it paid by the owner?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you happen to know what the taxes and insurance amount to, approximately?
A. The legislature of the state of New York, by an act to promote American shipping, in the foreign trade, collects no taxes upon an American bottom in the foreign trade.
Q. So there are no taxes?
A. No, sir.
Q. Do you happen to know what the insurance amounts to per annum?
2810 A. No, sir, but they are insured for nearly four millions of dollars.
Q. Do you know what the premium amounts to—you mean the two boats together are insured for about four million dollars?
A. Yes, sir, and it is pretty nearly three per cent.
Q. About $120,000?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The aggregate rental, or what you have to pay is $720,000 a year for the two boats?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And out of that are there any fixed charges, aside from the $120,000 for insurance?
A. The owners pay for all the repairs and all the maintenance of the ships.
Q. They pay for all the repairs?
A. Yes, sir, all the maintenance of the ships, all the upkeeps and outfit, and all the renewals.
Q. Do you happen to know what that originally amounts to, in percentage to the value of the ships?
A. No, sir, I do not; I know Mr. Harriman told me they had not made very much money on the ships.
Q. You were saying that the Portland and Asiatic cannot compete with San Francisco on business originating on the Atlantic seaboard. How is it with business in the Orient and destined to eastern points in the United States?
A. It is the same difficulty here. Kobe is one of our principal ports, and sometimes in the port of Kobe there are four different lines of express steamers, and we have a pretty hard time getting any freight on a tramp steamer against four express steamers, for instance, the "Minnesota" might be there and the "Fremont" might be there, and the Canadian express steamer in there, and perhaps one of our express steamers in there.
2811 Q. I noticed the other day, Mr. Schwerin, when we were in Portland, an item about this ship that you spoke about, being stuck in the ice?

A. Yes, sir; the "Arragonia."

Q. And it gave a statement of the tonnage, the commodities on board of her. There were 7000 tons, were there not?

A. I don't remember just what was on the "Arragonia," but the newspaper report is absolutely misleading, Mr. Severance, because we have had the "Manchuria" and "Mongolia" go out reported with 17,000 to 18,000 tons of freight in them when we have not more than 3,000.

Q. I don't know anything about that.

A. I would be very glad to furnish you with the inward manifest of the "Arragonia."

Q. As a matter of fact, you do bring back from the Orient considerable portions of merchandise on the Portland & Asiatic boats, do you not?

A. Yes, sir, we bring back some, but we don't bring back anything like full cargoes.

Q. Do you bring back full cargoes on the Pacific Mail boats?

A. Sometimes.

Q. Do you usually?

A. At certain periods of the year, yes, sir.

Q. Do your agents over there in the Orient work equally hard for all the boats they represent?

A. Those are our instructions.

Q. That is, you instruct them to compete on behalf of the Portland line with yourself acting for the Pacific Mail, do you, as actively as they can?

A. No, sir.

Q. What are your instructions in that regard?

2812 A. I will tell you. There is a certain class of freight that we can get by tramp steamers, that moves by tramp steamers. We can't get silk, or silk piece goods, or high-grade curios, for the tramp steamers; they all move by the express steamers. But we will work just as hard for the Portland and Asiatic line for the matting and teas, and for general curios, as we will for the San Francisco line. Those are our instructions. For instance, we may have a steamer on the berth now, and then there may be an interval when there will be no steamer on the berth. Shippers in the Orient will almost invariably ship by the first steamer, and they will give the preference to the better steamer.

Q. Then, as I understand it——

A. (Cont'g) Then again——

Q. Pardon me. I thought you had finished.

A. (Cont'g) Then again, where freights control in the East, we try to solicit freight in this country by the Portland and Asiatic line.

Q. Do the Portland and Asiatic Steamship Company have agents in the east?

A. Yes, sir, Mr. Ten Broeck.

Q. In New York City?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You solicit, your agents in the Orient solicit just as actively for the Portland and Asiatic as they do for the Pacific Mail, and the Occidental and Oriental, do they?

A. Yes, sir, or the T. K. E.

Q. And the agents are the same?

A. Yes, sir; that is, the Pacific Mail Steamship Company is the agent in the Orient for the Portland and Asiatic.

Q. Yes, I understand.

2813 A. And we get a commission, we transact the business of the Portland and Asiatic, and they pay us a regular commercial commission; the same as we pay any commercial house that transacts the business for us.

Q. Suppose a Pacific Mail ship is in port at an Oriental port at the same time with a ship of the Portland & Asiatic. How do your agents distribute the cargo between those two, the cargo that they have accumulated to ship to this country?

A. They don't distribute it. For instance, the ships may be in the port of Hong Kong. If we allowed the agent in liners we will say he will go to Kobe and have no space, and go to Yokohama and have no space.

Q. Let us imagine they are both at Yokohama, the last port of call.

A. Before the ships arrive there, the agents have been engaging space. The San Francisco line might not have more than 200 tons of space alloted to Yokohama, and the Portland & Asiatic steamer might have 550 tons of space available for Yokohama. Our agent will go out and try to get all the freight he can to fill up the 200 tons of space on the San Francisco steamer, and what he can for the Portland & Asiatic steamer.

Q. That is, you give the Portland & Asiatic steamer what the Pacific Mail steamer cannot carry. That is the idea, is it?

A. No, sir.

Q. That is what you said just now.

A. You asked me a question involving a specific case. I say they go out and take all the freight they can get. If the shipper de-

2814 clined to ship the 200 tons on the San Francisco steamer, and said he wanted to ship on the P. & A. steamer, it would go on the P. & A. steamer.

Q. I understand, but the first duty of the Pacific Mail agents over there is to load the Pacific Mail steamers, because that is a more important branch of your business than the Portland & Asiatic line?

A. I can only say, Mr. Severance, that the agents have no instructions of that kind.

Q. I thought from your statement just now that they did.

A. No, sir. That is merely a physical way of explaining to you when you take the port of Yokohama, our ships go into Yokohama in the busy season of the year jammed for freight.

Q. Do I understand it that it is to be left to the discretion of your agents in the Orient, as far as unrouted traffic is concerned, as to which way they will send it?

A. The agent must use his own discretion to get the ships unloaded, and get as much competitive freight as he can get hold of.

Q. That is, competitive as between your lines and outside lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. There is no competition between the Portland & Asiatic, the Occidental & Oriental, the Pacific Mail, and the Japanese line, controlled by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, but they are all four lines competing against the Great Northern and Canadian Pacific and other lines?

A. Well, you might describe it that way.

Q. That is about right?

A. About right, yes, sir.

Q. Do the Pacific Mail take shipments from the Orient for Los Angeles, the port of San Pedro?

A. Yes, sir.

2815 Q. How are they delivered? How are shipments for Los Angeles delivered? Are they transhipped at San Francisco?

A. Transhipped by the Pacific Coast Steamship Company.

Q. You were asked by the Commissioner, and also by Judge Lovett, with reference to these conversations with Mr. Paul Morton concerning the San Diego line. In 1902, there was an investigation in Chicago—it was January, 1902, five years ago and Mr. Stubbs, Mr. J. C. Stubbs, gave testimony there. He was asked about this same matter, and I would like to see if your recollection corresponds with what Mr. Stubbs testifies to. Mr. Stubbs was asked with reference to all-rail shipments from California, orange shipments, and the maintenance of rates, and about a certain arrangement between Mr. Morton and Mr. Stubbs.

Mr. LOVETT. From what page are you reading, or about to read?

Mr. SEVERANCE. Page 24 of the record. Then the testimony is as follows:

"Mr. DAY. Is there not an understanding regarding the percentage of the transpacific traffic that the Atchison shall have or take?

"Mr. STUBBS. No, sir. The Atchison has run its own lines. Its own steamers.

"Mr. DAY. Where?

"Mr. STUBBS. From San Diego.

"Mr. DAY. Is it running now?

"Mr. STUBBS. I don't know whether they are running now or not.

2816 "Mr. DAY. Is there any arrangement that the line shall be abandoned?

"Mr. STUBBS. There is an understanding that after the 1st day of April, I will not be sure about the 1st day of April, I believe that the Santa Fe will use the transpacific lines from San Francisco.

"Mr. DAY. Is that what is popularly known as the Pacific Mail?

"Mr. STUBBS. That is one of them.

"Mr. DAY. What was the consideration for that proposal? How was the Atchison to profit or benefit by them?

"Mr. STUBBS. I think the understanding is that it will receive a fair share of the traffic from those steamers.

"Mr. DAY. Is that an arrangement between the Southern Pacific railroad officials or the Union Pacific Railroad officials and the Atchison?

"Mr. STUBBS. I don't think there is any agreement.

"Mr. DAY. Or understanding; is it an agreement between the steamship company and the railroad, or all three?

"Mr. STUBBS. I don't think there is anything more than the expectation of that result.

"Mr. DAY. There has been no promise?

"Mr. STUBBS. I think there has been no complete promise.

"Mr. DAY. Well, what propositions were made?

"Mr. STUBBS. Well, propositions were made to the effect that if you work for the San Francisco lines, you get a fair share of the traffic.

"Mr. DAY. That they will abandon the San Diego part?

2817 "Mr. STUBBS. It would not be stated that way, in my judgment. It would be stated, 'If you work in connection with our lines from San Francisco, we will see that you get a fair share of the business.'

"Mr. DAY. What steamship line at San Diego is the Atchison connected with?

"Mr. STUBBS. I don't recall the name of the line."

Does that correspond with your recollection of the transaction and the negotiations?

WITNESS. Well, I have never known Mr. Stubbs to have this discussion that he spoke about there. I was not present at the time.

Q. You would not undertake to say, would you, that Mr. Stubbs has not correctly stated the suggestions that were made to the Santa Fe Company?

A. No, sir, I could not state as to the correctness of that statement.

Q. All you know about it is as to your talk with Mr. Morton?

A. And from time to time I have talked generally on the question.

Q. Talked with Mr. Stubbs?

A. Talked to Mr. Stubbs and talked to Mr. Sproule.

Q. Did you talk with Mr. Stubbs and Mr. Sproule about the desirability of getting the Atchison to quit San Diego, and bring their stuff here?

A. Naturally. They were connecting carriers of ours.

Q. You were asked this question by Judge Lovett, and I was a little surprised at your answer. Judge Lovett asked you

2818 whether the Southern Pacific had any reason to object to your giving traffic to the Santa Fe, and you said "No." Do you mean that sir, that the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, carrying freight east from San Francisco, has no reason to object to your handing traffic over to the Santa Fe, "no object in objection"—that is the way the question read, I think?

A. Perhaps I may not have understood Judge Lovett's question just as you put it now. But I have always recognized my right as manager of the Pacific Mail and the affiliated San Francisco lines, to work those lines in every way that I know how for the benefit of San Francisco, and for the individual lines, and that I had a right to go to the Santa Fe and to ask the Santa Fe to make an arrangement with me by which they would give me a larger share of their through freight, in return for which I could turn any or all of the business of our lines over to the Santa Fe. I have always believed I had that right.

Q. That is what you meant, then, by that answer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did not mean by that that the Southern Pacific would not have less traffic if you gave it to the Santa Fe? They would, would they not?

A. Well, naturally, if the Southern Pacific Company had had the entire traffic that came in, and a part of it were given to the Santa Fe, they would lose traffic. But we felt that we were building up this traffic all the time. There is a larger volume of traffic coming in, and the competition for outward traffic was very fierce, and we wanted the entire assistance of the Santa Fe if we could get them to help us through this port.

Q. You do not want us——

2819 A. (Int'g.) I do not recognize the railroad at all, and do not consider the railroad at all.

Q. Mr. Schwerin, you do not want the Oriental traffic coming to California or going from California to the Orient to be divided between two ports, but you want to bring it all to San Francisco?

A. Naturally. My interests lie in the port of San Francisco.

Q. Do you operate in connection with the Hawaiian Line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You take shipments from here and take them up to Portland?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And also the Panama route. That is all.

Mr. LOVETT. We have no further questions.

By Comr. LANE:

Q. Mr. Schwerin, you understand there is a difference between the statement as made by Mr. Stubbs and the statement as made by you this morning in relation to the reason for abandoning the San Diego line across the Pacific?

A. No, sir, I don't think so. As I understand Mr. Severance's question, it was whether I had previous knowledge of that understanding that Mr. Stubbs may have stated as taking place between him and the Santa Fe officers.

Q. As I understand Mr. Severance, he asked if you knew whether that was a correct statement as made by Mr. Stubbs?

A. I don't know what conversation Mr. Stubbs may have had with any officers in relation to this question, except with myself.

2820 Q. Except yourself?

A. I can't remember, Mr. Lane, that Mr. Stubbs and myself were present at any meeting with Santa Fe officers where this question was seriously considered.

Q. You did not know that Mr. Stubbs was carrying on negotiations with the Santa Fe Railroad for the abandonment of its steamship line across the water?

A. No, sir.

Q. And making an arrangement by which that business was to be diverted from San Diego to San Francisco, and go over your lines to the Orient?

A. No, sir.

Mr. DUNNE. I don't think Mr. Stubbs' testimony will bear that construction, your Honor.

Comr. LANE. I understood that that was Mr. Schwerin's statement, that he knew nothing about any transaction, anything in the way of a negotiation looking towards the divergence of this traffic, until after the San Diego line had been abandoned. Now, then, I understand Mr. Stubbs' statement to be that there were negotiations of that kind.

Mr. DUNNE. I don't understand Mr. Stubbs' testimony to mean that this general traffic arrangement between the Santa Fe and Pacific Mail Steamship Company was made as a result of and in transpacific connection out of San Diego. I understood the historical fact to be that that transpacific connection had ceased because it was financially unprofitable, and that it was after that and independently of that that the general traffic arrangement between the Pacific Mail Company and the Santa Fe was entered into.

Comr. LANE. I may have misunderstood the statement of Mr. Stubbs as read by Mr. Severance from Mr. Stubbs' testi-2821 mony. Will you kindly read that?

Mr. SEVERANCE. I wish Judge Lovett would kindly read it for me, my voice is so bad, if you don't mind, Judge Lovett.

Mr. LOVETT. I will read it. I understood also Mr. Schwerin to testify that he had frequently solicited this business from Mr. Morton during the existence of that line.

Comr. LANE. So I understood.

Mr. LOVETT. But that no arrangement was made until after that line was discontinued.

Comr. LANE. Yes. Now, if Mr. Stubbs' statement, as I understand it, is correct, Mr. Stubbs was negotiating for the abandonment of the steamship line and transfer of the traffic to the Pacific Mail, over which Mr. Schwerin is in absolute control.

Mr. LOVETT. I will read the statement, your Honor.

"Mr. DAY. Is there not an understanding regarding the percentage of the transpacific traffic that the Atchison shall have or take?

"Mr. STUBBS. No, sir. The Atchison has run its own lines, its own steamers.

"Mr. DAY. Where?

"Mr. STUBBS. From San Diego.

"Mr. DAY. Is it running now?

"Mr. STUBBS. I don't know whether they are running now or not.

"Mr. DAY. Is there any agreement that the line shall be abandoned?

"Mr. STUBBS. There is an understanding that after the 2822 1st day of April, I will not be sure about the 1st of April, I believe"——

Q. Right there. Mr. Schwerin, do you know of or were you a party to that understanding relating to the 1st day of April?

Mr. SEVERANCE. That is 1902.

Q. (Cont'g) 1902.

A. I can't recollect of having any definite talk with Mr. Morton in relation to the operation of our lines positively, until after the abandonment of the California & Oriental line.

Q. You do not know that there was an arrangement, not a contract, but an arrangement or a gentlemen's understanding, that after the 1st day of April, 1902, there should be a transfer of their business to you?

A. I will frankly state that my impression is that there was an interregnum, that the California & Oriental line had practically gone out of business when Morton told me "Well, we will give you some of the business." But I want to say that this had been talked over (you understand unofficially) for all of the two or three years that the California & Oriental line had been running.

Mr. LOVETT. Does your Honor desire the rest of this read?

Comr. LANE. Yes. I want to see how far Mr. Stubbs went.

Mr. LOVETT. I did not finish the last answer of Mr. Stubbs. I will repeat it:

"Mr. STUBBS. There is an understanding that after the 1st day of April, I will not be sure about the 1st day of April, I believe that the Santa Fe will use the transpacific lines from San Francisco.

2823 "Mr. DAY. Is that what is popularly known as the Pacific Mail?

"Mr. STUBBS. That is one of them.

"Mr. DAY. What was the consideration of that proposal. How was the Atchison to benefit or profit by that?

"Mr. STUBBS. I think the understanding is that it will receive a fair share of the traffic from those steamers.

"Mr. DAY. Is that an agreement between the Southern Pacific railroad officials, or the Union Pacific railroad officials and the Atchison?

"Mr. STUBBS. I don't think there is any agreement.

"Mr. DAY. Or understanding; is it an agreement between the steamship company and the railroads, or all three?

"Mr. STUBBS. I don't think there is anything more than the expectation of that result.

"Mr. DAY. There has been no promise?

"Mr. STUBBS. I think there has been no completed promise."

Comr. LANE. "No completer promise" is the language.

Mr. LOVETT. (contg.) "Mr. DAY. Well, what propositions were made?

"Mr. STUBBS. Well, propositions were made to the effect that if you work for the San Francisco line, you get a fair share of the traffic.

"Mr. DAY. That they will abandon the San Diego part?

"Mr. STUBBS. It would not be stated in that way, in my judgment. It would be stated, 'If you work in connection with our lines
2824 from San Francisco, we will see that you get a fair share of the business.'

"Mr. DAY. What steamship line at San Diego is the Atchison with?

"Mr. STUBBS. I don't recall the name of the line.

"Mr. DAY. Is there not an agreement regarding the division of the"——

Q. That is all there is that I wanted to hear. Thank you. That account differs from your statement to the Commission, does it not, as to there being an agreement or understanding that the Santa Fe should have a proportion of the business?

A. From what Mr. Stubbs says there, taking his testimony there, it seems that he had discussed that thing with the Santa Fe in relation to a proposition of that business.

Q. Was he not trenching on your preserve when he was negotiating for transpacific business?

A. Well, I have asked Mr. Stubbs to help me in a great many things.

Q. But you did not ask him in that matter?

A. In this? I have discussed that question with Mr. Stubbs, as to our advisability of handling the Santa Fe traffic for the benefit of the steamship line, a great many times, and I have discussed with the other officials of the Southern Pacific Company, in regard to the port of San Francisco, building up the port of San Francisco, that is, the steamship connections. You understand, Mr. Lane, the more steamers that can be gotten out at the port of San Francisco and an increasing of the importance of the port of San Francisco, will naturally increase the volume of the tonnage that moves by 2825 the port of San Francisco, and I look to the question of having the rail connection; in fact I have asked the Southern Pacific to help me in that direction, to help me to get the Santa Fe to make a traffic arrangement with us.

Q. Is it in furtherance, or was it in furtherance of any negotiations which you had with Mr. Stubbs, that this agreement was had?

A. I have no doubt Mr. Stubbs may have discussed the thing with the Santa Fe people—must undoubtedly have done so.

Mr. DUNNE. Mr. Schwerin, do you understand that there is anything in this testimony that has been read here of Mr. Stubbs' statements, which goes to the point that he made this understanding?

WITNESS. No, sir, I do not.

Mr. DUNNE. Do you understand this to be any more than a suggestion that he knows as a matter of history, that there was some such arrangement, or result, or expectation?

WITNESS. I so understand it, the way it was read, yes, sir.

Mr. DUNNE. By the way, Mr. Schwerin, do you know whether the date here specified by Mr. Stubbs was before or after the abandonment by the Santa Fe of its transpacific water connection at San Diego?

WITNESS. What was the date, please, that he specified there?

Mr. DUNNE. The date he specified is April, 1902.

Mr. SEVERANCE. That is the time they were to begin the work at San Francisco on the transpacific line?

Mr. DUNNE. Yes. He says here he is not certain about
2826 the date, but assuming provisionally that that was the date, do you happen to know whether or not at that point of time the Santa Fe had abandoned its connection with the water carrier out of San Diego?

WITNESS. Well, I would not like to state on that. I am not positive of the exact date that they abandoned that line.

Mr. DUNNE. At all events, Mr. Schwerin, independently of this whole question of abandonment, the Santa Fe had a connection with a water carrier at San Diego and you had been seeking yourself, prior to the abandonment of the connection, to have the Santa Fe establish joint traffic relations with you. Was that not so?

WITNESS. Yes, sir, during the entire time, practically—well, not the entire time, but practically after the first year of the operation of the California & Oriental.

Mr. DUNNE. As connecting carriers?

WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Q. May I ask, Mr. Schwerin, if Mr. Stubbs did not do this, and you didn't do it, who did it? Now, as I understand Mr. Dunne's question, it is based upon the implication that Mr. Stubbs did not carry out that arrangement, and you say you did not. Now then, is there anybody in authority, anybody with authority from you who could carry it out?

A. I don't think I have said I didn't carry out that arrangement, Mr. Lane.

Q. You have mentioned the arrangement, and——

A. (Int'g.) You mean in regard to these negotiations?

2827 Q. At the time that Mr. Stubbs testifies to; at the time that he refers to prior to the 1st day of April, 1904.

Mr. SEVERANCE. 1902, your Honor.

Q. 1902, yes.

A. I can only answer that question by saying that that was a matter of general discussion all along the line in relation to our getting control of the Santa Fe outward tonnage.

Q. The whole thing amounts to this: that there was an understanding and that Mr. Stubbs knew about it, and I want to know by whom it was done. Mr. Stubbs, as I understand him, didn't do it, and as I understand you, you didn't do it. Now I would like to know just who did.

A. The first information I had upon the subject was that the Santa Fe—and Mr. Paul Morton told me "Well, I guess we are going to give you some business" in New York, and I asked him when, "Well," he said, "I don't know when." I don't remember the date of this conversation, but he said, "We have thought the whole thing over, and we are not going to put on a line of our own, and we will give you the business." Now, we had previously discussed many times before that in relation to a division of the traffic outward and homeward. So I understood that when the first arrangement was made in regard to the division of the traffic I understood from Mr. Sproule that the Santa Fe had accepted my proposition, and the date of that I am unable to state—had accepted my proposition that we were to reserve a certain amount of our tonnage space for the outward Santa Fe traffic, and we were to give them in the neighborhood of 25 per cent of the homeward traffic.

2828 Comr. LANE. I think that is all.

Mr. DUNNE. I would like to ask this question of Mr. Schwerin: This matter had been developing and progressing, this question of joint traffic relations between your company and the Santa Fe, throughout quite a period of time had it not?

WITNESS. Yes, sir, it was all mixed up, and it is absolutely impossible for me to state now how the thing culminated in an agreement.

Mr. DUNNE. I was just going to put that question to you, if it would not be extremely difficult to reduce the proposition to its concrete elements?

Comr. LANE. It manifestly is, Mr. Dunne. There isn't anybody that appears to know exactly how it was done.

Mr. DUNNE. I want your Honor to appreciate that we want to give you all the information that we can.

Comr. LANE. I appreciate that.

Mr. DUNNE. That this thing had been going on a long time, backwards and forwards, to and fro, and to take it and give it concrete dimensions and proportions and limitations is very difficult to do, and that is true of a great deal of business that this witness does, or any other man of large affairs.

Comr. LANE. Are there any further questions to be asked of Mr. Schwerin?

Mr. DUNNE. That is all, Mr. Schwerin.

Mr. LOVETT. Counsel for the defendants objects to the questions and answers as read and as above set forth, beginning with 2829 the question, "Do you recall any conference between the officials," etc., on page 2732, in reference to the abandonment by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Company of the relations with the said line of steamships operating between San Diego and Asiatic ports, as testified to by said witness, upon the ground that said questions and answers are irrelevant to the issues made by the pleadings in this case.

It is understood that this objection may apply to all questions involving the said matter without repeating the same as to each question.

The hearing was then adjourned until the morning of Tuesday, March 16, 1909, at the office of the United States Marshal, in the Federal Building, in the City of Chicago, Illinois.

2830 UNITED STATES MARSHAL'S OFFICE,
FEDERAL BUILDING, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS,
Tuesday, March 16, 1909, 10.30 A. M.

Counsel for the respective parties appeared before the Special Examiner, Hon. Sylvester G. Williams, at the above time and place, pursuant to adjournment, and thereupon proceeded to room 653, Federal Building, where the hearing was resumed.

Present: On behalf of the Complainant, Mr. C. A. Severance and Mr. G. E. Husted; on behalf of the Defendants, Mr. R. S. Lovett.

The EXAMINER. Are you ready to proceed, Mr Severance?

Mr. SEVERANCE. All ready.

(Papers marked Complainant's Exhibits 117 and 118 and offered in evidence. Afterwards withdrawn as being duplicates of Complainant's Exhibits 81–J and 81–K.)

The EXAMINER. Call your first witness.

2831 J. A. WENTZ,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE.

Q. Mr. Wentz, where do you live?
A. I live in this city.
Q. In Chicago?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You are not in business at present, are you?
A. No, sir.
Q. What has been your business?
A. I have been a railroad man all my life.

Q. With what railroads have you been connected, and in what capacities, commencing at the end and stating it backward?

A. I served the Rock Island Railroad in Chicago as commercial agent for fifteen years, nearly; and previous to that——

Q. When did you go out of that service?

A. The first of January, 1908.

Q. Go ahead.

A. Previous to that I served them as general agent at Kansas City, for thirteen years.

Q. Did you have railroad experience prior to that time?

A. A year previous to commencing with the Rock Island in Kansas City I was in business for myself. Previous to that I was with the Cairo & St. Louis Railroad, as general freight and passenger agent, four years.

Q. During the time that you were the commercial agent of the Rock Island in Chicago, were you engaged in soliciting coast business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how did the business that you were able to secure, move?

A. Generally, at first, before the Rock Island built
2832 their extension from the Missouri river west, it moved via Union Pacific from Missouri river, and sometimes by the Northern Pacific and Great Northern. Those were our principal outlets for Pacific coast business.

Q. Then, when you built west of the river how did it move?

A. We figured to get the long haul as much as possible by way of El Paso (the line was extended to El Paso) and we worked that route as a preference. Frequently we were obliged to give up business of that character to the Union Pacific at Omaha, and some times the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe after they were built through.

Q. Was your line built to Denver before it was to El Paso?

A. Yes, sir. We worked Denver largely before we were built to El Paso. I overlooked that.

Q. When you secured coast traffic moving by Denver, how did it go on to the coast?

A. Well, by the Rio Grandes and also the Union Pacific. We exchanged a great deal of business at Denver with the Union Pacific as well as with the Rio Grande roads.

Q. And from Ogden, of course it all went over the Southern Pacific?

A. Southern Pacific from Ogden, yes, sir,—all of it.

Q. How was it on business to Portland, Oregon?

A. We worked that most any old way we could. Some times Great Northern and Northern Pacific by way of St. Paul, and Union Pacific by way of Ogden, Oregon Short Line.

Q. Did business to Portland move by way of the Southern Pacific and Sacramento?

A. I believe they had a route there called the Shasta Route,
2833 on which we took quite a little business to Portland.

Q. That would move from Ogden to Sacramento and then south?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or to Roseville Junction?

A. I believe so, yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the time when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate commercial agencies here in Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were the heads of those agencies?

A. Mr. Neimyer represented the Southern Pacific, and Mr. W. H. Knight represented the Union Pacific.

Q. Were those gentlemen active in soliciting coast business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Personally and through their soliciting agents?

A. And through their solicitors, yes, sir.

Q. Which way did Mr. Neimyer endeavor to send his business to the coast? What was his preferential route?

A. Well, I don't know. Sometimes I thought the Southern Pacific by way of New Orleans, and some times I thought the other way. I know the business moved both ways.

Q. How did the Southern Pacific by way of New Orleans reach Chicago—over what lines?

A. Out of Chicago going to the coast?

Q. Yes, or coming back, either one.

A. The Illinois Central, generally.

Q. That route was actively worked for business both ways, wasn't it?

A. Why, I thought so, yes, sir.

Q. You felt it in your business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You said that after the Rock Island was extended to El Paso, you solicited business that way. Do you remember what 2834 year that was?

A. No, sir; I can not recall it now. I can't recall the date.

Q. How did Mr. Knight solicit Pacific coast business? By the Union Pacific?

A. He figured to get the business by the Union Pacific, Omaha to Odgen generally. That is my recollection.

Q. How did he work the Portland business?

A. I think he worked the Oregon Short Line, but I won't be certain. Anyway, he sought to get the business over the Union Pacific.

Q. Now, how was this competition for business between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific, the coast business? Was it an active competition? Were these gentlemen active in their solicitation?

A. Why, I thought so. We lost business quite frequently, I know. I recall losing business, that was taken from us by way of New Orleans. Of course they got a haul on any of it in those days, either from Ogden or from New Orleans.

Q. Do you remember when the offices here were consolidated?
A. No, sir, I can't recall the date.
Q. You remember the fact?
A. Yes, sir, very well.
Q. A change took place in the effort to work coast business on the part of Mr. Neimyer after that change?
A. I can't say.
Q. You don't know?
A. I can't say; no, sir.
Q. When the offices were consolidated, Mr. Neimyer became agent of both lines, did he?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you have any recollection of a fast freight train run by the Illinois Central to New Orleans on which coast business moved?
A. Why, I remember that in the soliciting of business they 2835 used that as an inducement to ship that way. I forget now whether it was the Union Pacific solicitors that especially mentioned that or the Illinois Central.
Q. You mean the Southern Pacific?
A. I mean the Southern Pacific, yes, sir.
Q. You remember such a train existing, do you not?
A. It was so reported to me.
Q. It was claimed to exist, at any rate?
A. Yes.
Q. What class of commodities moved to the coast by these different routes, from Chicago territory? All classes?
A. All classes, I should say. I remember especially one time some large shipments of furniture that were moving, and, if I remember right, we lost those shipments or some of them. Some furniture shipments I recall one of my solicitors reporting to me that he could not get. They were pledged to the Southern Pacific.
Q. Do you remember anything about the kinds of equipment that these different lines had? I am speaking now of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, and referring particularly to the size of freight cars and that sort of thing. Was there any rivalry in that regard?
A. I do not remember now just what their equipment consisted of. I think they were right up to date, though, with large cars for furniture, the same as all other roads.
Q. In soliciting furniture shipments, is it an important item to be able to furnish large equipment?
A. Oh, yes, sir.
Q. Do you remember how many years ago the furniture car first came in vogue?
A. No, I do not. If I were going to guess roughly I would say about 15 or 20 years.
2836 Q. Do you remember what trans-continental lines first had them?
A. No, I do not.

Q. Assuming that business moves on a parity of rates, what are the methods employed by soliciting agents in securing traffic?

A. Competitive traffic is secured largely on personality, and of course the time, and the prompt adjustment of claims is a consideration, largely.

Q. What is your opinion as to the necessity of railroads maintaining commercial agencies, if they are going to compete for traffic in competitive territory?

A. I imagine if they were all done away with, one road would be as well off as another.

Q. Suppose they were not all done away with, but part of them were?

A. The road which kept the solicitors on would get the greater portion of the business, all other things being equal. There is no doubt of that.

Q. Is it your opinion that soliciting agents through their efforts do secure business for their lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you think that they are useful, or otherwise, to shippers in the service they can perform for them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What are the services that soliciting agents can properly perform for shippers?

A. They can look after their interests in a great many ways. Sometimes they want a particular tariff and the solicitors will wait on them and get it and carry it to them. And he will take an interest in the settlement of their claims, and so forth.

Q. Do they ever have anything to do with securing equipment?

2837 A. Yes, frequently; in helping to get the equipment set for the business.

Q. While you were at Kansas City, was the Southern Pacific in that field working coast business?

A. I don't remember of their having a representative in Kansas City.

Q. That is a good many years ago. I think they left the solicitation of that business to their connections.

A. Yes, sir. That was 15 or——

Q. 15 or 20 years ago?

A. 16 years ago. I left there in 1893.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Mr. Wentz, when was it that you ceased to solicit for the Rock Island?

A. The first of January, 1908.

Q. And you had been employed as solicitor here for the Rock Island how long before that?

A. About 15 years.

Q. Prior to that you acted for them in Kansas City?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For how long at Kansas City?

A. 13 years.

Q. How many lines were engaged in soliciting business for the Pacific coast during the time that you were engaged in business, in the territory where you solicited? Were not practically all of the lines leading westerly and northwesterly and southwesterly engaged in soliciting that business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you name the principal lines?

A. The C., B. & Q., the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, the Chicago & North Western, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, the Missouri Pacific, the Chicago & Alton, the Chicago Great Western. I don't know whether I have overlooked any or not.

2838 Q. You would not forget the Rock Island, would you?

A. Oh, no, sir.

Q. The Wabash?

A. Yes, I thought I mentioned the Wabash.

Q. The Missouri, Kansas & Texas?

A. Well, I don't know. I don't remember of their being very active on Pacific coast business.

Q. Didn't they work that business by way of their connections in Texas—El Paso?

A. They might have done so. I don't recall of any strong competition for that business.

Q. Doesn't the Iron Mountain work that business?

A. I think probably they did; I am not certain.

Q. Don't you know, Mr. Wentz, that that was an active competitor of the Rock Island as far as El Paso?

A. We did not consider them as any great competition on Pacific coast business.

Q. I mean, of course, the Iron Mountain in connection with the Texas & Pacific, by way of Texarkana and El Paso.

A. Yes, I know the route.

Q. You did not consider them a factor in the competition?

A. I don't think we ever had any trouble from that direction in the way of competition.

Q. And you do not recall the Missouri, Kansas & Texas as competing for that business or soliciting that business?

A. They might have done so. So far as soliciting business is concerned, solicitors solicit business wherever they have a tariff, and a great many of them are too anxious to work, as a rule, for tonnage instead of earnings.

2839 Q. Didn't all the lines that I have mentioned here and that you mentioned as engaged in this business, have tariffs for California business?

A. I don't recall whether the Pacific coast rate applied by way of the M., K. & T. or not, or the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern.

Q. But the Missouri Pacific, the Rock Island, the Burlington, the North-Western, the St. Paul, the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern, the Wabash, the Chicago & Alton—those lines at least were actively soliciting this California business, weren't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They are doing so still, are they not?

A. I believe so.

Q. They were as long as you were engaged in the business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Hasn't the Iron Mountain and the Texas & Pacific together, by way of Texarkana, the shortest line from this territory to El Paso?

A. I think not.

Q. Well, from St. Louis to El Paso?

A. Possibly. I don't know.

Q. Now, such business as the Rock Island secured for the Pacific coast, as I understood you to testify on direct examination, went originally to the Missouri river and was there turned over to the Missouri Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then it passed over what line to get to California?

A. Southern Pacific from Ogden.

Q. Then after the Rock Island was extended to Denver, it was there, I believe you testified, turned over either to the Union Pacific or the Rio Grande?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then over what line to California?

A. The Southern Pacific. The Southern Pacific was the 2840 outlet for all those three lines for a long time.

Q. What three lines do you mean?

A. Well, I mean the two lines. When I speak of the Rio Grandes I mean the Denver & Rio Grande and the Rio Grande Western. That is one route. I should have said two.

Q. The situation of the Burlington with reference to Pacific coast business was much the same as the Rock Island, wasn't it? It turned it over to the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is true of the Missouri Pacific?

A. Yes, sir; I believe so.

Q. And the outlet for all those lines—the Burlington, the Rock Island, the Missouri Pacific, the North-Western and the St. Paul—for Pacific coast business was by way of Ogden and the Southern Pacific, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir, generally so.

Q. Such business as the Rock Island took to El Paso, the outlet for that to California was over the Southern Pacific, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So, the Rock Island had two lines—one by way of El Paso and one by way of Denver.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you worked for both of those lines?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did it occur to you that you were working for competing lines?
A. No. Not at all.
Q. You tried to get it the way that——
A. We tried to get the longest haul possible, that which would give the best earnings, and that was generally by El Paso, after the road was built to El Paso. We frequently gave up business, however, at Omaha, even up to a late date—we were obliged to.

Q. Yes, but wherever you could work it so as to get the long 2841 haul, naturally you did that?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. The Southern Pacific did the same thing, as far as you observed, didn't it?
A. I think so.
Q. All railroads do that, don't they?
A. Yes, sir, that is the rule.
Q. The North-Western would deliver its Pacific coast business to the Union Pacific at Omaha, naturally, wouldn't it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. It has always had an agent here soliciting that business?
A. Yes, sir, by that route.
Q. And the Union Pacific soliciting business by the same route?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And the St. Paul has had solicitors here for the same business, except that it tried to carry it over its own rails to Omaha?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. All of the solicitation in this territory for California business, by the Rock Island, the Burlington, the Missouri Pacific, the St. Paul, the North-Western, the Chicago & Alton, inured ultimately to the benefit of the Southern Pacific, did it not, Mr. Wentz?
A. Yes, sir, on Pacific coast business.
Q. The shipments that you testified about as having gone by way of New Orleans, were for Los Angeles, weren't they?
A. I believe they were as a rule.
Q. Isn't it true that you never knew any to go that way from this territory for San Francisco?
A. No, sir.
Q. By way of New Orleans?
A. No, sir. I am inclined to think some did go to San Francisco.
Q. You are inclined to think so?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You know some went to Los Angeles?
A. Yes, sir.

2842 Q. You can not swear positively they went to San Francisco by that way, can you?

A. Well, I know they were in the field for that business. I can not say—I can not put my finger right now on any business they really got.

Q. Who was in the field for it?

A. The Southern Pacific people.

Q. Do you mean by that, that they were actively soliciting freight from here that way, or were like you—would not refuse any freight offered? Weren't they really working in this territory with you and with other western and southwestern lines, either by way of Ogden or by way of El Paso?

A. How is that question, please?

Q. Isn't it true that the agents of the Southern Pacific in this territory were working with you and other western and southwestern lines for the business by way of Ogden or El Paso rather than by way of New Orleans? Wasn't there active solicitation and co-operation with you and other soliciting agents in this territory, for the west and southwest?

A. I think they did work with us largely.

Q. Well, isn't it true that you never knew any solicitation by the Southern Pacific in this territory by way of New Orleans? I am not asking whether they had refused business that way, but isn't it true that they did not solicit it that way?

A. I was under the impression that they did solicit it. That is my recollection.

Q. That is your recollection?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whom do you recall as soliciting from this territory by way of New Orleans?

A. The Southern Pacific representatives.

2843 Q. Who?

A. Mr. Neimyer and his assistants.

Q. As soliciting by way of New Orleans?

A. I think they were.

Q. Will you be positive about that? Can you recall any instance?

A. I can't recall any instance right now. I know we regarded them as competitors for San Francisco business by way of New Orleans as strong as by way of Ogden, because it was a little longer route.

Q. You regarded all lines as competitors for that business, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In other words, don't you think there were probably as many as 50 different lines—I mean you could form lines by joint tariffs from this territory for California business?

A. Well, I don't think there were 50.

Q. There were a considerable number? Would you say 40?

A. Possibly so. 30 to 40 I should guess, counting all the lines that went in to make the different through routes. It would appear to me that there were 30 to 40, possibly.

2844 Q. You would consider the Chicago & Alton one of those lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you would consider, I suppose, the Houston & Texas Central from Denison down to Houston one of these lines?

A. Well, I do not remember of any competition for business that went down that way, by way of the H. & T. C.

Q. You would consider the Morgan railroad extending from New Orleans to Lafayette, Louisiana, one of those competing lines, would you not?

A. I never heard of the route being used on the Pacific coast business from here, although it might have been.

Q. You do not happen to know that that is one of the links in the main line of the Southern Pacific System, do you?

A. Oh, yes; I know it is.

Q. But taking all of these different lines, long and short, that participated in this transcontinental traffic, and solicited along with the other business, and taking the way by which these joint tariffs were laid out by the various companies, don't you think that there would be forty or fifty routes between Chicago and the Pacific coast?

A. I presume that number of routes might be made up by the tariffs; yes, sir. It depended altogether on how the tariff read.

Q. Were not most of them soliciting business more or less?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that went on up to the time as long as you were in business, did it not?

A. Yes, sir.

2845 Q. Did you ever send any business to California from this territory by way of Portland and boat down from Portland to San Francisco?

A. I do not think I ever worked any business that way.

Q. You never tried to work it that way?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever attempt to work any by way of El Paso and the Sunset Route to Portland?

A. I think we did.

Q. By way of El Paso and around that way to Portland?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you work it that way as against the short line by way of Denver?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why would you work it that way?

A. There might have been some reason for it on the part of the shipper wanting it to go that way. I believe the rates applied that way; I am not certain.

Q. You are not certain about that?

A. No, sir.

Q. I think you testified on your direct examination that you had moved some business to Portland by way of the Union Pacific and the Oregon Short Line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did I understand you to testify that you had moved any by way of Sacramento—that is, by way of the Southern Pacific to Sacramento—the Shasta route?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did that move?

A. It moved by way of Sacramento and the Shasta route.

Q. Why did you move it that way, as against the Denver and the Union Pacific and Short Line?

A. As a rule it did not go that way at my direction. Occasionally a shipper would want to use that route, for some reason or other, and we would take it that way if he expressed a preference

2846 for it.

Q. It was rather unusual though, was it not?

A. Yes, sir. We did not do any great volume of business that way.

Q. Haven't you in mind business going to Oregon and points south of Portland, rather than Portland, for that business?

A. No, sir; we handled Portland business that way.

Q. You are sure you handled Portland business that way?

A. I am quite certain of it.

Q. But your recollection is that it was not large?

A. Are you speaking of the Shasta route?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, yes; that was very light compared with the whole volume; yes, sir.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. On business moving to Portland over any of the lines leading up to Ogden, the Southern Pacific could not participate in that business, unless it went by the Shasta route, could it?

A. No, sir.

Q. I am speaking of the time when the Southern Pacific-Union Pacific were separate entirely and distinct.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were the Southern Pacific representatives here in the field for Portland business, endeavoring to secure the routing of business by the Shasta route in connection with the lines leading east from Ogden?

A. Yes, sir; that is my recollection.

2847 Q. Judge Lovett was drawing out from you the fact that there are in existence a great many soliciting agents at the present time. Do you know of any soliciting agents who have been taken out of the Chicago territory, with the exception of—I do not know whether you can say the Southern Pacific or the Union Pacific agents were taken out; it is united in one man now.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know of any other cases of that kind, as to lines that were formerly competing with each other?

A. Well, I was a victim myself of a combination of that kind.

Q. That was the Frisco and the——

A. The Frisco and the Rock Island.

Q. I was going to ask you about that; that is the reason I brought it up. That was the Frisco and the Rock Island?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were those lines competing for coast business before you became the victim?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way did the Frisco business move?

A. I do not know just how active they were on Pacific coast business, but if they got any—and they did, of course, probably—what they got went by way of St. Louis, by the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, and then the Frisco.

Q. To what point?

A. I forget their junction with the Southern Pacific. The Southern Pacific would naturally be the outlet.

Q. Was that business actively competed for by the Frisco?

A. Well, I cannot say how active they were on Pacific coast business.

2948 Q. You were actively working for Pacific coast business?

A. Yes, sir; I was after it all the while.

Q. Outside of the union of those offices—the Frisco and the Rock Island, and the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific—do you know of any others here? As to lines that had been competing lines; not lines that were connecting lines.

A. I cannot recall any other cases.

Q. The agents of all these connecting lines, lines leading up to the transcontinental lines, work with the agents of the transcontinental lines, do they not?

A. Generally, yes, sir.

Q. Has that not always been so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, do the agents of the transcontinental lines work for business through the connecting lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how do they do that—by personal solicitation of the agents of the connecting lines? For instance, take a line like the Rock Island, which had a connection, as you stated, with the Rio Grande, and thence with the Southern Pacific to the coast, also a connection at El Paso, a connection at Omaha; would the agents of those various lines work with you to secure the routing of traffic that you secured over these lines?

A. Quite commonly, yes, sir.

Q. Quite commonly?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did Mr. Knight work with you to get business from you for his line, when he was the agent?

A. Somewhat.

Q. And Mr. Neimyer, to get business for his line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated that even since you have had the long lines
2849 leading out toward the coast you have had to give up—I think your language was you had to give up some—were compelled to give up some business at Omaha. What did you refer to by that answer to Judge Lovett?

A. Well, frequently the shipper would want to favor the Union Pacific, and we would not, in such cases, be too persistent on our own routes.

Q. Would that be cases where the Union Pacific people had been soliciting the business?

A. Yes, sir; I imagine so.

Q. After the common control of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, was there any change, as far as you observed, in the movement of eastbound traffic coming through Ogden; that is as between the movement east over the Union Pacific or over your connections by Denver?

A. Well, I cannot say whether there was any change in that regard. Of course I knew that they preferred the route by way of Omaha to get the entire——

Q. Was there any change in the volume of traffic coming to you from the coast, by reason of that preference?

A. Coming from the coast?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I cannot say.

Q. You don't know?

A. No.

Q. Judge Lovett has asked you whether the Pacific coast business that was solicited by New Orleans by the Southern Pacific was not destined to Los Angeles. Was the Union Pacific soliciting business at Los Angeles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Actively, weren't they?

A. Oh, yes. They had a route to Los Angeles by way of Sacramento.

Q. Can you give any idea which way the largest tonnage
2850 moved to Los Angeles from this territory; whether it was over the Union Pacific route or over the southern route, either by New Orleans or El Paso?

A. I do not think the New Orleans route cut much figure. I do not think they got a very large percentage.

Q. I understand. Of the whole?

A. Of the whole. But I cannot say about the balance, as between the Union Pacific and the other more direct lines to Los Angeles.

Q. But the Southern Pacific, in soliciting Southern California business, solicited by El Paso or New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir; they have always solicited for Southern California.

Q. That was their preferred route for that business?

A. Which route do you refer to?

Q. By the south—either El Paso or New Orleans.

A. I cannot say whether that was their preferred route. I think it was before——

Q. Yes; that is what I understood you to testify before?

A. Yes; before the——

Q. Yes; I mean before the amalgamation.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were the other lines leading east from Ogden working Los Angeles business too—such as your line and the Rio Grande?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was the Santa Fe an active competitor for all of that coast business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By coast business I mean California business.

A. Yes, California business.

2851 Q. They did not work Portland business, did they, in any way?

A. The Santa Fe?

Q. Yes.

A. I am not certain.

Q. You were asked by Judge Lovett whether you ever solicited business for San Francisco by way of Portland and then down by boat. You said, I believe, that you never did. Did you ever know of business going that way?

A. Yes, sir. I remember one time—I cannot recall the shipment—some party insisted, for some reason or other, on carrying business that way. It might have been on account of a blockade, or something; I do not recall the circumstances and I believe we took some that way.

Q. You knew that route was always open, did you not?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. This is not strictly re-direct, but I do not think Judge Lovett will object: Do you remember years ago when the Canadian Pacific for a while maintained a differential to San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did business move to San Francisco from this territory on that differential?

A. I cannot say now. I do not remember how successful they were in getting business by that route.

Q. That was in a number of years? You remember of its existence?

A. Yes, sir.

Re-cross examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. The occasion of this shipment to San Francisco which 2852 the shipper insisted on going by way of Portland, I believe you testified you did not recall just when that was.

A. No.

Q. Wasn't that just after the earthquake?

A. No, sir; I think it was previous to the earthquake.

Q. Are you sure about that?

A. I am quite certain. It was not as recent as the San Francisco earthquake, I am quite sure of that.

Q. About how long ago was it?

A. I don't know, but I presume, I should say, ten years ago; eight or ten.

Q. It must have made quite an impression on your mind.

A. Well, it did.

Q. It was so very unusual.

A. Yes, sir, exactly.

Q. The only instance of the kind that you ever knew of a shipment being made that way?

A. It is the only business I recall, yes. I do not remember just what that was, what it consisted of. It did, as you say, make an impression on me that I remembered.

Q. And you have been actively soliciting here for twenty-six years, and that is the only instance you recall of a shipment ever moving that way?

A. Well, I have only been actively soliciting here fifteen years.

Q. I mean here and at Kansas City.

A. Oh, yes; twenty-eight years.

Q. Twenty-eight years.

A. Yes. I believe that is the only time I recall that.

Q. You spoke of the Union Pacific having a line to Los Angeles by way of Sacramento. Business moved from this territory to 2853 Los Angeles over the Union Pacific went by way of Sacramento, I believe you testified?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About what is the distance from Ogden to Los Angeles by way of Sacramento?

A. I cannot say. I do not know the mileage.

Q. I am told it is 1154 miles. Does that approximate your idea, or have you any idea as to the distance?

A. Well, I should have guessed somewhere about a thousand miles, if I was going to make a guess at it.

Q. So, if business went to Los Angeles by way of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, it would still get about a thousand mile haul out of it from Ogden, around by Sacramento, to Los Angeles; and if it went by way of New Orleans, it would get about a two thousand mile haul?

Mr. SEVERANCE. I suppose you mean the Southern Pacific.

Q. I mean the Southern Pacific.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About 1800 instead of 2000, as suggested.

(No response.)

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Just one other question I neglected to ask you. Judge Lovett was inquiring about these various roads that were soliciting business. There are a great many roads leading up to the Missouri River, are there not?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. And very few roads leading from there through?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And the solicitation of the roads this side, that he mentioned, was for the haul from here to the river?
A. Yes, sir.
2854 Q. What about orange shipments coming east from southern California to this territory? Did they move both by Sacramento and by El Paso?
A. Yes, sir; I believe they did.
Q. Did you participate in that orange traffic?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. From El Paso?
A. Yes, sir. But that business was not solicited at this end. That was controlled by the shippers generally, or at the point of shipment, by some one.
Q. But you knew the way it moved?
A. Oh, yes, generally.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Did you get any of the orange shipments by way of Denver?
A. Not in late years; no, sir. I think our orange shipments all came via El Paso after the road was built there.
Q. Did you get them from the Denver & Rio Grande at Denver?
A. We might have done so. I had nothing to do with the routing of that business, and so I could not really say.
Q. But they might have moved either by way of Denver or by way of El Paso?
A. Yes.
Q. Or Omaha?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You have the two lines—one running westerly to Denver, and the other southwesterly to El Paso?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You would take it either way you could get it, but preferably by your longer line?
A. Yes, sir.

2855 JOHN W. MORSE,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Morse, where do you live?
A. In Chicago.
Q. What is your business at present, Mr. Morse?
A. I am an auditor for a private corporation.
Q. What was formerly your business?

A. Railway business.

Q. With what companies, and where?

A. I was with the Burlington at Omaha, and with the Union Pacific——

Q. Will you, if you can readily, give the years that you were in the service of these different companies, Mr. Morse?

A. I was with the Burlington from 1870 to 1877 at Omaha.

Q. In what capacity?

A. General agent.

Q. And after that what were you doing?

A. With the Union Pacific.

Q. Whereabouts?

A. In Chicago and Omaha.

Q. For how long?

A. For ten years.

Q. And after that what was your business?

A. With the Missouri Pacific.

Q. Whereabouts?

A. In Chicago.

Q. In what capacity?

A. Commercial agent.

Q. Up to what time, Mr. Morse?

A. Up to May 1, 1906.

Q. During what years did you represent the Union Pacific in Chicago?

A. In 1877, 1878, and 1879.

Q. Who succeeded you here as their general agent?

A. I will have to explain that to you. I was general agent
2856 representing both the passenger and the freight department. After I left, the business was divided, and Mr. Godfrey McDonald represented the freight department, and Mr. Thomas B. Gault, who is now dead, represented the passenger department.

Q. How long did Mr. Gault remain with the company as their passenger representative here?

A. I think about seven or eight years.

Q. And how long did Mr. Godfrey McDonald remain with them in charge of the freight?

A. About the same length of time.

Q. And who succeeded him?

A. I think Mr. Wood succeeded him—E. H. Wood, who is now general freight agent of the Union Pacific.

Q. And how long, if you remember, did he stay here; about how long?

A. He stayed until he was promoted. I don't know. Just a few years.

Q. And who succeeded him?

A. I think Mr. W. H. Knight succeeded him.

Q. And he continued until the time Mr. Neimyer was placed in charge of both offices?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who represented the Southern Pacific here in the first instance?

A. I do not remember who did.

Q. Do you remember anyone here previous to Mr. Neimyer's incumbency of the office?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Do you have any recollection of how many years ago Mr. Neimyer's office was established, or he came here from San Francisco, or wherever he came from?

A. I do not know definitely, no.

Q. It is a good many years ago?

2857 A. It is a good many years ago.

Q. During the days when you were familiar with the conditions here, previous to the time the two offices were united—the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific—which way was the Southern Pacific working its coast business, as far as it could?

A. By way of El Paso.

Q. Did you know of any business being worked by the Southern Pacific by way of New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that?

A. That was almost from my first coming here for the Missouri Pacific—many years ago.

Q. You spoke of their working it by way of El Paso; were they working it that way at the same time they were by New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir. New Orleans meant by way of El Paso.

Q. Oh, well, I misunderstood your answer. That is, did they work their coast business direct from here to New Orleans and thence through El Paso to the coast?

A. They did, and also by way of the shorter lines to El Paso.

Q. Made the connection at El Paso?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But when you gave your first answer, saying they worked it by way of El Paso, you meant by that the Sunset Route either at New Orleans or the other junction point?

A. Yes; I referred to El Paso as the converging point.

Q. There were other junction points between El Paso and New Orleans, weren't there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where they took business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But they worked the southern route to the coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In working their business by way of New Orleans what line did they work with?

A. The Illinois Central.

2858 Q. When you were with the Missouri Pacific did you work coast business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Via what route?
A. Mostly by the El Paso route.
Q. And where did you take that business?
A. We took it to Texarkana and El Paso.
Q. Where did you pick it up; over what line?
A. Out of Chicago?
Q. Yes.
A. Out of any line running to St. Louis.
Q. You took it from St. Louis on?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was the solicitation of business here as between the Union Pacific agency on the one hand and the Southern Pacific on the other an active solicitation?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Active competition?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And did that continue up to the time of the amalgamation of the offices?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. During the time you were with the Union Pacific line how did the Union Pacific work business to Portland?
A. Well, by way of San Francisco and the boats until the Oregon Short Line was completed. The Oregon Short Line was completed while I was with the Union Pacific.
Q. The Oregon Short Line belonged to the Union Pacific, did it not?
A. Well, it did and it did not.
Q. Well, it did not for a while?
A. It didn't for a while.
Q. During the receivership?
A. No.
Q. You were with the Union Pacific during the time of the receivership, were you?
A. No, sir.
Q. Oh, no; you had gone out before that; that is right. You went with the Missouri Pacific in 1887?
A. Yes, sir.
2859 Q. During the time that you were with the Union Pacific was the Shasta route used in business to Portland?
A. No, sir, it was not.
Q. There was no business moving over the Shasta route to Portland?
A. No, sir.
Q. It moved by boats, did it?
A. It moved by boats.
Q. During the time that the Union Pacific had this Mr. Gault here as general passenger agent, did the Southern Pacific have a passenger agent here, or did Mr. Neimyer have charge of both?
A. Mr. Neimyer had charge of both.
Q. When you were with the Union Pacific in the old days did your Portland business move over the Shasta route or by boat? I do not know whether I understood you.
A. By boat.
Q. By boat?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. From San Francisco?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You carried it through to San Francisco and then up by boat?
A. Until the Oregon Short Line was completed.
Q. After Mr. Neimyer was appointed as the general agent of both the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific here in Chicago, after the offices were united in him, what became of the competition that had previously existed, which you testified to, between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific organizations?
A. Why, it was materially reduced.
Q. Well, did it exist at all?
A. I do not think it did.
Q. Do you know of the boat line that the Union Pacific, or the Oregon Railroad & Navigation—the Union Pacific line had from Portland to San Francisco?
A. The Union Pacific didn't have the line.
2860 Q. I say the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. You knew of that boat line?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you know of any shipments going that way to San Francisco?
A. No; very rarely.
Q. Very rarely; but you did know of their moving that way?
A. Well, I do not recall any definitely.
Q. You do not recall any?
A. No.
Q. All right. Did you know of the Canadian Pacific differential, Mr. Morse?
A. No, I didn't.
Q. You had nothing to do with it? That did not come to your attention?
A. No.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. When did your connection with the Union Pacific cease, Mr. Morse?
A. In 1887.
Q. You have had no connection with the Union Pacific since then?
A. No, sir.
Q. And when did you retire from the railroad business?
A. In May, 1906.
Q. And you represented the Missouri Pacific up until that time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. From what date?
A. From 1887 to May, 1906.
Q. You retired from the Union Pacific in 1887?
A. And immediately came to the Missouri Pacific.
Q. And went to the Missouri Pacific and stayed there until 1906?

A. Yes, sir.

2861 Q. You did not have very good opportunities for observing the relations between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific after 1887, did you?

A. Up to what time?

Q. After 1887?

A. Well, that is the time I did have the opportunity.

Q. After 1887?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I thought you said your connection with the Union Pacific ceased in 1887?

A. Then I misunderstood you. It did cease in 1887. I came to the Missouri Pacific.

Q. You have had no connection either with the Union Pacific or Southern Pacific since 1887?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, were not your opportunities rather limited, then, to observe the relations between those two systems after 1887?

A. Well, I was doing business with them.

Q. How?

A. Soliciting freight for California; both by way of Ogden and by way of El Paso.

Q. For the Missouri Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the only opportunity that you had for knowing the relations between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you solicit business from?

A. From Chicago and Chicago territory, so-called, which takes in parts of several States.

Q. And did I understand you to testify that the Southern Pacific prior to 1901 solicited business by way of New Orleans rather than by way of El Paso or Ogden, from this territory?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that of your own knowledge, Mr. Morse, or is it an 2862 impression that you have?

A. My own knowledge.

Q. Your own knowledge. Who solicited it?

A. Through Mr. Neimyer and his agency. We were co-operating with them and were doing business with them.

Q. Moving it by way of New Orleans?

A. By way of Texarkana and El Paso.

Q. By way of Texarkana and El Paso?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But not by way of New Orleans?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, I understood you to testify in answer to Mr. Severance that when you said El Paso you meant New Orleans?

A. Well, when I spoke of El Paso I spoke of El Paso as the converging point. The Illinois Central worked their business for the coast by way of New Orleans, but we had no connection at New Orleans at that time.

Q. All of your business for the coast was worked by way of El Paso or by way of Denver.

A. By way of Texarkana and El Paso, or by way of Pueblo and Ogden.

Q. And you worked with Mr. Neimyer for California business by way of El Paso and Pueblo?

A. No; not with Mr. Neimyer by way of Pueblo. With Mr. Neimyer by way of Texarkana and El Paso.

Q. You never worked with him by way of Pueblo?

A. With him?

Q. Yes.

A. No; he had no routes that way at that time.

Q. Hadn't he, from Ogden?

A. Business wasn't solicited that way by his agency.

Q. You mean to testify that he did not solicit business by way of Ogden, Mr. Morse?

A. Well, not to my knowledge. He might have done it, but 2863 his working with us was by way of Texarkana and El Paso.

Q. And not by way of Pueblo?

A. No.

Q. Why would he work with you by way of El Paso and not by way of Pueblo. Can you imagine?

A. Well, he was co-operating with us, and we wanted the business by way of El Paso, because we got a long haul on it.

Q. You wanted it by way of El Paso because you got a long haul?

A. Well, at that time he was working for—yes; that is correct.

Q. When you got it by way of Pueblo you got it because you could not get the long haul out of it by way of El Paso, didn't you?

A. Well, we used both the lines. We consulted the shipper's wishes. If he wished it to go by way of Pueblo and Ogden, it went that way.

Q. In other words, you had two lines—one by way of El Paso and one by way of Pueblo?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Wasn't Mr. Neimyer in the same fix?

A. I suppose he was.

Q. Can you imagine any reason why he should not be controlled by the same considerations that controlled you?

A. Possibly not.

Q. If you wanted the long haul by way of El Paso, why, you assume that he wanted it too, do you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if you could not get the long haul by way of El Paso and could get the short haul by way of Pueblo you tried to get it, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Don't you think that the same reasons ought to control him?

A. Possibly.

2864 Q. Do you then mean to be understood as testifying that you would try to work preferentially by way of El Paso, and if you could not get it that way you would take it by Pueblo; but Mr. Neimyer, whose situation was the same as yours in that respect, would work it by way of El Paso and would not work it by way of Pueblo?

A. Well, I never knew of his soliciting any business by way of Pueblo. He might have done so without my knowledge.

Q. When you got it to El Paso, it was not necessary for him to work for it, was it; he got it anyhow?

A. He got it anyhow.

Q. No other outlet for you by way of El Paso, was there?

A. No, sir.

Q. It wasn't necessary for him to work very strenuously by way of El Paso, to help you, was it?

A. Well, he did.

Q. He did. Well, take the other way. When it went by way of Pueblo, it might go by way of the Atchison, might it not?

A. Not our business.

Q. Your business all went over the Rio Grande and the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But it could have gone by way of the Atchison?

A. It could have gone.

Q. But you never sent any that way?

A. No.

Q. Although that was the way where there was the fiercest competition, Mr. Neimyer did not work that way?

A. I do not think he did; not to my knowledge.

Q. His competition was much fiercer by way of the west—Pueblo—than it was by way of El Paso, was it not? That is,

2865 the Atchison might have got it that way.

A. Well, I don't think so, no.

Q. It might have gotten it from this territory and he would not have gotten it at all; isn't that true?

A. Yes, that is true.

Q. So, notwithstanding that situation, you wish to be understood as testifying that the Southern Pacific agents in this territory solicited by way of El Paso and not by way of your line, and Pueblo?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you got your business to Pueblo how did it move, Mr. Morse?

A. Over the Rio Grande.

Q. To where?

A. To Ogden. The Rio Grande and Rio Grande Western, to Ogden.

Q. And then over the Southern Pacific?

A. Over the Southern Pacific, yes, sir.

Q. Did you handle any business for Los Angeles?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And Southern California?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did any of that move by way of Pueblo and Ogden?
A. Well, rarely.
Q. Rarely?
A. There is certain business that will move with his longer route and certain business by a slower route. There is certain business that will move the longer route, because the shippers wish to use the cars for storage; they are not in a hurry to get through; save storage, because the cars are a longer time on the road.
Q. The same business would move, then, by Los Angeles over your western line?
A. Yes, sir.
2866 Q. Did climatic conditions have any influence upon it?
A. Yes, sir; especially in fruit shipments—a large influence.
Q. Did not a great deal of the fruit shipment move by way of El Paso?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And many by way of Pueblo?
A. Some, there is not so much. We did not solicit any business for our line by way of Ogden, on account of the climatic conditions—that is, that fruit business.
Q. How did your San Francisco business move mostly?
A. It was about equally divided between Ogden and El Paso.
Q. You worked it both ways?
A. Both ways.
Q. Preferring the one that afforded you the longest haul?
A. Yes, sir. I might amend that a little—because I represented the Texas & Pacific, and it was my business to give them a haul if I could.
Q. Well, I am counting the Texas & Pacific as part of your line.
A. Yes; it was a part.
Q. So you preferred the El Paso route because the combined lines gave you the longest haul?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Which route would the Missouri Pacific get the longer haul—by way of Texarkana or by way of Pueblo?
A. By way of Pueblo; the Missouri Pacific proper.
Q. How much longer?
A. Well——
Q. Fifty per cent longer?
A. No; not more than twenty per cent. longer.
Q. But you took your longest combined line, did you not?
A. Yes, sir.
2867 Q. Without reference to the separate control of the Texas & Pacific and the Missouri Pacific?
A. Yes, sir; and also on account of the better service.

Q. Better service by way of El Paso?

A. Yes.

Q. What other lines were soliciting California business in the territory where you were acting for the Missouri Pacific?

A. Well, about all of them were, I guess.

Q. Well, name them please—the principal ones.

A. Our immediate connections were, on El Paso business, with the Wabash and the Alton.

Q. I am not asking about your connections merely, but about all lines engaged in and actively soliciting business from the territory where you were soliciting for California—all lines.

A. What was the question?

Q. I asked you to name the principal lines in the territory in which you were soliciting that were soliciting California business. You spoke of your connections merely. I meant others than your connections.

A. Well, I might say all the lines west of Chicago.

Q. You mean by that the Rock Island, the Missouri Pacific, the Burlington, the Northwestern, the St. Paul, the Chicago & Alton, the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, the St. Louis & San Francisco and——

A. Chicago—Great Western.

Q. The Chicago—Great Western.

A. The Illinois Central.

Q. The Illinois Central, the Wabash, the Northern Pacific, and the Great Northern?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Any other lines leading toward New Orleans?

A. The Chicago & Eastern Illinois also.

2868 Q. And lines leading in a northerly direction?

A. Yes, sir. The Chicago & Eastern Illinois had a St. Louis connection.

Q. All of those lines were actively soliciting business to California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That continued during the whole time you were engaged in business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, most of those lines had to pass that traffic ultimately over to the Southern Pacific, hadn't they?

A. I think they did.

Q. The Northwestern & St. Paul—their outlet was by way of Ogden, was it not?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. And so with the Missouri Pacific and Rock Island?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Missouri, Kansas & Texas, and the Frisco, and Iron Mountain, and Texas & Pacific were worked by way of El Paso?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you were connected with the Union Pacific—that is, the connection which terminated in 1887—how long prior to May, 1887, were you engaged in the freight department, the soliciting department of the Union Pacific?

A. Why, I was not connected with the freight department at all for seven years, from 1880 to 1887.

Q. You had no connection, then, with the freight department from 1880 to 1887?

A. No, sir.

Q. Your connection, then, with the freight department of the Union Pacific was prior to 1880?

A. Yes, sir. Three years prior to that; the previous three years.

Q. From 1877 to 1880?

A. Yes.

2869 Q. You held what position with the Union Pacific?

A. General agent for the Union Pacific.

Q. General agent of the Union Pacific?

A. Both freight and passenger.

Q. At Chicago?

A. At Chicago.

Q. Those shipments to Portland by way of San Francisco, did they occur prior to 1880?

A. Yes. Those were the shipments by boat from San Francisco to Portland from 1877 to 1880; and then again when I resumed the freight business we used the boats also.

Q. When you what?

A. When I resumed the freight business again in 1887.

Q. With the Missouri Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. How did that business move?

A. The business for Portland moved by way of El Paso and San Francisco and the boats.

Q. And then by boat?

A. Yes. The volume, however, was small.

Q. You never knew any to move by rail from this territory to El Paso and the Shasta route to Portland, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. You never knew any freight to move from this territory, by the boat line from Portland down to San Francisco, did you?

A. No, I did not.

Q. During your connection with the Union Pacific you never knew it to be solicited that way, did you?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. The Union Pacific used the direct line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From Omaha and Kansas City to Ogden and thence 2870 connection with the Southern Pacific, to California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In one of my questions a few moments ago, I recall that, in naming the lines that were competing for California business, I mentioned the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific. They never competed for California business, did they?

A. No, sir, they did not.

Q. The shipments to Portland by boat, by way of San Francisco, as I understood you to testify on your direct examination, were prior to the opening of the Oregon Short Line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never knew of any shipments to go that way by boat, by way of San Francisco, after the completion of the Oregon Short Line?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember about when that was?

A. The Oregon Short Line?

Q. Yes.

A. It was completed about 1884.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Just one or two questions please, Mr. Morse. You stated in answer to Judge Lovett that one reason you worked business by way of El Paso was that there was better service that way to California points. What is the difference in the time of freight movement from St. Louis to the coast via El Paso rather than by Ogden—that is, San Francisco, we will say.

A. Well, I only referred to the service up to the junction point. The service by way of Pueblo was comparatively slower than it was by way of Texarkana.

Q. Do you mean the Missouri Pacific service?

A. Yes, sir.

2871 Q. Oh, yes.

A. For the reason that the line was new and the equipment was light.

Q. You did not mean the through time service was better?

A. No, sir.

Q. What was your official connection with the Union Pacific from 1880 to 1887?

A. General passenger agent.

Q. Where?

A. At Omaha.

Q. What lines were competing for the coast passenger business in those days?

A. The Santa Fe and the Union Pacific.

Q. And the business from the eastern points—was the Sunset Route also competing for that business?

A. Well, not very actively.

Q. You did not feel that in your territory?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any connection of the Southern Pacific at El Paso in those days?

A. Why, yes. The Texas & Pacific.

Q. Well, were there through trains, or through cars, to the coast that way in those days?

A. There was by the Southern Pacific, from New Orleans.

Q. From New Orleans?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, take passenger traffic moving to California points from the east, from New York and the central territory, Cincinnati and that region; was there any competition between the New Orleans route and these routes through here at that time?

A. Oh, yes, there was.

Q. That is what I wanted to get at.

A. Yes, sir, there was.

Q. On passenger business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is between the New Orleans route on the one hand
2872 and the Union Pacific and Santa Fe on the other?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT. What was that? Where was that competition?

Mr. SEVERANCE. I asked him about from the eastern points—Cincinnati and the points further east.

WITNESS. Mostly the far east.

Mr. SEVERANCE. Mostly the far east. I asked him about New York and as far west as Cincinnati.

Recross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Let me understand that last statement about the passenger business, Mr. Morse. What do you mean by that?

A. That is the competition between the Union Pacific?

Q. Yes.

A. The Southern Pacific, by way of New Orleans, solicited business at eastern points by way of New Orleans, and at that time the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio and the Southern Pacific at El Paso. I do not know that they were consolidated at that time, but they solicited passenger business in the east at that time and obtained a large amount of business, and especially the emigrant business.

Q. When was that?

A. That was in 1883 and 1884 and subsequently.

Q. 1883 and 1884 and subsequently. And what was the competing business that you spoke of then—the Union Pacific competing with that?

A. The Union Pacific, and, at that time, the Central Pacific.

Q. Where did that business go when the Union Pacific got it?

A. It went to Ogden.

Q. And then over the Southern Pacific?

2873 A. Over the Central or Southern. I do not remember just when they were consolidated. It was the Central, I think, at that time.

Q. Where was that business going to—San Francisco, or Southern California?

A. Well, to various points in California. We were all trying to populate California, and took it to all points.

Q. Do you happen to know when the Texas & Pacific were open to the connection with the Texas & Pacific and west Texas?

A. Well, I think in about 1880.

Q. 1882, was it not?

A. Perhaps.

Q. Wasn't that before the Southern Pacific to New Orleans was opened?

A. No, I don't think it was.

Q. You do not know, then, that the Texas & Pacific completed a connection with the Southern Pacific by way of El Paso before the Southern Pacific line from New Orleans was opened?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Did any of that business go over the Texas & Pacific by way of El Paso?

A. Very little.

Q. Why?

A. Well, I could not say as to that. I presume more active solicitation on the part of the New Orleans route.

Q. Well, did not the Texas & Pacific run to New Orleans?

A. I don't think it did at that time. It had not been completed.

Q. When was it opened to New Orleans?

A. I think it was opened to New Orleans in about 1883.

Q. Do you mean to be positive about those dates, Mr. Morse?

A. No, I do not; although I was—

Q. Don't you know the Texas & Pacific line from New 2874 Orleans to El Paso was opened before the Southern Pacific line?

A. Well, I suppose they were opened—my recollection is they were opened about the same time.

Q. And don't you know that the Southern Pacific had the short line between New Orleans and El Paso?

A. Well, if it is, it is a very long line.

Q. Well, it is a long distance; it is bound to be a long line.

A. Yes.

Q. You do not know the relative distance of the Texas & Pacific?

A. No. I should say, though, there is very little difference.

Q. You think, however, that the Texas & Pacific got very little of that business?

A. Very little, yes.

Q. It had the short line, or at least not very different, as you understand it, from the Southern Pacific?

A. The Southern Pacific had the advantage of a boat line.

Q. Did passengers go by boat to New Orleans and then over?

A. Passengers by boat to Galveston. They had a line from New York to Galveston.

Q. The Southern Pacific?

A. The Southern Pacific.

Q. When?

A. About the same time. Shortly after they were opened.

Q. Did they have any line from Galveston?

A. Did they?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir. That was the line.

Q. The Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And a rail line from Galveston?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that the line you are testifying about?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What line was it?

2875 A. Their rail line was the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio. I do not remember just when it was consolidated with the Southern Pacific, but at the early date that was the line—Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio.

Q. Don't you know that line does not run to Galveston?

A. Well, it gets in there over other tracks.

Q. Yes; other connections.

A. Yes.

Q. How did these passengers go? You say they went by boat from New Orleans to Galveston?

A. No; I think they went by rail. The boat line went to Galveston itself.

Q. From New Orleans?

A. From New York to Galveston.

Q. From New York to Galveston?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Aren't you mistaken about that?

A. I think not.

Q. Well, of course you are the witness. I know you are mistaken, but you are the witness. This passenger business, the emigrant business, you speak of, then went by way of boat from New York to Galveston, and then over the Southern Pacific to California: is that your testimony?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the business that you testified was in competition between the Union Pacific and the Atchison?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Sunset Route. Were any other lines trying to get that business?

A. I don't know of any.

Q. The Northwestern. What about the trunk lines between New York?

A. They were all soliciting it, yes; all of them.

Q. Did the Union Pacific have any more interest in it than anybody else?

A. I guess they thought they had.

Q. The Union Pacific has merely an intermediate line,

2876 hasn't it, of about one thousand miles, in this transcontinental system?

A. Has what?

Q. The Union Pacific operates only the length of a thousand miles in these transcontinental railroads, does it not?

A. Well, more than that. They have the line from Kansas City.
Q. The line from Kansas City.
A. Yes.
Q. To Denver?
A. That made up about eight hundred miles more.
Q. Do you mean they have it as two lines?
A. It had two lines, yes, sir.
Q. And what about the Pennsylvania? It has several lines, hasn't it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And the New York Central system?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you think the Union Pacific is more interested in that transcontinental business to the Pacific coast than they are?
A. Well, they were more interested in this: that they got more money out of it.
Q. Got more money?
A. Yes.
Q. On the matter of divisions?
A. On the matter of divisions.
Q. What proportion did they get out of it, do you know?
A. I do not know what the proportion was.
Q. What time are you talking about now—1880 to 1885?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You were speaking about the passenger business existing at that time. Do you remember that the Union Pacific got more revenue out of that through rate than the line east of Chicago?
2877 A. They got more revenue because the rates were higher west of the Missouri River, for instance.
Q. Got more per mile?
A. More per mile.
Q. You mean on account of the mountain grades they got a higher rate per mile?
A. Well, heavy grades, and new territory, and sparse population, and the expense of operating.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Judge Lovett was asking you about that boat line from New York to New Orleans or Galveston, and said that he knew you were mistaken. I suppose he meant that you were mistaken about the date the line to Galveston was opened. Do you remember what year the line to Galveston was opened, Mr. Morse?
A. No, sir, I do not.
Q. You remember the line to New Orleans was opened—the boat line—don't you?
A. I referred to the Mallory line.
Mr. LOVETT. He said the Morgan line.
Q. You meant the Mallory line?
A. I meant the Mallory line.
Q. The Morgan line you knew ran to New Orleans, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And some years afterwards extended to Galveston?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Counsel was asking you with reference to the interest of the Union Pacific in this transcontinental business. The divisions are made on the Missouri River, aren't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then there is a division of the rate from the Missouri River to the coast between the lines west?

A. Yes, sir.

2878 Q. Do you recall what these divisions were in your day?

A. Yes. The Union Pacific had fifty-four per cent. and the Central Pacific forty-six.

Q. Yes. It was based on mileage, wasn't it?

A. It was based on mileage.

Q. There was an arbitrary?

A. Before the divisions there was some deduction for terminal expenses.

Q. There was an arbitrary at the Missouri River bridge, wasn't there, and another one at San Francisco?

A. There was a bridge arbitrary at Omaha, and a terminal arbitrary at San Francisco.

Q. Yes, that is right. Do you recall what the percentage of the through rate was that was assigned to the lines east of Chicago—Chicago to New York.

A. They were not based on percentages.

Q. That was an arbitrary?

A. That was an arbitrary.

Q. Wasn't it at times on percentages?

A. There were percentages from Chicago west, but I do not recall any percentages east of Chicago.

Mr. LOVETT. Are you asking him about freight or passenger?

Mr. SEVERANCE. Well, I am asking him about freight. That is what I had in mind.

Q. Did you understand I was asking you about freight, or did you understand it was about passenger?

A. As far as I have answered, it applies to both.

Q. There was the same division of the revenue west of the river, wasn't there?

A. Just the same, yes.

2879 Q. Do you recall what percentage of the rate from Chicago to the coast was received by the lines from here to the river?

A. I do not. It varied with different years. I think something from twelve to seventeen per cent.; but it varied.

Q. Yes. About fifteen on a average, wasn't it?

A. Probably it was.

Q. And the balance of the rate from Chicago to the coast was divided between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the proportion that you have stated?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Fifty-four per cent. to the Union and forty-six to the Southern?
A. Yes, sir. Practically a mileage basis.
Q. Now, the Judge was asking you with reference to these soliciting agents of other lines. Did the transcontinental agents work with these agents east in getting business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You also made a remark, in answer to Judge Lovett, with reference to certain business being controlled by active solicitation. What is your opinion, Mr. Morse, from your experience, as to the value of solicitation by agents in securing business for railroads?
A. I think it is of great value.
Q. Is not a great deal of business controlled by the active solicitation of agents?
A. A large percentage of it, yes.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. What was your principal work in this territory, and your agents? Was it working with connections, or soliciting?
2880 A. Both.
Q. Well, wasn't your work and your connections—that is the connections on the traffic originating—very important?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You could not very well control the business against them, could you?
A. No, I could not.
Q. Wasn't it a fact that in soliciting business the lines other than the initial lines at times secured the business and controlled it?
A. Yes, sir.
(Recess until 2 o'clock p. m.)

2881 W. J. EVANS

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Evans, where do you live?
A. Peoria, Ill.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am traffic manager for the Kingman Plow Company.
Q. How long have you occupied that position?
A. Almost ten years.
Q. Is that a large manufactory?
A. Reasonably so.
Q. To what parts of the country do you ship your product?
A. Principally to the south, southwest and west, occasionally to north Pacific Coast points, California points, and our export business to Russia.

Q. Which way does your export business to Russia move—by Suez?

A. It is now moving by the Suez Canal. Formerly it went via the north Pacific coast points, or via San Francisco.

Q. To Vladivostok?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Previous to your connection with the Kingman Plow Company, what was your business?

A. I was for four years general agent of the Great Northern Railroad at St. Louis.

Q. During what years?

A. 1896 to 1900.

Q. Previous to that time what was your business?

A. I was assistant general freight agent of the Great Northern at St. Paul, having charge of the local territory in Minnesota, North and South Dakota, and business to and from those states.

Q. How long did you occupy that position?

2882 A. About three years and one-half.

Q. Previous to that what was your business?

A. I was claim agent of the Great Northern lines.

Q. Were you ever connected with any other railroad except the Great Northern?

A. Prior to my connection with the Great Northern I was chief claim clerk for the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba, and prior to that I was chief clerk of the claim department of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Road, which is a part of the North-Western Line.

Q. How does your traffic move to California at the present time?

A. Our business is principally to Southern California points, and moves principally via the Union Pacific and San Pedro route.

Q. By what lines is your business solicited for those points?

A. By the Chicago-Missouri River and Chicago-St. Louis lines; also by the representatives of the lines west of the Missouri River.

Q. What lines west of the Missouri River solicit your business?

A. The Salt Lake route and the Union Pacific principally.

Q. Where do their agents live, who solicit your business?

A. The traveling agents who visit our territory report to their superiors at Chicago.

Q. Does the Southern Pacific solicit that business now?

A. Not as Southern Pacific business exactly.

Q. The joint agency?

A. The joint agency solicits it.

Q. Which way do they solicit it? This joint agency solicits by the Union Pacific, as I understand you?

A. That is their preference.

2883 Q. How do they solicit it beyond Ogden or Salt Lake as between the Southern Pacific and the San Pedro?

A. Well, I haven't had very much conversation regarding western routing. They simply ask for the long haul. They ask me what business we have, and I tell them. And oftentimes the consignees have requested us to give business to a certain route, and we tell them; and oftentimes they ask us to give them the long haul, if possible.

Q. What does that mean—the long haul?

A. Well, I imagine they want the long haul to Ogden or to Denver.

Q. Is your business solicited by that agency—by the southern route? I mean at the present time.

A. If they know of any specific business they ask for the long haul, but if I simply tell them we have certain cars to move, then they figure on getting the long haul, if possible.

Q. I don't know as I quite understand you as to what the long haul is. Do you mean the long haul for the joint agency, or the long haul for the separate lines?

A. The long haul for the lines represented by the joint agency.

Q. That is Union and Southern Pacific together?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When the San Pedro solicitor seeks your business, over what lines does he solicit it in connection with the San Pedro?

A. Naturally he wants the long route, but he is satisfied with the route via Provo—I think it is the Denver & Rio Grande and Rio Grande Western.

Q. And he has a connection there at Provo with the Rio Grande and also at Salt Lake with the Short Line?

A. Yes; in connection with the Union Pacific.

2884 Q. With the Union Pacific. Do I understand you, then, that they solicit it preferably by Provo?

A. No; they are willing to let it go C. B. & Q. to Denver, or Rock Island to Colorado Springs.

Q. And in soliciting the business, does the San Pedro road express any preference between the lines?

A. No; they do not.

Q. They simply want to get it over the San Pedro?

A. That is all.

Q. While you were at St. Louis, were the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific separately represented there?

A. They were.

Q. Which way was the Southern Pacific endeavoring to route its coast business from St. Louis?

A. You mean its north coast business?

Q. No, to California points.

A. I only know of that incidentally. Being the general agent of the Great Northern, I was looking after the north Pacific coast business, but incidentally I knew of the business going to Southern California, and I think they were working with nearly all the lines operating west from St. Louis.

Q. Did they work business by way of New Orleans from St. Louis, in connection with the Illinois Central?

A. I think they did.

Q. Which way did the Union Pacific work their business to the coast?

A. They wanted it through Denver and Pueblo—through Denver or—what line did you say?

Q. The Union Pacific.

A. My understanding is that the Union Pacific wanted the long haul on it to Denver.

2885 Q. By Denver, you mean?

A. Yes, via Denver.

Q. To Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. Which way would that business move from St. Louis to reach the Union Pacific? Would it go to Omaha or Kansas City?

A. Kansas City principally.

Q. Did you meet the competition of the Union Pacific or Southern Pacific on business to north Pacific coast points?

A. We met the competition of the Union Pacific.

Q. To what points?

A. To Portland—Portland especially.

Q. That is when you were with the Great Northern?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And over what line did you reach Portland?

A. We reached Portland over the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company.

Q. From Spokane?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How was the competition as between the Union Pacific, the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company on the one hand, and the Great Northern and the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company on the other, for Portland business? Was it active or otherwise?

A. It was quite active according to my understanding and recollection.

Q. Was the Northern Pacific interested in that traffic?

A. They were.

Q. Did they have an agency at St. Louis?

A. They did.

Q. Was that agency soliciting that business?

A. Very actively, in connection with the Burlington via Billings, if they could not get the haul from St. Paul.

Q. Now, you spoke of the Southern Pacific soliciting business in connection with all the lines leading to the west. What junc-

2886 tion points did the Southern Pacific get the business west of New Orleans—the Sunset Route?

A. Well, there were various junctions in Texas. As I say, I was not actively interested in California business, but in a general way

I knew about what routes were open. The Iron Mountain & Southern had a route in connection with the T. & P. via Texarkana and El Paso, and the Frisco had a route, I believe, in connection with the Texas Midland, via Fort Worth and El Paso, and the M. K. & T. also had a connection with the T. & P. at Fort Worth. They were the principal southwestern lines.

Q. Did business move to Portland from that territory by the Shasta Route?

A. I never heard of any going at that time.

Q. What time do you mean—when you were in St. Louis?

A. I mean when I was in St. Louis, during the four years.

Q. Do you remember the name of the gentleman who represented the Southern and the Union Pacific, respectively, in St. Louis?

A. I can't recall the names. I did remember one during the lunch hour, but I have forgotten it.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. During what years were you located at St. Louis representing the Great Northern?

A. From the early summer of 1896 until 1900.

Q. You were representing the Great Northern at that time?

A. The Great Northern, yes, sir, soliciting principally their oriental cotton traffic and coast business.

Q. I believe you testified that you did not attempt to get the California business?

A. We did not.

Q. You did not try to get any business south of Portland?

A. No.

2887 Q. The Southern Pacific, you say, was actively soliciting that business at that time?

A. I only know by hearsay.

Q. Only by hearsay?

A. Yes. The California business you are speaking of?

Q. Yes. What you have testified to, in answer to questions by Mr. Severance, as to soliciting that business—the Southern Pacific soliciting that business—is simply hearsay?

A. That is all.

Q. And from hearsay your understanding was that it went by all lines—that is, New Orleans, the various Texas junctions, El Paso, and they also sought to send it by Ogden, didn't they?

A. I think that is true.

Q. In other words the Southern Pacific agent in soliciting freight acted on the same principle that you always acted upon, and tried to get the long haul, and if you could not get the long haul you would take such haul as you could get?

A. That is it.

Q. That is true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Isn't that the same principle upon which the joint agents work still, as you understand?

A. It is.

Q. They always take it the long way, if they can get it, and, if not, they take it whatever way they can get it?

A. Sometimes, of course, they are governed by the representative from whom they obtain the "tip," as they call it, as to the business.

Q. Just what do you mean by that—the local man who got it?

A. For instance, if the Union Pacific man understands from the Chicago & Alton man at Peoria that there is a car going to 2888 California, he tries to work that in connection with the Chicago & Alton from Peoria to the Missouri River.

Q. Exactly. The solicitor tries to cooperate with the initial line?

A. With the initial line.

Q. With the line whose solicitor gives him the information?

A. The "tip." That is customary.

Q. That is customary?

A. Yes.

Q. Where are your plants located now?

A. At Peoria, Illinois.

Q. And your business to California moves generally by what lines? I did not catch your testimony.

A. We have been shipping principally by the Rock Island, through Denver, and the Chicago & North-Western and Union Pacific, or the Chicago & Alton and Union Pacific.

Q. When you ship by the Union Pacific and North-Western, you go by Omaha?

A. Yes, in connection with the North-Western we go via Omaha.

Q. And the Rock Island by way of Denver?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Any by El Paso?

A. We don't ship that way. Our Southern California business has been principally to Los Angeles, for which we use the San Pedro route.

Q. You are actively solicited by all of these western lines, aren't you?

A. I am.

Q. That is, those that you mentioned—the Rock Island, the Burlington, the North-Western, the St. Paul, the Union Pacific, the Santa Fe, the Missouri Pacific, the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, the Texas & Pacific, all of those lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe you testified that the Southern Pacific, during the time that you were located at St. Louis representing the Great 2889 Northern, solicited business by New Orleans as well as by El Paso and all the other connections?

A. They were handling business that way.

Q. In other words, they would take the business which ever way they could get it?

A. The Illinois Central had a considerable voice in that routing. They were trying to get the long haul, which was via New Orleans.

Q. The Illinois Central was actively working for business from the St. Louis territory to the Pacific coast by way of New Orleans?

A. They were, yes, sir.

Q. And also by other lines leading out there?

A. Yes, sir, they were. They had no Omaha gateway at that time.

Q. Since then they have extended their line westerly to Omaha?

A. Now I think they are working that via Omaha.

Q. Do you happen to know definitely as to that?

A. No, because we have not given them any encouragement.

Q. But they would naturally work it the way they could get the most revenue, like all other railroads do?

A. We would not give them any business to Southern California by way of New Orleans on account of the time.

Q. No, but I was speaking of the Illinois Central. I say the Illinois Central would naturally try to get the business by its long haul, wouldn't it?

A. They would, yes.

Q. If they could.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. The Southern Pacific tried to get the business by a route that would give them the long haul, too, didn't it?

A. They would, yes.

Q. Do you know of any longer haul that the Southern Pa-
2890 cific could get from this territory than by way of New Orleans?

A. I do not.

Q. That is their longest haul?

A. That is their longest haul.

Q. You stated, in answer to a question that Judge Lovett put to you, that the separate agencies were working for the long haul and the joint agencies were doing the same. In the case of the joint agency, the long haul means the long haul made up of the two lines—the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific—doesn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And the long haul, when Mr. Neimyer represented the Southern Pacific alone, meant the longest haul he could get by the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. As a shipper you are not interested in the division of the rates between the cariers, are you?

A. I am not.

Q. It does not make any difference to you whether the Union Pacific or the Southern Pacific gets the most revenue out of it? You are interested in the through rate?

A. I care nothing about divisions.

2891 W. A. BROLIN,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Brolin, where do you live?
A. Rockford, Illinois.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am secretary and treasurer of the Skandia Furniture Company, manufacturing furniture.
Q. Manufacturing all kinds of house furniture?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. To what parts of the country do you ship your product?
A. All parts.
Q. How long have you been with that company?
A. About 20 years, except a few intervening years.
Q. You say you ship to all parts; that includes the Pacific coast?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And have you for many years shipped to the coast?
A. We have.
Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific had separate soliciting agencies here in Chicago?
A. I do.
Q. Were you acquainted with the gentlemen at the head of those agencies?
A. I may have met them personally, but I am not certain about that.
Q. Did you meet their solicitors?
A. I met their solicitors, yes, sir.
Q. You knew that Mr. Neimyer headed one agency and Mr. Knight the other?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. At that time, when the agencies were separate, in what way did the Southern Pacific solicit coast business? Which way 2892 did they try to move it?
A. I can't answer that positively.
Q. Did their solicitors call on you and solicit business?
A. They did.
Q. Which way did they try to move it to the coast? I am speaking of the Southern Pacific people.
A. My recollection would be that they would want it to go via the Illinois Central.
Q. By the Illinois Central to New Orleans?
A. Yes.
Q. And the Union Pacific, of course, by their own line?
A. By their own line, yes, sir.
Q. You remember the fact that the two offices were consolidated?
A. I do.

Q. Since that time have you been called on by the representatives of the joint agency?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way do they solicit the business now?

A. They don't specify.

Q. Just want to get the business?

A. Just want to get the business, yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember whether at that time the Southern Pacific agents ever called together with the agents of the Illinois Central, soliciting business?

A. I do not remember any specific instance, no, sir. My impression is that the Illinois Central were very active in getting business by the Southern Pacific.

Q. You do not remember of any instances when they called together?

A. I do not.

Q. How did your Portland business move?

A. Principally via the northern lines.

Q. That is, you mean the Northern Pacific and the Great 2893 Northern?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did it ever move via any other line?

A. Why, undoubtedly; yes.

Q. By what line?

A. The Union Pacific.

Q. By Omaha and the Short Line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has that always been the case since you have been with the company, as far as you recall?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember of the time when the Canadian Pacific had a differential in by boat lines?

A. I do.

Q. Did you ever make any shipments that way?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how would those shipments move?

A. I don't recall the route. Either Vancouver or——

Q. That is, you mean you do not recall the initial route out of Rockford?

A. No.

Q. But they moved by the Canadian Pacific?

A. They moved by the Canadian Pacific, yes, sir.

Q. And then by boat from Vancouver to San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did considerable of your business, or only a small amount, move that way?

A. Only a small amount.

Q. Do you remember how many years you continued to ship that way?

A. No, I do not. My recollection would be that it was a short time only.

Q. Have you had charge of the traffic during all the time you have been with the company?

A. Yes, sir. We are not a large factory and have not any traffic manager.

Q. At whose solicitation did you ship that traffic by way of the Canadian Pacific? Did they have an agency?

2894 A. They had an agency; yes. I think they had local representation.

Q. In Rockford?

A. In Rockford.

Q. How large a town is Rockford?

A. It is 45,000.

Q. What is it—a manufacturing town?

A. A manufacturing town.

Q. How far from Chicago?

A. 85 miles.

Q. What railroads is it on?

A. The "Q," the Illinois Central, the North-Western, and the St. Paul.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. When were those shipments by way of the Canadian Pacific, do you remember?

A. I could not state the year.

Q. Would you say prior to 1901?

A. Well, it would be about that time; either prior or about that time.

Q. Your understanding is that that condition existed for only a short time?

A. Yes, that is my recollection.

Q. You never shipped anything to California by way of Portland, Oregon, and then by boat down from Portland, did you?

A. If my memory serves me right we have occasionally—that is, a car or two.

Q. How did that move?

A. Do you mean out of Rockford?

Q. Yes.

A. I do not remember.

Q. And would go to Portland and then by boat down to San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your recollection about that?

A. I have no reply to make. I can't remember any circumstances connected with it.

Q. Do you remember about when or about the quantity of shipments or why they were shipped that way?

A. No, I do not. The quantity would be a carlot.

2895 Q. Well, would there be many cars?

A. Not many, no, sir.

Q. It would go to Portland and then by boat?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you approximate about the year?

A. I don't believe I would care to answer.

Q. You could not say whether it was 3 or 10?

A. Well, it would be nearer 10.

Q. Can you say whether that occurred frequently or otherwise?

A. Not frequently, because on our class of goods it is not a desirable way of shipping—by water.

Q. You would not ship that way at equal rates, would you—with the all-rail rate?

A. No.

Q. I believe you testified that the Illinois Central very actively solicited business by way of New Orleans for the Pacific coast.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is true, is it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you testify that the Southern Pacific solicited actively that way, or was it immaterial as to the route? I didn't understand your testimony.

A. I didn't catch the question.

Q. I asked whether in your direct examination you testified that the Southern Pacific actively solicited by way of New Orleans, or whether it solicited by the various gateways.

A. Not being interested in the gateways, why, I don't know. I don't remember how they solicited.

Q. You can not say positively whether they solicited preferentially by way of Ogden or El Paso or New Orleans, can you?

A. No, sir.

Q. You don't mean to give any testimony on that point?

A. No, sir.

2896 Q. Your business is solicited by all lines leading to the Pacific coast, isn't it?

A. It is, yes.

Q. You are familiar with the location of the Southern Pacific lines, are you not?

A. Yes, in a general way.

Q. You understand that such traffic as you turned over to the Union Pacific, or consigned by way of the Union Pacific to California, passed also over the Southern Pacific, do you not?

A. You mean prior to the consolidation?

Q. Any time.

A. I don't know that I do, no, sir. I am not familiar with that.

Q. You are not familiar with that?

A. No, sir.

2897 ALBERT EVI,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Evi, where do you live?
A. Moline, Illinois.
Q. What is your business?
A. Traffic manager for Deere & Company.
Q. What kind of product is put out by Deere & Company?
A. Agricultural implements.
Q. What kind?
A. Plows, cultivators, harrows, corn planters, disc cultivators, hay tools.
Q. That is one of the large companies of the kind, isn't it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long has it been established?
A. It was established in 1847.
Q. To what parts of the country do you ship your product?
A. All parts.
Q. Including the Pacific coast?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. By what routes do you ship to California points?
A. We use the Ogden gateway and the El Paso gateway.
Q. Do you ship any over the Santa Fe?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How do you ship to Portland?
A. We ship both through Ogden and via the northern routes, both through Minnesota Transfer and Billings.
Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific had separate agencies here in Chicago? I don't ask you for the year, but do you remember the fact?
A. I do; yes.
2898 Q. Did you know the gentlemen who headed those agencies?
A. I did. I had a personal acquaintance with them.
Q. Who were they?
A. Mr. Neimyer for the Southern Pacific, and Mr. Knight for the Union Pacific.
Q. Was the Southern Pacific solicitation at Moline under the charge of Mr. Neimyer or someone else?
A. In charge of the St. Louis office.
Q. And who was the gentleman that you were brought in contact with in connection with that business?
A. Mr. Townsley.
Q. For which route to the coast did Mr. Townsley solicit your traffic?
A. He solicited both the Ogden and the El Paso route.

Q. By which route did he endeavor to get it moved, if he had any preference or choice?

A. I don't recall that he ever expressed a preference.

Q. He never did?

A. No, sir.

Q. He did not attempt to move it by El Paso as against Ogden, as far as you remember?

A. No, I don't remember that he did.

Q. Who represented the Union Pacific at that time?

A. Mr. Rose.

Q. After the two offices were consolidated who called on you on behalf of the joint agency?

A. Mr. Rose.

Q. And how did he solicit your business?

A. He preferred the Ogden gateway, getting the long haul for the Union Pacific by the Missouri River.

Q. That is, he solicited by Omaha or Kansas City—which?

A. Either one—preferably Omaha.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

2899 Q. About what is the distance from Moline to Omaha?

A. About 250 miles.

Q. And from Moline to El Paso about how far?

A. I would say about 800.

Q. It is more than that, I guess. How far is it to Kansas City?

A. About 250.

Q. Well, it is a good long way from Kansas City to El Paso, isn't it?

A. Well, I can't say exactly what the distance is. I am simply guessing at it when I say 800.

Q. Omaha is much nearer to your factory, anyway, than El Paso?

A. Very much nearer, yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Rose, you say, solicited preferentially by way of Omaha?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that gave the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific the long haul on California shipments from your place?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your business for the Pacific coast is solicited by various lines, isn't it?

A. It is.

Q. Will you name the principal lines that solicit it?

A. That is, for California business?

Q. Yes.

A. The Burlington, the Milwaukee, the Union Pacific, the Missouri Pacific, the D. & R. G., the Colorado Midland.

Q. The Atchison, the Rock Island?

A. The C. R. I. & P. use the Rock Island.

Q. I didn't know that you mentioned that. The Santa Fé?

A. Yes; I think that is all.

Q. The Missouri, Kansas & Texas?

A. Through the various gateways, through the Missouri river, and also through Texas.

Q. That has been true for a great many years, hasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

2900 Q. They have all been actively soliciting that business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you indicate about how many of them work preferentially by way of Ogden?

A. The Burlington and the Rock Island by way of Denver, and the roads running between Denver and Ogden on account of the long haul for their respective lines, the Union Pacific in preference to the Ogden gateway for the same reason.

Q. The Northwestern?

A. The Northwestern does not solicit California business.

Q. The St. Paul?

A. The St. Paul have no preference—never expressed a preference.

Q. The preference is all as against El Paso?

A. They handle practically all of their Moline business via Omaha.

Q. That is, they have no preference because they have but the one route? Isn't that true?

A. Well, they have the Kansas City route as compared with the Omaha gateway.

Q. Oh, yes.

A. But they are both practically the same in length.

Q. And both connections of the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a shipper you are not interested in the division of the through rate between the carriers, are you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever ship your plows by water?

A. No, sir.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Do you ship to foreign countries at all?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They go by water, don't they?

A. They go by water, yes.

Q. To what parts of the world do you ship?

A. We ship to practically all parts of the world.

2901 Q. Do you ship to the Orient at all?

A. Yes.

Q. How does your traffic to the Orient move?

A. It has moved both by way of Suez Canal and also by way of the Pacific ports.

Q. What Pacific ports?

A. San Francisco, Seattle and Vancouver.

Q. In connection with what rail lines does that move? I am speaking of the Pacific coast shipments?

A. The business that has moved via San Francisco has been handled by the Southern Pacific and also the Santa Fe.

Q. Handled by the Southern Pacific—which route do you mean?

A. In connection with the Union Pacific via Ogden.

Q. By Omaha and Ogden, or Kansas City and Ogden?

A. Omaha and Ogden.

Q. And how does your Seattle business move?

A. That has been handled in connection with the Great Northern, by Minnesota Transfer.

Q. And Vancouver by the Canadian Pacific?

A. By the Canadian, yes, sir.

Q. How does the quantity of traffic that you move by El Paso to the coast, as compared with that which moves by Omaha, compare with the situation before the consolidation of these agencies?

A. There has been no comparative change.

Q. You move just as much by El Paso as you did before, do you?

A. I think we do, yes, sir.

Q. Who divides up your traffic?

A. I do.

Q. And do you endeavor to apportion it fairly among the different gateways?

A. No, I have never apportioned it that way. It depends upon rail conditions, when the traffic is ready to move.

2902 Q. What do you mean by "rail conditions?"

A. It depends upon which lines are open and apparently able to give the best service.

Q. Does that differ at times, or are there times when you get better service by El Paso, and other times when you get better service by Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the occasion of the difficulty?

A. Principally the snow. Our business moves practically all in the winter time, and some of the northern lines are quite frequently congested, and then we use the El Paso gateway.

Q. Do you give the preference to northern lines when they are not congested?

A. No, we do not give the northern lines any preference.

Q. How do your shipments by El Paso compare in volume with those via Ogden to California points?

A. Well, I will say possibly twenty per cent via El Paso.

Q. And has that varied at all in the last ten years, on the average?

A. No, sir.

Q. Just about the same?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you do not usually ship by El Paso, except when there is snow trouble north?

A. Very little.

Q. Is your business solicited by El Paso by connecting lines with the Southern Pacific?

A. No, sir.

A. But it is solicited by lines going to Omaha?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is your opinion as to whether or not soliciting agents are able to influence traffic?
A. They can influence some traffic.
Q. You think they can?
A. Yes, sir.

2903 By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. The joint agency of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific serves your purposes very well, doesn't it, Mr. Evi?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. That is, one man or two men, representing both lines, namely the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, can check up your freight and look after your interests as a shipper of that freight satisfactorily?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You have had no occasion to complain on account of that so far as the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific are concerned, have you?
A. No, sir.
Q. What about the service on trans-continental business? Hasn't the railroad service very much improved in recent years?
A. I think it has, yes.
Q. The physical condition of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific has been very much improved, hasn't it, in the last six or seven years, or haven't you been over them?
A. I haven't been over either one of them.
Q. You have no personal knowledge as to that, then?
A. No, sir.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Isn't it a fact that the railroad service all over the country has improved in the last few years?
A. I think that is quite true.
Q. That is one thing in which the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific have no monopoly. That exists all over the country, does it?
A. I think it does.
Q. And the service has improved on the Santa Fe, hasn't it?
A. Quite perceptibly.

2904 Q. And it has improved on the lines running to the Missouri river?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The Illinois Central?
A. I don't know much about the Illinois Central.
Q. You don't use that?
A. We don't use that to any extent.
Q. Judge Lovett asked you whether you were not very well served by the joint agency of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.

What did you mean by your answer that you were well served by them? What do they do for you?

A. They look after our freight as well as the separate agencies did, or as well as other lines' representatives.

Q. That is, if you ship freight over the line and want it traced, they trace it for you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if you have losses, they pay the losses?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or help you to get them adjusted?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when you said that soliciting agents could divert some traffic from one line to another—I believe you so stated, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That they could influence the movement of traffic?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, in your opinion, if the Southern Pacific had an agent of their own who was seeking to route traffic to California by the long haul for the Southern Pacific (not the Southern and Union Pacific together—assuming they are separate lines) do you think that he would be able to move some traffic over that line that now goes over the Union Pacific?

A. I do, yes, sir.

By Mr. LOVETT:

2905 Q. Do you know of any particular reason why he should rather have it by way of El Paso than by Ogden, Mr. Evi?

A. Well, our business is seasonable business and we are anxious to get it to destination promptly.

Q. No, you misunderstood my question. Mr. Severance has been asking you about what a separate agent might do for the Southern Pacific in soliciting your business. I say now that you do not see any reason, do you, why he should rather have that business by way of El Paso than by way of Ogden except for a little longer haul?

A. That is all.

Q. If the separate agent of the Southern Pacific was soliciting against the Union Pacific, as Mr. Severance would have him do, the difference would be that if he got it by way of El Paso he would get a little longer haul than if it went by the way of Ogden? That is the only difference you see, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe you have also testified that you are not interested in the division of the through rate?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Let me make another suggestion to you, as Judge Lovett has made one: You say you can not see any reason why they would rather haul it by El Paso than by Ogden, except the longer haul. Haven't they a more level road to California by El Paso than they have climbing the Sierra Nevadas?

A. I can not say as to that; I have never been over either one of the roads.

Q. You are aware of the fact that it is more expensive to haul freight over the mountains than it is on a level, aren't you?

A. Yes, sir.

2906 EMANUEL L. PHILIPP,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Philipp, where do you live?

A. Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am president and manager of the Union Refrigerator Transit Company.

Q. How long have you been occupying that position?

A. About six or seven years.

Q. Previous to that what was your business?

A. From 1900 back to 1894 I was in the lumber business in the state of Mississippi.

Q. Previous to 1894 what were you doing?

A. From 1892 to 1894 I was traffic manager for the Schlitz Brewing Company at Milwaukee; and prior to that time, from 1889 to 1892, I was agent at Milwaukee for the American Refrigerator Transit Company, and in 1891 also for the Union Pacific Railroad; and prior to that time, if you wish to go back, I was with the North-Western.

Q. Do you remember when the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific had separate traffic representatives?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether any freight moved in those days to the Pacific coast, from Milwaukee, over the Illinois Central by way of New Orleans?

A. Yes, some freight moved that way in the winter—perishable freight.

Q. How was it with reference to the movement of freight to 2907 El Paso from Milwaukee territory?

A. Considerable freight moved by El Paso.

Q. Was it solicited that way?

A. Yes, it was solicited at times, and the route was also desirable for other reasons.

Q. The Union Pacific, at the time you were connected with them, were soliciting California business, I suppose?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you work Portland business at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What way?

A. Via the Oregon Short Line.

Q. Did you know of any business for Portland moving by the Shasta route?

A. I knew of a few shipments; they did not amount to much.

Q. Which way would they go—by Ogden, or the south, or El Paso?

A. No; shipments that I know of went via Portland, and I heard of a few cars that moved via El Paso, but it was very small.

Q. It was a roundabout route?

A. A roundabout route, and only a very few shipments.

Q. You spoke of certain advantages of the El Paso route. What were those advantages which you had in mind?

A. The shippers of perishable freight preferred the southern routes in the winter, to get the shipments out of the cold territory, in order to protect them against frost.

Q. When you were traffic manager of the Schlitz Brewing Company how did your Pacific coast shipments move?

A. Probably most of them moved via Ogden. The export business was divided between all the ports on the Pacific coast. I could not say now which port got the most. It was largely a matter 2908 of vessel room.

Q. Which ports do you mean?

A. Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, San Francisco, and Los Angeles.

Q. To what places did you export business? Export beer, I mean.

A. Practically to every country on the globe, but the Oriental business, of course, went to China, Japan, India, Australia, and the Philippines.

Q. Did the boat lines have soliciting agents looking up that business, or did the railroads making the connection with the boat lines work it?

A. Well, no; the boat lines had no soliciting agents that I know of.

Q. They worked by the rail connections?

A. They worked by the rail connections. But during my time in that business it was determined largely by vessel room. We sought that ourselves.

Q. That is, it depended on what time you could get a boat to go where you wanted to ship?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the annual output of the Schlitz Brewing Company when you were with them?

A. In carloads probably you would like to have it?

Q. Yes.

A. At that time they shipped, as nearly as I can remember now, about 12 or 14 thousand carloads a year.

Q. Did you ship over the Santa Fe too?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. What were the initial lines that took your product out of Milwaukee?

A. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, the Chicago & North Western, and the Wisconsin Central.

Q. In the case of traffic moving by El Paso, where did these initial lines deliver it to the connection?

A. Much of it came via Chicago, in fact most of it, and was 2909 delivered to the St. Louis lines here.

Q. The Omaha, I suppose, took it right to Omaha?

A. Yes.

Q. That is two lines—the Milwaukee and the North-Western?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know anything about the movement of traffic of the other breweries in Milwaukee at that time?

A. No, only in a general way—that the larger concerns there did a similar business and used like routes.

Q. Like routes. That is what I wanted to get at.

A. Yes.

Q. Export beer from Milwaukee is a very large business?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

Q. And has been for many years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does that product move under refrigeration?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Altogether?

A. The bottled beer does not move under refrigeration in summer. It needs to be protected against frost in the winter, however, the same as water or any other liquid.

Q. Do you remember a time when the Canadian Pacific had a differential rate into San Francisco?

A. I do.

Q. Was that route used by the breweries in Milwaukee?

A. To some extent, with their bottled product.

Q. What is the great distributing point for beer on the Pacific coast?

A. I can't answer that as to then as well as now.

Q. How was it then?

A. I would say that San Francisco at that time was the largest market.

Q. Do the brewing companies in Milwaukee maintain agencies and distributing depots out there at these towns on the coast?

2910 A. Some did. The Schlitz Company, however, had no distributing point, as far as I know. They sold to people there who bought f. o. b. Milwaukee and did the distributing themselves, without their direction.

Q. Wholesalers?

A. Wholesalers, yes.

Q. And those wholesale merchants on the coast were located in what cities, as you recall?

A. San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland, Seattle, Tacoma; in fact I think every city of any importance out there.

Q. Over what lines of rail did the traffic move destined to Portland?

A. Usually over the Northern Pacific; however, some over the Union Pacific and the Oregon Short Line.

Q. Did the Northern Pacific maintain a soliciting agency in Milwaukee?

A. They have one now. I don't recall whether they had one at that time.

Q. They have now?

A. They have now, yes.

Q. Outside of the brewing business, what other large lines of industry are there in Milwaukee?

A. The machine business; it has very extensive manufactories of machinery.

Q. And has had for a good many years?

A. Has had for a great many years—such as leather, sash, doors and blinds and articles made of wood. In fact the city has all kinds of manufacturing, practically.

Q. It is distinctly a manufacturing city, isn't it?

A. It is, yes.

Q. How large a place was Milwaukee in 1900, if you remember?

A. In 1900 about 320,000.

2911 Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Over what lines principally, Mr. Philipp, did this beer, about which you have been testifying, move to the Pacific coast?

A. Well, it moved over all lines. I would say that the Ogden route handled more, perhaps, than any other.

Q. You mean the Southern Pacific line west of Ogden?

A. West of Ogden, yes.

Q. And it reached there over the Union Pacific, the Denver & Rio Grande, and the connections of the Union Pacific and Denver & Rio Grande easterly?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That business was actively solicited by all of the principal lines extending westerly from and lying westerly of Milwaukee?

A. Yes.

Q. The St. Paul, the North-Western, the Burlington?

A. They all asked for it.

Q. Yes; they were all seeking it. But you think the most of it moved over the Southern Pacific?

A. As a guess; and it is merely a guess now. It is a good many years ago. I would say that the Southern Pacific west of Ogden handled more of that traffic than any other Pacific line.

Q. The only other Pacific line at that time was the Atchison, wasn't it—that is, for the Pacific coast?

A. I include in that the North Pacific lines.

Q. Oh, yes. Well, you understand that whatever the North-Western, the St. Paul, the Union Pacific, the Burlington and the Rock Island got of that traffic for California, passed over the Southern Pacific west of Ogden, do you not?

A. Yes, sir.

2912 Q. That was the only outlet for those lines?

A. That was the only outlet, yes, sir.

Q. These various lines have continued to solicit that business, have they not?

A. I assume so. I have not been connected with it for a good many years.

Q. You testified about some of that business going by way of the Southern Pacific—the Sunset Route?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did that go by way of New Orleans or by way of El Paso, or both ways?

A. Both ways.

Q. That movement, I believe you said, was principally in winter?

A. Entirely, so far as I know. So far as the New Orleans route was concerned, that, I think, was entirely in the winter. Now, the El Paso route always did get some business in the summer, particularly bottled beer, because the heat did not affect that particularly, and their route could be used, although it was not a very desirable one—from Milwaukee.

Q. But it was climatic conditions that controlled the movement by way of New Orleans?

A. It did in the winter, entirely, so far as perishable freight was concerned, that I know anything about.

Q. The El Paso gateway has always been kept open for traffic, has it not, so far as you know?

A. Yes.

Q. So far as you know, it still moves that way?

A. Yes, sir.

2913 Re-direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Just one question, Mr. Philipp: Over what lines do the cars of the company of which you are president move? All lines?

A. All lines.

Q. That is a refrigerator car line?

A. Yes, sir.

2914 H. B. JILSON,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Jilson?

A. Rockford, Illinois.

Q. What is your business?

A. I have charge of the shipments for the Emerson Manufacturing Company.

Q. What is the business of the Emerson Manufacturing Company?

A. They make a general line of agricultural implements—a full line, I might say.

Q. How old a concern is that?

A. Well, this concern was originally Emerson & Company; after that, Emerson, Talcott & Company; and now, Emerson Manufacturing Company. Since 1852, I think.

Q. 1852, you say?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you manufacture a full line of agricultural implements?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does that include harvesters?

A. Well, we do not make harvesters or binders, no.

Q. But everything else?

A. But we make most everything else in the way of agricultural implements.

Q. To what parts of the world, or the country, do you ship your products?

A. We do not ship to the eastern states at all. We ship to Texas and the southern states and to the western states; and we have an export trade.

Q. Especially to the Pacific coast?

2915 A. Especially to the Pacific coast and the north Pacific coast.

Q. To both California points and north Pacific coast points?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been connected with the Emerson Company?

A. I have been connected with them for 18 years.

Q. How long have you had charge of their traffic?

A. Of the shipments?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Well, for the last 10 years.

Q. How does your California traffic move at the present time, Mr. Jilson?

A. At the present time?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. You mean the lines out of Rockford, or the other lines?

Q. I mean the transcontinental lines.

A. Mostly by the Union and Southern Pacifics in connection with the San Pedro line, and by the Santa Fe. Mostly by those two lines.

Q. By the San Pedro line you mean the line from Salt Lake to Los Angeles?

A. Yes, sir; the Salt Lake route.

Q. Prior to 1901 were there any other routes that you sometimes used?

A. We did ship some over the C. R. I. & P. and the El Paso and Southern Pacific, yes, sir.

Q. You do not ship that way any more?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was your business solicited that way?

A. Our business usually comes to us routed by the California agents, and that routing is usually confirmed through the Chicago office of the Union Pacific.

Q. The Union Pacific?

A. The Union and Southern Pacific.

Q. The Southern Pacific, yes.

A. Yes.

Q. Well, previous to the time that the two offices here were 2916 consolidated——

A. Well, it was treated a good deal the same way at that time. That is, our agent specified.

Q. You said it was routed by the consignee in California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the routing would be confirmed through the Chicago office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the case of shipments via El Paso, that you spoke of, which Chicago office did you mean—the Union Pacific or the Southern Pacific?

A. I could not state positively as to that.

Q. I mean at the time their offices were separate?

A. Yes, I understand. I think we shipped very little by the way of El Paso. I think most of our shipments moved through Ogden at all times.

Q. Can you imagine any reason, Mr. Jilson, why shipments by El Paso should be confirmed through the Union Pacific office at that time when they were separate? They did not participate in the traffic, did they?

A. Well, I did not intend to convey that idea to you.

Q. That is what you said. I thought you misspoke.

A. I did; certainly.

Q. You said Union Pacific. That is the reason I thought you misspoke.

A. Well, I had reference—of course before that time it was Southern Pacific.

Q. Yes, Southern Pacific; that is what I thought. How does your traffic to Portland move?

A. We do not ship to Portland at the present time.

Q. Did you formerly ship there?

A. We did formerly ship there.

Q. And how did it move?

A. We generally divided the business up between the North-2917 ern Pacific and the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line. I think the Great Northern had some.

Q. Do you remember when the agencies in Chicago were separate?

A. Yes, sir; I do.

Q. Did those agencies solicit your traffic in those days?

A. I think they did.

Q. Did any of your traffic in those days ever move by New Orleans to the coast?

A. Yes, sir; it did—New Orleans and the Southern Pacific.

Q. To New Orleans by the Illinois Central, and then Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Since the consolidation of the agencies here—the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific—are you called upon by representatives of that agency?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way is your traffic to the coast solicited by that joint agent?

A. Well, as I said before, our routings are specified, and they are confirmed through the Chicago office. They are specified just simply Union and Southern Pacific, without regard to junctions. I think the routing orders are printed that way, if I am not mistaken—Union and Southern Pacific.

Q. Does any of your business now move via New Orleans or El Paso?

A. No, sir.

Q. It does not?

A. No, sir.

Q. You spoke of some of your business moving by the San Pedro route.

A. Yes; quite a large percentage of it at the present time, in connection with the Union Pacific.

Q. In connection with the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that traffic solicited by some one?

2918 A. That comes the same way as the other.

Q. And from whom do you receive the confirmation of those shipments?

A. From representatives of the Union Pacific in Chicago.

Q. Mr. Jilson, is the Emerson Manufacturing Company one of the largest concerns of the kind in the country?

A. Yes, sir; I think the largest in the city.

Q. How is that?

A. The largest in Rockford, yes, sir.

Q. Rockford is a manufacturing town, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is one of the large concerns of the country, in that line, is it not?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Mr. Jilson, you were asked if you remembered when the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific had separate solicitors in this territory?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way did the Southern Pacific representatives at that time seek to route your traffic—by way of Ogden as well as El Paso and New Orleans?

A. I think that as far as I am able to recall our shipments went by way of Ogden at that time, with the exception of one occasionally by El Paso; and some went by New Orleans and the Southern Pacific.

Q. The Southern Pacific agent would seek it whichever way he could get it, would he not?

A. Yes. As I stated just a minute ago, our cars were routed by the consignee.

Q. Has that always been so?

A. That has always been so. And where they failed to do that, I respected the way the last car went, usually.

2919 Q. And the duty of the agent in this territory, then, was generally to check up the shipments, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir; to see that it went by the route that was specified.

Mr. LOVETT. I do not believe I have any further questions.

2920 C. S. JONES,

being duy sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Jones, what is your business?

A. I am a wholesale grocery broker.

Q. At what point?

A. Peoria, Illinois.

Q. How large a town is Peoria?

A. About 80,000.

Q. In general, what kind of a town is it, as to the business carried on there?

A. Quite large.

Q. Well, is it a manufacturing town?

A. Yes, sir; and it is a great distributing center.

Q. A great distributing center?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What railroads are there at Peoria?

A. I think there are 14 altogether.

Q. Can you name them without much trouble?

A. The Rock Island, Alton, North-Western, T. P. & W., C. P. & St. L., Iowa Central, C. B. & Q., Chicago & Alton, Vandalia, Big Four, Lake Erie & Western, Peoria and Pekin Union. I think that about covers it, as I remember.

Q. How long have you been in the whole-sale grocery business at Peoria?

A. Since 1895.

Q. Previous to that what was your business?

A. I was with the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad from 1890 up to that time.

Q. And before that?

A. I was with the Chicago & North-Western from 1886 to 1890.

Q. Does your firm ship to the Pacific coast, or import from the Pacific coast?

2921 A. The Pacific coast is one of the bases of supplies for us. We ship more from there than we do to there.

Q. Over what lines does your traffic from the coast move?

A. From the coast it moves Southern Pacific and Santa Fe, largely.

Q. And which route of the Southern Pacific?

A. It is now coming largely via the Ogden gateway. Part of it via El Paso.

Q. Are you called upon by freight solicitors?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you been during all the time you have been in business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific had separate agencies?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did any of your business in those days ever move via New Orleans from the coast?

A. A very small portion of it.

Q. Did some of it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did it happen to?

A. Some of it was destined into points in southern Illinois—not Peoria proper. If, for instance, on the line of the Illinois Central, and we could give them the business we handed it to them.

Q. And did a considerable amount move via El Paso?

A. Yes, sir; more than via New Orleans.

Q. Which way did the Southern Pacific agent endeavor to bring the business this way at the time that they had separate agencies? Which way did he solicit the business?

A. Well, he wasn't very particular with us, as a rule. At that time our houses were on Southern Pacific lines largely, and of course naturally he would incline to the southern gateway.

Q. That is what I meant.

A. But he would take it either way.

Q. Inclined to the southern gateway, and if he could not get 2922 it that way he would take it the other way?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the Union Pacific man call on you and solicit your business, too?

A. At that time?

Q. Yes.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Which route did he solicit by?
A. He would solicit by Ogden.
Q. The only way he had?
A. To the Missouri river.
Q. Do you recall the fact of the agencies here being consolidated?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Since that time have you been called upon by the solicitors?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Which way do they now try to route the traffic, if either?
A. Well, that is largely governed by conditions. They seem glad to get the business either way, but I think they prefer the Missouri river. But it is largely on account of our local representatives there that might be soliciting the business with them. If it is the Rock Island, I should think they would take it El Paso; and if it was the Chicago & Alton, or Missouri river lines, they would want it to come that way.
Q. They call on you by themselves at times, don't they?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And which way do they try to bring the business from California then?
A. I think their preference is Missouri river.

Cross examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. You spoke of the solicitor for the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific calling with your local representatives, Mr. Jones. You mean the representatives of your local lines?
A. Yes; and sometimes of lines that are not located in Peoria 2923 but interested in traffic moving from the west to Peoria.
Q. The agent of the Union Pacific frequently calls with those representatives, does he?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And they try to work the business together?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. From what portion of California do your supplies principally come, Mr. Jones?
A. From San Francisco, Fresno, San Jose.
Q. And from Southern California?
A. And from Southern California, Yuba City.
Q. You testified just now as to the conditions existing prior to the consolidation of the agencies in 1901—that your houses at that time were located on the Southern Pacific tracks. Do you mean at these same places in California?
A. Yes, sir. I meant that the Santa Fe reached more of them now than they did at that time.
Q. And the Southern Pacific agent at that time was largely—it was largely immaterial whether it came by way of El Paso or by way at Ogden, I believe you testified?
A. Well, we felt that he preferred the southern gateway.

Q. Get a little longer haul that way?

A. Yes, sir. But I do not think he was as particular in our case, because our traffic does not admit of slow time. We want as quick time as we can get.

Q. But he was very glad to get it either way, wasn't he?

A. I think so; yes, sir.

Q. Now, there has been no material change in his position about that, has there? That is the joint agent. They are very glad to get it either way still, aren't they—either by way of the Missouri river or by way of El Paso?

A. Yes, sir.

2924 Q. Various lines solicit you for that traffic, do they not, Mr. Jones?

A. Yes, sir.

Redirect examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Jones, in answer to Judge Lovett you just said that the joint agent was glad to get the traffic now either way?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By that statement you did not mean to modify your testimony given on direct examination to the fact that they preferred to get it by Omaha?

A. That wasn't the question he asked me, as I understood it.

Q. No, but I said you did not intend to modify your answer that you made in answer to my question?

A. Not at all; no, sir.

Q. It is the fact, is it not, that he tries to route it via Omaha?

A. Well, as I say, he is not so particular in our business as he might be in others. Our business is all shipped with drafts, and we want quick time, on account of the return of the money, to the coast, and we want fast time on account of the business that we are in.

Q. Yes, I understand. But you testified on your direct examination that since the consolidation of the agencies the preferred route by this joint agency was by the Missouri river?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the fact?

A. Yes, sir.

2925 JACOB YOUNGE,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Younge, where do you live?

A. Peoria, Illinois.

Q. What is your business?

A. Traffic manager for the Wilson Interest.

Q. And what is the business of the Wilson Interest?

A. Distillery, wholesale grocery and packing house.

Q. How long have you been with the Wilson Interest?

A. From June, 1903, and am with them at the present time.

Q. And previous to that what was your business?

A. Traffic manager for the Acme Harvester Company, from 1900 to 1903.

Q. And previous to 1900 what was your business?

A. I was in the local office of the Santa Fe at Pekin, Illinois.

Q. Do you remember years ago, when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate soliciting agencies here in Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you acquainted with the gentlemen who officered those agencies?

A. Mr. Knight and Mr. Neimeyer.

Q. You knew them, did you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the Acme Harvester Company ship to the Pacific coast?

A. They shipped both to the south Pacific coast and the north Pacific coast, but the heaviest traffic went to the north Pacific coast.

Q. Was your traffic at that time solicited by these agencies?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way did the Southern Pacific agent endeavor to route the traffic?

2926 A. It depended largely upon what local representative was with him.

Q. Suppose he was by himself?

A. If he was by himself he would try to get the longest haul.

Q. That would be which way?

A. That would be by El Paso or New Orleans gateway.

Q. And if he was with the agent of some intervening carrier, I suppose he worked with it?

A. He would be glad to get it by the Ogden gateway.

Q. But when he was soliciting by himself he solicited by the south?

A. By the longest gateway—by the longest route.

Q. And how about the Union Pacific?

A. The Union Pacific man solicited by Kansas City or Omaha.

Q. You remember the fact of these agencies being consolidated here, do you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does the Wilson Interest, which you have mentioned—that is, the distillery, wholesale grocery and packing house—have to do with traffic to and from the coast?

A. The distillery ships to the coast, and the grocery house receives from the coast.

Q. What about the packing house?

A. The packing house does not ship.

Q. It has no trans-continental business?

A. It has no trans-continental business.

Q. Is the distillery product and the grocery traffic that you have spoken of the subject of solicitation by agents?

A. Yes; it is.

Q. And do the agents of this joint agency call on you now, in soliciting business?

2927 A. They solicit the business by the Kansas City and Omaha gateways.

Q. How often are you called on by them?

A. I would judge about every ten days or two weeks.

Q. Is the traffic that you control large or small in volume?

A. At the present time it is small.

Q. How was it three or four or five years ago?

A. At the time before the earthquake at San Francisco, we had sort of an agency at San Francisco and we did more whiskey business there then than we are doing now; in fact, we are entirely out of it at the present time.

Q. Is this Wilson Interest, the Wilson whiskey, the Wilson highball, we see advertised so much?

A. No, sir.

Q. Not the same?

A. We don't claim to own that.

Q. I understand it was not, but I wanted to give you a chance to say so.

A. No. We have a better product.

Q. Now, in shipping to the north Pacific coast, when you were with the Harvester Company, which way did your traffic move?

A. The traffic moved via the various routes—Santa Fe to Colorado Springs and Denver, and the Colorado Midland, and the O. S. L. and O. R. & N.; by Omaha, Union Pacific and O. S. L. and O. R. & N.; by the Minnesota Transfer, Great Northern or Northern Pacific. But the heaviest traffic moved by the Omaha gateway, O. S. L. and O. R. & N. to the north Pacific coast.

Q. Was that traffic solicited by the different lines?

A. By all of them.

Q. Since you have been representing the distillery, have you shipped to north Pacific coast points?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And over what routes does that traffic go?

2928 A. That we move both over the Union Pacific and the O. S. L. and O. R. & N., and via the Minnesota Transfer, Great Northern, and Northern Pacific.

Q. Has that business been solicited by those lines?

A. It has been solicited by all three lines.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I believe you stated that when you were with the Acme Harvester Machine Company and when the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific had separate solicitors in this territory, that the Southern Pacific representative, when he called in company with the representatives of other lines, attempted to work the business with such lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whether by way of Ogden or El Paso?

A. Or New Orleans, by the Illinois Central.

Q. And when he was soliciting alone he sought to work it by the longest route?

A. The longest gateway.

Q. He usually worked it in connection with other lines, didn't he?

A. Well, it was about equally divided. He would call alone and he would call with other representatives.

Q. You are not interested in the division of the rate between the different carriers?

A. Not in any way, shape, or form.

Q. You care nothing about that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, did he work actively with the Union Pacific agent by way of Ogden?

A. The Union Pacific by Ogden?

Q. Yes. I say did the Southern Pacific agent work actively with the Union Pacific and other lines leading to Ogden?

2929 A. Would he work with other lines leading to Ogden?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All of the lines leading to Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. All lines leading to El Paso?

A. All lines leading to El Paso, and all leading to New Orleans.

Q. That business was solicited by all of the lines in this territory, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The North-Western, the St. Paul, the Burlington, the Rock Island, the Missouri Pacific, the Santa Fe—all of them were soliciting it?

A. All those that you mentioned, yes, sir.

Q. And others besides?

A. Yes, and you could add a few to that.

Q. You never shipped any business to Portland by way of El Paso and New Orleans, did you?

A. Via El Paso?

Q. Yes, or New Orleans.

A. We did not. We did have some cars to Portland via the Santa Fe, and the Southern Pacific by Sacramento to Portland.

Q. The Santa Fe?

A. On Santa Fe solicitation, yes, sir.

Q. On Santa Fe solicitation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never shipped anything to California by way of the boat line down from Portland, did you?

A. No, sir.

2930 JOHN J. BOLGER,

being duly sworn as a witness for the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Bolger?

A. Chicago.

Q. What is your business?

A. Traffic manager for the Michigan Stove Company.

Q. How long have you been traffic manager for the Michigan Stove Company?

A. Over four years.

Q. Previous to that what was your business?

A. Division agent for the Baltimore & Ohio.

Q. How long did you occupy that position?

A. About a year, being promoted from station agent, prior to that, as rate clerk.

Q. How many years all together were you with the B. & O.?

A. A little over three.

Q. In Chicago, and except when you were station agent at Chicago Junction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Previous to that what was your business?

A. With Swift & Company, Stock Yards.

Q. I don't want to suggest to you, but weren't you connected with the California Fruit Transportation Company?

A. Yes. In explanation of that I will say that the Swift family owned the California Fruit Transportation cars. I was in New York, and in the field there (that is, we call the field the territory of fruit) as assistant to the general manager down there for a year.

2931 Q. And what was your employment by Swift & Company in Chicago?

A. Rate clerk, in charge of all rates and tariffs.

Q. How long did you occupy that position?

A. About five years.

Q. And previous to that what was your business?

A. Chief clerk of the Illinois Central Fordham yards.

Q. Did you occupy another position with the Illinois Central for a time?

A. Yes, sir: chief route clerk and chief billing clerk. I worked my way up all through the office.

Q. Then, you have been in the railroad service, either as representing the shippers or working for the railroads direct, for how many years?

A. Practically ever since I graduated from school. Prior to the Illinois Central service I was with the Milwaukee & St. Paul, about three or three and one-half years, and with the Michigan Central before that.

Q. You have been at least 25 years in the railroad service either in connection with the traffic of shippers or working for railroads?

A. Yes; I should judge 22 years all told.

Q. Do you remember when the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific had separate agencies here in Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how the Southern Pacific were working their Pacific coast business, where they could, then?

A. When I was with the Illinois Central they were handling it via New Orleans, Sunset Route.

Q. Was that actively worked that way?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Union Pacific were working it, I suppose, by——

A. When I was with the Illinois Central, the I. C. had no connections proper with the Union Pacific, as their Omaha line
2932 was not finished until about 1901. In the latter end of the year I met the entire inspecting party at Omaha. That was in 1901, I believe.

Q. You remember the Union Pacific agency here working business by that route at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the time you say the Southern Pacific was working over your road, by New Orleans?

A. Yes, because when I was with the Milwaukee & St. Paul, the St. Paul had on their California fast train, and we loaded everything that time for the Union Pacific, that came that way, on this California train, via Omaha.

Q. How was that competition for coast business between the Southern Pacific by New Orleans and the Union Pacific by Omaha at that time? Was it active or otherwise?

A. Yes, it was keen.

Q. Do you remember, Mr. Bolger, in those days, prior to the amalgamation of those agencies, an Illinois Central train numbered 51?

A. Yes, that was their fast manifest train.

Q. Where did that run to?

A. Chicago to New Orleans.

Q. Did coast traffic move on that train?

A. Yes, sir; whatever was offered, and provided it was the class that was carried on the manifest train.

Q. What is a manifest train?

A. It is the fastest freight train on the road. It is a system, I might say, invented or at least copyrighted by J. M. Daily to put certain highest classes of freight on that train, with a manifest tacked on the car, and the car waybill accompanies it, the car number,
2933 etc. There is a lot of detail. The car number is known by a letter, marked after it leaves Chicago, for easy tracing in the car record office. In the operating department it is a second class train, and has the right over everything except the passenger trains.

1799

Q. What was the time of that train to New Orleans?

A. I could not give the exact number of hours now. I can probably chase up some of my old instructions on it. But I think it was in the neighborhood of 60 hours. I could not give the exact time.

Q. But it was a fast train, was it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You spoke of this train, number 51, carrying only commodities of a certain kind. What was it—first class, or something below first class?

A. No; there was a circular gotten up, as a rule, in conjunction with the operating department—the traffic department. The traffic department are usually the originators, at least they have the say as to what commodities shall be carried on it. For instance, all goods of a perishable nature, and as a rule all commodities above a certain class, or any commodity on which time is desirable and in which the railroads are interested in getting the business.

Q. How often did that train run—every day?

A. Daily; sometimes in several sections.

Q. Were those cars unloaded at New Orleans—those containing Pacific coast business—or did they go through?

A. They would go through, except the merchandise, of course. Of course that all depended on the arrangements there. I didn't know what arrangements they had there?

2934 Q. But as to a large part of the traffic, was it through traffic?

A. Through traffic of course would go through; at least we would never——

Q. In the same cars? That is what I mean.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you were with Swift & Company, did they ship to the coast from Chicago or from other points?

A. Very little from Chicago.

Q. Did their product all move under refrigeration?

A. Not all.

Q. Cured meats do not, do they?

A. Well, certain classes of cured meats do not.

Q. What routes did that product take to the coast, so far as it moved from Chicago?

A. Up to that I could not state. Their plants at Omaha, Kansas City and East St. Louis were under the control of traffic managers, who in turn were under the control of Mr. A. R. Fay, traffic manager at Chicago.

Q. Mr. Fay is in charge of all the traffic, is he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had charge of the Chicago business only?

A. Of their rates and tariffs, yes.

Q. Of their rates and tariffs?

A. And later on he checked up the rates from all the plants, and bills of lading.

Q. How does the business of the Stove Company, which you now represent, move to the Pacific coast?

A. To what are known as California terminals, excepting Portland; we give as much as possible to the Santa Fe line. To north Pacific coast terminals, of course the Northern Pacific and Great Northern.

2935 Q. Does any of it move to Portland over the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line?

A. There have been one or two cars moved that way, but that was at the earnest request of the consignees, who put it up to us as sort of a favor to route it that way.

Q. Are you called on by the soliciting agents of the joint agency here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do they endeavor to route the traffic to the coast now?

A. Of course he first solicits by the Union Pacific, and when he knows he can't get it that way he asks to have it routed Southern Pacific.

Q. By Southern Pacific, you mean by the southern gateway?

A. The Southern Pacific, when I cut out Union Pacific on him, wants to get either Ogden, and sometimes—well, that is within the immediate past he has been asked to have it moved El Paso, and at the solicitation of one of the Rock Island men I did send one car that way.

Q. What do you mean by cutting out the Union Pacific?

A. Why, ignoring them in routing.

Q. You say he first asks to get it by the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you cut that out——

A. He then asks to get it by the Southern Pacific in connection with any other line.

Q. Oh, I see. Where are your stove works?

A. Detroit.

Q. Do you ship any from Detroit by way of New Orleans now?

A. No, sir.

2936 Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Did I understand you to say, Mr. Bolger, that all of your California shipments now go by way of the Santa Fe?

A. If possible, yes, sir.

Q. And all of your north Pacific coast shipments go by the Northern Pacific or Great Northern?

A. Yes, sir, except as I stated——

Q. You do not ship anything by the Union Pacific or Southern Pacific if you can help it?

A. No.

Q. It isn't a very good line, is it?

A. Well, it wasn't to me.

Q. It wasn't to you?
A. No, sir.
Q. Don't they give good service?
A. Not as good as the Santa Fe; no, sir.
Q. The Santa Fe gives better service to California, does it?
A. Yes, sir. As an illustration, I can put a car from Detroit into the coast over the Santa Fe lines in—I have done it in 12 days.
Q. And how long did it take over the Union and Southern Pacific?
A. Well, I had one car on that road that was in pretty near two months—so I cut it out.
Q. Two months?
A. Yes.
Q. The Union Pacific and Southern Pacific are a shorter line, too, aren't they?
A. Well, I couldn't say. You can't say it is a shorter line
2937 when one line can put it in in 12 days and the other takes two months.
Q. I mean shorter in length; not in time.
A. In distance, yes.
Q. It is the shorter line in length, and yet it takes two months as against 12 days?
A. They have a shorter line than the Santa Fe, but it took them the longer time.
Q. You would consider that a pretty rotten line that would take two months to move a car from Detroit to California?
A. I wouldn't consider the line bad; the system might be bad.
Q. You consider the management bad?
A. Yes, you might have it that way.
Q. This manifest train over the Illinois Central from Chicago to New Orleans; do you happen to know that that train is still in operation?
A. It was the last I heard of it, not very long ago.
Q. Your testimony on your direct examination about that train existing in 1901 and all those details about it: you did not mention the fact that it has been running every day since 1901, did you?
A. Because since 1901 I have not been connected with the Illinois Central.
Q. Oh, that is the reason?
A. Yes.
Q. But you do know that as a regular thing it has been running ever since then?
A. Yes.
Q. Does that train carry only California freight?
A. Oh, no; it carried everything for a point south of Cairo, Illinois, and later on——
Q. That is, this manifest train was not loaded, then, ex-
2938 clusively with California freight?
A. No, sir. First they included Cairo, but later they cut it out and included then everything for Memphis and points south.

Q. You don't know what proportion of it was made up of California freight?

A. No. It runs the same as all traffic does—some days heavy and some days light.

Q. Some days none?

A. Some days light. Some days heavy and some days light.

Q. They do not have any regular cars, then, assigned to California business?

A. At the latter end I would not care to state, because I was stationed at the yards out at Burnside, about 14 miles out, and all the detail work was handled at the local office. Of course I hadn't been there for three or four years, so I didn't pay much attention to that phase of the question.

Q. Then, in your testimony, on direct examination as to the transfer of cars at New Orleans to the Southern Pacific, for California, do you know anything about the number of the cars or what proportion of that train moved that way?

A. No, I could not tell the exact proportion.

Q. Do you know anything about the volume of business that moved that way in 1901?

A. No. That part of the thing was left to clerks who were in charge of that detail.

Q. And you were not one of those clerks?

A. No, I was rating, etc. The only thing we would know is that on certain days traffic was heavy and on certain days it was light.

Q. Has the Illinois Central always been trying to move California business that way?

A. It is, naturally, yes.

2939. Q. It does so still, doesn't it?

A. I couldn't answer, because they have never solicited that way from us.

Q. As far as your knowledge extended they attempted to move it that way, didn't they?

A. At that time they did not have their Omaha line built; so they could only move it one way. They had to move either by St. Louis or New Orleans, and they naturally wanted to get the long haul on the business.

Q. That is natural still, isn't it—that they would want to get the long haul out of it?

A. Presumably.

Q. If they could move it by way of New Orleans to-day from Chicago they would do it, wouldn't they?

A. They don't solicit it.

Q. Do they solicit it either way?

A. They don't come to me either way.

Q. Well, they can't get your business, but I mean generally.

A. Well, they don't try; so I couldn't say whether they could get it or not.

Q. They would have to turn it over to the Southern Pacific or the Union Pacific if they would get it, wouldn't they?

A. They wouldn't have to turn it over to the Union Pacific.
Q. Or the Southern Pacific, at New Orleans?
A. They could give it to the Southern Pacific.
Q. How long since they solicited business that way, do you know?
A. No, I could not say. They never solicited it from me.
Q. They never have solicited it from you?
A. No, sir.
Q. During the time prior to 1901 that you testified about on your direct examination, when there were separate solicitors, I understood you to testify that the Southern Pacific was soliciting
2940 California business by way of New Orleans.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was that the only way they solicited?
A. It is the only way I know of.
Q. Didn't they try to get it by way of El Paso?
A. I don't remember a car moving that way.
Q. I am asking you about the solicitation. Didn't they attempt to solicit it by way of El Paso?
A. The only time I would see their men would be to get the volume of business moving via New Orleans.
Q. And you assume that——
A. Well, to answer your question fully, I would say that I was employed by the Illinois Central, and in duty to my employers, at least for their benefit, I wanted to give business, anything that came unrouted our way—I would give that via New Orleans, Southern Pacific; and that is the sort of business that some of the solicitors used to come to me for—stuff that would come to the eastern lines unrouted.
Q. Do you mean to testify that the Southern Pacific did solicit business by way of New Orleans, over your road, from this territory, from Chicago?
A. There were men called on me in those days, yes, sir.
Q. From Chicago?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And did any solicit it by way of El Paso or Ogden?
A. Well, they could not get it that way.
Q. Could not solicit business by way of El Paso?
A. Too many of the solicitors coming around to give them an idea of the traffic that was moving, coming to us unrouted. They 2941 would keep a tab on the cars, you know.
Q. I am asking not about you but about the Southern Pacific solicitors. I understood you to testify on your direct examination that prior to the consolidation of the agencies, the Southern Pacific solicitors sought to move the business by way of New Orleans?
A. Yes, sir, that is the way it would go.
Q. Are you testifying only as to how they solicited you and the line you represented, or solicited generally?
A. I don't want to answer generally. I am trying to tell you what they did to me.

Q. When you were connected with the Illinois Central?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And the Illinois Central had no line to Omaha at that time?
A. No.
Q. And that the only intelligent way for them to solicit you was to solicit by way of New Orleans?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. But you don't mean to say they did not solicit as earnestly with lines going by way of Omaha, do you?
A. Not knowing, I couldn't say.
Q. Nor by way of El Paso?
A. No. It would be hardly possible if a man comes into your office and asks you to route business against your road by St. Louis, although it has been done. Wanted us to give our unrouted business over the eastern lines to the Illinois Central.
Q. I know, but you are testifying still about how he solicited you, and I was asking you how he solicited other lines reaching from this territory to Omaha or to El Paso. You don't know anything about that?
2942 A. No, I wouldn't answer as to that.
Q. Now this business that they solicited, in your knowledge, was business that you or the Illinois Central controlled, and they solicited then by way of New Orleans; isn't that true?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. But you don't know of any instance where they went to the merchant and solicited the merchant's business by way of New Orleans, when the control of it had not been secured by a New Orleans line, do you?
A. The only way I would know that would be through the local office.
Q. That does not quite answer the question. You don't know of them doing that.
A. The reason we know of that is that the commercial office would telephone over to the local office to look out for such and such traffic.
Q. You are speaking now of the Illinois Central?
A. Yes.
Q. I was speaking of the Southern Pacific.
A. I know, but we get the communications from both offices. Of course we could only make a pencil memorandum of it, and when the billing would go through the occasion for the memorandum's use having passed, it would be destroyed.
Q. But do you know of a single instance where a Southern Pacific soliciting agent went out to the shipper and solicited business by way of New Orleans when that business had not been secured by the Illinois Central or some other New Orleans line?
A. No, I would not want to swear to that.
Q. You would not want to swear to that?
A. No, sir.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. From your experience in railroading, can you imagine of 2943 any reason why the Southern Pacific should not have sought to get the long haul from the Mississippi River to California rather than the short haul from Ogden to California?

A. Only natural to increase their revenue.

Q. Yes; it is the natural thing, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I thought from the tone of Judge Lovett's question that it would be an extraordinary thing if they should try to get that long haul. That would not seem so to you as a railroad man, would it?

A. If a soliciting agent working for me did not endeavor to get the long haul where he could get it, why his days would be short.

Q. I should think so. Now, the difference to the Southern Pacific in getting business from this territory by New Orleans or by Ogden is, that they get the Mississippi River rate through, don't they, from New Orleans? They get that haul clear through?

A. Get their mileage percentage or division of the entire hauling.

Q. Do you know the distance from New Orleans to San Francisco?

A. No; I would pass it up. I knew it, but——

Q. You know it is above 2,000 miles, don't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know the distance from Ogden to San Francisco?

A. You've got me now: I can't give it in exact mileage.

Q. Now you were speaking of both offices. You said both offices would telephone in or send in word.

A. Yes.

Q. What do you mean by both offices—the Southern Pacific and the Illinois Central?

A. Yes. There were times when the commercial agent of the Illi-
2944 nois Central would telephone over to look out for certain shipments, and sometimes the soliciting agent would leave a little note in there, but as a rule it was a telephone communication.

Q. And the Southern Pacific agents did that?

A. Yes, sir. That is common practice amongst all the offices in Chicago.

Q. Then the Southern Pacific agent, in some way, either by soliciting the shipper, or in some way, had learned about this shipment?

A. Yes, sir. I usually kept a record of unrouted cars, so when the soliciting agents came out I would have a record for them, so they could make a report to their respective officials.

Q. Then, you did not discover at any time that the Southern Pacific were running away from that business, did you?

A. No.

Q. Trying to avoid it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever shipped anything over this consolidated line—the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific—except this one car that you spoke of?

A. Oh, yes; they got our business up until a few years ago.

Q. Now that is what I wanted to get at. That was an isolated case, wasn't it—that case where it took two months to get the car through?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Then, was your statement that the Santa Fe gave you better service than the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific based wholly on the fact that one car was two months going through, or was it ordinarily better by the Santa Fe?

A. Ordinarily it has been better by the Santa Fe; and then I got answers to my communications and tracers from the Santa Fe offices much better than I did from the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific offices.

2945 Q. How extensive is your Pacific coast business, Mr. Bolger?

A. The entire Pacific coast business will probably run from 60 to 100 or more cars a year; that is, figuring gas and coal.

Q. Is Detroit in the Cincinnati territory? Does it take the Cincinnati rates?

A. Detroit-Cleveland.

Q. Detroit, Cleveland, and Cincinnati are all in the same territory as far as rates are concerned, aren't they?

A. We get the same rates from Detroit as we do from Chicago.

Q. To the coast?

A. Yes. Detroit-Cleveland, they call it, as a rule.

Q. How is that?

A. As a rule, they call it Detroit-Cleveland territory.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Nevertheless and not withstanding, when a car went from Chicago to New Orleans, for San Francisco, it was farther from its final destination when it got to New Orleans than it was when it started, wasn't it?

A. Well, that didn't make any difference on the hauling.

Q. It doesn't make any difference?

A. No, sir.

Q. It was the fact, though, wasn't it?

A. Yes. Send a car over——

Q. Answer that question.

A. Send a car over the Rock Island-El Paso route and you will get better time on it than some of the cars by Denver and Ogden.

Q. Yes. Now come back to my question. When a car was destined from Chicago to San Francisco and moved by way of New Orleans, it was farther from San Francisco when it got to New Orleans than when it left Chicago, wasn't it?

2946. A. That handicap was overcome by the better train service.

Q. Well, you haven't answered the question yet.

A. On the actual mileage do you wish to know?

Q. Yes.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. There was better train service, then, by way of New Orleans?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Than the all-rail line?
A. They are both all-rail lines.
Q. Well, the short-rail line.
A. Yes.
Q. Is that better than by the Santa Fe?
A. The El Paso route better than the Santa Fe?
Q. No, the New Orleans route.
A. No, that is not better than the Santa Fe.
Q. Is it as good?
A. Well, I haven't worked anything via New Orleans-Southern Pacific on the stoves.
Q. When you said just now the better train service overcame the difference in distance——
A. I am speaking of just when I had the actual experience with it.
Q. When you were speaking just now of the better train service by way of overcoming the distance in mileage I was asking about by way of New Orleans. Do you mean to say there was better train service from Chicago by way of New Orleans to San Francisco than by the direct rail route?
A. At the time I speak of, in 1895, there was.
Q. In 1895?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Has that condition been changed since?
A. Well, I never shipped anything that way since I have been using the Santa Fe. So I know that they——
Q. So when you quit shipping by way of New Orleans, the 2947 best train service was that way, was it?
A. Yes, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE. He was not shipping; he was——
WITNESS. I was not shipping. Understand, I was with the Illinois Central that way then. So I know the actual conditions in the operating department.
Q. Since you have become a shipper you have not tried that route over which the best train service prevailed, according to your last information?
A. I know I can't beat the Santa Fe on it now.
Q. You know you can't beat the Santa Fe?
A. Yes.
Q. It is customary, I believe you testified, when one agent discovers traffic to notify the other line of that, in order to get him after it?
A. It is usually left to the clerks to do that.
Q. What is that?
A. When I was there the clerks usually attended to it. When they came under the jurisdiction of the agent, it usually depended on some clerk.

Q. Well, it is customary, isn't it, for soliciting agents to work with the lines on which the traffic originates, to work together to control the traffic?

A. Yes, if they can.

Q. Well, they do work together, don't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the only evidence that you have that the Southern Pacific ever solicited any traffic by way of New Orleans is those telephone communications that you——

A. Yes, and my acquaintance with the different railroad clerks and shipping clerks in Chicago keeping tab on what we were doing.

Q. Keeping tab on the Southern Pacific solicitors?

A. No, on the general railroad situation. We usually met
2948 and talked affairs over.

Q. And did you understand that way that the Southern Pacific was soliciting by way of New Orleans?

A. Why, I knew that from my experience with the Illinois Central and the traffic moving there. I knew that traffic was moving to the coast via the Milwaukee & St. Paul, from my experience with that line.

Q. You knew then the Southern Pacific was soliciting it by way of the St. Paul?

A. No, sir. You asked if they were soliciting by the St. Paul?

Q. You seemed to infer that the Southern Pacific was soliciting traffic by way of New Orleans because traffic moved by way of New Orleans to the Pacific coast.

A. Yes; and I knew that——

Q. Now you said that you also knew that the St. Paul was moving traffic to the Pacific coast because you were connected with the——

A. The Union Pacific was moving and soliciting via Omaha because the St. Paul were loading all their stuff via Omaha, to be turned over to the Union Pacific there.

Q. Well, didn't the Southern Pacific get a portion of that haul?

A. From Ogden, yes; couldn't get there any other way.

Q. How was that?

A. In those days it couldn't get there any other way.

Q. Wouldn't you infer they were working it that way too, for the same reason?

A. It is not natural to infer that way.

Q. Why not?

A. Because the Southern Pacific man was looking after the long haul.

Q. That is, you think he ought to have been looking after the long haul?

A. If he was doing what he was paid for, he would be doing that.

2949 Q. Suppose he couldn't get the long haul, wouldn't he rather have a haul of 850 miles than none?

A. That would look better than none. He would have to take what he could get.

Q. So if he couldn't get it by way of the long haul he would take it by way of the short haul, that is a haul of 850 miles, wouldn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So he would solicit by all the ways he could get it, naturally soliciting the long haul?

A. He would use his strongest cards for the longest haul.

Q. Then, if he couldn't get it that way, what? Try the next best?

A. The next best.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Now, having had this long explanation, nothing has happened, has there, to call to your mind any circumstance that makes you doubt that your original statement is correct—that the Southern Pacific was trying to reach California by the southern gateway and the Union Pacific by Omaha, when they were competing, before the consolidation? Do you understand my question?

A. No, not the way you put it.

Q. I say, has anything that has been developed by Judge Lovett in his long cross examination caused you to doubt your original statement that you made in answer to me, that when the offices were separate the Southern Pacific was working business by the south and the Union Pacific by Omaha?

A. No, nothing causes me to doubt that because that I knew.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Has anything that Mr. Severance said made you doubt your statement just now, that if they could not get it by way of 2950 New Orleans they would probably try to get it by way of El Paso or Ogden?

A. No, nothing has made me doubt that either.

Q. I am not sure that you have modified what I understood you to testify some time ago, Mr. Bolger; that you did not know that the Southern Pacific ever solicited business from this territory by way of New Orleans, from the shipper. What is your statement on that?

A. Why, I answered that before, as I recollect it, that I knew they solicited business that way because the Illinois Central was getting traffic that way.

Q. And you knew that the Southern Pacific was soliciting it from shippers in Chicago?

A. Yes, because, as I stated before, I had them come out to me at Fordham yards to get a record of the cars moving that way.

Q. By the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that evidence that they solicited that from the shipper?

A. It undoubtedly is.

Q. They would not do that about a car that was controlled by the Illinois Central agent, would they?

A. They would not know anything about it until, as a rule, they were notified of the movement of it.

Q. Well, after they were notified——

A. Then the business was secured.

Q. Under what circumstances would they want this car that you speak of, that they came out to the Fordham yards?

A. Well, they would come out to me, for instance in your case, and say, "Mr. Bolger, any cars coming from the Lake Shore or the Nickel Plate, or the Belt (as the case might be) unrouted, we would like you to give them to the Southern Pacific."

2951 Q. And you would call that soliciting business from shippers? Now mind you I am not asking about cases where they worked with the Illinois Central agent to help him control business that he had secured, but business where they solicited independently of the shipper.

A. Yes, I would call that soliciting both from shippers and railroad men.

Q. You would call that soliciting both from shippers and from railroad men?

A. Yes. And then there were industries on the Belt, close, that I knew they were going to for Southern Pacific.

Q. Going to industries located on what?

A. On the Belt Railway of Chicago.

Q. And soliciting from them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For California, by way of New Orleans?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know any of those shippers or industries?

A. I can't recall now, because they were scattered from Burnside to Stock Yards.

Q. Couldn't you name one?

A. There were a number of industries at the Yard. I couldn't name any one in particular that I know they were going to.

Q. How would you happen to know they were going to them?

A. In talks with their men in their railroad departments.

Q. You mean in the railroad departments of these shippers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They would tell about Southern Pacific solicitors being there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember any one who ever said that?

A. I can't recall any particular name.

2952 Q. What Southern Pacific solicitors were they?

A. I can't give you their names, they change there so often.

Q. Mr. Neimyer hasn't changed for a good while, has he?

A. He was not a solicitor; he was general agent.

Q. And these were men under Mr. Neimyer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don't remember their names?

A. That is what we call solicitors—that is what Mr. Neimyer called them.

Q. And you don't remember their names?

A. No, sir. In fact if I did I would have their cards and probably throw them to one side.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. I believe you stated in answer to Judge Lovett, in his endeavor to accentuate your testimony in this regard, that you were acquainted with a good many shippers in the town and the representatives of shippers, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were familiar with the movement of traffic at that time? It was part of your business to keep track of it?

A. Yes, that was.

Q. And from your general knowledge of the situation, and from statements made to you by representatives of shippers and by shippers, you know that the Southern Pacific was endeavoring to work coast business by New Orleans at that time?

A. Yes, sir. That was, of course, Illinois Central and Southern Pacific.

(An adjournment was here taken until the morning of Wednesday, March 17, at 10 o'clock.)

2953 523 FEDERAL BUILDING, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS,
Wednesday, March 17, 1909.

The hearing was resumed before the Special Examiner, Hon. Sylvester G. Williams, at the above time and place, pursuant to adjournment.

Present: On behalf of the complainant, Mr. C. A. Severance and Mr. G. E. Husted; on behalf of the defendants, Mr. R. S. Lovett.

F. B. MONTGOMERY,

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Montgomery, you live in Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am connected with the International Harvester Company, having charge of their traffic and transportation matters.

Q. Have you held that position since the organization of that company?

A. Not entirely during that time, but for the last three or four years.

Q. What year was the International Harvester Company organized?

A. In 1902, as I recollect it.

Q. Previous to the organization of that company what was your business?

A. I was with the McCormick Harvester Machine Company, from February, 1900.

Q. Was the McCormick Company acquired or the business of that company acquired by the International Harvester Company?

A. It was, yes.

2954 Q. To what parts of the United States or the world does the International Harvester Company ship its product?

A. Wherever there are crops to grow and to be gathered, I should say; everywhere on the face of the earth.

Q. And was that also true as to the McCormick Harvesting Machine Company?

A. It was, yes, sir.

Q. In what direction does your Oriental or transpacific business move?

A. It moves in several directions; it moves across the continent to the Pacific coast and then across the ocean, or it moves to the Atlantic and through the Suez.

Q. When it goes to the Pacific coast, over what lines does it move to the Orient?

A. Inland lines, you mean—railroad lines?

Q. No, I mean steamship lines. Through what ports, I might say.

A. It would go through San Francisco or Portland or any of the coast ports.

Q. San Francisco, Portland, and Seattle, I suppose?

A. Yes, Seattle.

Q. And Tacoma?

A. And the Canadian Pacific, Vancouver.

Q. And was that also the case with the McCormick product when you were with them?

A. Yes. I think at that time there was a line in connection with the Santa Fe from San Diego, that moved some of the traffic also.

Q. But it moved by the various ports?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And also through San Diego?

A. And also through San Diego,—some little of it.

Q. Over what lines does the product of the International Harvester Company move to the Pacific coast?

A. All lines.

2955 Q. Do you remember the time that the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific had separate soliciting agencies here?

A. I do, yes, sir.

Q. Were you acquainted with the gentlemen?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were the men at the head of those agencies?

A. Mr. Neimyer was at the head of the Southern Pacific, and Mr. William H. Knight (I believe those are his initials) was at the head of the Union Pacific.

Q. At that time which way did Mr. Neimyer try to route his traffic to the coast?

A. I think, as a general thing, he wanted the long haul through the Texas gateways. He would take it any way he could get it, I should say, naturally.

Q. But in soliciting it you say he wanted the long haul?

A. I think that would be a very natural thing to do.

Q. Did New Orleans participate in that solicitation?

A. I do not think any particular traffic moved through New Orleans. I am not sure that it was ever solicited that way by Mr. Neimyer or any of his force. It is possible that the Illinois Central people may have asked for some of it that way, but it is rather a round-about way from Chicago, I think.

Q. What are the Texas points that you mean? Where would the Southern Pacific pick it up in Texas?

A. They might get it at a number of points; the Houston & Texas Central junctions with the Santa Fe; Rock Island-Frisco would be Fort Worth, Dallas, Sherman, and then of course further down in the state and some of the other crossings in there; I don't remember just the points.

Q. These points are in northern Texas?

A. These points are in northern Texas, yes.

2956 Q. And which way did Mr. Knight solicit his business?

A. Well, he wanted his either through Omaha or Kansas City, as a general thing, preferring the long route, naturally.

Q. How does your business to Portland move, Mr. Montgomery?

A. It is divided between most of the routes that can handle it; I should say the bulk of it, perhaps, would go over no one road. It would be divided between the Great Northern and Northern Pacific and O. R. & N.

Q. The O. R. & N., until recently, has been the Great Northern connection into Portland, too?

A. Yes. I was thinking, of course, of the farther east haul on it.

Q. I understand; but by the O. R. & N. you mean what connection east?

A. That would be the Union Pacific, perhaps, from Omaha.

Q. And the Oregon Short Line?

A. Yes. I was thinking of the Oregon Short Line instead of the O. R. & N.

Q. The O. R. & N. is the line from Huntington into Portland?

A. Yes, naturally.

Q. Has that business been solicited by these different lines?

A. Why, I should think it is continually being solicited; yes, sir.

Q. Always has been?

A. Always has been.

Q. In case of shipments to the Orient through these various ports on the coast, are shipments solicited by the steamship lines directly or by their rail connections?

A. Principally by the rail connections, I think. Not very much of the Oriental business goes through the Pacific. Rates are rather better through the Atlantic—we find them so.

Q. How was that six or eight years ago?

A. I think to a considerable extent that has always been true.

2957 Q. What places in the Orient do you ship to by the Pacific coast, or have you shipped? I mean what countries.

A. We ship some stuff into Japan and China and Siberia; not very heavy into any of them.

Q. Do you recall the fact of the agencies of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific being consolidated?

A. I remember that that did take place; yes, sir.

Q. Are you visited by their soliciting agents?

A. Now?

Q. Yes.

A. Personally I see very few of them, but the company is visited by them. One of my assistants or the chief clerk sees them, generally.

Q. Since the amalgamation, which way, if you know, has that agency solicited Pacific coast traffic, chiefly.

A. I don't believe I could say positively on that subject. I should say they would solicit us generally any way they could get it, but perhaps without any special partiality, although I don't know much about that. As I say, I don't see many of them.

Q. You are not brought in immediate contact with them?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who is your chief clerk?

A. Mr. H. F. Hughes.

Q. He is the man that sees the solicitors?

A. He sees many of them, and Mr. A. G. Huckins, my assistant, sees a good many of them.

Q. In the old days was your business solicited by the D. & R. G.?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in connection with what lines did they work for coast business? What trans-continental lines from Ogden west?

A. Well, at that time there was only the one line to Southern California—San Francisco and south. That was the Central 2958 Pacific. And I think they worked with the Oregon Short Line in the other direction from there.

Q. Has there been any difference in the shipments over the D. & R. G. since the union of the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific?

A. I could not say without examining the records, but I do not think so. We endeavor to divide our traffic with all the railroads.

Q. You try to do that yourself, of your own motion?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. As far as you can?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you route all your own traffic?

A. Yes; at least we claim to control the routing of it. Some of it may be routed by some of our outside people. We usually recognize their requests when they are reasonable and if they have any special reason for it. But we hold the control in our own hands here.

Q. At what large points on the coast do you maintain distributing agencies?

A. Portland and San Francisco and, I believe, Los Angeles; I am not positive about that.

Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Your Pacific coast business is solicited by a large number of lines and agents, is it not, Mr. Montgomery?

A. I should say all railroads that could handle any of it, yes, sir.

Q. That would include, of course, the North-Western, the St. Paul, the Burlington, the Rock Island, Missouri Pacific, the Atchison, the Union Pacific, the Southern Pacific, and all lines?

A. Yes, every railroad running west and southwest from Chicago, I should say.

2959 Q. Or northwest?

A. Or northwest.

Q. The North-Western lines do not solicit your California business, do they?

A. No, not California.

Q. Nothing south of Portland?

A. No.

Q. That has always been true, hasn't it? All of those lines have been active?

A. I think so, to a very great extent. I think at one time there was a steamship line that pretended to give some competition into Frisco from Portland, but I think it didn't amount to very much.

Q. When was that, do you know?

A. I don't remember the year, but some years ago.

Q. From where?

A. From Portland.

Q. From Portland to San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don't remember what year that was?

A. No, I do not.

Q. It never amounted to anything?

A. I don't think it amounted to anything worth while.

Q. It did not make any impression on your business?

A. Ordinarily we do not ship our domestic business by water. It does not handle very well.

Q. You never used the water line from Portland down to San Francisco?

A. No, I should say not on any of the stuff.

Q. Such of your traffic for California as was ever secured by the Union Pacific had to move over the Southern Pacific from Ogden to destination, hadn't it?

A. Yes, I should say so.

Q. No other outlet for it?
A. No other outlet, in the old days at least.
Q. What do you mean by that?
A. I mean prior to the time the San Pedro route was built in there.
2960 Q. That was opened about 1905, wasn't it?
A. I would not venture the date.
Q. But prior to the opening of the San Pedro line?
A. There was but one route.
Q. There was but the one route. And that was also true of the business handled by the Denver & Rio Grande?
A. I think so.
Q. Traffic over the Burlington, the Rock Island, the Missouri Pacific and all of these western lines ultimately went over the Southern Pacific?
A. I think so.
Q. As to the solicitation of the agents of the Southern Pacific in the days when they were separate from the Union Pacific, your recollection is that they solicited the traffic by practically any route they could get it?
A. I think so; that is my recollection.
Q. You have no recollection of any specific solicitation by way of New Orleans at that time?
A. None at all, no, sir—not by the Southern Pacific people.
Q. The Illinois Central and other lines leading to New Orleans solicited that way?
A. Quite possible, quite likely.
Q. But you have no recollection of any solicitation by the Southern Pacific. The shipper is not interested in the division of the through rate as between the different carriers, is he?
A. I don't think so, no.
Q. The shipper is interested in the aggregate rate, but not in the division of it?
A. Exactly; not in the adjustment.
Q. I believe you stated that most of your Asiatic business moved eastwardly.
A. Through the Atlantic, yes, sir.
2961 Q. Such as moves out through the Pacific coast ports goes principally through San Francisco or Puget Sound?
A. I should say Puget Sound.
Q. Very little has ever moved by way of Portland?
A. By way of Portland?
Q. Yes, out through Portland?
A. I think right within the last several years none of it, perhaps; although that is not a positive statement, because I have not looked into it and I really don't know.
Q. Do you recall any moving that way in former years?
A. Yes, there has been some traffic moving through Portland.
Q. Any considerable quantity?
A. No.

Q. Very small?

A. No considerable quantity of it sent that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE. You mean by Pacific coast?

WITNESS. By the Pacific coast, yes.

Q. No considerable quantity went by the Pacific coast, and that which did go by the Pacific coast a very small portion moved by way of Portland, didn't it?

A. I would not make a positive statement on that without looking it up, but I think that is a safe statement, perhaps.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. In answer to Judge Lovett, you stated that the Southern Pacific solicited business all ways. Did you intend by that answer to modify your statement on direct examination that they solicited it preferably by the Texas points?

A. Oh, not at all. As I recall it, on the direct examination I stated that I think they would be glad to have it any way they could get it, but they prefer the long route and the long haul, naturally.

2962 By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. I did not quite understand you as Mr. Severance seems to. I did not understand you to testify they solicited preferentially by Texas gateways.

A. I think they would very naturally prefer the longest haul, the one out of which they could get the most revenue, and that would be through the Texas gateways, as I would understand it.

Q. Or New Orleans?

A. And it was specifically and repeatedly solicited through the Texas gateways. They were glad also to get it any way they could get it, naturally.

Q. You have no recollection of solicitation by way of New Orleans?

A. Not by the Southern Pacific people, no, sir.

Q. It has always been actively solicited by way of El Paso, has it?

A. I don't really know just what you mean by El Paso. Through the Rock Island and El Paso?

Q. Yes; the Texas & Pacific, for example.

A. That has been in recent years, when I have not been in touch with the soliciting so much.

Q. That which was secured by the Iron Mountain and other lines, the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, would move out through El Paso?

A. Yes. To El Paso it would probably have to go through the Texas junctions and through the Texas & Pacific or the Southern Pacific lines, and Houston & Texas Central and out that way; all moving through El Paso, however.

Q. The Gould lines and the lines like the Missouri, Kansas & Texas and other lines reaching to the southwest, connecting with the Texas and Pacific, would be the short lines, wouldn't they?

A. I don't know the arrangements between the Gould lines
2963 and the Southern Pacific; so I would not know what their junctions were, where they would deliver it to the Southern Pacific.

Q. But you know that the only connections between the Texas & Pacific and the Southern Pacific are at New Orleans and El Paso?

A. Yes, I think so. However, they do cross the Houston & Texas Central, which is generally attributed as Southern Pacific property, at several points. So I don't know what junction points they would deliver to them.

Mr. SEVERANCE. And credibly attributed.

Q. The long haul for the Gould line would be over the Texas & Pacific to El Paso?

A. Undoubtedly.

Q. If they turned it over to the Houston & Texas Central it would be back-hauling it to some extent, wouldn't it?

A. No, I should say not. It would be diverting it from the most direct route, probably, because the H. & T. C. would then have to haul it south to the main line of the Southern Pacific, I presume.

Q. Southeasterly, in fact?

A. Southeasterly?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, the maps are usually drawn in straight lines—these railroad maps.

Q. The Gould lines, even before the opening of the Rock Island, were soliciting from this territory for California, weren't they?

A. Oh, yes, I should say so.

Q. That would naturally move to El Paso?

A. Well, I say I don't know what the junction points were, but if they could they would take it there undoubtedly, yes.

Q. That meant the long haul for them?

A. Yes.

2964 By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. The solicitation by the Southern Pacific organization was not to give the long haul to the Gould lines but the long haul to the Southern Pacific?

A. Why, I should think so. That would be what they were employed for, I should think.

Q. Before the amalgamation of these agencies, when Mr. Knight represented the Union Pacific and Mr. Neimyer represented the Southern Pacific, what would you say as to whether those two agencies were competing with each other for coast business?

A. I should think so, yes. They did, I should say positively.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. They were competing in the sense that whatever business Mr. Knight got for the Union Pacific would have to go over the Southern Pacific also, wouldn't it, Mr. Montgomery?

A. I think they had no other route for it.

Q. So that Mr. Knight in working for the Union Pacific was also working somewhat for the Southern Pacific, wasn't he?

A. Well, that is something between the Union and the Southern. Whether they paid any of his salary or not I don't know.

Q. What I mean is, that whatever freight Mr. Knight succeeded in getting away from the Atchison or any other line would necessarily inure ultimately to the Southern Pacific?

A. I would say it would move over the Southern Pacific, or the Central Pacific I believe it was generally called at that time.

Q. So, when you testified, in answer to Mr. Severance, with reference to competition between those two agencies, I suppose you meant competition in the sense that such business as Mr. Knight got would move over the Union Pacific to Ogden and then 2965 over the Southern Pacific, and such business as Mr. Neimyer and his agents got might move that way, or it might move through the Texas junctions, El Paso or the various gateways?

A. I don't think Mr. Knight was worrying much about the Southern Pacific through Ogden at that time. I imagine he was interested more in the Union Pacific. Of course he appreciated if he got any California traffic, or San Francisco or Southern California traffic, it would have to go through Ogden and the Southern Pacific.

Q. No, I don't suppose he was worrying about the Southern Pacific or the Southern Pacific was worrying about him—

A. Quite likely.

Q. Because whatever he got went over the Southern Pacific.

A. Undoubtedly, I should say.

Q. But such competition as there was between Mr. Knight and the agents of the Southern Pacific was of the kind that I have just described, wasn't it—that is, such business as Mr. Knight got went over the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, I think that is correct.

Q. Such business as Mr. Neimyer got might move over the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific?

A. I think that is entirely correct.

Q. Or it might move through other gateways over the Southern Pacific?

A. I think that is quite likely.

By Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. As to business moving over the Southern Pacific from Ogden to California, you wouldn't say that Mr. Neimyer was competing with Mr. Knight, his connection, would you, but the 2966 competition was between the southern line of the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific?

A. I should say that would be my judgment on it, yes; exactly.

By Mr. LOVETT:

Q. That was competition between the Atchison, rather, wasn't it,—the Atchison on the one hand, and the lines made up by the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific on the other, and by the Sunset line on the other?

A. I think there were the three lines there, but I don't know how I can tell it very differently from what it has been told.

Q. I am pressing this, Mr. Montgomery, because Mr. Severance and I disagree so as to the question of terms. He insists on designating this as competition between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific, and I am trying to develop the fact, as I understand it, that the competition was between several lines, and that the Union Pacific could not compete except in connection with the Southern Pacific for California business. Isn't that true? It had no other outlet, had it?

A. No; I think it had no other outlet that it could work at all. Of course it had a junction perhaps with the Santa Fe at Denver, but probably it was not working that route at all.

Q. You never heard of anything moving that way, did you?

A. No, I did not.

Q. The Union Pacific had a line of, say, a thousand miles from the Missouri River to Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. And the Southern Pacific had a line from Ogden to the Pacific coast of, say, 850 miles with various branches, and it was in the interest of that line that Mr. Knight was working, wasn't it?

2967 That is the line made up of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

A. The Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific. Yes, I should say so. He was soliciting entirely for that route, that combined route, through route.

Q. And such competition as existed from this territory for California business was by these various lines, one line made up of the Atchison and its connections, one line made up by the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, by way of Ogden, and their connections, and another line made up by the Southern Pacific by way of El Paso and its connections? Those were the lines competing for California business, weren't they?

A. Those were the three general routes, yes.

Q. The only routes, weren't they, for California business?

A. Yes.

2968 OSCAR F. BELL.

being duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the Complainant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Mr. Bell, where do you live?

A. My residence is in Highland Park, Illinois.

Q. And your business?

A. In Chicago as traffic manager of Crane Company.

Q. What is the business of the Crane Company?

A. They are manufacturers of steam fitting goods, fittings and valves, iron and brass, and also jobbers, dealers in plumbing and heating goods.

Q. It is a fact, isn't it, Mr. Bell—although I suppose your modesty will disincline you to say it—that the Crane Company is the largest concern in the country manufacturing these steam fitting materials?

A. I think that is right.
Q. You will admit that?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is your connection with the Crane Company?
A. Traffic manager.
Q. For how many years?
A. For over 16 years.
Q. Where are their plants located?
A. They have manufacturing plants in Chicago and they have also at Bridgeport, Connecticut. They have also a plant at Pittsburg which is not as yet in operation.
Q. But have you always had shipments from Pittsburg and Cincinnati to the coast?
A. Yes, sir.
2969 Q. In large volume?
A. Quite large volume; yes, sir.
Q. And over what lines has that moved?
A. Practically all lines to the coast.
Q. And your business from Chicago has moved over practically all lines.
A. All lines.
Q. You know Mr. Neimyer, don't you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And did you know Mr. Knight when he represented the Union Pacific here?
A. Yes, sir; I knew him.
Q. Take your business originating in Pittsburg or Cincinnati. Was that business solicited by these gentlemen for the coast?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And which way did Mr. Neimyer endeavor to route his business from Cincinnati and Pittsburg?
A. When?
Q. Previous to the amalgamation of the agency.
A. By New Orleans—via the Southern Pacific at any rate.
Q. Via the Southern Pacific. And Mr. Knight of course entirely by the Missouri river?
A. The Missouri river.
Q. I believe you told me that Mr. Neimyer didn't try to route business out of Chicago by New Orleans.
A. No, he did not solicit business that way from this territory; that is, with us.
Q. Of you, yes.
A. Yes.
Q. But did solicit the business from these other points?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, was Mr. Neimyer active in that solicitation?
A. For business by the southern route?
Q. Yes.
A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Knight likewise?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did any of your traffic for the coast ever move by way
2970 of New Orleans from Chicago?
A. There might some very small portion of it move that way, but I have no recollection of sending any business that way.
Q. What Southern Pacific routes did it take from here?
A. It moved out via Ogden—Southern Pacific from Ogden, the old Central Pacific.
Q. And did any of it move by the Texas junction points?
A. Some small portion of the business may have gone by the way of Texas junction points.
Q. Did you ship any considerable volume by New Orleans from Cincinnati and Pittsburg territory?
A. Well, quite a considerable tonnage has moved that way.
Q. But from this point you sent it by the Union Pacific?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. From Chicago to San Francisco which was the quicker line—by New Orleans or by Omaha?
A. What is the question?
Q. Which was the shorter in time—from here by Omaha to San Francisco, or through New Orleans?
A. By Omaha and Ogden.
Q. And how did the time from here by Texas junction points and by Omaha compare?
A. For San Francisco business the line via Omaha and Ogden was the shorter and gave the best service.
Q. Do you know whether it was shorter in point of time or only shorter in point of distance?
A. Well, our business was routed via Omaha and Ogden because of the quicker service and better service.
Q. That is what I was getting at. Do you manufacture elevators?
A. No, sir.
Q. That is a different Crane company?
2971 A. No, the Crane Company originated the elevator business, and elevators were made by the Crane Brothers Manufacturing Company, whose business started here in 1855. They afterward segregated the elevator business and formed the Crane Elevator Company, and sold that business out afterward, as I understand it, to the Otis Elevator Company.
Q. You remember the fact of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific agencies being consolidated?
A. Yes.
Q. And have you had to do with that agency since? Do they solicit your business since that time—Mr. Neimyer's agency?
A. Did I what?
Q. I say did you have to do with them since?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Has Mr. Neimyer solicited your business since?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In soliciting coast business since that time, what route, if either, has he favored from any of these points from which you ship, either from Pittsburg, Cincinnati, or Chicago?

A. Why, I don't know that he has favored either route. He solicits us for business either way—either via Omaha and Union Pacific, via Ogden, or via El Paso.

Q. That is, his attitude is neutral as between the two lines?

A. The two routes, yes, sir.

Q. Does any of your business to the coast move over the San Pedro?

A. Yes, sir; to lower California.

Q. And over what route does that move from the Missouri river?

A. It moves over the Union Pacific or the Burlington, or the Rock Island, or the Missouri Pacific in connection with the Colorado & Midland and the Denver & Rio Grande.

2972 Q. Do you endeavor to distribute your traffic among the different lines?

A. Yes, sir. It is our aim to divide the tonnage with the lines as fairly and equitably as we can.

Q. How does your traffic to north Pacific coast points move?

A. It moves by all lines—by the St. Paul, the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific, the Canadian Pacific, and Missouri river crossings, the Rock Island, the Burlington, the D. & R. G., the Short Line and the O. R. & N.

Q. Prior to the time that Mr. Neimyer became the joint agent of the two lines, how did he solicit business, if at all, into Portland for the Southern Pacific?

A. My recollection is that he solicited that business from this territory, at least, via Ogden, the Shasta Route.

Q. That is the only way that the Southern Pacific could get any share of that haul, isn't it?

A. That is all.

Q. And in which way did Mr. Knight endeavor to route that business to Portland?

A. When the O. R. & N. was not a portion of the Union Pacific system, he solicited in connection with the Shasta Route, the route via Ogden and the Southern Pacific.

Q. When the O. R. & N. was not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say the time the O. R. & N. was not?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, after it became part of the system?

A. He solicited in connection with the Short Line and O. R & N.

Q. Have you shipped anything to the coast by water lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What routes?

A. The American-Hawaiian Steamship Company; we have used clipper ships around the Horn from New York and Philadelphia, and later the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company and also the Panama Railroad & Steamship line.

2973 Q. From what territory did you ship by the Panama route?

A. Mostly from Atlantic seaboard territory.

Q. You have a factory in Bridgeport?

A. Bridgeport.

Q. Does any of your traffic move to the Pacific coast from that territory by the Morgan line and Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. A large volume or small volume?

A. No, not a large volume.

Q. Does traffic also move from that territory by the all-rail lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you have charge, as I understand it, of the traffic of the entire company——

A. Yes, sir.

Q. ——wherever the plants may be located?

A. That is right.

Q. Did the Union Pacific organization, when they were separate here, solicit that traffic from the Atlantic seaboard—the all-rail traffic?

A. Always; yes, sir.

Q. Always did?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did Mr. Neimyer represent the Morgan line in that competition?

A. He did.

Q. And solicited traffic that way?

A. He solicited traffic by the Morgan line and the Sunset Route of the Southern Pacific.

Q. Do you remember a time when the Canadian Pacific had a differential rate into San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you use that line?

A. As I recall it, that was prior to my going with Crane Company.

Q. What year did you go with the Crane Company?

A. 1892.

Q. Before and after then, I guess. You don't remember of using it?

A. I don't remember, no.

2974 Cross-examination by Mr. LOVETT:

Q. With reference to your business that originates on the Atlantic seaboard, Mr. Bell, I think you said it was formerly solicited by the Union Pacific and also by the Southern Pacific prior to the amalgamation of agencies. That business was also solicited by a great many lines, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And always has been?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Solicited by the so-called trunk lines—New York Central, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, and all of the lines leading from that territory westwardly?

A. Practically all the lines from the Atlantic to the Pacific seaboard.

Q. They solicited that business?

A. Yes, east and west.

Q. They did that before the amalgamation of these agencies, and they have continued to do it since?

A. Always.

Q. And it still moves via all lines, doesn't it—various lines, rather?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By all, perhaps; by a large number of the lines?

A. Well, practically all of them. Each one of them, perhaps, gets some share of the traffic.

Q. Would you think it too much to say that probably from 25 to 50 lines solicit that business?

A. Well, it is not any too small.

Q. And there are from 25 to 50 routes open for it?

A. Open for it; yes, sir.

Q. I believe you testified that some of your plants were located at Cincinnati and Pittsburg.

A. We have a branch house at Cincinnati and we have 2975 branch houses all over the United States, practically, but we have a manufacturing plant at Bridgeport, Connecticut, and most of our plants are in Chicago. We also have a plant at Pittsburg, but that has recently been organized and it is not in operation yet.

Q. You testified on your direct examination, as I understood you, that business for the Pacific coast from these points outside of Chicargo moved via all lines. Does some of it go by way of New Orleans?

A. New Orleans; yes, sir.

Q. And some by the all-rail lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, the short rail-lines.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That has always been true, has it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your business from this territory, from Chicago, is solicited by all lines, I believe, to the Pacific coast, as the other is?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But that, I think you said, moves over the short rail-lines, and not by way of New Orleans?

A. Not by way of what?

Q. New Orleans.

A. New Orleans, no; very little of it by New Orleans.

Q. I understood you also to testify that when the agencies of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific were separate, that Mr. Neimyer solicited business from the Ohio river points and eastwardly by way of New Orleans, but he did not solicit business from Chicago territory by way of New Orleans; is that correct?

A. That is true.

Q. That business he sought to secure how—by way of Ogden or El Paso?

A. Yes, in connection with the lines leading to the Missouri river from this territory.

Q. All of the lines leading to the Missouri river from this 2976 territory actively solicit that business, don't they?

A. Always.

Q. And such of it as is secured by the North-Western and St. Paul, the Burlington, the Rock Island, the Missouri Pacific moved over the Southern Pacific from Ogden, did it not?

A. Well, that which does not go in connection with the Santa Fe to California.

Q. I mean lines other than the Santa Fe. For instance, the North-Western would turn its business over to the Union Pacific?

A. To the Union Pacific at Omaha.

Q. And so would the St. Paul?

A. The St. Paul might deliver it to the Santa Fe at Kansas City.

Q. But it usually moves by way of the Union Pacific, doesn't it?

A. By way of the Union Pacific.

Q. The Rock Island and the Burlington would take theirs to Denver, wouldn't they?

A. Naturally, yes. They want the long haul.

Q. And then over the Denver & Rio Grande?

A. Yes.

Q. Or Union Pacific?

A. Or Union Pacific.

Q. To the Southern Pacific at Ogden?

A. Yes.
